It's about time to turn the spot in the direction of the home office and studio publicity departments doing a laudable job of planting their pictures and players over the front pages through gags and stories garnished with ticket-selling possibilities. Sharing page one attention with the world's happenings, one finds, for instance, Carole Lombard paying taxes cheerfully, Alan Mowbray seeking adoption by an American city, the "Jesse James" units remodeling Missouri communities for "shooting" purposes, Ozark mountaineers regarding "Spawn of the North" their first picture show.

The publicity boys have taken a lot of the blame for reams of wordage destined only for editorial waste baskets. Let them now take a bit of a bow for turning out more of the stuff that newspapers (and theatremen) welcome.

From a correspondent in the Southwest spot where it took place, comes now the details of a terrific campaign for "Marie Antoinette". It was Hollywood down to the last light bulb, with all the local gentry on hand to welcome this important date. To insure attendance of top local names, the manager invited 1,000 of the city's prominents to be his guests.

Now, it is neither our province nor desire to evaluate the worth of a campaign suspended from a society opening, where the local names are photoed for the papers and radioed from the lobby for the listening public. If a theatremans feels that he should have batteries of lights out front to emphasize the occasion, let him, if he will, round up enough illumination to pierce the very Stygian darkness. That's his business, and more power to him.

But when he goes so far as to offer 1,000 invitations to prominent citizenry and siclike, that's something else again.

There may be times when passes are necessary in effecting promotions that definitely pay their way. But we are still to be convinced that such wholesale distribution for one engagement can be of benefit, lasting or otherwise, to an enterprise dependent solely for existence upon the cash sale of theatre tickets.

ONE REASON WHY IT CLICKS

Since your best type of theatremans is the boy who looks ahead and is generally prepared for the coming season, it is not surprising to know that many Round Tablers were setting their plans for local Drives even before the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign was announced.

For instance, such forward-looking members as Joe Kinsky and Bill Exton had heaps of smart selling slants in action and ready to go when the Big Word was passed around. Many others were "dug in" for battle.

It is no wonder, then, that the industry drive started to roll in high from the beginning. Local plannings toward the same goal did a mighty job of breaking through ahead of the industry's Big Guns.

Round Table in Pictures

On behalf of "Her Jungle Love" at the Queen's Theatre, Penang, Straits Settlement, Manager Ong Eng Chye created this atmospheric street float. On center of display, attractive native girl was planted as it toured main streets.

Original story of "Mother Carey's Chickens" was made the basis for display cards used in all RKO lobbies. Popular novel first appeared in Ladies' Home Journal in 1910 and pages from this edition were mounted along with stills from the picture. Display at right shows Anne Shirley reading the first installment of the novel.

Dipping into a recent copy of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, with complete text of rules in the Movie Quiz Contest, Ben Serkowich, chairman Broadway publicity committee, and advertising director of the New York Capitol, had the page blown up for a lobby poster. Included was a panel listing coming MGM pictures eligible for the contest. It is Serk's thought that the idea has proven itself potent enough for duplication in other situations where theatremen are looking about for further suggestions to aid their Movie Quiz.

Eye-arresting lobby display was constructed by Manager Jerry De Rosa, Loew's Paradise Theatre, Bronx, N. Y., for "Lord Jeff". Cutouts of Freddie Bartholomew and Mickey Rooney were planted in lifesavers and various ship models stationed at base of display.

Reported to have been highly successful was Johnny Newkirk's amateur photo exhibition at Loew's Granada, Cleveland. Hundreds of entries, tagged with owners' name were displayed in lobby. Cooperating newspaper aided with stories and reproductions of entries. Winners were awarded prizes promoted from merchants who had tied in on the stunt.

Twelve-foot landing field constructed from compo-board was created by George Stoves, Maspeth Theatre, Maspeth, L. I., for "Test Pilot" lobby display. Pylon made from lattice strips with beacon light atop flooding the landing field. Clippings from aeroplane magazines, together with one-sheet and press-book cover were also planted. Stoves also held a model aeroplane contest in which cooperating merchants awarded prizes, and devoted windows to picture and contest plug.

Delays Spawning, Averts Indian Strike; Saves Fish, Saves Show

The creation of some new house records at the Coliseum, in Ketchikan, Alaska, on "Spawn of the North" was not accomplished without difficulties peculiar to that sector and the Indians who inhabit it. How these obstacles were removed to make way for successful midnight showing is herewith detailed by Manager H. E. Cawthorn.

"We had a rather unique situation confronting us during the showing of this picture. As you probably know, most of the fish trap scenes were made around Annette Island and close to the town of Metlakatla. This town is comprised of a colony of Canadian Indians which located there with the famous Father Duncan 50 years ago. They are now wards of the United States Government and they operate one of the finest canneries in this district. On last Saturday I got a wireless telephone call from the Superintendent of the cannery asking me if it would be possible for me to run 'Spawn of the North' for Metlakatla on Sunday. I explained to him that it would be impossible. He then informed me that if we couldn't arrange some way to show the picture at a later date, that the Indians were going on strike and move out in a body for Ketchikan. He said there were thousands of dollars worth of fish on the floor that would spoil if the Natives left at that time. So, to save the situation, we ran a matinee starting at midnight Sunday night and about 25 boats arrived at about 10 o'clock, loaded with the almost entire population of Metlakatla."

Mexican Lobby Plugs "Tropic Holiday" Date

Display of Mexican articles, including shawls, sombrero etc., were planted in the lobby of the Fox Carmel Theatre Hollywood by Dick Moss as his advance on "Tropic Holiday." Over bull's horns, also on display, a card was placed reading:

"Martha Raye fights the bull and Bob Burns throws it."

Mexican outfit used by Dorothy Lamour in the picture and secured through the Paramount Studios was worn by spot girl ten days in advance. Canary in cage was hung in lobby sign advising that bird was singing with joy because the picture was coming soon. Dick reports that his assistant, Henry Madigan aided on the campaign.

Savings Banks Plug 'You Can't Take It'

Reported as a first time savings banks tied up with a motion picture locally was arrangement made by the Columbia exploiteers and Radio City Music Hall on the opening of "You Can't Take It With You." The banks went for the idea that Barrymore must have saved his money in his youth in order to be able to enjoy himself in later life, following through with an ingenious newspaper advertising campaign sponsored by mutual savings banks of Manhattan, Bronx and Westchester, in all New papers over a period of 14 days starting with the opening of the film. Full credit was given the picture and playdate in each ad. In addition, color posters were framed in the windows of member banks.

Specially arranged interview was planted with Crosby Gaige, play producer and culinary expert, which broke papers opening day. Subject of interview was mainly the Love Dream fudge which plays a featured role in the picture. In cooperation with Sam Taylor on Station WHN, a special broadcast was arranged whereby members of Taylor's listening audience caught the picture opening day at the Music Hall and went on the air the following day to review it.

Numerous window displays were planted, including florists, book shops, etc., and Wanamaker's department store devoted an entire window to interpreting the "everyman-for-himself" room in which most of the humorous action of the picture occurs. Full playdate credit was given in the windows.

"Let's Hear From You"

Sabu, Star of "Drums" Is Feted in New York

As a buildup for the advance on "Drums" at the Radio City Music Hall, Sabu, Indian lad star of the picture recently arrived on this side, was greeted by delegations representing the Boy Scouts of America and the Boys' Clubs of America. A series of activities for the star have been arranged by United Artists, which includes a personal appearance on Rudy Vallee's program, ball games and the star will also be entertained by Jock Whitney at a polo match.

The New York Port Authority will entertain Sabu, taking him on a tour of the city, before starting on his cross country trek. Other activities in which he will participate include a tea in his honor to be given by the English Speaking Union and a special ceremony whereby the star will be inducted as a member of the YMCA and Boys' Clubs of America.

"Let's Hear From You"

Novel Contest Sells "Four Daughters"

For date on "Four Daughters" at the Warner, Atlantic City, N. J., theatre ran a contest conducting a search for the family consisting of four daughters who most closely resembled the four sisters in the picture. Basis of selection was made on the facts that the "four" resided at home with their mother, that their ages were closest to the ages of the girls in the picture and finally that there was a similarity of family background with that in the film.

American Legion Tied to "Sons"

The world premiere of Paramount's "Sons of the Legion" was accorded a smash opening at the Orpheum Theatre, Phoenix, Ariz., where Harry Nace, manager, assisted by Jack Daily of the studio advertising department, put over several outstanding tie-ups with the pre-convention gathering of American Legion members in this city en route to their national convention in Los Angeles next week.

Several days ahead, local newspapers carried special feature stories on the players in "Sons of the Legion" backed with plenty of art, and local merchants cooperated by using special window displays with title the center of each display.

Nace arranged several special screenings for the gathered Legion Post Commanders and leaders of the auxiliary group, comments from those legionnaires were highly enthusiastic and resulted in additional feature stories.

Opening night, a huge parade consisting of sons of the American Legion marched to theatre. Youngsters also assisted in the distribution of special heralds which were gotten out on the attraction.

With legionnaires from all over the country pouring through this city on their way to Los Angeles, a tieup was made with the Chamber of Commerce for the distribution of 25,000 novelty maps of the vicinity with a plug for "Sons of the Legion" imprinted. Prior to the opening Jack Daily addressed the local American Legion Post which resulted in members attending the picture in a body.

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York, arrived for a three-day stay and was escorted to his hotel by a guard of honor consisting of Sons of the Legion.

Old Sheet Music Helps Sell "Alexander's Ragtime Band"

As an advance on "Alexander's Ragtime Band," Betty Powley, advertising manager for the Quimby Theatres, Fort Wayne, Ind., inserted a one-column three-inch ad in the classified section of the News-Sentinel. Want ad requested that readers having original song covers of Irving Berlin's songs bring them to the Embold Theatre in connection with the opening of the picture. Miss Powley reports that over 500 telephone calls were received and innumerable copies of old music, including pieces dating back to 1911, which were used for lobby display.

Disney Art To Be Exhibited

The Walt Disney Studios have arranged with the Courvoisier Art Galleries of San Francisco for the display and distribution of original art work not only from "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," but from future feature and short subject productions. The pictures, mounted by Disney artists will be of painted celluloids which are photographed to create the finished productions. Through the Courvoisier Galleries, these originals will be distributed to one outstanding art gallery in each principal city of the world.

Motion Pictures' Greatest Year Campaigns Eligible for Awards

Since campaigns for Motion Pictures' Greatest Year have called upon theatre-men for their best efforts, and since these efforts have resulted in the finest kind of showmanship, let it be hereby noted that campaigns put over locally in the interest of the Drive are distinctly eligible in the Quigley Awards.

This answers directly the inquiry of a Round Tabler who writes he has taken a major part in his local campaign, drafting the complete set-up which was adopted with few additions or exceptions. He reports working night and day and takes credit for putting over or being connected with every major item that was accomplished. He writes:

"What I am trying to find out from you is the correct procedure for my getting credit for the work I did in this campaign. My first thought was to include it among my entries but stipulate that it represents a concerted effort. I intend to do the fair thing or forget it entirely."

* * *

Let the inquiring theatreman, and all others similarly concerned, select those items in the local drive campaigns for which they wish to be credited individually. Then list these items with the accompanying visual "evidence" in the same manner as any other campaign for Awards consideration and forward to insure delivery at this office no later than the deadline date for the Third Quarter, midnight, October 15.

Vacation Atmosphere Used On "Having Wonderful Time"

The camp angle of "Having Wonderful Time" was stressed in Joe Sirkin's lobby display at the Maspeth Theatre, Maspeth, L. I., by use of a full size tent and regulation cot equipped with blanket, sweat shirts and shorts carelessly thrown on it. Entire floor was covered with dirt and scattered about were hiking shoes, sneakers, boxing gloves, tennis racket, fishing pole and aluminum utensils.

Vacations at a summer resort were promoted and given in connection with a lucky number contest, stunt publicized in papers, heralds, programs and on screen.

War Vets Aid Shaffer On "Yellow Jack" Date

The fact that Major Reed had spent the greater part of his life in Harrisonburg, Va., and his home a nationally known hotel there, was sufficient reason for Frank Shaffer, Warners' Virginia Theatre, to get behind the opening of "Yellow Jack" with a bang. Spanish War Veterans were invited to a special screening of prominents, immediately after which Frank contacted three of the audience, a veteran, doctor and historian from local college. These men delivered three ten minute talks over Station WSWA gratis on three consecutive nights. Newspapers were generous with space.

ROUND TABLERS SPOTLIGHT PIGSKIN WITH WIDESPREAD FOOTBALL TIEINS

Theatre Men Make Arrangements with Local Newspapers and Schools for Contests; Stunts To Be Stressed at Top Games

One of our most promising tieups has just been completed with Canisius College, local institution, which is planning to use the new 35,000-seat Civic Stadium for all its games this year. Briefly, it's this: We've taken a standing ad in the football program, inviting fans to come to the show after the game. Inserted in the ad is a number (which is changed each game). An announcement is made over the public address system at the Stadium during the game asking the fans to look at the Shea Theatres ad on page so-and-so. They then announce the number, with a tiein on our current show such as: "The holder of program number 1234 may stop at the boxoffice of Shea's Buffalo and will receive a pair of guest tickets to see Clark Gable and Myrna Loy in "Too Hot to Handle." All it costs us is the initial nominal charge for the ad and the one pair of tickets for each game.

Another stunt we use occasionally is the distribution of heralds on our shows at the weekly high school and college games, especially on pictures bearing unusual interest to the schools. Last year we got out schedule cards with a complete list of their games for the season. On front page is: "Compliments of Shea Theatres," etc., etc. We found the students really went for this stunt, and hung on to them for the season.

Special Nights Arranged

There are several big national college games slated for the local Civic Stadium. We'll invite the squads to the show as guests of one of the newspapers. Especially when we play college atmosphere pictures, such as "Hold That Co-Ed," we plan to hold parades on Main Street, with the college bands playing in front of the theatre and then being guests of the management. At important games the squads will be invited to the show, and we'll call it "Canisius Night," "University of Buffalo Night," etc., etc. We are also making arrangements to erect signs at the best football fields.—CHARLES B. TAYLOR, advertising manager, Shea's Theatres, Buffalo, N. Y.

Newspapers To Participate In Welcome to Players

We tie up the High School games every year. This year a semi-pro team is being formed and with the picture "Hold That Co-Ed," we are bringing the team to the theatre before their first game. The sport writers of the paper will act as guest master of ceremonies and local sport promoters and sport personalities will attend. At the games we print up score cards for the teams with our ad on the back of the cards. The field is also decorated with a 30-foot banner with our attraction. As some 5,000 people attend these games, we get quite a plug out of it, as well as the good will attending same.

MGM FOOTBALL SHORTS AVAILABLE FOR TIEINS

For exploitation on its three football shorts now ready for release, MGM suggests special screenings for local teams under newspaper sponsorship, a sports page contest offering guest tickets to readers who submit closest advance guesses on scores in various games, newspaper photographer to shoot candid shots of fans at local games, with tickets offered to those whose pictures appear; radio contest identifying titles of famous college football songs, football player bally-hoos. Also offered is a school playground competition, under newspaper auspices, to find the kid who can make the longest kick or throw the longest pass, etc.

The subjects for which these ideas are intended are: Robert Benchley's "How to Watch Football" and Pete Smith's "Football Thrills" and "Grid Rules."

With cheer squads on the stage and the teams, it makes a colorful picture and tied in with a football picture lends the necessary atmospheric touch.—MORRIS ROSENTHAL, Manager, Majestic Theatre, Bridgeport, Conn.

Popularity Contest Arranged To Cover Football Season

We are going to have the members of the S.M.U. football team present on the stage, where they will autograph footballs which we have promoted from a local sporting goods house. The schools here play their games on Friday night and we will have the winning team on the stage the following Saturday night as our guests, and believe me, it really brings the students in.

We are giving special cards to the students of one certain school at a time, which enables them to be admitted into the theatre by presenting their cards and only ten cents. By giving the cards to only one school at a time, the high schools are rotated each five to seven weeks. This system has proven itself to really boost our mid-week business. Last year, just before school started, we had a back to school jamboree, in which the school bands and the students participated. We promoted a complete football outfit from a local sporting goods store to be given to a lucky school student, at a drawing, held for the students on a Saturday morning.

We have already started a popularity contest for the football players of the schools here. The students will be permitted to cast one vote per each paid admission into the theatre, for his or her favorite football player. This contest will close as soon as football season is over and the winner will be determined as soon as possible. This, we have also found, brings the students back several times to cast their votes for their favorite. The winner will receive $25 in cash and there will be several other prizes which we have promoted from local concerns.—LOUIE CHARNINSKY, Capitol Theatre, Dallas, Texas.

Finds P. A. Announcements At Local Games Effective

We have exclusive public address announcements at all games that are playing in the Portland Stadium. This covers all football as is played in Portland. We reach approximately 10,000 persons a week through this system and, in fact, ours are the only commercial announcements made during these games.

This is a simple football tieup, yet is one which is more effective than any other football tieup we ever had, due to the fact that it gets across our show directly and effectively and better still, at a much lower cost than the usual programs, score cards, giveaways, etc. Our announcements go on, approximately, three times; the first at the end of the first quarter, again at the half and at the end of the game.

New Tieup This Year

We also have a small stereopticon machine in our lobby which is focused against a screen on our main floor entrance and as scores of games come in on Saturdays, and other days when local games are played, we flash scores and other vital information on this screen. This is also very effective and inexpensive due to the fact that our slides are typewritten, so that this stunt costs us practically nothing.

Our third tieup is a new one this year for us and is in conjunction with the Portland papers. As the tieup is now definitely set, we give away a football a week to the person who can guess the correct scores or outcome of all high school and scholastic games. For college games, we are going to give away a $5.00 bill and guest tickets to the theatre to the winners each week.—HARRY BOTWICK, Manager, State Theatre Portland, Maine.

Unique Herald Idea Functions For Warner Coast Theatres

Distributed within the gates of the Coliseum, most important Los Angeles football stadium, by Warner Brothers Theatres, is a four-page herald entitled "Warner Brothers Theatres Sport News." First page is given over complete with montage shot of various athletic activities with circle below containing names of competing teams.

Center spread is devoted to lineups of the teams of the day. Above and below advertising current and coming attractions at the Hollywood and Downtown Theatres. Back stage contains list of coming attractions.

In addition, the Goodyear blimp is frequently used with trailing banner announcing current attractions, and Mort Goodman, publicity director, reports these two means of reaching football public as most effective for their theatres.

OHIO WARNER MEN SUGGEST PLANS FOR BUILDING SATURDAY KID CLUBS

Effective Ideas Based on Past Efforts Detailed by Managers; Importance of Kid Business Stressed by Division Heads

What some of the Warner managers in Nat Wolf's Ohio zone are doing to plug their kid clubs is here reported by district chief, Dick Wright. Suggestions found helpful in the past are headed by Ray C. Brown, District Manager southern division, who favors inaugurating tap dancing school sponsored by local dancing studio. Children enter at the regular ten cent admission and are given a series of tap dancing lessons by the school instructors on the stage of the theatre and stay to see the regular afternoon performance. This series of lessons extends for a period of 16 weeks, at the end of which time two or three hundred kids, who have been trained privately, are put into a mammoth kiddie revue which runs on the stage for one, two or three nights.

Years ago, this proved very successful, reports Brown, in some situations over 1,000 kids attended on a Saturday morning. Best results are obtained by working in conjunction with the local newspapers on a coupon enrollment idea, he says.

The first two boys and first two girls in line for each kid show are made head ushers and hostesses. These boys and girls are given badges with their titles on them and they take complete charge of the children who attend on that particular day.

Another Brown idea, handled some years ago in the Ohio zone, in conjunction with Radio Station WLW, was as follows: Hollywood star, preferably a child star, send dog or two to be given away on the stage of the theatre, one for boy and one for girl. Build this up two or three weeks in advance by showing the wire in the lobby on a board, from the star announcing the gift to your club. Have the dog or dogs on display in the lobby for one or two successive Saturdays preceding the day of the giveaway, and announce that they may be seen at kennels nearby. The dogs, can be purchased from the kennels mentioned.

Promote or buy five single one dollar accounts to be given away on a lucky number morning to five lucky children. Also tie up with a local bank to secure small individual banks to present to the kids on birthdays. Christmas Clubs will start in November, promote from the bank or tie in with a merchant to secure a number of 25 cent Christmas Funds to be given away one Saturday before Christmas.

Tie in with a bakery to send small birthday cake to each child in your club, having a birthday. A card should be enclosed with the cake saying: "Happy Birthday from the Blank Theatre, and the Blank Bakery." Tie in with local florist on the same angle, promoting flowers for club members who are ill. Announcements should be made from the stage at each meeting of the Club asking for reports on members who are ill.

"TODAY'S KIDS FUTURE ADULT PATRONAGE"

Box-office receipts plainly show those houses with going kid clubs have been deriving benefits from these sources regularly. There are enough of these clubs going in our various towns to make us aware of two things: first, they can be successful, and second, that success is not an easy or rapid thing. You cannot expect to make a success of your kid club unless you give them material that will interest the youngsters, from their point of view.

Checking with a number of our men to determine how many kiddies we were playing to on Saturdays, we found that we had never reached the saturation point. Your city records will tell you how many kids live in or near your city. You will be surprised at the room for improvement.—DICK WRIGHT, District Manager, Warner Ohio theatres.

Contests which can be worked out with the girls are to have ten girls come up on the stage, each one to be presented with a nursing bottle full of milk, and with a nipple top. The first girl to drain the bottle of milk wins the contest.

Lollypop pick up contest—prize going to the member picking up and holding the greatest number of lollypops in a specified number of minutes.

Harmonica playing contest—select winners from each group of entries for four consecutive Saturdays; the winners to become a Harmonica Unit for the club.

If you can obtain the cooperation of the newspaper, another successful idea is to run a comic strip party, having the children impersonate in dress and actions their favorite comic strip character. The best impersonation judged by impartial judges on the stage of the theatre, wins a prize.

La Due Suggests Plan For Merchant Tie-in

The easiest method of tying in a store on a giveaway promotion for a kiddie show is to frame the advertising in such a manner that the store becomes the direct sponsor of the show as well as contributing prizes to be awarded to the kids, says John La Due, manager of the Strand in Akron. The store owner or advertising man is approached with the idea that for a period of weeks or months the Saturday show will be advertised and known as the Blank Theatre-Blank Department Store kiddie show.

An approach and contact of this type gives the store a certain sense of responsibility for the success of the project and plants it in the minds of the store officials as as much of a store promotion as it is a theatre promotion. In other words, it puts it on a strictly cooperative and mutual benefit basis. The store will benefit from the tieup fully as much as the theatre for its name is carried in all theatre advertising pertaining to the show.

Under this setup the store is apt to devote a generous share of its newspaper and window display space—a larger share than they would if they were merely donating prizes. It provides the store with a shopping angle for busy mothers—along the lines that the mothers may take advantage of the unusual bargains at the Blank store and know that their children are safe and happy at the show.

La Due stresses extreme care in the selection of the items to be given away. The main fault of most awards, he finds, is that the prize or prizes have a limited appeal. Success in this department is a matter of child psychology, La Due says. Further, stating a hypothetical case, the theatremen uses the instance of the same show booked in two similar theatres adjoining one another. In one giveaway three bicycles at a total cost of $75. In the other giveaway ten novelty sweaters and ten Ingersoll wrist watches at a total cost not exceeding $30.

"You may bet your bankroll with safety that the latter will outgross the former," says La Due. "It will, for the bicycles appeal to a limited group and only involve the awarding of three prizes. A kid of any age would like to have a new novelty sweater or a watch and feels that he or she has a much better chance to win one of 20 prizes. It is true that adults attend theatres in hopes of winning a large cash prize. Kids don't have that outlook. They do not fully appreciate the value of money and get a kick out of winning a prize of some sort, whether it is a one dollar sweater or a two dollar watch.

"For a thorough check on the exact type of prizes, a ballot containing a list of some 20 can be prepared. Let each kid vote for the three he likes best. Appoint tellers from the kids in the audience—let them tabulate the votes and announce the prizes the kids want. That way it will be strictly their show and that's the way they like it."

Somers Stresses Terms With Baker and Dairy

Every holiday such as Easter, Washington's Birthday, etc., Bunny Somers, City Manager, Sydney, Ohio, gives candy to all kiddies attending the Mickey Mouse show. With every 30 bread wrappers presented by any kid at the boxoffice, they receive an admission ticket. Theatre is re-imbursed for these tickets by cooperating bakery and this enables quite a number of the poorer children to attend the show.

Similar tieup with local dairy can be arranged, whereby any child presenting 10 milk bottle tops at the boxoffice receives a free ticket.

A party on the stage of a half hour duration is held during the winter months by Somers and any kid out of the audience who wishes to participate has the opportunity. Games such as pin the donkey's tail, duck for apples, etc., are played with the winners receiving prizes.

WENDELL RICHARDSON

was a stage hand and janitor in 1925 and after three years became assistant operator and promotion manager. His following jobs were operating Smalley's houses in Fort Plain, Stamford, Cooperstown, and now St. Johnsville, at the St. Johnsville Theatre. Richardson says nice things about the ROUND TABLE, for which we certainly are appreciative and invite him to forward his "dues."

JUDE E. POYNTER

who is manager of the San Clemente Theatre in San Clemente, Cal., was an usher at the Ohio Theatre in Indianapolis, Ind., in 1927, gradually moving up the rung to chief of service, assistant manager and treasurer and then attaining a managerial post. His activities have had him on the go both in the East and West and his connections have been with Skouras Bros., Fox West Coast, Gore Bros. and Pacific States Theatres Inc.

SAMUEL BLEIWEISS

manages the Waldorf Theatre in New York City, just a "wave of the handkerchief" from ROUND TABLE headquarters. Before securing this theatre he worked at the New York Paramount as assistant and chief usher. We invite you to pay us a visit, Sam, and make it soon.

WALTER L. CULPEPPER

is the manager of the Plaza Theatre in Norfolk, Virginia, being promoted to this post after serving as extra usher, usher and doorman at the Colony. Don't forget to inform us of your various theatre activities, Walt, for they should prove of interest to our members and readers.

HEROD JIMERSON

was aided and abetted by his father in showbusiness when dad presented him with a toy picture machine during Herod's tender years. As he grew older the machines became larger so that by 1930 he was able to procure a job of relief operator at the New Theatre and three years later found himself as advertising and publicity manager for the New, Roxy and Prospect Theatres. Early this year he managed the Prospect house for the Arkansas Amusement Corp. and then resigned to take over his present managerial job at the Best in England, Ark.

RAY R. SUMMERS

started as an usher at the age of 19 and before long was transferred to the booth as assistant operator. His next job was to operate at Angels Camp Theatre where he remained for over a year. Thereafter, he reported to the Westwood Theatre as assistant manager and then became skipper of the Avenal, where he won two contests held in the company, Gross and Advertising Contest and Fashion Show Contest. A year later he was given charge of a couple of theatres in Palo Alto, staying on for six months and then coming to the McCloud Theatre in McCloud, Cal.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 126

Conducted by

F. H. RICHARDSON

Question No. 126 was: (A) Quote Ohm's law and explain its action. (B) What various things will or may happen if circuit wires be overloaded? Compare resistance of a carbon lamp filament when cold and when hot. Does resistance of insulating materials usually increase or decrease as temperature increases?

The following answered acceptably: S. Evans and C. Rau; G. E. Doe; J. R. Prater; L. Ciminoski; H. Edwards; W. E. Limmroth; O. H. Schmidt; W. Schoeneman; G. Burdis; M. and J. Devoy; R. W. Groton; E. Lomax; P. E. Shell; L. Johnson; T. W. Redhouse; T. and W. Turk; H. Bunker; L. and F. Savor; G. L. Goss; S. Hewitt; W. R. Davis; K. Irwin; D. and W. Porter; C. Hawkins; C. Umphrey; E. and F. Wentworth; W. Winkler and R. R. Robbins; S. T. Adams; L. F. and G. Brown; D. A. Shea and H. T. Plum; B. L. Kent; L. E. Dodson and H. H. Todd; L. M. Richardson; G. Thompson; R. R. Jacobs and B. B. Hornstein; B. and M. Walker; F. E. Dorp and H. A. Ames; H. T. Randolph; C. H. Lowrie; W. B. Hennesy; L. Day and W. S. Samuels; W. S. Maxwell; P. and L. Felt; P. L. Goldstein and M. Samuels; P. Slobodny; B. L. Morris, H. M. Jackson and W. V. Henderson; W. B. Hunter; S. E. Billings; L. D. Tomlinson; S. True; G. L. Baxter; G. T. Jones and A. Leonard; A. and B. Richardson; W. R. Allen and M. Samuels; D. N. Logman; T. L. Ward and W. Jones; R. E. Bullard and J. K. Robinson; D. R. Spencer; M. A. Ordell and L. B. Daniels; J. M. Kelner and A. W. Baxter; H. T. Steele; N. S. Reid and H. T. Watkins; K. L. Brant; F. W. Brandenburg; M. F. Brown and R. Davis; M. D. McGuire; F. H. S. and P. Dalbey; S. T. Logan; E. Exline; L. A. Beachwood and M. F. Robinson; T. S. Anderson; B. L. Oden and R. Smith; A. C. Greene; J. R. Davidson and W. R. Matthews; S. L. Maxwell; B. B. Kent; H. J. Benjamin; J. C. Lathrope.

S. Evans and C. Rau answer Section A thus: "Ohm's law reads, 'The number of amperes flowing is equal to volts divided by resistance in ohms.' The rule, or basic law, may be used in various ways to find an unknown quantity where two values are known, thus: If we know current value in amperes, and resistance in ohms, we have only to multiply one by the other to ascertain value of impressed voltage. If voltage and amperage are known, we divide voltage by amperage to ascertain ohms. If we know both voltage and resistance value, we multiply one by the other to ascertain ohms resistance."

J. R. Prater answers, "Amperes flowing always equals pressure in volts divided by resistance in ohms. Aware of this relationship, one sees that amperes times ohms equals voltage, and that voltage divided by amperage equals resistance as measured in ohms. It is ordinarily expressed thus,  $E$  representing voltage,  $L$  amperage, and  $R$  resistance in ohms:

$$\frac{E}{R} = I, LR = E \text{ and } \frac{E}{I} = R.$$

"Knowing any two of these values, the third may always be determined by applying the right formula. For example, if we know a 55-ohm resistance is connected across a 110-volt line, by applying the first formula we know that  $110 \div 55 = 2$  amperes are flowing. Similarly,

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 132

(A) How many spare carbons should be carried in stock? Where should they be stored? Give reasons.

(B) Why is it essential to good results that carbon diameters match amperage as per recommendations of carbon manufacturers? Explain fully.

(C) Name essential reasons for using a negative carbon with a diameter as small as is practicable.

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answers to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

knowing that two amperes are flowing with 55 ohms opposed, the second formula advises that the impressed voltage is 110. Aware that two amperes flow over a 110-volt circuit, we apply the third formula and find the resistance to be 55 ohms."

A new member of the "school," P. E. Shell, answers correctly and concisely in approved terms, thus:

"Ohm's law tells us that the number of amperes flowing in any circuit always equals the  $E$ . M. F. (pressure in volts) divided by the resistance in ohms. Current equals pressure over resistance (volts over ohms). Allowing  $I$  to equal strength of current in amperes,  $E$  to equal  $E$ . M. F. in volts, and  $R$  to equal resistance in ohms,  $I$  equals  $E$  over  $R$ ,  $E$  equals  $LR$ , and  $R$  equals  $E$  over  $I$ ."

For the benefit of those not accustomed to formula statements, in stating fractions it is customary to say "over" instead of divided by.

Thus,  $E$  over  $R$  really means  $\frac{E}{R}$ , or  $E$  divided by  $R$ , or volts divided by amperage.

(B) L. Johnson says, "(A) Temperature of overloaded conductors will rise in proportion to amount of excess current forced through them. They become moderately warm under light, continued overload. Under heavy overload they may become red or even white hot, thus endangering the building and its contents and, in case of a theatre, the audience. (B) As temperature rises above normal, resistance increases, which means waste that must be paid for, hence loss is entailed in proportion to the amount of overload and the time it is continued. (C) High temperature induced by overload will injure insulation, particularly rubber, which hardens and becomes brittle under the action of heat. If the temperature be sufficiently high, the insulation may be seriously injured or even wholly ruined. (D) If the temperature be sufficiently high, or even long continued at moderate excess, resistance of the conductors will rise and molecular changes occur in the metal itself that will cause the increase in resistance to be permanent. It even is possible that increase in temperature will be sufficient to burn the conductor in two, thus opening the circuit.

"In brief, overloading in any degree is objectionable. It should only be tolerated under exceptional circumstances and for a period of time insufficient to permit objectionable rise in temperature—at changeover, for example. Of course, if a circuit be properly protected, no serious overload can occur, since either a fuse will blow or a circuit breaker (if used) kick out, thus opening the circuit."

Leo Cimikoski answers, "Loading conductors above their normal capacity is expensive, no matter from what angle it be examined. It adds rapidly to the resistance, which means waste of power that will be registered on the meter and must be paid for. If for no reason other than this, it is costly. If conductors are forced to carry current in excess of their rated capacity, as set forth in Underwriter's tables (see Bluebook of Projection, page 63), and if the excess be too great (which may only be done by over-fusing), excess in temperature will develop in the conductors, which will or may become red or white hot, finally melting and breaking the circuit, with danger of setting fire to the building. Thus it is seen that overload not only is expensive, but also very dangerous.

"Resistance of a carbon lamp filament when cold is about twice as much as when it is at normal operating temperature. In general, resistance of insulation materials and liquids usually decreases as temperature is increased."

I am not wholly satisfied with the carbon filament and insulation resistance answers, nor does any satisfactory information appear in any available text book. I am now seeking it elsewhere and hope to be able to present it later.

SELF-REGULATION

DEBATING, questioning, doubtings, plans and re-planning go on and on among those persons and factors and corporations so extensively mentioned by the Department of Justice in that suit in equity No. 87-273. The issues are about what is to be done now and tomorrow, about readjustments of trade practices, about procedures of circuit expansion, about tactics of defense in the suit.

To some observers a deal of all this seems both inevitable and unimportant, ineffectual.

At the rate at which such actions move, at the rate at which this suit tends to move, trial is a long, long way off, and if, when and as it comes to trial it will be long drawn out.

Unless there is intervention by some miracle of political revolution the probabilities are that there will be legislations, state and national, bearing on the elements of the equity suit and other governmental concerns with the screen long before this action is adjudicated.

The ever growing array of lawyers for the defendants probably must approach and deal with 87-273 as a lawsuit, as an action intended to go to trial on the facts.

That, however, is only a technical point of view.

AS HAS been remarked on this page before, the legal petition in this equity action means very much less than the Administration's policy publicity release on filing day.

In the larger affairs of the motion picture industry nothing has ever been settled in the courts. The real working decisions have ever come in the evolutions of the industry, evolving sometimes under pressure, and always reaching adjustment ahead of court judgments. It was so in the beginning. Edison sued the infringing Biograph and they became partners before the lawyers had quit filing papers. The United States sued the Motion Picture Patents Company and its General Film Company as a trust and the Independents had been in practical trade command of the industry for two years before General Film was ordered to "cease and desist."

Much more important than the issues about what was done yesterday, are, for the whole industry, the questions about the tomorrow. There can well be cautions against tactics now that can invite and encourage straight-jacketing the motion picture all the way from studio to screen.

In the more interior discussions of the defense these days there has been lots of pro and con about projected devices of self-regulation with respect to trade practices. There has been the while much of stern counsel by legal technicians against the perils of reform agreements that "could be interpreted as conspiracy."

"It would be," remarked one seasoned councilor, "unique and desirable to be indicted for a plot of virtue. The perils in that direction are not a great menace."

The industry has before it in the operation of the Production Code Administration an example of considerable significance in the direction of the possibilities of self-regulation.

This device grew out of the necessities imposed by the court of public opinion. The principle, it would seem, might be extended. It has worked.

HISTORIC SPOTS

TAKING inspiration from the interest in the unveiling of a tablet to mark the site of the birth of the amusement screen at Koster & Bial's Music Hall in New York, Mr. Paul Gulick of "The Greatest Year" campaign the other day engaged your editor in a consideration of other historic spots which should be memorialized in bronze.

We have forwarded suggestions of spots to be marked, as follows: Harry Miles' boarding house in San Francisco's Turk Street, first film exchange, where blockbooking and blind buying were born; the studio in Philadelphia where "'duping" was invented; the theatre site in Pennsylvania where "bicycling" was discovered; the theatre in Massachusetts which pioneered the double bill; the theatre which introduced "bank night"; the first theatre to show a sex hygiene film; the first theatre to give away a genuine glass pickle dish; the spot where the first lawyer in the picture business was retained; the place on the Atlantic City Boardwalk where censorship was first suggested; the office in Broadway where the "forcing of shorts" was devised; the home of the inventor of "preferred playdates," the scene of the first trade cocktail party, grave of the first—or any—press agent to issue pictures of "star cuts birthday cake."

Contributions to this list will be forwarded to Mr. Gulick and his committees.

CONTEST TECHNIQUE

THE "Greatest Year" campaign committee has before it one of the choicer florations of the art of showmanship, consisting of a trailer now in circulation in a lesser southern circuit, which reads as follows:

"Ladies and Gentlemen—This theatre will show nearly every one of the Greater Movie Campaign pictures. You will not need to go elsewhere to see a single one of them."

"The questions are a minor part of the campaign, the essays being the controlling factor. As a special consideration for our patrons we will list on our screen and in the lobby, on or before December 15, the correct answers to thirty or more pictures, at which time you will be given a campaign book permitting everyone in this territory the privilege of participating in the awards."

At the moment all that seems to be required to complete the job might be an offer of ready-made essays. There's a suggestion to the accessory committee.

WHEN RADIO ASKS

RADIO has us dreadfully confused. Only a little while ago, when engaged in sinking wells into the Hollywood talent pool, radio was murmuring about a "wedding of the arts,"—but not the while, mind you, stating which was the bride. Now we are hearing some rather sharp remarks because the motion picture's "Greatest Year" campaign committee de-

War Rumblings

The week's crescendo of war thunder heard over Europe brought threats to the motion picture industry, immediate in that operations were hampered by the rush for mobilization and that tense populations were in no mood for theatre entertainment, and further removed but none the less ominous in that the outbreak of hostilities on the scale indicated by the extent of the dispute and its underlying causes would almost certainly seriously invade the industry in Europe at least for the duration of the war. Again immediately, negotiations with several countries, notably Italy, for concessions under recently tightened strictures on operations were threatened by immersion of officialdom in the vital business of preparation and defense.

The shifting clouds and their portents are scanned on page 13 and on pages 14 and 15 is a world map connotated to show the status of the foreign market for American pictures particularly in the areas now overcast by the shadow of war.

WHEN RADIO ASKS

cided to use newspaper space and not to buy radio time. Having bid up the price on star values, and having engaged, in behalf of advertisers, in presenting the most potent screen names obtainable in competition with the best show hours of the screen theatre, Radio would now apply the heat for a cut into the money with which the motion picture seeks to meet its special merchandising and policy problems. This becomes the more presumptuous as one considers the nature of the total offerings of radio to the public on the subject of motion pictures, the readiness with which it has been a willing medium for the gossip purveyors and the commentators who venture to tell the customers about the merits and demerits of the screen's wares on the basis of snapshot personal judgments. It is not graceful of radio.

NAMES for UNIVERSAL

WHEN Mr. Nate Blumberg was moved into Universal Pictures Corporation he had some publicity audiences and made some promises. That was some months ago. Now Universal is to be discovered pointing with pride and naming newly acquired names for what they call "regular contract films," including W. C. Fields and Bergen & McCarthy, Bing Crosby, Constance Bennett, Charlie Ruggles, Edward Everett Horton, James Stuart, Vincent Price, and some more.

Institutionally no doubt Mr. William R. Weaver, our Hollywood editor, will be pleased with the accent Universal is putting on its "flexible program," because that one came out of Mr. Weaver's flexible vocabulary at a Hollywood confab.

Anyway, it would appear that Mr. Blumberg's new broom is one that keeps on sweeping.

New ASCAP Contracts

It appeared certain this week that the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers will offer new 10 year contracts to exhibitors and other licensees in the near future. The current five year contracts with exhibitors expire next fall, as do the Society's current five year agreements with its member authors and composers. In 1934, ASCAP guaranteed exhibitors that it would not ask for an increase in the music tax during the life of the agreement. Whether or not increases in the music rates will be asked if and when 10 year pacts are offered could not be learned. An official of the Society said that ASCAP has received an 80 percent acceptance by its member composers and authors of the new 10 year contracts which authorizes ASCAP to act as their agent.

Anti-Trust Suits

Developments came swiftly this week in the Federal Government's anti-trust suit against the industry and in the suit filed in Chicago by 89 independents against the Balaban & Katz circuit. Attorneys for the distributing companies went to Washington on Wednesday at the invitation of Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, to confer on maintenance of the status quo regarding theatre acquisitions pending disposition of the suit. The conferences, it was reported, might lead to negotiations for a consent decree. Hearings in Chicago on application of the independents for an injunction restraining B & K from using double features were postponed to October 6th.

These developments and others in the field of trade practices as well as a prediction, based on a poll of legislators by W. A. Steffes, that Minnesota will pass a theatre divorce bill this year are reported on page 17.

Film and Radio

A decline in the number of radio programs using motion picture stars, is indicated in a study of the broadcasting companies' time schedules for the new season, now underway. In contrast with last year, when 35 commercially sponsored programs with film personalities were on the air, only 30 were on the announcement lists of the National Broadcasting and Columbia systems this week. The only sustaining programs dealing with film news or personalities were three, all of Mutual.

At the same time, 400 radio stations were receiving copies of a questionnaire sent out by the National Association of Broadcasters in its move to determine whether radio received commensurate benefits from free time given to film matters and stars.

Youth Moves Ahead

At least 60 of the 600 features to come out of Hollywood for the 1938-39 season will have the youth of American studios in top roles or as featured support. Furthermore, not more than five of the sixty will show the youngsters as other than American characters. It's a record for child participation in pictures and besides the current favorites the lots are filled with young players who'll get their first real opportunities in the new season.

Campaign Progress

The fifth week of "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" campaign started Thursday with indications that the campaign is bearing fruit in increasing theatre business. Varying reports of increases of from 10 to 30 per cent were reported and it was said an accurate accounting would be available shortly. Congratulatory messages continued to pour into campaign headquarters in New York from people of prominence.

For details of the fourth week of the campaign and plans for future weeks see page 25.

Showmen Honored

Theatre men who were voted first places in the July Exploitation Contest conducted by Managers' Round Table were guests this week of MOTION PICTURE HERALD and the participating companies on an all-expense visit to New York. Entertainment included dinners and luncheons, attendance at stage, film and night club shows, at the National Open Golf Tournament, and at a double header between the Giants and Dodgers with personal visits with the managers and star athletes and actors.

Color Short Honored

Paramount's two-reel color short subject, "Popeye the Sailor Meets Ali Baba's Forty Thieves," was awarded the prize for the best animated cartoon at the Sixth International Exhibition of Cinematographic Art in Venice, according to a report to the company's New York office from Doctor Ottavio Croze, director of the Venice International Exhibition. The plaque has been forwarded to the Italian Embassy in Washington and will be presented to Barney Balaban, Paramount president. The cartoon was produced by Max Fleischer.

Beneficiaries

Rosalie Spatcher Knisherm, a ballet girl at Radio City Music Hall, New York, and William J. Reilly, former manager of the Roxy theatre, will divide a $500,000 estate left them by a widow in appreciation of their courtesy and attention to her. The widow, Mrs. Edna Morse Allin Elliot, 70, was found dead by police in her room of a cerebral hemorrhage this week. For many years she had been a consistent patron of the Roxy where Mr. Reilly, having noticed her weekly visits, allowed her to enter the theatre and choose her favorite front row seat before the doors were opened. Later she became a well known patron of the Music Hall where the management escorted her into the theatre every week through the executive entrance. On these trips she stopped to talk to the dancers and thus met Miss Knisherm.

John Barnes, advertising representative for Quigley Publications in London, has been mobilized as a pilot in the Royal Air Force. Mr. Barnes was born and educated in England. He was a pilot officer in the Royal Auxiliary Air Force and later worked in the Stock Exchange in New York. After some experience as a song writer and composer he joined the overseas staff of Quigley Publications in 1936.

British Split Feared

The danger of a division within the ranks of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association is seen by Aubrey Flanagan, as an undercurrent of dissatisfaction among the independents is being registered against the attitude of the circuits on such issues as booking protection, the showing of two features on one program, and radio broadcasts from theatres. Jack Prendergast, an independent leader, told the Leeds branch this week that there must be developed a strong independent bloc within the association.

Mr. Flanagan's analysis of the situation appears on page 23.

Grand National Plans

Grand National Pictures will double its field sales force within the next few weeks, preparatory to launching its selling season as an Educational subsidiary, Earle W. Hammons, president, said Monday on his arrival in New York from the coast. The company has 39 exchanges in operation. An announcement of the merged company's new product has been delayed again, probably for a week or two, pending completion of arrangements for sales meetings in Chicago this weekend and in New York the following weekend. The appellation "New" has been eliminated from the company's name for the present, Mr. Hammons said. Its corporate title will be Grand National Pictures. The original name was Grand National Films. Mr. Hammon is president; Edward L. Aperson, general manager of distribution; Jack Skirball, vice-president, and George Blake, secretary. Mr. Hammons plans to go to London in a week or two "if war does not break out" to investigate several possible deals.

Strike Threat

Chicago theatre engineers, members of the International Brotherhood of Operating Engineers and representing 120 theatres, threatened to walk out at midnight Wednesday unless Balaban and Katz, Warner Bros., Jones, Linick & Schaeffer, and RKO theatres restored the voluntary pay cut of 10 per cent of last July.

Guilds

Talent guilds in Hollywood held the lime-light in labor developments. Their attack on the producer members of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences was answered by the board of governors with a refusal to accept resignations; the Screen Actors' Guild negotiated a new contract covering actors and atmosphere players with producers, and the Screen Directors' Guild continued in hearings before the Labor Board on its collective bargaining petition.

These and related developments in the labor field are reported on page 28.

New Selznick Contract

John Hay Whitney, chairman of the board of Selznick International Pictures, Inc., on Wednesday announced the signing of a new term contract under which David O. Selznick will continue as president and executive producer of the company. Selznick International has experienced no change in the executive personnel, membership of the board or the list of stockholders since its inception.

INDUSTRY FEELS ITS FIRST EFFECTS OF WAR'S SHADOW OVER EUROPE

Mobilization Measures Hamper Operations; Fear Expressed That Hostilities Would Add Injury to Weakened Market

With almost every central and western European nation issuing hurried mobilization orders and with all industry and the civilian populations tensed for war, the ominous clouds which had been gathering over the continent during the last few weeks cast a threatening shadow over a motion picture industry already seriously threatened by ever more closely hedged restrictions imposed by rampant nationalistic governments.

Uppermost in the minds of distribution executives here was the certainty that war on the scale indicated by the swiftly moving diplomatic events of recent days would seriously invade the European film market at least for the duration. Even under the situation as it stood early this week it was feared that present negotiations in several countries for alleviation of market and revenue restrictions or for concessions in recently imposed regulations would be terminated by government officials immersed in more vital business.

Will H. Hays visited Secretary of State Cordell Hull and other State Department officials in Washington Tuesday. He was quoted as saying he "did not discuss the war situation."

Distributing company officials in New York saw one ray of hope in the situation. The South American market at present accounts for from eight to twelve per cent of the world gross for American films. A substantial increase in this revenue, obtained by intensive exploitation of the market might be sufficient to balance losses in Europe. Additionally it was pointed out that a considerable portion of the South and Latin American market is at present absorbed by films produced in the countries which in case of war would be the principal belligerents. This source of product would be cut off immediately hostilities began and the market would be left open for American exploitation.

Mobilization Affects Industry

Mobilization in Germany, France and Czechoslovakia already in effect has seriously hampered film operations in those countries. To a lesser extent the industry in England, Poland, Rumania and Hungary has been affected. In Italy the recent Government decree placing all distribution in the hands of an official Government agency was in force and executives in New York were fearful that negotiations begun by their foreign representatives to obtain some concessions from the original harsh lines of the decree would be terminated by war measures.

In France the call for reservists to return to the army has affected the industry generally. Production has been stalled as actors, technicians, cameramen and other studio workers have departed to join the colors. Lud-

On the following pages appears a world map showing the status of the foreign market for American motion pictures, particularly in the areas now the center of mobilization under the dipping and dripping war clouds.

Specific attention is given in the map to the countries which have quota restrictions against American and other outside product, for the threefold purpose of building the domestic industry, and thereby increasing the film companies' contribution to the national wealth, and finally, in some instances, to provide a vehicle for propaganda.

The first percentage figure noted under each country is the American product percentage of total films shown or licensed for showing.

Noted also are the degree of censorship practised against American product, the limitations placed upon the exportation of money, from data supplied by the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce and foreign correspondents of Motion Picture Herald.

wig Berger's "Three Waltzes" was halted by the departure of Pierre Fresnay. Other studios may be forced to close because of depleted staffs. However, not many producers have been called since about 75 per cent of them are not French. The tense international situation also hit theatres in Paris and the provinces. Receipts except for "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," which is having a long run in Paris, have fallen off.

Germany was similarly affected although the market for American films in the Reich has deteriorated so seriously in the last few years that the change was not especially important. Czechoslovakia was cut off from the world except for diplomatic messages early this week but as far as could be learned in New York distribution branches of American companies there were still doing business. American officials here said that even though war did not follow the conversations of this week the Czech market would be considerably damaged by the loss of the Sudeten areas to Germany.

At a suggestion of the British Home Office Wardour street concerns have removed every unnecessary foot of film from the vaults. Permits were extended only for the last necessary foot of current releases. Outlying studios were collaborating by accepting films for storage. The move was inspired by the desire to remove all fire danger.

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association this week offered the Government full cooperation in the crisis. The use of 50,000 cars at 24 hours notice for service as ambulances, couriers and other uses was offered. Every British cinema was reported actively assisting in the Air Raid Precautions campaign by showing recruiting and propaganda slides and posters and freely offering the use of theatres to Home Office and local authorities. Staffs everywhere were depleted by recruiting and by the calling of reservists to the colors.

The British Broadcasting Corporation has completed plans for the organization of war broadcasting.

Press protests against a Paramount British newsreel in which a foreign correspondent criticized the actions of the Cabinet and of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain during the crisis culminated this week in a request from the Government to Paramount to withdraw the offending passages. Two British foreign affairs writers, Wickham Steed and A. J. Cummings, discussed the European situation in the pictorial interview. Mr. Steed said the ban probably was due to references to the effect that Parliament "and therefore the British people" had not been consulted by the Prime Minister in his conversations with Adolph Hitler and Czechoslovakia.

European managers of American distribution companies left Paris for Rome early this week to open conversations with the Italian Government with a view toward obtaining concessions in the new regulations. Hope that the Government would listen sympathetically to their suggestions was based on the fact that last week, a few days after the original decree was issued, it was modified to read that the minister of foreign trade and exchange might decide whether contracts would be conceded to individual distributors or all distribution handed outright to the Government controlled film distributing agency. The American embassy in Rome was reported also to be pleading the motion picture companies' case with the Italian Government.

The board of directors of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America met in New York last week and again this week to discuss the Italian problem as well as the international film situation but study of the Italian decree was hampered by lack of clarification of many of its points. The decree as issued by the Government was published last week in MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Newsreels Ready

The five American newsreel companies have made extensive preparations for any eventuality in Europe. Special orders have been issued to staffs on the continent and arrangements have been made for new equipment. Truman Talley, head of Movietone News, increased the company's staffs at various points during a recent visit to Europe and Allyn Butterfield, editor of Pathe News, arrived in Europe this week to consolidate his staff's plans.

In Hollywood the first production cognizance of the crisis was taken by Edward Small who announced he would produce a picture titled "The Maginot Line," with Louis Hayward in the stellar role.

Youth Will Be Served Up in Tenth of Product for the New Season

And They'll be in American Roles in 55 of Their 60 Films

by VANCE KING
in Hollywood

America's youth comes into its own on Hollywood's 1938-39 schedule. Approximately one-tenth of its product will deal with youngsters either in top or featured supporting roles, a study this week disclosed. At least 60 pictures of the 600 or so planned for production here will be about children from the tot age to adolescence.

Not more than five of the 60 will show the children as anything but Americans.

Nebulous as production plans are at present, due to the general flexibility of schedules to allow for the inclusion of topical themes and to other reasons, it is apparent that the number of pictures featuring youngsters will reach record proportions.

The current favorites among child players will be represented, as well as a galaxy of newcomers. There will be three Shirley Temple vehicles, about four for Jane Withers, three Bobby Breens, four Jackie Coopers, three Deanna Durbins, a minimum of five with Mickey Rooney in the top role, and an undetermined number from Warners' "Dead End"—"Crime School" kids.

The Newcomers

Among the newcomers will be the Universal "Little Tough Guys" troupe, Warners' Janet Chapman, five-year-old for whom the studio is seeking stories; Irene Dare, Sol Lesser's five-year-old skater who appeared with Bobby Breen in his last, "Breaking the Ice," and will be starred in "The Silver Skates"; Ann Gillis and Tommy Kelly, who made their bows as top players in Selznick International's "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer"; Peter Holden, New York stage lad will co-star with Bob Burns in RKO's "Little Orvie," adapted from the Booth Tarkington story; Republic's Tommy Ryan, who appeared in that studio's "Tenth Avenue Kid," on which excellent grosses have been reported, and others.

Guessing reasons for the deluge of child pictures could constitute several evenings of conversation for Hollywood's armchair and second guessers' brigades. The trend toward intra-mural domesticity as a theme for series pictures, with stories featuring children as a by-product, is one. Of major importance is the evidence of sustained response by patrons to the Shirley Temple and the Jane Withers pictures, as shown by the poll of exhibitors conducted by MOTION PICTURE HERALD and by Fame, in which the Temple child has held first place year after year and Jane Withers captured sixth place last year.

Lesser's Plan

Whatever the cause it remains that Hollywood will contribute much of its product to portraying the lives, the troubles and the heartaches of the nation's youth. So dominant in the scheme of Hollywood this year has the trend become that Sol Lesser has dropped everything to announce that his entire product will deal with children.

He will produce three features with Bobby Breen, the first of which will be "Fisherman's Wharf," story of the San Francisco waterfront. At present, "Peck's Bad Boy with the Circus," starring Tommy Kelly, is being edited, with "Peck's Bad Boy and the Hypnotists" to follow. Then Tommy goes into "Wings of Tomorrow," story of youthful aviation enthusiasts based on an idea by Gilbert Hanson, graduate of the University of California at Los Angeles. Mr. Lesser will produce the Irene Dare vehicle, "The Silver Skates." All but the two last-named pictures will be released by RKO. No deals for these two have been set.

From Warner Studios

From Warner Brothers will come "Hell's Kitchen" and "They Made Me a Criminal," featuring the "Dead End"—"Crime School" kids; Bonita Granville in six "Nancy Drew" stories; four featuring Janet Chapman, now under term contract after appearing in "Little Miss Thoroughbred," "Broadway Musketeers," and "Heart of the North," and about four in the "Jane Arden" series. These are based on the Des Moines Register Syndicate comic strip, and a national contest will be held to find a 16 or 17 year old girl to play the title role, that of a cub reporter. Bobby Jordan, one of the original "kids," is appearing in a featured role in "Unfit to Print."

Jackie Cooper has just finished a 15 chapter serial, "Eagle Scout," for Universal, and now is working in Monogram's "Gangster's Boy." Monogram has "Streets of New York" lined up for him, and Universal has signed him for "Newsboys' Home."

In addition to three more Deanna Durbin stories—"Three Smart Girls Grow Up," "First Love," and "Jenny Lind"—Universal has completed the last of its 1937-38 Durbins, "That Certain Age," to be released soon. The studio is building up a troupe of youngsters to be styled "Little Tough Guys," with Hally Chester as the nucleus. Their first will be "The Little Tough Guys in Society," and one or two more are planned.

Monogram will have four Frankie Darro vehicles, the first of which, "Wanted by the Police," has been finished.

Twentieth Century-Fox is relying upon Shirley Temple for three and Jane Withers for four, to carry its load of children's stories.

In addition to the five Lesser releases, RKO will present Peter Holden with Bob Burns in "Little Orvie," and possibly may build up Lorna Lynn, four-year-old singer, and Janet Dempsey, five years old, Janet making her debut in "Miracle Racket."

Three in "Sons of the Legion"

Paramount, about to release "Sons of the Legion," in which Donald O'Connor, Billy Cook and Billy Lee have prominent roles, will have on the new season schedule "Little Orphan Annie," starring Ann Gillis and produced by John Speaks' Colonial Pictures, and "Tom Sawyer, Detective," being made on the lot from the comic strip story. Featured are Billy Cook and Donald O'Connor.

Having loaned out Ann Gillis and Tommy Kelly, Selznick International has no definite plans for pictures for the youngsters, aside from announcing some time ago preparation of a story, "Heartbreak Town," yarn of Hollywood film children trying to get along.

Republic, having signed Tommy Ryan, 12, after the lad was under contract to RKO for six months without being used, will be seen in "Prairie Moon," forthcoming Gene Autry picture, and the studio is seeking at least two stories for him.

Columbia has Edith Fellows under contract. Her next, "Thoroughbred," is already finished. Four year old Larry Simms has been signed for the role of "Baby Bumpstead" in "Blondie," from the cartoon story. Arthur Lake and Penny Singleton will play respectively "Dagwood" and "Blondie." There is a possibility that "Blondie" may be an addition to the series pictures, and that would call for further participation by the Simms youngster, for the baby in the story plays an important part.

14 Under MGM Contracts

Although MGM has 14 child players under contract, only six pictures with youngsters thus far are on the docket. There will be a minimum of three "Judge Hardy's Family" pictures in the new season, and Mickey Rooney, Ann Rutherford, Judy Garland and Don Castle will have permanent places therein. A forthcoming release is "Stablemates," in which Rooney is teamed with Wallace Beery. Rooney has been announced for the title role in "Huckleberry Finn," from the Mark Twain book.

In addition, Freddie Bartholomew, Miss Garland and Scotty Beckett, another youngster, have prominent roles in the soon to be released "Listen, Darling," in which Mary Astor and Walter Pidgeon have the top adult roles.

Other youngsters under contract to the studio are Johnny Walsh, 11, who made his film debut in a trailer for "Boys Town"; Janice Chambers, 12; Jo Ann Sayers (real name Mimi Lilligren), 16; Gene Reynolds, 14; Terry Kilburn, 12; Betty Jaynes, 17, a singer, and Virginia Weidler, 14, a veteran among child film actors.

FEDERAL INVITATION ANSWERED; STEFFES SEES NEW DIVORCE BILL

Counsel for Distributors Meet Arnold in Washington for Conferences Which May Lead to Negotiations Settlement

Events in the campaigns being conducted for regulation of the motion picture industry moved swiftly this week as attorneys for five of the eight companies named in the Federal Government's sweeping suit met with Department of Justice officials in Washington for conferences which may result in the discussion of the possibility of a consent decree settlement, and with preliminary hearings October 6 in Chicago on the independent theatre owners' suit against Balaban & Katz and distributors. Significant developments were reported also on other phases of the trade practice discussion.

Statements from sales representatives of the distributors, precipitated by publication of a letter from William A. Rodgers, MGM sales manager, to Max A. Cohen, president of Allied Theatre Owners of New York, set forth their stands on the question of short subject sales and denied charges that the films are forced with feature sales.

Important discussions of trade practices were indicated for the national convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America in Oklahoma City next month. Heads of distribution companies will be asked to attend to give their views on self-regulation of trade practices.

A new Government investigation was launched with questionnaires sent out by the Department of Commerce to some 2,300 trade associations in all industries asking for information regarding the organization, financing and activities of each.

Counsel for the five distributing companies named in the Government's suit which have theatre operating subsidiaries or affiliates left New York Wednesday afternoon for Washington to confer with Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general. The discussion was proposed by Mr. Arnold in a letter to the companies several weeks ago in which he suggested a conference on means of maintaining the status quo of affiliated theatre operations pending determination of the anti-trust suit. At that it was said that the conference might lead to a discussion of possible terms for settlement of the suit by means of a consent decree.

John Kaskey of Dwight, Harris, Koegel & Kaskey and Ralph Harris represented 20th-Century-Fox at the meeting and Colonel William J. Donovan, of Donovan, Leisure, Lumbard and Newton, and William Mallard represented RKO. Others attending were J. Robert Rubin, Loew's; Austin C. Keough, Paramount, and Robert W. Perkins, Warner Brothers.

The attorneys refused to comment on possible developments at the meeting but it was understood that it had been agreed to let the Government representatives take the lead in any discussion.

The conferees were called to meet at night at the home of Colonel Donovan in George-

SEATTLE THEATRES TURN TO SINGLE BILL

Seattle this week was treated to the unusual and, according to audience comments, welcome situation of five single feature programs out of seven first run theatres.

"Marie Antoinette" at the Fifth Avenue, "Carefree" at the Paramount, "Algiers" at the Liberty, "Alexander's Ragtime Band" at the Blue Mouse and "Three Loves Has Nancy" at the Music Box were the single feature attractions. The Orpheum and Palomar were the only houses playing dual bills this week.

town, where the group was invited to meet for dinner.

From the Washington conclave, as the session wore on, percolated indications that the assorted defendants were not presenting an entirely united front in the tentative, fencing bout discussions, there being reported divergences of attitude toward the government's insistence upon divorce of production from exhibition. Nebulous reports emerged of various projected patterns of realignments which would trade production interests for exhibition controls, and the like. From the point of view of the status quo of the industry these seemed improbable pictures of a chaos of high intensity.

Aluminum Case Precedent

Principles of the anti-trust laws on which the Government is expected to base its argument in the motion picture case were interpreted by the Department of Justice in New York Tuesday in a brief filed in the federal district court in the Aluminum Company of America case. The Department's argument with respect to acquisition by the Aluminum Company of bauxite deposits and of power sites, was considered of major significance in view of the attack, in the film case, upon acquisitions of theatres by producers.

Anticipating that the company would contend that these acquisitions were not in excess of what it regarded as useful and necessary to its future business requirements, the Department argued that "even if the defendants should succeed in proving this to be the case and in proving that their acquisitions were not motivated by any monopolistic purpose, such proof would not free them from the charge of having attained monopolistic power by 'abnormal' means and methods.

"What the law forbids," it was explained, "is the attainment of dominant power by methods which prevent the fair functioning of the competitive system and, when this occurs, the fact that parties concerned were actuated by a desire to promote their business interests constitutes no defense."

Chicago Hearing Postponed

Preliminary hearings in the suit filed by 89 Chicago independents were postponed to Oct. 6 in United States district court before Judge James Wilkerson who is to hear an application for a temporary injunction making present clearance regulations ineffective and restraining distributors from making contracts or carrying out contracts "heretofore made."

In the 114-page complaint filed by the inde-

Allied President Says Poll Shows Minnesota Legislators Will Approve Measure for State at Session This Winter

Basing his opinion on a poll being taken of candidates for the legislature, W. A. Steffes, president of Allied States Association, predicted this week in Minneapolis, that the enactment of a "divorcement" bill in Minnesota is "definitely assured."

Returns from 150 out of 396 candidates showed that all but three have gone on record as being in favor of such a bill, Mr. Steffes said. Only one was opposed and two refused to commit themselves.

"The candidates are practically unanimous in expressing themselves as being opposed to monopoly," Mr. Steffes said. "They inform me that they are in favor of the 'little fellow,' that they will vote for a bill that will give the small independent exhibitor a fair chance to compete with his large and financially powerful chain-owned rivals.

"As soon as we have returns from all the candidates, we will immediately inform the independent operators in the districts where the candidates live, as to how the voting has gone. If one candidate favors the bill, while the other is in opposition, we will naturally urge the exhibitor to make a strenuous effort to see to it that the one who is favorable, is elected. If both candidates express themselves as favoring the bill, we will urge a 'hands off' attitude."

In addition to the letters written in by candidates, many have called his office saying that they will actively support a Minnesota 'divorcement' bill, Mr. Steffes reported.

"No doubt the fact that the North Dakota bill was found to be constitutional, is one of the reasons why the candidates for the legislature are so eager to go on record favoring a similar measure for this state," he said. "As an evidence of this changed attitude, three state senators living in Minneapolis have called me to report that they have altered their position and will support the proposed law at the next session of the legislature."

In the opinion of Mr. Steffes, all of the candidates for governor would sign such a bill. A "divorcement" bill in the Minnesota legislature died in committee at the last session after strenuous efforts for its passage by Mr. Steffes and his organization, and equally strenuous efforts by the Minnesota Amusement Company against its passage.

The poll of the legislative candidates was taken in a letter sent out from the offices of former chief justice of Minnesota, John P. Devaney, and Louis B. Schwartz, counsel for Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, Inc.

The letter said in part:

"The legislation proposed by the independent theatre owners is in line with the anti-monopolistic legislation that has the support and approval of every major political party in this country. . . .

"The Independent Theatres Owners of Minnesota, ask that you use the enclosed stamped envelope, to advise whether or not you sympathize with, and will support legislation directed to the protection of their property rights and interests. It is a struggle between the small local independent business man and monopoly."

The letter was signed: "Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, Inc."

SALES PRACTICES ON SHORTS DEFINED

pendents it was declared that they would be forced to close their theatres within the next two to ten weeks unless relief was granted. The B & K corporations, and the individuals who are defendants in the suit have retained Kirkland, Fleming, Green, Martin and Ellis as counsel.

The plaintiffs were said to be seeking immediate action in the case. If the injunction seeking to restrain B & K from using double features failed to materialize this week it was said that the independent group hoped to have the case brought to the attention of the United States Attorney General's office which they expected might result in his finding that the major circuit in the city and the distributor have been in contempt of court regarding the consent decree handed down in 1932.

One result of the filing of the suit was to bring to a virtual halt all film buying in the area. Even though the Chicago independents usually are slow in contracting for new season product it was reported that even the early buyers were not discussing terms.

Shorts Position Stated

Paramount and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer do not insist that exhibitors buy short subjects in order to obtain the features listed on their programs, according to statements issued this week by sales executives of the distributors. The policy varies with other companies, several of which indicated that their practice in the matter was flexible. The issue was precipitated last week when Max A. Cohen, president of New York Allied, made public a letter he had received from William F. Rodgers, MGM sales manager, in which Mr. Rodgers said that where a theatre did not use shorts the company did not demand their purchase.

Mr. Rodgers said later in interviews that the same policy applied to the MGM newsreel. "We have never forced the sale of newsreels," he said. "Very few theatres do not use them, but MGM will not insist on an exhibitor buying the newsreel to get the features." It has been MGM's policy "right along" not to compel the purchase of shorts with features, Mr. Rodgers said, but he added that his letter to Mr. Cohen was the first time he had put it in writing as applying generally.

The MGM sales executive said also that adjustments on a shorts program in the event an exhibitor finds he has purchased subjects his house cannot absorb would depend on the reason and "if he uses shorts we would expect representation."

Paramount's position was made clear by Neil F. Agnew, distribution executive, who said, "Paramount does not force the sale of shorts with features. To say that we will not do so would be mere repetition of what we are already on record as having said. In my opinion our policy on this matter is too well established and too well known to be news."

The 20th Century-Fox sales department said that "if a particular operating policy calls for no shorts, then we do not insist on shorts." An official statement came from W. C. Gehring, central division manager, who said, "Due consideration is given at all times to the house policy of our accounts and all matters involved. If any customer of ours runs shorts we feel we are entitled to a share of the business."

Universal's policy was given by William A. Scully, general sales manager, as follows: "Our salesmen, naturally, try to sell as much of our short subject product as possible. In consequence, we have contracts for both all or part of this output." Mr. Scully would not commit himself on future policy because he said Allied had not as yet communicated with the company. Mr. Cohen said that he sent a letter last Friday

ADDITIONAL GRANTS FOR SCHOOL FILMS

Raymond B. Fosdick, president of the General Education Board, with headquarters in New York, in his report for the last half of 1936 and the year 1937, has made public the report of Robert J. Havighurst, director for General Education, commenting on the board's general program. As concerns motion pictures and radio the report says:

"Realizing the increasing importance of new media in education, the General Education Board made further grants to the American Council on Education for a program directed primarily toward (1) describing the functions of and needs for motion pictures in general education; and (2) facilitating the reorganization of general education through the use of the motion picture and allied visual aids.

"A grant was also made to the University of Minnesota for experimentation with the production of a new series of films in two areas in which the college believes visual material is especially needed—vocational orientation in social and civic responsibilities."

to the sales heads of all the major companies.

A. Montague, Columbia sales head, made no statement but indicated that one would be given to Allied if it was asked. RKO said that the company attempts to make the best deals possible on shorts, meaning that accounts are persuaded to take as many as they can absorb. United Artists' policy is to sell its shorts as a group separate from the features, according to the sales department.

MPTOA To Discuss Practices

Developments in trade regulation are expected to materialize at the national convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners in Oklahoma City at the end of this month. The expanded program at present includes scheduled talks by heads of the distribution companies, by representatives of Allied States Association and by representatives of other sections of the industry.

It is expected that the distributors' policy on cancellation and score charges will be the chief points of discussion. Leaders of the organization have pointed out that these are matters for individual company action and that they are not subject to the distributors' objection that trade practice concessions can not be given without giving rise to cause for suspicion of anti-trust violation.

The convention has been extended one day, through November 2nd, to include the increased scope of the program.

The purpose of the Department of Commerce investigation of trade associations in all branches of industry is to secure information "necessary to evaluate the trade association as a whole, rather than to secure information regarding the operation of individual associations," Assistant Secretary Patterson explained in Washington. He added that the investigation will be conducted wholly independently of any action taken by the Department of Justice or the Administration's monopoly investigating committee.

Crusade Against Games Is Fought

A united front of New York exhibitors to fight the crusade of the Society for the Prevention of Crime against chance games in theatres is being fought by Allied Theatre Owners of New York.

At a meeting in the Hotel Astor last week Max A. Cohen, president of Allied, told members that the organization intended to battle against these so-called oppressions if it takes every cent in the treasury.

Harry G. Kosch, attorney for Mr. Cohen and the Allied unit, charged that the Society's crusade aims to cash in on the publicity given to the Hines "policy" trial.

Charles M. Miller, attorney for R. W. McEwan, Bank Night distributor, planned to file a brief this week with the Missouri supreme court, en banc, supporting the oral arguments he made before the court last week. Mr. Miller re-argued the case of Missouri versus McEwan, in which the circuit court held Bank Night is not a lottery, but in which a commissioner for division No. 2 of the supreme court held a contrary opinion.

The supreme court, en banc, allowed Mr. Miller's motion for a rehearing before the entire court, and took the case under advisement last week.

Bango, a variation of Bingo, played in two theatres at Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, has been ruled out by Mayor J. W. Haines. The gambling ban followed similar bans in Akron and the county where the lid is now clamped tight.

As a result of a conviction by the Hamilton police court, Ontario, under the Lottery Act against Herbert Spence, operator of nightly Bingo games under the name of Amity Club, Bingo halls have been shut down in Canadian cities and towns.

The charge was a test case under new amendments of the Canadian Criminal Code and, even though a "permit" had been issued by the mayor to the accused, the court imposed a nominal fine of $10 and one day in jail in the registration of guilt.

McGrady New Director of RCA and Subsidiary

Edward F. McGrady, vice-president and director of labor relations of the Radio Corporation of America, has been elected to the Board of Directors of the corporation and also of RCA Communications, Inc., a subsidiary, it was announced last week.

Before joining RCA Mr. McGrady had been Assistant Secretary of Labor. In recognition of his services in industrial relations, he was guest at a dinner last Tuesday by the American Arbitration Association.

"Algiers" has been purchased by the Balaban and Katz circuit, Chicago, from United Artists on a separate contract.

WINNERS OF ROUND TABLE CONTEST HONORED ON GUEST TRIP TO N. Y.

Showmen Are Feted by Film Companies and 'Motion Picture Herald' at Round of Dinners, Shows, Golf Tourney and Ball Games

by A-MIKE VOGEL

Chairman, Managers' Round Table

Theatremen who were voted first places in the July Exploitation Contest conducted by Managers' Round Table arrived in New York on September 26th as guests of participating film companies, which offered all-expense trips to New York for the best summer campaigns on selected pictures.

Round Table discussions of coming product, varied entertainment and sight-seeing tours made up the week's program of arrangements in behalf of J. P. Shipley, Dunkin theatre, Cushing, Okla., selected by Paramount, for the best campaign on "Professor Beware"; William Saxton, Loew's, Baltimore, Md., by United Artists, on "Algiers"; Harry Rubin, Tivoli, Michigan City, Ind., by RKO Radio, on "Having Wonderful Time"; Rex Williams, Hoosier, Whiting, Ind., by Monogram, on "Romance of the Limberlost", and Rodney Collier, Stanley, Baltimore, Md., by Warner Bros., on "Cowboy from Brooklyn". Visitors' headquarters were established at the St. Moritz hotel.

Schedule for the first day included a get-together luncheon as guests of the Round Table, followed by an automobile trip through the New York City parkway system to the Fenway Country Club, in White Plains, to take in the $15,000 Open Golf Tournament, where Rex Williams and Bill Saxton met up with Ralph Goudahl, Gene Sarazen, and other top golf names, old friends of the Round Tablers. For dinner, the winners were guests of Jack Dempsey and posed with the former heavyweight champion for pictures requested by their local newspapers. Harry Rubin, who knew the "champ" from the days when Dempsey trained at Michigan City for one of his championship fights, recalled old days with the famed pugilist-restaurateur.

The morning of the second day was occupied with a discussion of United Artists pressbooks, advertising and accessory aids, conducted by Monroe Greenthal, director of exploitation. Other UA executives who took part were Ben Washer, publicity manager; Len Daly, of the foreign publicity staff; Harry Kosiner, Walter Wanger representative in the East. Following the meeting, the winners were received by George Schaefer, United Artists general manager in charge of distribution, and at lunch were guests of Edward Golden, vice-president of Monogram Pictures, in the Rainbow Grill, of Rockefeller Center.

At the luncheon were George Weeks, Monogram sales manager, and Lou Lifton, director of advertising. Guests in addition to the theatremen were Mr. and Mrs. Tom

Lancaster, of Lancaster Amusement Corporation, of Detroit, your Chairman and Gertrude Merriam, associate editor of The Managers' Round Table. Others invited included Martin Quigley, Colvin Brown and Terry Ramsaye. A large part of the after-luncheon discussion was taken up with coming Monogram product and a detailed explanation by Rex Williams of his campaign voted the Monogram prize.

The afternoon of the second day was taken up with a visit to the Brooklyn-Giants double header at Ebbets Field, home of the Brooks, as guests of James Mulvey, of Samuel Goldwyn Productions and vice-president of the Brooklyn ball team. The visitors were introduced to Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn manager; Bill Terry, Giants manager, and players of both teams. Here, also, photos were taken for the home town press. In the evening, the theatremen were dinner guests of Billy Rose, at the Casa Manana. Among those who greeted the visitors during the evening were James Barton and Patricia Ellis, Warner star, and headliner of the stage show.

Another product session was held Wednesday morning, with Paramount, during which a number of suggestions were made for the strengthening of home office and theatre exploitation relations. The conference was headed by Robert Gillham, Paramount director of advertising and publicity, aided by Alec Moss, advertising manager, and Al Wilkie, publicity manager. In the afternoon, the visitors were guests of Paramount at the Astoria studios at a press party given in their honor. Sylvia Sidney, star, and Dudley Nichols, director of "One Third of a Nation," now in production, and William Howard, were among those present.

Thursday was set aside for RKO Radio, with luncheon as guests of S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity, at the New York Athletic Club. Other department heads who participated in a general discussion of trade problems and coming product included Rutgers Neilson, publicity manager; Fred Schaefer, pressbook head; Ben Grimm, advertising manager; Ed Hollander, in charge of field exploitation; Ken Hallam, manager of music and radio tieups, and Dave Strumpf, art director.

Backstage tour of Radio City Music Hall, through the courtesy of W. G. Van Schmus, managing director, and a visit to various sections of Rockefeller Center, followed the theatre trip.

From 5 to 6 the theatremen were guests of Martin Quigley, at a reception in the offices of the publisher, to which were invited heads of distribution companies and leading exhibitor executives. Attendance at the weekly Rudy Vallee broadcast and introductions to the radio star featured the evening schedule.

Scheduled for Friday, fifth day of the trip, was a trip through the grounds of the New York World's Fair, in Flushing, L. I., as guests of Grover Whalen, president. A reception by S. Gregory Taylor, managing director, St. Moritz Hotel, was to follow, and in the evening, a theatre party to see "I Married an Angel." Zorina, star of the Broadway hit, invited the theatremen to be her guests, after the performance.

Featured in the last day of the trip was to be attendance at the races in Belmont Park, as guests of Jock Whitney, socialite, international polo star and Selznick Picture executive. During the week, the visitors also visited the Paramount, Capitol, Roxy and Strand theatres.

The contest for which the all-expense trips to New York were offered was inaugurated in July by Managers' Round Table, for the purpose of stimulating showmanship in the summer months.

FRENCH PRODUCT SHOWS INCREASE IN QUANTITY; QUALITY A QUESTION

Producers Hampered by Mounting Studio Costs and Devaluation; Sudden Rise in Export Demand Endangers Industry

by PIERRE AUTRE
in Paris

Although present figures indicate that French domestic production will exceed last year's total as to quantity it is still a question whether the general level of quality has been improved or even maintained. Since January 1st, 1938, 80 feature films have been produced in French studios, with about 30 of them already released. It is estimated that by the end of the year the total will have reached 140. This will compare with a total of 123 produced in 1937. Most of these films, however, are more suitable for the French domestic market than for export.

The chief reason for the decrease in quality lies in the fact that French producers were obliged to reduce their budgets for films in production, due to the continuing increase of production costs, the application of the 40-hour week in the studios, the devaluation of French money and financing difficulties.

Among the films already released in France the two best ones by far are "Le Quai des Brumes" ("The Foggy Quay"), a very artistic film directed by Marcel Carné, but which has been criticized as being too morbid and including too many crimes, and "Prison sans Barreaux" ("Prison without Bars"), of which Alexandre Korda has produced a re-make in English. Others are: "Abus de Confiance" ("Abuse of Confidence") a melodrama starring Danielle Darrieux; "Ramuntcho," an adaptation of Pierre Loti's classic; "The Death of the Swan," an original film on the life of the little dancers of the Paris Opera House.

The new films not yet shown even in France are: "Le Joueur d'Echecs" ("The Chess Player"), a production with an historical background in Poland in the 18th Century; "Entree des Artistes" ("Stage Door"), a film on the Musical and Dramatic Conservatoire in Paris, and "La Maison du Maltais" a dramatic film with action in Tunis.

Best French Films of the Season

A survey of the best French films produced since January 1st, including those of possible export value would list, in addition to those mentioned above, the following:

LE PATRIOTE ("The Patriot"), a re-make of the famous silent film, starring Harry Baur, and featuring Pierre Renoir and Suzy Prim (F. C. L.).

LES DISPARUS DE SAINT-AGIL ("Disappeared from St. Agil"), a charming thriller with action in a provincial college and mainly played by young boys.

PISTE DU SUD ("Southern Trail"), a melodrama with action set in the Sahara with Albert Prejean, Pierre Renoir, Ketti Gallian, Jean-Louis Barrault.

SHANGHAI MELODRAMA, directed by G. W. Pabst, with Christine Mardayne, Louis Jouvet, Raymond Rouleau, Elina Labourdette.

PEACE ON THE RHINE, directed by Jean Choux, with action in Alsace after the Great War, starring John Loder and Dita Parlo.

OHIO ITO URGES PRICE INCREASE

Striking the keynote that, "the people of Ohio have become accustomed to paying a tax on practically all of their purchases," Pete J. Wood, secretary, is urging members of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio to increase their admission prices now in order to pass along to the public local sales and security taxes, which, heretofore, many have absorbed.

Oklahoma collected $167,283 from theatres on its two per cent sales tax in the 12 months ended June 30th.

LE PETIT CHOSE, an adaptation of Alphonse Daudet's famous classic.

CARREFOUR ("Cross Roads"), directed by Kurt Bernhardt.

LA MAISON DU MALTAIS, directed by Pierre Chenal, with Viviane Romance, Pierre Renoir, Jany Holt, Louis Jouvet.

KATIA, an ambitious film directed by Maurice Tourneur and co-starring Danielle Darrieux and John Loder.

WERTHER, a screen adaptation of Goethe's famous classic, directed by Max Ophuls of "Liebelei," and co-starring Pierre Richard-Wilm and Annie Vernay, a S. Niebenzahl production.

GIBRALTER, a spy-melodrama directed by Fedor Ozep, with Viviane Romance and Eric Von Stroheim.

TROIS DE SAINT-CYR ("The Three from Saint-Cyr"), a big film on life in the Military School (the French West Point) and in the Colonial Army.

Others in Production

Among the other films in production, it is too early to say exactly what they will be. It is indicated that pictures produced during the last months of 1938 will be of a much higher quality than the others.

Jean Renoir, director of "La Grande Illusion," is now working on "La Bete Humaine" ("The Human Beast"), an adaptation of a novel by Emile Zola dealing with a railway story. Jean Gabin and Simone Simon, just returned from Hollywood, co-star in this film.

Julien Duvivier, also just returned from Hollywood, is preparing a film for Regina Productions, of which no details are known.

Jacques Feyder who has not directed a film in France since "Carnival in Flanders" will make a film for Marcel Vandal.

Sacha Guitry has been working for two months on an ambitious film of the same type as "Pearls of the Crown," "Remontons les Champs-Elysees," ("Walking on the Champs-Elysees").

The German producer and director, Ludwig Berger, has started work on "The Three Waltzes," a film adaptation of the French stage success which will co-star Yvonne Printemps and Pierre Fresnay.

More than 100 films have been announced, but as usual, only a small number of them, perhaps 50, will be produced before the end of the year.

The most important projects are: "L'Empreinte de Dieu," to be produced and directed by Marcel Vandal; "The Iron Crown," a "Cavalcade" of Austria, to be directed by Eric Von Stroheim; "Otages," a film with action in the countries of France invaded by the German Armies during the Great War; "Quartier Latin," to be directed by Alexandre Esway; "The Kleh Sisters," to be directed by Leonide Moguy and starring Corinne Luchaire, and "The Life of Dumant," founder of the red cross.

Ten Made in Germany

Besides the 80 films produced in French studios, ten French language films were produced this year in Germany and four in Italy.

The matter of French language films produced in these two countries has brought vehement protests from French film workers.

After the difficulties of last winter and spring, when it was practically impossible to balance the budget of a film, a condition which explains the decrease in quality of French films, it seems that the cost of production is now being stabilized. The average cost of a big French film is about $100,000. A "B" picture does not exceed $50,000 to $60,000.

A new trouble for French producers is the excessive wages paid to the stars. Jean Gabin who received 5,000 francs seven years ago for his work in Harry Lachman's "La Belle Mariniere" does not make a film nowadays for less than a half-million francs. Danielle Darrieux, Annabella, and Charles Boyer, who have been "spoiled" by Hollywood salaries, receive at least a sixth or a fifth part of the budget of a French production.

Little Progress for Color

Just as ten years ago they refused to admit the reality of sound pictures, most French producers refuse to consider films in color. The rare experiments accomplished in France two years ago with two feature films, have not been commercially continued.

Since double feature programmes have become a regular policy in the majority of French motion picture theatres, except for the first run cinemas, the number of short subjects have regularly decreased. Besides the newsreels, only 10 to 12 two-reel or one-reel documentaries, generally subsidized by some tourist organization, have been made this year. An attempt is being made by Pierre Bourgeon in Paris and by the Glaume Brothers on the French Riviera to produce cartoons.

Export Problem Acute

The success in foreign countries of outstanding French films such as "Carnival in Flanders," "Mayerling," "La Grande Illusion," "Un Carnet de Bal," etc., has opened a large field to French production. At the same time the disappearance of German product and the lack of quality of British films have given French films second rank in the world market after American pictures.

The result is that too many French films have been sent to foreign countries without sufficient discrimination. Current films of only fair quality as well as French films suitable only for the domestic market have disappointed foreign exhibitors and patrons, and thus destroyed the success which had been obtained with the best films.

There is a campaign in the French trade press to bar the export of all but outstanding product.

The repeated announcements monthly or even weekly that new companies are being organized in New York for the distribution of French films are alarming for the future of French product in the United States. Of the French films shown in the United States, it is estimated that only 10 percent are suitable for this market, and in some European countries also, such as Holland and Denmark, French film reputation has been spoiled by too many bad productions.

BRITISH EXHIBITORS PROTEST CIRCUIT STAND ON BOOKING, DUALS, RADIO

And Association Is Moving Toward Division Into Two Camps; Independent Bloc Urged at Leeds Meeting

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Reflecting in lesser degree the discontent and turbulence of the international scene, British exhibitor circles currently reveal a grim but indubitable growth of the belief that, until the enemy within has been subdued, it is a waste of energy to concentrate upon the enemy without. Whatever may be the pros and cons of that conviction, either in the abstract or in the concrete, the fact is clear that in the ranks of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association an undercurrent of dissatisfaction with the attitude and conduct of the circuits, long apparent among the more politically active of the independents, is likely to develop into open revolt unless there be a marked change in the complexion of affairs.

General Council members of the CEA, meeting under festive conditions this month, in the precincts of the Empire Exhibition at Glasgow, jostled and junketed, celebrated and in due course, for a brief spell, conferred. The one spirit of inconvenient irritation which ruffled the dovescotes was a reiterated and emphatic contention in more matters than one, that the circuits were not playing the game. On booking bars, overlong programs and radio broadcasts, sharp criticism was directed at the circuits, and in every case the view was expressed that without their wholehearted and immediate falling into line little material progress would be achieved.

This embittered but considered line of thought is currently inspiring the rank and file of the CEA in their preoccupation with those other present problems of redundancy, and the more general but crucial question of film hire, especially in its relation to the smaller theatres. This fact is apparent in local branch meetings all over the country, in the public and private pronouncements of exhibitors, to the press, and to their own fraternity. It would seem that the CEA is slowly but forcibly moving to the danger of divisions into two camps. The odds are that the situation may ultimately if not proximately bring the Association to a reassessment of values and the development of an unequivocal policy.

Cite Building Activities

The predominant feeling among the independents is that they gave the circuits the full benefit of their backing in the fight against grading, a fight out of which, if the renters lost, the circuits would be the only ones to gain, and that in return for this dispassionate and unselfish collaboration they have been left high and dry. They point to the undeterred building activities

SEATING RULES ISSUE MAY GO TO COURTS

London exhibitors, acting concertedly, have finally reached a decision with respect to the controversy over the new regulations imposed on the theatre seating policy by London County Council.

Taking legal advice, the exhibitors will follow the policy of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, and will observe the unpopular licensing conditions regarding plans and interior signs in the theatre. However, as soon as the new licenses are issued for the 1939 season, in November, the exhibitors plan to launch a vigorous legal attack in the courts, challenging the right of the London County Council to direct methods of trading.

The Trade Union Congress this week protested against evasions of the Films Act, charging wholesale breaches of the law by British producers.

of the circuits in the face of a CEA effort to abolish redundancy, to the fact that many of the circuits' larger houses still are showing two "supers" in one program, to the alleged injustice of booking bars operating against the independent house, to variety broadcasts from the stages of circuit owned houses.

At the Glasgow General Council, independent Cecil Mathies and others, raised once again the long program problem, pointing out that the lip service which had been given to the CEA's "anti" policy was at odds with the practice of, for instance, the Gaumont British owned Tivoli in showing two big features in one bill, "A Yank at Oxford" and "We're Going to be Rich."

And Adding Vaudeville

The Leeds branch of the CEA has discussed the double feature issue and concluded that the circuits are cornering the market and a world shortage of product is threatened. Jack Prendergast pleaded for a united independent bloc within the CEA.

Not only West End houses but others in suburban and provincial areas are, it is contended, still showing two major "supers" in one bill, often adding vaudeville presentations to the entertainment mass. This in face of a supposed CEA-KRS agreement against it, and the expressed determination of both sides to end the irregularity. Probably charged with the reconsideration of the problem and with action to end it, the negotiating committee is to meet the KRS in Kinematograph Renters Society the next week or two.

How far it will succeed in so doing, the more skeptical rank and filers, and not a few on the General Council itself, are undecided, pointing with scornful mien to the presence on that Committee of John Maxwell, chief of ABPC, Arthur Jarratt, Gaumont British theatre executive, and Sidney Bernstein, circuit owner. It is no more in their interests, they contend, that the rot should be removed than that redundancy, bars, and the film hire rights of the small theatre men be settled. At any rate the matter was thus far propelled that it was agreed it should be raised at the October meeting of the General Council by—whimsically enough—Ralph Bromhead, representative of the County Cinema circuit, now linked with Odeon.

Stage Broadcast Protested

A further source of irritation has been the promotion of a giant radio broadcast from the stage of the Gaumont British owned super cinema at Holloway. This, on the surface a gesture against CEA policy, long directed against providing material for radio broadcasting, was objected to by members of the General Council, but some appeasement was offered by the statement that Isidor Ostrer would not sanction broadcasts from his halls, save in the particular and exceptional instance of an opening night. Explanations and avowals notwithstanding, it was just unfortunate that it should have been a circuit hall which was involved.

Raised, too, with probably more united aggressiveness than other matters, was the subject of booking bars. Here, once again, the brunt of the fire was directed at the circuits with the suggestion that the first step in solving the problem was circuit support. An example of the brand of bar as between one town and another which exists in the comparatively confined area of England, was a bar between one town on the North East coast, and another on the West Coast 76 miles away. As with many more delicate CEA problems, however, it was decided that meanwhile, and pending more "stalling off" action, members should prepare data and send it to head office!

Fear Circuit Hold

The feeling is growing in many CEA groups that the circuits are gradually, but forcibly, gaining an undue and inconvenient hold over the Association and its policies.

Since the victory over the KRS on grading—a victory which, it is contended, was a victory by the entire CEA mainly for the benefit of the circuits—little has been done in the way of campaigning either in the matter of redundancy, or in that of the small exhibitors' terms. It is replied that rank and file indifference has not helped. And it is replied, in turn, that fear of the circuits alone has deterred the rank and file from contributing the demanded data, that and cynicism in regard to the circuits' aid or otherwise.

What was achieved so completely in regard to grading, can equally be achieved on the wider field of film hire, it is contended, achieved by the same methods and a like intensive propaganda. Considerations such as this may inspire a demand for a new film hire campaign, and a more aggressive attitude in the joint talks with the KRS.

WIND, WATER DAMAGE COUNTED BY EXHIBITORS

Severed Communication and Transportation Lines Hamper Survey of New England Losses

Exhibitors in Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts this week took stock of losses suffered in the tropical hurricane which swept across Long Island and through those states, taking nearly 500 lives and inflicting property damage of millions of dollars.

The film industry in parts of the three New England states was virtually paralyzed for from three to five days following the storm and many of the houses were unable to open until late this week because of lack of power or wind and water damage. Lesser destruction followed in the wake of the storm in Long Island and along the New Jersey coastline.

The full eastern crews of all five newsreels were assigned to the storm areas. Preliminary coverage was made available for the makeup which was issued the night of the storm, and special footage was sent out over the weekend for the eastern accounts. This material was included later in the national issues made up on Monday.

New York headquarters for the major circuits sent repair and construction crews into New England areas this week but reports on the extent of damage were still incomplete because transportation and communication lines had not yet been restored. Paramount reported 12 houses closed by floods and power shortage. RKO, with houses in Providence, Boston and Lowell was badly hit only in Providence where the Albee was closed. An estimated damage of $2,000 was done to carpets, motors and the orchestra floor. Harry Moskowitz of the Loew circuit went into the area over the weekend to inspect the damage but no estimate was reported. The circuit operates houses in all New England cities except Providence and Springfield. Warners reported 21 of its 25 New England theatres operating but the condition of the four remaining was unknown because of the lack of telephone service.

In Boston Mullin & Pinanksi reported 40 theatres damaged, in many cases extensively. Roofs were torn from the Colonial in Newport, Metropolitan in Leominster, Brookline in Brookline and Orpheum in Somerville. Damage to M and P theatres and other Paramount affiliates in New England was estimated at from $150,000 to $175,000.

In Providence, one of the hardest hit cities in the storm area, the Majestic and the Albee were the only theatres in the business district which escaped serious harm. The Carlton suffered comparatively small damage. Fay's Theatre, Loew's State, the Strand and the Empire were flooded. The generators and mechanical refrigeration plants at the Strand and Loew's State were under water. Continuous pumping operations from Thursday to Sunday morning were necessary to clear the water from Fay's and the Carlton.

Theatres all over Long Island suffered water damage and were forced to close because of lack of power. The rear wall of the Greenport, a Prudential house in Greenport, L. I., collapsed but the manager requested his patrons to leave earlier in the afternoon before the storm had reached its height and no loss of life resulted.

In New York city the damage was no greater than that suffered in ordinary autumnal storms but houses in upper Manhattan and the Bronx were closed on the night of the storm because of a power failure which affected those areas. Normal operation was resumed the day after the hurricane in the city and on Long Island except at the eastern end of the island where the center of the storm passed.

Resumption of operations in New England areas was hampered by the lack of power and by the flooded roads which prevented film deliveries. Exchanges in the territory hired extra trucks, pressed all employees into service and made deliveries in many cases by hazardous routes. By Wednesday of this week, however, most of the main roads had been cleared.

Late reports indicated that damage to the Palace, Norwich and State theatres in Hartford amounted to $5,000 each. The Capitol in Springfield suffered to approximately the same extent.

Newsreels Issue Specials

The newsreel companies marshalled their full crews for the storm coverage. Cameramen were sent by airplane into the storm stricken areas as soon as first reports of the destruction came in and film was rushed back for inclusion in the Wednesday night makeup. Later pictures were sent out to eastern accounts as specials by all the companies, complete pictorial reports of the storm on Long Island and in New England being shown in New York theatres Thursday night.

Movietone News dispatched men to points along Long Island Sound as soon as Weather Bureau reports indicated that the hurricane might strike there. Larry Ellis arrived in Providence before the storm broke and with his camera lashed to the roof of a building in the downtown district he filmed the wind and tidal wave sweeping the business section of the city. Similar pictures of the storm hitting Long Beach and Rockaway on Long Island were obtained by Carl Larsen.

Paramount sent out eight camera crews, three of them by plane. Enough footage was obtained to issue a 500 foot special Friday evening which was sent out by airmail to all accounts, in most cases the theatres showing the reel on Saturday. The regular editions carried additional pictures of the devastation.

Universal and News of the Day also had three planes out each. News of the Day had sent two men to the Belmont race track on Long Island before the storm broke and these men were assigned immediately to filming the flooded suburban areas in Queens. Striking pictures also were obtained of storm conditions in the New York business district. Both companies issued specials on Friday.

Pathe sent men by auto, plane and ship into the storm areas. Two men negotiated the dangerous Fire Island channel Wednesday night to film the damage caused by the ocean on the south shore of Long Island. Pictures of the fire in New London, Conn., were obtained from the air and other crews caught the devastation in Providence and other Rhode Island communities.

Host at Eastern Studio

Harold Orlob, producer of "One Third of a Nation," which Paramount had started into production Monday, was host to the trade press Wednesday at a cocktail party at the Eastern Service Studios in Astoria, L. I., to meet Sylvia Sidney, star, Leif Erickson, male lead, Dudley Murphy, director, and Oliver H. P. Garrett, the writer.

Film Appeals Up In Supreme Court

The new term of the United States supreme court opens next Monday with several cases of importance to the motion picture industry to come before it.

Reintroduction of an anti-block booking measure is expected to keynote the session of Congress opening after the turn of the year, and the legislatures of 42 states will convene in January in regular sessions, pointing to increased activity by the lawmakers on film matters. California's legislature convenes in April and Georgia's in July, leaving only Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi and Virginia without regular meetings, but special sessions may be called in any of them.

Before the United States supreme court will come the question of the constitutionality of North Dakota's law prohibiting producers and distributors from operating theatres, the appeal being expected to be filed late in October.

Also before the supreme tribunal will come the determination of validity of contract clauses barring double featuring, and another appeal will concern the legality of regulation of admission prices in subsequent-run theatres and contractual provisions with first-runs restraining double billing.

In each of the foregoing the distributors are appealing from rulings in the lower courts.

Outstanding in the field of litigation, however, is the equity action of the Department of Justice launched last July in federal district court in New York and the subject of conferences in Washington this week. It is expected that this case eventually will land in the supreme court of the land unless otherwise settled.

The next Congress may be the scene of a renewed effort to eliminate or ameliorate the 10 per cent admission tax. At the Second National Convention of Legitimate Theatres at the Hotel Astor in New York, the tax was attacked by M. R. Weinburger, counsel of the League of New York Theatres, and by Representative Emanuel Celler, who proposed formation of a special committee to appeal to Congress.

In Canada, the Ontario Mayors Association, representing the mayors of 70 cities, asked the government of the Province for permission to institute a municipal amusements tax.

At Baton Rouge, La., Louisiana circuit operators filed a suit in state court against the so-called "use" tax clause of the state's general sales tax, contending that the "use" tax does not apply to film rentals under the current law.

At Wauseon, Ohio, the town council enacted an ordinance requiring theatre operators to obtain licenses, costing $15 to $50 according to seating capacity.

Films Tell Story of Aluminum

The story of the production and uses of aluminum and aluminum products is depicted in two educational films recently produced by the Bureau of Mines, U. S. Department of the Interior, in conjunction with an industrial concern. The films, of the silent type and containing two reels each, are called "Aluminum, From Mine to Metal," and "Aluminum, Fabrication Processes."

ESTIMATES OF BUSINESS GAIN IN CAMPAIGN RISE TO 30 PER CENT

Thousands of Unsolicited Messages of Congratulations Received; More Than Thirty-two Million Booklets Distributed

With varying estimates of from 10 to 30 per cent in increased theatre business, the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" campaign on Thursday started the fifth of the 17 weeks allotted for the drive. Among the 5,000 unsolicited congratulations reported were messages from the Duke of Kent, Herbert Hoover, Fannie Hurst and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, received at campaign headquarters in the RKO Building, Rockefeller Center, New York.

The estimates of increases in theatre business were made by Harold B. Franklin, business manager of the campaign, who placed the increase at 10 per cent, and Howard Dietz, promotion chairman of the drive, who figured it at the higher 30 per cent for both this country and Canada. Mr. Franklin indicated that an accurate accounting would be available soon.

Mr. Dietz, who is director of advertising and publicity for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, credited the daily newspapers of the two countries with having played a major part in the business improvement, pointing out that more than 500 editorials, 150 special motion picture editions, 120 cooperative ads and columns of news, feature and picture material have been printed in the past month to give impetus to the drive. All this has been in addition to the industry advertisements in the 2,000 dailies in this country and Canada, he said.

A. H. Blank, head of the Tri-States circuit of Des Moines, in New York this week reported definite improvement in theatre attendance throughout the central states since the drive started.

The next advertising insertion will appear in 500 to 700 line space on Tuesday, in 1,900 daily newspapers of the United States and Canada. A slight reduction in the newspaper list has been made, eliminating publications in small localities which have no motion picture theatres. (Reproductions of advertisements in the series appear on page 12.)

While the insertions in newspapers are being planned from week to week, the advertising probably will appear throughout the campaign, and definitely through November. The campaign closes December 31st.

32 Million "Quiz" Booklets

More than 32,000,000 "Movie Quiz" contest booklets have been distributed to theatre-goers, indicating a possibility of more than 8,000,000 contestants, Mr. Dietz said. The all-industry short subject, "The World Is Yours," will be ready for release the middle of October, he said.

The issues of the film fan magazines which will appear on the stands in October will carry the first big displays for the campaign, earlier cooperation having been prevented by advance deadlines.

Marked interest is being displayed in the new Ed Thorgerson "Movie Quiz" trailer on the part of theatre managers and patrons, reports indicate. This is one of the six trailers issued for the drive and has animated background, with Mr. Thorgerson, Movietone News sports commentator, supplying explanations and directions for entering the contest. ## TABLET AT MACY'S TO MARK FIRST SHOWING

On October fourth, a tablet will be unveiled on the side of Macy's department store, New York City, commemorating the first showing of a motion picture in a public theatre. Arranged under the auspices of Motion Pictures Greatest Year, Inc., the ceremony will be attended by Percy Straus, of Macy's, Will Hays, and motion picture officials and stars. Members of the Edison family also are expected to attend.

The tablet will read: "Here the Motion Picture Began. At this site on the night of April 23, 1896 at Kosster and Bial's Music Hall, Thomas A. Edison's Motion Pictures were projected."

supplied the script, in collaboration with George J. Schaefer.

A warning against "tip sheet" racketeers who are trying to sell answers and to place ads in daily newspapers in connection with the contest was issued this week by the Bureau of American Newspaper Publishers Association, in a letter sent broadcast to all members and publishers' representatives.

It was pointed out, however, by Paul Gulick, coordinator of the campaign, that no "tipster" could possibly have answers to the "Movie Quiz," since many of the 94 films involved in the contest are still in production. He declared his organization was taking steps to warn the public against this tip sheet "racket."

Independent exhibitor pledges to the campaign are still being received daily and in good volume, campaign headquarters reported. The total pledges from independent exhibitor sources to date are estimated to be in excess of $300,000, although the figure is subject to audit and some duplications in the lists are possible.

The Canadian committee of the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" drive reported at a meeting in Toronto that $30,000 had been collected in the Dominion to date. Of the total, $17,000 came from the Famous Players Canadian circuit for 200 theatres.

A special trailer is being made in Hollywood for Canada, with Deanna Durbin, a native of Winnipeg, featured in a message to Canadians. Notice has been sent to all theatres in Canada explaining the procedure made necessary by the errors in the "Movie Quiz" booklets, and posters have been distributed. Morris Stein, district manager of Famous Players, has been appointed chairman of the Toronto regional committee.

Steps were taken this week by campaign headquarters to announce to "Movie Quiz" contestants the fact that the title of Universal's "The Comet," one of the 94 pictures, had been changed to "Private Secretary" and, similarly, the title of "Ranger Code," an RKO picture, has been changed to "Renegade Ranger." Press books and lobby displays will carry a note on the change.

The Broadway Committee has distributed 500 window cards among merchants in the midtown

Broadway sector. Cooperation with the merchants is assured through the fact that the committee's campaign has the endorsement of the West Side Chamber of Commerce, the Broadway Association, and other civic organizations of New York. The cards bear the names of the theatres connected with the committee.

The committee said last week was the most prosperous week in the history of Broadway theatres since 1930, and expected this week to surpass that because of the popular appeal of the contest films now playing. They include "Too Hot to Handle," "Carefree," "Hold That Co-ed," "The Garden of the Moon," "Three Loves Has Nancy," "Room Service," "Marie Antoinette" and "Spawn of the North."

Field Activities Spur Receipts

In Chicago, Maurice M. Ruben sent a letter to all managers of Balaban and Katz theatres, Great States Division, urging them to make every effort to keep interest increasing in the contest and campaign. It pointed out the consistent value of the campaign to the theatres, and urged at least one outstanding contest activity each week to maintain the attention of the public. The letter also pointed out that the "Movie Quiz" booklet has in itself "an excellent piece of advertising for coming attractions."

Successful launching of the campaign in all large cities in Texas has virtually guaranteed the success of the drive in that territory, according to drive committees there, and the drive continues in full swing.

Radio Interviews

All managers and advertising men in the Interstate and Texas Consolidated circuits have been supplied with a specially prepared radio interview to be planted on local stations and to be supplemented by special announcement. The interview explains the details of the contest and emphasizes the nation-wide drive.

M. B. Horwitz, chairman of the northern Ohio regional committee, held a meeting Wednesday of Cleveland theatre managers to emphasize the role of the independent exhibitor in the future weeks of the drive. Mr. Horwitz pointed out that heretofore the first run theatres had the lion's share of the contest pictures, but that the position is rapidly reversing itself with the subsequent run themselves now favored by the release dates.

The West Chester, Pa., Daily News, the Courier Post, Camden, N. J., and other newspapers in the Philadelphia area are carrying complimentary four-column ads on the campaign, prepared by Douglas George of the Warner Brothers circuit. The ads carry straight institutional copy of the film industry, and are tied-in with the newspapers' own promotion of their theatre pages.

All-Community Cooperation

The report of the Toledo committee indicates that every angle of publicity and exploitation has been covered in one of the most comprehensive drives of any section of the country. All-community cooperation was sought and obtained from local business men, civic groups, clubs, schools and churches. Also significant was the active part in the campaign taken by service staffs of all theatres.

Central Ohio theatre owners have pledged 100 per cent cooperation. The group met in Columbus last week to launch the campaign there. J. Real Neth is Columbus chairman.

The Gulf States will not be divided into territories with each film salesman assigned a territory, but all salesmen will be instructed to push the "Quiz" to every exhibitor he visits, it was decided at the first general meeting in New Orleans.

The decision was arrived at after Paramount's manager, Harold Wilkes, pointed out that results with the Will Rogers memorial system had been successful when each salesman hammered away upon exhibitors. The meeting was presided over by Norman Carter, acting Saenger general manager, and James Brian, MGM manager.

100 in New Orleans Pay Quota

Approximately 110 houses of the New Orleans district have paid their quota and are taking part in the campaign. Nearly 500,000 booklets have been distributed to theatres. Lobby displays, trailers and other material also has been purchased in large quantities.

More than 70,000 booklets have been distributed in theatres in Pittsburgh, John Harris of the local promotional committee announced. He reports genuine enthusiasm for the contest in that territory.

The Milwaukee News-Sentinel, first daily newspaper to carry a full page ad boosting the industry's drive, has scheduled another full page ad for publication sometime in November. In addition, it has carried an editorial headed "A Word for the Movies" and has given complete coverage to campaign notes and features.

Newspapers Cooperate

The St. Louis campaign has been featured by excellent newspaper cooperation and generous space on the air. Booklet distribution for the contest is heavy, and local managers are agreed that their patrons take strong interest in the contest, as evidenced by the number of queries. The St. Louis Globe, St. Louis Post Dispatch and St. Louis Star-Times are especially cooperative.

C. E. Williams, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Nebraska and Western Iowa, said Omaha campaign committee members "are well satisfied with the response, especially from the smaller exhibitors."

Keen interest on the part of theatre owners was reported in Seattle from all parts of the territory by exhibitors attending the monthly meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington. Most exhibitors reported that they were distributing more contest booklets than they had anticipated before the campaign began.

"Quiz" Questions on Radio

Beginning Saturday over station KOL in Seattle, Vic Gauntlett, advertising and publicity director for Hamrick-Evergreen theatres, will preside over a program to be called "Movie Quiz Questions." The program is being advertised on the screens of participating theatres, and also over KOL.

Governor Charles H. Martin of Oregon has urged the people of Oregon to "participate in this great movement to enjoy to the fullest measure the productions that are being released this year and to take part in the $250,000 movie quiz contest."

All three daily newspapers in Portland, the Portland Oregonian, News-Telegram and Oregon Journal, have advertised the names of the 94 pictures in the contest. Several of the radio stations, including KGW, KOIN and KWJJ and their affiliates also featured daily during the first week short descriptions of the leading attractions playing first run houses. Exchange heads and first run operators report that business is increasing and they anticipate a big last quarter.

Oklahoma circuit operators and independent exhibitors are taking active part in the $1,000,000 advertising campaign and contest with an estimated $25,000 in ad sales accessories and contest books already sold through the Warner Brothers exchange in Oklahoma City.

MOTION PICTURE DRIVE UNCOVERS BOY ACTOR

Johnny Walsh, 13, has been awarded a contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a result of his work in "The World is Yours," special two-reel subject made for the industry drive. His father, Jack Walsh, was with George M. Cohan, Sam Harris and Florenz Ziegfeld for 20 years.

Agfa-Ansco has contributed 250,000 feet of film to the campaign, toward making possible the issuance of 1,000 prints of the short subject.

About half of Oklahoma's theatre operators are using the contest in their cities and towns. Sixty-seven independent exhibitors and the entire Griffith Amusement Company circuit which operates 200 theatres in Oklahoma, Texas and New Mexico, have purchased ad sales material on the campaign from the Oklahoma City campaign office.

Asks Councilmen to Enter

A novel phase of the contest appeared in Wilmington, Del., when Councilman John J. Anderson, at a meeting of the city council, urged members to become contestants. "Let's all go to the movies and enter the contest," he said. Edgar J. Door, manager of Loew's in that city, reported on the incident.

Upwards of 40,000 booklets have been distributed in Springfield, Mass., Harry F. Storin, manager of the Paramount theatre there and chairman of the promotional committee in that city, reported. A newspaper survey there revealed that managers were reluctant to discuss the box office effect of the contest at this early stage, but that all managers interviewed had agreed that business had been good since the contest started.

Approximately 30 independent houses are distributing booklets in Connecticut, in addition to all Loew-Poli, Warner and M and P theatres, chairman Dr. J. B. Fishman reports. Theatres have agreed to distribute booklets on request only, and hope to stimulate interest considerably by large newspaper ads, in which exhibitors will cooperate.

Chamber Backs Drive

Following closely on the heels of Mayor John Boyd Thacher's proclamation calling upon Albany citizens to support the drive, Clifford J. Beckett, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, put the merchant's bureau squarely on record in behalf of the campaign. "We feel that every merchant should give his loyal cooperation to this campaign and assist our local theatres in every possible manner to get the story across," he said. More than 100,000 booklets have been distributed to date through the capital district in the Albany sector alone, Si Fabian, regional director, reported.

A free one-inch ad is being printed daily by the San Pedro, Cal., News Pilot. Copy, which runs at the top of the column listing current pictures, reads: "Enter the Movie Quiz Contest—$250,000 in prizes. Details at San Pedro theatres."

About 50 managers of Famous Players theatres in British Columbia and Alberta gathered in Vancouver last week to plan for the "Great Year" campaign.

MPTOA Invites Sales Executives

Invitations will be extended to distribution executives of all companies to attend the national convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and explain the policies of their companies on self-regulation of trade practices. Officers of Allied States Association also will be asked to attend, as will representatives of major and independent production companies, and theatremen not affiliated with either exhibitor association.

The convention, which opens in Oklahoma City, October 30th, has been extended a day, through November 2d, with the dinner-dance on the final night, at the Oklahoma City Golf and Country Club, according to present plans.

Ed Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, has invited W. S. Van Dyke, MGM director, to be one of the speakers.

Exhibition Booths

Morris Loewenstein, general chairman, said luncheons will be provided gratis on Monday and Tuesday to speed the work of the sessions. He said the RCA Manufacturing Company and Burch Popcorn Machine Company had made reservations for exhibition booths on the mezzanine floor of the Biltmore Hotel, convention headquarters.

It is reported that unless important developments on trade practice regulation come out of the convention the delegates may adopt a policy calculated to obtain revisions by other means than negotiation with the distributors. Action on cancellation and score charge policies also may be taken, the exhibitor leaders pointing out that these are individual company matters and therefore not, in revision, subject to complaints of conspiracy and violation of anti-trust laws. They added that such problems as clearance and zoning and overbuying, in the lack of conciliation machinery within the industry, require simultaneous action by distributors. These issues, however, they hope, will be solved through the distributors' negotiating committee, headed by Sidney R. Kent, who is expected to return east from the Coast next week.

Sessions open Sunday afternoon, October 30th, with a meeting of the board and election of officers. Meetings will be held morning and afternoon the next three days with daily adjournment at 4:30 p. m. to permit state organizations to meet and elect their leaders.

Iowa Allied Meeting

The Allied Independent Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska, Inc., will have their fall meeting October 10 and 11 at the Savery hotel in Des Moines, with President Leo F. Wolcott, of Eldora, Iowa, presiding. Two hundred and fifty are expected to attend.

Officers elected for the year by the Independent Theatres Association of Ontario at a meeting in Toronto include the following:

President, H. Firestone; vice-president, S. Ulster; treasurer, B. Ulster; secretary, H. Lester; directors, the foregoing and N. A. Taylor, A. Polakoff, T. Walton, A. Snider, M. L. Axler and H. Yudin.

The organization decided to hold over, until the next meeting of the directorate, action on a resolution asking the province to amend its statute requiring the presence of an apprentice as well as a qualified operator in the projection booth.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

October Plans

While the Legion was parading and playing and Los Angeles citizenry was throwing out one mayor and bringing in a new, Hollywood was busy with its own chores. War scares and all, nine pictures were started and eleven finished. The activity is merely a warming up exercise for the month of October in which, unless present plans go completely awry, some seventy-five productions will be started. To be included in this forthcoming drive will be some of the most pretentious efforts that the production arm of the industry ever has attempted. The total cost will be great; it is expected that the potential entertainment and commercial value will be greater.

Returning to matters of the present, RKO-Radio started two pictures. James Ellison, Lucille Ball, Helen Lind, Florence Lake and Granville Bates will be seen in "Trailer Romance." George O'Brien is the star of "Lawless Valley." His supporting company will include Kay Sutton, Walter Miller, Fred Kohler, Sr., and Jr., Lew Kelly and Karl Stockdale.

"Adam's Evening" went before the cameras at Universal. Charles Ruggles, Marion Martin, Maxie Rosenbloom, Ona Munson, Benny Baker and Stepin Fetchit are the principals.

New "Hardy" Picture

MGM started "Out West with the Hardys" in which will be seen Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Ann Rutherford, Fay Holden, Virginia Wiedler, Cecilia Parker, Ralph Morgan, Nana Bryant, Sara Haden and Gordon Jones.

For Paramount release Harry Sherman started "Riders of the Range." A "Hopalong Cassidy" story, it will feature William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden, Ruth Rogers, Stanley Ridges and Frederick Burton.

Although the cast is not complete, 20th Century-Fox began work on "Sampson and the Ladies." Among others to come, it will present Lynn Bari, June Gale, Robert Allen, Helen Erickson and Guinn Williams.

"Rodeo Busters" went into work at Republic. Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Peggy Moran, Pert Kelton and LeRoy Mason are featured.

Buck Jones started his last feature, as yet untitled, for Coronet-Columbia. He will be seen in the company of Carmen Bailey, Milburn Stone, Soledad Jimenez, Paul Ellis and Stanley Blystone.

Returning to active production, Edward Small started his first feature for United Artists. "The Duke of West Point" will present Louis Hayward, Tom Brown, Joan Fontaine, Richard Carlson and Alan Curtis.

Warners Complete Four

At Warners, where nine films are slated to go into production during October, four

MICKEY MOUSE'S TENTH BIRTHDAY

On Tuesday the 10th birthday of Mickey Mouse was celebrated in theatres, on the radio, newspapers, magazines and countless Mickey Mouse parties all over the country. This entire week was set aside for celebrating the anniversary and it is estimated that 4,000 theatres throughout the country will have shown a Mickey Mouse film by the end of the week.

A musical cavalcade was broadcast over the National Broadcasting Company's Blue network Tuesday evening. Music from the first Mickey Mouse film, "Steamboat Willie," was played as well as a series of songs from the Walt Disney pictures for the 10 years. Mr. Disney closed the program with a personal greeting.

shows were finished. Two are aviation pictures in which the quality of exciting action is stressed, one is a comedy with music, the fourth inaugurates a new series. The principal players in "Dawn Patrol" are Errol Flynn, David Niven, Basil Rathbone, Donald Crisp, Melville Cooper, Barry Fitzgerald and Michael Brook. "Wings of the Navy," a color production, features George Brent and Olivia de Havilland with John Payne, Frank McHugh, Henry O'Neill, John Ridgely, Donald Briggs, John Gallaudet, Max Hoffman, Regis Toomey and Alan Kenwood. The cast of "Going Places" includes Dick Powell, Anita Louise, Minna Gombel, and Allen Jenkins. The star of "Nancy Drew, Detective" will be Bonita Granville.

Two pictures were completed at Paramount. Gail Patrick, Otto Kruger, Robert Preston, Sidney Toler, Helen MacKellar, Clay Clement, Edward Marr and Oland Howland will be seen in "Disbarred." The principals in "Zaza" are Claudette Colbert, Herbert Marshall, Bert Lahr, Helen Westley, Constance Collier, Genevieve Tobin, Walter Catlett, Rex O'Malley and Rex Evans.

Two from RKO Radio

RKO-Radio finished "Miracle Racket." Cast personalities are Sally Eilers, Ann Miller, Lee Bowman, Paul Guilfoyle, Jonathan Hale, Jack Arnold, Alma Kruger, Robert Gleckler, Cecil Kellaway, Janet Dempsey and Robert Middlemass. Also for this company's distribution, Sol Lesser delivered "Peck's Bad Boy with the Circus." Tommy Kelly and Ann Gillis (The Adventures of Tom Sawyer pair) are starred with Edgar Kennedy, Benita Hume, Spanky MacFarland, Grant Mitchell, Nana Bryant, William Demarest, Wade Boteler, Harry Stubbs, Fay Helm and Mickey Rentschler in support.

Majestic finished "Masked Phantom," in which Monte Rawlins and Betty Burgess are the leads.

Returned to work after having been secretly previewed once or twice, MGM finally completed "Sweethearts." Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy are teamed in the leading roles with Frank Morgan, Ray Bolger, Florence Rice, Mischa Auer, Herman Bing, Reginald Gardiner, Allyn Joslyn, Fay Holden, Olin Howland, Gene Lockhart, Lucille Watson, Ray Walburn, Terry Kilburn, Betty Janes and Douglas MacPhail featured.

Universal finished "Exposed," in which will be seen Glenda Farrell, Otto Kruger, Herbert Mundin, David Oliver, Charles Brown and Lorraine Kruger.

Six from Cartoon

Negotiations were closed between Monogram and Hal Forrest, creator of the "Tailspin Tommy" newspaper comic strip to produce a series of six features based on the exploits of the cartoon aviator. John Trent, a former TWA pilot, will play the title role. It may be remembered that Trent was discovered by B. P. Schulberg.

The "Tailspin Tommy" strip appears in more than 350 daily newspapers and is also published in 23 foreign countries. It is the second comic strip to be adapted as the basis of picture production within the last few days. Columbia already is making the first of the "Blondie" series.

Exploitation Reels

The third of the series of "Romance of Celluloid" exploitation reels which MGM has been making will go before the cameras this week. To be made by Frank Whitbeck, producer of the two earlier reels and "City of Little Men," it will be titled "Power," and will illustrate the importance of electric power in making pictures.

Opening shots will show the making of electricity at Boulder dam. Then will be shown how power is carried across mountains and deserts and ultimately to the sound stage where it is used for camera work, sound, recording and lighting. The reel will also include advance shots of several feature productions to be released in the coming few months.

Edward Small, releasing through United Artists, has given a new writing contract to George Bruce, author of the two forthcoming Small productions, "The Duke of West Point" and "King of the Turf."

TALENT GUILDS HOLD LABOR STAGE CENTER

Academy Governors Attempt to Avert Split; Actors' Guild Negotiates New Agreement

Hollywood's talent guilds took the center of the labor stage this week with their attack on producers in the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, the Labor Board hearing of the Directors' collective bargaining petition, and the signing of a revised eight-year contract by producers and the Screen Actors' Guild. Other labor and related developments included:

A proposal submitted to the American Theatre Council by Actors' Equity for an appeal to the motion picture industry to aid in the revival of legitimate roadshows and little theatres.

Election of Harold V. Smith, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees officer, as business representative of the Sound Technicians' Local 695 in the first move for the return of autonomy to Hollywood studio locals.

Signing of a ten-year agreement between New York film theatres and the Building Service Employees Union.

Filing by the Screen Writers' Guild of a complaint with the NLRB charging 13 studios with failure to bargain collectively with the Guild as the exclusive bargaining agency for all screen writers. Elections for the Guild were set for November 9th.

The board of governors of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences attempted to settle a conflict which threatened to block proposed reorganization of the Academy by refusing to accept the resignation of Frank Capra, Howard Estabrook and W. S. Van Dyke as well as those of the producer members of the board—Darryl F. Zanuck, E. J. Mannix and David O. Selznick. The resignations were tendered following demands by the Screen Actors', Writers' and Directors' Guilds that producer members resign and that they "mistrusted" their presence in the reorganized Academy.

A statement issued by the board pleading with both factions for adjustment of differences and for continuance of the Academy follows:

"The board feels that the future of the Academy is too important to the industry to be jeopardized by any individual resignations at this time. The board has decided to continue on its present basis until existing economic differences have been adjusted and a more harmonious condition shall exist in the industry."

New Actors' Agreement

An eight-year contract covering working conditions for actors and atmosphere players was negotiated by the Screen Actors' Guild and producers in Hollywood. Chief provisions of the contract are overtime pay for working more than 48 hours in any one week and the creation of a standing committee to settle differences between producers and actors.

Other provisions as announced by Joseph M. Schenck, who represented the producer signatories and Ralph Morgan, newly elected Guild president, are that all stock and contract players receiving up to $1,000 weekly and all day players are to receive a 12-hour daily rest period. Free lance players receiving up to

THEATRE BURGLARS STEAL A BOOMERANG

H. C. Ryan, Waukegan, Ill., theatre manager, to advertise a picture placed canvas money bags and a large jar of "gold nuggets" in the lobby. Burglars broke into the theatre and stole the display. "I'll bet they know by now that the bags contained sand and the nuggets gilded stones," Mr. Ryan chuckled as he reported the theft to police.

$1,000 weekly and stock and contract players receiving $500 weekly or less are to be paid overtime at the rate of time and a half when working an excess of 48 hours in any one week and the rate of twice their regular pay when working over 10 hours any one day.

Mr. Morgan said: "One of the most important provisions of this agreement is that under which a permanent committee of three, representing the Guild and the producers, is to be set up shortly to arbitrate all problems arising in the employment of extras."

The duties of assistant directors and unit managers were described as different from those of directors by Hal Wallis and Harry Joe Brown, producers, and Tinney Wright and Sid Rogell, studio managers, in testimony before Trial Examiner William R. Ringer, who is presiding at the Hollywood hearings on the Screen Directors' Guild petition to the National Labor Relations Board to be designated the collective bargaining agent for directors, assistants and unit managers. The Guild tried to block admission of the point by showing that assistants and unit managers had definite authority over portions of the filming of pictures. Darryl F. Zanuck also testified that the duties of the groups were entirely different.

In testimony given before NLRB Trial Examiner William Ringer Tuesday, Sid Rogell, RKO studio manager, disclosed company salaries for the picture "Bringing Up Baby." Howard Hawks, director, received $87,000; Katharine Hepburn, $72,500; Cary Grant, $75,000; and Charles Ruggles, $32,000. At the same hearing, George Bagnell, vice-president of Paramount, said that Wesley Ruggles, the company's highest paid director, was getting $8,333 a week.

Film, Stage Cooperation Urged

The American Theatre Council which early this month held its second annual convention in New York this week was studying a proposal recommended by 700 members of Actors' Equity Association calling upon the Council to appoint a committee to work for closer cooperation between the stage and the film industry with a view toward the development of new talent and play material. Details of the plan were not worked out but it was suggested by Paul Dullzell, executive secretary of Equity, who introduced the resolution at an Equity quarterly meeting last week, that film companies could aid in the organization stock companies at strategic points by making available theatres which they own and by assigning their stars and feature players to such productions.

The proposal was in accord with recent efforts on the part of Equity and the Theatre Council to revive the legitimate stage on the road and is a crystallization of suggestions made at the Council convention last year. ment of talent for both should be possible.

The new ticket code adopted by the Theatre

Council at its convention was formally ratified at the Equity meeting.

Members of the Sound Technicians' Local 695, first of the Hollywood locals of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees to vote on a return of local autonomy last week, unanimously reelected Harold V. Smith, International officer who has been in charge of the coast locals, to the post of business representative. Joe Aiken was named president. The meeting was marked by several speeches from the floor by members against the return of autonomy.

Representatives of New York circuits and independent theatres this week signed a ten-year agreement with the Building Service Employees' Union, Local 54, guaranteeing several hundred New York theatres against "strikes, boycotts, picketing and lockouts." Porters, cleaners, matrons and watchmen are included in the pact, which provides a 48 hour week and a minimum wage scale of $16.80 for men and $14.40 for women, subject to revision every two years.

Negotiations with Motion Picture Machine Operators' Local 306 on salary increase demands will start shortly between committees for the Local and for the Independent Theatre Owners of New York, Harry Brandt, president of the theatre organization, announced at a membership meeting last week.

McGrady Urges Arbitration

Edward F. McGrady, vice-president of Radio Corporation of America and newly elected member of the board of directors, was guest of honor at a dinner given Tuesday evening at the Hotel Astor, New York, by the American Arbitration Association. Mr. McGrady was presented with a gold medal in recognition of his service in the cause of industrial peace. In an address which followed the dinner the former Department of Labor mediator praised the work of the Association and particularly the functioning of its Voluntary Industrial Arbitration Tribunal through which he said permanent peace between employers and labor could be achieved. He pointed out that in the year of its existence the Tribunal has settled 100 important disputes to satisfaction of all disputants.

"The time is here for the universal institution of mediation, conciliation and voluntary arbitration as the methods of settling industrial disputes," he concluded. "An agreement reached on equitable grounds is far better than one arrived at by force or legal technicality."

Universal Reports Big Improvement

Representing an improvement of $442,969 over last year's results, Universal Pictures Company, Inc., this week reported a net loss for the 13 weeks ended July 30, 1938, of $184,963, as compared with $627,933 for the corresponding period of the preceding fiscal year.

Other financial matters of the week included the releasing of the annual report of British Lion Film, London company, which revealed the company has made a secured loan of $230,305 to Republic Pictures Corporation, and the declaring of a dividend by Balaban and Katz, Chicago circuit.

British Lion's net profit for the year ended March 31st last was reported as $77,490, which compares with a $70,080 loss for the preceding year.

The board of directors of Balaban and Katz declared a quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the $7 a share preferred stock at a meeting held in New York this week.

Associated Film Audiences of New York has opened a local branch in Hollywood. Herbert Biherman is temporary chairman.

Five of a Kind

Periodic Appearance

Since "The Country Doctor," which was followed by "Reunion," the periodical appearances of the Dionne Quintuplets in feature pictures have been considered of worldwide importance. About 600 feet of film was given over to the children in the first picture, a couple hundred more in the second, and on this occasion they will have approximately 2,500, in which they will sing, dance and speak dialogue lines. This looms as the big exploitation angle.

The third Dionne vehicle will tell a comedy story. A hoax is perpetrated and word comes to the quintuplets' home that sextuplets have been born. This is a matter of much concern and anguish to all inhabitants of the Canadian town who take great pride in and derive much profit from the famous children. To the turmoil erected by the hoax is added that of a hectic rivalry between two rival radio commentators. One is a lovely young woman and the other is a handsome scamp in love with his rival. Their efforts to outdo each other, which result in the hoax and its eventual expose, pave the way for the comic and exciting theme development and climax.

Claire Trevor now in "Valley of the Giants" and Cesar Romero are starred with the Dionnes. Many of the players, notably Slim Summerville and John Qualen, seen in two earlier pictures, and Inez Courtney, Jane Darwell and Pauline Moore, will appear in important roles. Such well known players as John Russell, Andrew Tomes, David Torrance, former director Hamilton MacFadden, Spencer Charters and Charles D. Brown also will be seen.

The original screen play was prepared by John Patrick and Lou Breslow, collaborators on "Battle of Broadway," "International Settlement" and "Big Town Girl." The film is being directed by Herbert I. Leeds, who did "Keep Smiling" and "Island in the Sky." Musical numbers were prepared by Sidney Clare and Samuel Pokrass.

Release date: Dec. 9, 1938.

They Made Me a Criminal

(Warner)

Melodrama

For this production Warner Brothers has assembled a cast whose individual members have been much in the public eye of late. Three were members of the "Four Daughters" cast; John Garfield, who made a sensational screen debut therein, Claude Rains and May Robson. That group of boys, Billy Halop, Huntz Hall, Leo Gorcey, Gabriel Dell, Bobby Jordan and Bernard Punsley, who, it seems, no matter what picture they appear in individually or collectively, will continue to be referred to as "The Dead End" kids, are featured. So is Gloria Dickson, seen recently in "Racket Busters" and "Goldiggers in Paris."

The story is based upon an original by Bertram Millhauser, a collaborator on Paramount's "The Texan," "Scandal Street" and "Ebb Tide," and Beulah Dix. The screen play is credited to Sig Herzig, who did "Four's a Crowd." Direction was entrusted to Busby

Berkeley, who previously specialized in handling musical-dance-spectacle films.

Basically the story runs from light comedy to intense melodrama, with love interest also included.

Release date: To be determined.

The Girl from Brooklyn

(20th Century-Fox)

Melodrama

The locale is about as far from Brooklyn as one can get—North China, with bandit armies, beyond the control of the government forces, on the loose, pillaging and killing. The story is divided into three main chapters. One concerns the romance of an American girl entertainer and a newspaper man. The second deals with the harrowing experiences of the lovers and a little group of English refugees. The third details the heroism of an obscure American consul.

Warner Baxter and Alice Faye are the central characters and Charles Winninger is the consul. The group of English refugees includes Arthur Treacher, Doris Lloyd and Eily Malyon. Keye Luke and Willie Fung are prominent in support, as are Joan Carol, Leonid Snegoff, Philip Ahn, Johnathan Hale, Moroni Olsen and Harry Hayden.

The basis of the production is a story by Gene Markey, 20th Century-Fox associate producer. The screen play is the work of Anthony Veiller and Sheridan Gibney. In the last several years Veiller has contributed to the preparation of many RKO-Radio productions. Gibney, an Academy Award winning writer, helped on such pictures as "Anthony Adverse," "Green Pastures" and "The Story of Louis Pasteur."

Direction is in the hands of Gregory Ratoff, actor, writer and director.

Blondie

(Columbia)

Comedy

Columbia's entry into the field of "series" picture making will be "Blondie," the seed of which is the Chic Young comic strip syndicated by King Features to 250 newspapers and reputed to be followed regularly by 10,000,000 daily and on Sundays.

The story will have "Dagwood" in wrong at home with "Blondie" and in more trouble at the office. But, as troubles pile up, he lands a big contract that makes him an ace in business affairs, explains away a girl who "Blondie" believed was threatening her domestic bliss.

Richard Flourney devised the original screen play. Some of his recent screen stories are "A Trip to Paris," three recent Joe E. Brown vehicles and "Pick a Star," which Hal Roach produced. The picture is being directed by Frank Strayer, maker of many numbers in the 20th Century-Fox "Jones Family" series.

Penny Singleton will be seen in the role of "Blondie," while Arthur Lake will play "Dagwood." Little Larry Sims will be "Baby Dumpling." Other players include Dorothy Moore, Danny Mummert, Gordon Oliver, Gene and Katherine Lockhart and Ann Doran.

Release date: To be determined.

Service De Luxe

(Universal)

Comedy Romance

The story to be told in this picture, together with its accompanying production mechanics, should suggest many unique exploitation ideas. It concerns the experiences—romantic, melodramatic and comic—that befall a young woman who runs a service that manages everything conceivable. She handles everything from developing and marketing inventions, the commercial and domestic business of an eccentric millionaire, the romantic escapades of his man-crazy daughter, and the culinary dreams of a Russian cook, the ghosts of whose ancestors guide him.

The woman in the case is a business career woman, pretty much of a man hater, until the right man comes along.

Vera Caspary, "Scandal Street" and "Easy Living," provided the thematic idea for which Leonard Spigelgass, Gertrude Purcell and Bruce Manning, a capable trio of writers, did the screen play. Rowland V. Lee, maker of "Three Musketeers," "Mother Carey's Chickens" and "Toast of New York," is the director. Edmund Grainger is the producer.

Constance Bennett, lately in "Topper" and "Merrily We Live," will be seen in the role of "Helen Murphy," operator of the Dorothy Madison Service. Vincent Price, new from the stage where for two years he was with Halen Hayes in "Victoria Begins," will make his film debut. Other principals are Charles Ruggles as the millionaire; Helen Broderick, confidential secretary and general handy-woman; Mischa Auer, the cook, and Joy Hodges, the daughter.

Release date: Oct. 21, 1938.

Miracle Racket

(RKO-Radio)

Exposé of Fakery

As the title implies, the theme and basis of action is the "racket" used by fake revivalists and faith healers to obtain money from a gullible public under the pretext of being able to work miraculous cures. The theme is worked into the plot by having the principal character turn to this profitable means of earning a living in one segment of her picturesque career. It leads directly to the melodramatic conclusion. Running as entertainment companions to the basic idea are a romance between a boy and girl of widely different social and ethical levels, a daring robbery scheme and a series of surprise situations that result in disclosure of the racketeering.

The premise is a story by Saul Elkins, who wrote "The Crime of Dr. Forbes." The screen play is credited to Jo Pagano, short story author. Direction is in the hands of Leslie Goodwins, maker of "Fugitives for a Night" and "Crime Ring."

Sally Eilers will be seen in the role of the racketeer and is teamed with Lee Bowman in the story's romantic phases. Other featured players are Ann Miller, recently in "You Can't Take It with You" and "Room Service," Paul Guilfoyle, Jonathan Hale, Alma Kruger, Jack Arnold, Robert Glerckler, Cecil Kellaway and six-year-old Janet Dempsey.

Release date: Oct. 21, 1938 (tentative).

FILM RADIO PROGRAMS DECLINE AS BROADCASTERS EXTEND "WAR"

30 Commercially Sponsored Programs This Season Contrasted with 35 Last Year; Film News Sustaining Programs Drop

Fewer motion picture personalities are being heard over the air in the new radio broadcasting season now under way, although the number of star appearances still represents a sizeable share of program time, particularly during theatre hours and thereby a cause of mixed protests from exhibitors.

A study of program schedules of National Broadcasting Company, Columbia Broadcasting System and Mutual Broadcasting System, shows a decline from the total number of film star programs last season, instead of the increase that might have been expected.

Developments of the week in the radio field impinging upon the motion picture included the following:

NBC and Columbia have announced only 30 commercially sponsored programs using motion picture talent this year as contrasted with 35 last season. At Mutual are the only three sustaining programs built around film news or personalities. Last year the three networks combined had seven.

Broadcasters are extending their fight against free radio publicity for films, in their protest against not being included in the $600,000 advertising outlay of the campaign for "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year".

At a meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of Broadcasters in Washington this week, plans were to be considered for an attack upon the "monopoly" of copyrights of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, including possible overtures for investigation of the issue by Congressional committee.

As exhibitors expressed opposition to radio programs which use motion picture stars' act during theatre hours, as a deterrent to box office receipts, Hollywood still continued to be a focal point for many broadcasts but it was noted that quite a few film folk who were on the air last year have not been announced for broadcasts this season. Among these are Nick Lucas, who is not repeating "Watch the Fun Go By" for Ford; Kitty Carlisle, whose program for Coca Cola is off, and Irene Rich and Sheila Barrett, not returning to the NBC studios for Welch's Grape Juice and Gruen Watches, respectively.

"Milestones," a CBS sustaining program with film guest stars, and Betty Grable's "Songtime," also a sustaining presentation, are no longer booked in; Packard has not resumed the "Hollywood Mardi Gras," which featured Lanny Ross and Charles Butterworth; and Vick's will not have "Vick's Open House," the Jeanette MacDonald program.

HOLLYWOOD AND STAR BROADCASTS

The frequency of appearances of Hollywood motion picture players and other film personalities on radio broadcasts in this new season is shown graphically on the two following pages under the heading "Around the Radio Clock with Hollywood's Stars."

On a dial representing each day of the week and segmented into 15 minute intervals of the 24-hour day are shown, in color, the time periods on which personalities in motion pictures are scheduled for air programs.

A table of the program periods, with the title of the program, the film individuals, broadcasting system and, in the cases of sponsored programs, the product being advertised, appears below the "clock."

In addition to those who are not renewing radio work, there have been several shifts in the radio-film lineup. Warner Brothers' show, "Your Hollywood Parade," which had Dick Powell as master of ceremonies, is off the air, and Lucky Strike has replaced it with a program featuring W. C. Fields.

The "Camel Caravan" has replaced Jack Oakie, Stuart Erwin and Raymond Hatton with Eddie Cantor, while Chesterfield has signed Burns and Allen, instead of Alice Faye, thus making a completely new lineup for the cigaret "Big Three." Similarly, Joe Penner has gone from the Cocomalt program to General Foods' "Huskies."

Many programs, such as Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Good News of 1939," remain substantially the same as last year, and there will continue to be new radio-film tieups, as shown by the example of Republic Pictures, which will have its plans completed shortly for a radio show using the company's outstanding players. Viewed as a whole, however, the peak of film star performances on the air has been reached and is starting to decline, if the figures continue to stand as of this week.

Radio Questionnaire

That the National Association of Broadcasters is going thoroughly into the subject of radio's relation to motion pictures is indicated by the text of the motion picture questionnaire which it sent to more than 400 radio stations throughout the country. Stemming from the decision of the committee heading the "Greatest Year" drive, not to spend any part of the $600,000 advertising budget on radio time, the questionnaire goes to the heart of the broadcasters' contention that radio does much for films in the way of free publicity and does not get a comparative return. Following are the questions asked of the stations:

1. Does your station currently carry any paid advertising programs or announcements sponsored by the Motion Picture Industry?

If so, how is it placed? Please write in the program lengths and the number of times per week.

Program Period Times Per Week

- Network .....
- National Spot.....
- Local Independent Theatres...

Chain Theatres.....

2. Do any of your commercial programs sponsored by advertisers in other industries use material drawn from the Motion Picture Industry?

If so, which of the following are publicized on such programs?

Please indicate whether programs are network, spot or local.

- Movie Personalities
- Movie Music.
- Movie Production (previews, etc.).
- Movie Gossip.
- Other .....

3. Do any of your sustaining programs publicize the Motion Picture Industry?

If so, indicate whether program is network or local.

- Movie Personalities.
- Movie Music.
- Movie Production (previews, etc.).
- Movie Gossip.
- Other .....

4. Have you made any check of the amount of station time on commercial and sustaining programs which might be classified as Moving Picture exploitation?

If so, what is the station time figure per week currently? List separately for commercial and sustaining time below.

What is the commercial value of this time? List below.

*Station Commercial

- Commercial programs.....
- Sustaining programs.....

5. Do you have any cooperative arrangements with local movie theatres?

Please explain .....

Please make any comments on the Motion Picture situation you care to.

The questionnaire was sent out by Paul F. Peters, research director of the Association. In motion picture circles the question raised was whether the situation might result in an elimination of previews and re-enactments of film stories on the air, as well as a cutting down of the use of the radio to publicize motion picture songs and film stars by interviews.

Copies of the third annual report on television, prepared by Carl Dreher, chairman, have been sent to the members of the Scientific Committee of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, and will be transmitted to the Research Council of the Academy for approval at the next meeting.

In addition to Mr. Dreher, the members of the committee are Gordon Chambers, L. E. Clark, J. G. Frayne, Hollis Moyse, Wesley C. Miller, William Mueller, and Gordon S. Mitchell, manager of the Research Council.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

From Hollywood

George Sanders, British-born Hollywoodian, has been signed by Walter Mycroft to play the part of a charlatan in the new version of "The Outsider," which Paul Stein is to direct at Elstree for Associated British.

Nineteen-year-old Mary Maguire, who comes to British pictures via Hollywood, plays the feminine role of the crippled girl, and the cast includes Peter Murray Hill, Godfrey Tearle, Kynaston Reeves, Edmond Breon and Lesley Wareing. Gunther Krampf will be cameraman.

Historic Episode

The capture of Omdurman, historic episode in the Sudan war, has been re-created again at Denham for Zoltan Korda's "Four Feathers." A set representing the city and covering an acre and a half, has been used for the scenes and British troops have been photographed taking the fortified arsenal and prison. Another episode based upon history was that of the feeding of prisoners from big troughs in the Mahdi's prison at Omdurman. Oxtail soup, however, was substituted for the more sordid soup of realism.

Studio shooting on the film concluded with the destruction of Omdurman, and Zoltan Korda, two days ahead of schedule, plans to leave with his unit during the next fortnight for the Sudan.

Canterbury for RKO

"His Lordship Goes to Press," third Canterbury production for RKO-Radio release, has passed through its final production stages at the Nettleford Studios, Walton-on-Thames. Directed by Maclean Rogers and produced by George Smith, the story has among its cast Hugh Williams, June Clyde, Romney Brent, Leslie Perrins and H. F. Maltby.

Transferred

The Stoll Studios, Cricklewood, home of many British productions, is in the property market and the production of Butcher films has been transferred temporarily to the Walton on Thames studios. There a Butcher-Rembrandt production, "Anything to Declare," has gone on to the floor under directorial aegis of Redd Davis.

The story is one of international intrigue and John Loder has the leading role of that of a member of the intelligence service, with Belle Chrystall and Leonora Corbett in feminine support.

Michael Redgrave, center above, in a scene from the new Orion production, "Stolen Life," in which he plays opposite Elizabeth Bergner. Production is under way at the Pinewood Studios, Iwer Heath, Bucks.

Coastal Racketeers

"Brighton Rock," one of the season's fiction successes and author of which is Graham Greene, has been purchased by Sam Smith, managing director of British Lion, for production soon at the Beaconsfield studios.

The story deals with the underworld of gangsters and racketeers at Southern England's most noted coastal resort.

Stockade

Nearing completion at the Gainsborough Studios, Islington, is the Will Hay comedy "Old Bones of the River." All the river and native sequences of the picture have been filmed at Shepperton and further scenes recently have been shot on a West African Residency stockade set up and attacked for screen purposes by hundreds of natives armed with papier maché rifles, revolvers and automatics, and sticks of dynamite constructed from shellacked wood.

Specials

Supplementary to other more modest pictures for English release by Associated British Picture Corporation, British National is to embark on the production of one "super-picture" annually for world release under the same auspices.

First of these will be "Daughter of India," to be made in color partly in India and partly in London.

Underground Station

A London underground station has been built in the Teddington studios of Warner Bros. First National for sequences in "The Nursemaid Who Disappeared," currently on the floor. With platform, light signals and moving train, all constructed in the studio workshops, Warner's believe it to be one of the most realistic sets they have built there.

Columbia British

Practical studio work has begun upon "Q Planes," the first Columbia British picture to be made at Denham by Irving Asher.

Tim Whelan, one of Britain's most sought after American directors, completed the first sequence, showing police breaking into the offices of a company while Ralph Richardson lay asleep on a settee amid the wreckage of what was a large Adam period room.

Valerie Hobson and Laurence Olivier are teamed with Ralph Richardson in the film.

Howard and England

Leslie Howard has planned to confine his future activities to England. His first picture under his new company, formation of which already has been announced in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, will be in collaboration with Gabriel Pascal, and Anthony Asquith will co-direct.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Carphopis amoena amoena, pronounced "pink snake" (the sober variety) differing from Carphopis spiritus frumenti (or alcoholic pink snake) has been seen in broad daylight near Putnam, Conn., and as a result is feeling very stuffed today in the American Museum of Natural History.

The pink snakes, two of them, long associated, alcoholically, with Carphopis spiritus frumenti, were caught by David Denis, young twin of Armand Denis, noted Belgian explorer and motion picture producer, in the gardens of the Denis home at Putnam. When young 11-year-old David told his Goliah-proportioned father that he had seen a pink snake more than a foot long in the back yard, shortly after breakfast the other day, Denis senior emphatically announced his doubts. Next morning David reported that he had found two more. But this time he brought them along with him to prove it.

Denis, Sr., an authority on reptiles, immediately pronounced them Carphopis amoena amoena, the only pink snake that can be seen by a member of the Anti-Saloon League. Few ever see Carphopis, though its habitat is the whole eastern seaboard from Connecticut and Albany County, N. Y., to central Florida and the Appalachian foothills. It is so seldom encountered because it is a "subway" snake, burrowing its way from place to place and seldom coming up for air.

The two pink snakes captured by young Denis are now the property of the American Museum of Natural History. David is the possessor of a citation from Dr. Charles Bogert, of the American Museum of Natural History's Department of Herpetology, and Universal gets mention for Armand Denis's new motion picture "Dark Rapture," which is why Universal sent out this item in the first place.

Sidney Davis had been working hard as an office boy in RKO's New York publicity department for three years. Every night he studied diction and dramatics to become an actor. The company finally gave him a screen test. It was acceptable, and they sent him to Hollywood to report for work immediately.

Jubilantly young Davis quit his office job, planned to Hollywood and on Monday morning, at the studio, donned makeup for his cinema debut, only to discover that his first role was that of an office boy in a film office in a picture entitled "Fugitive from Night."

Encountering Min Callaghan strolling homeward along the tree-lined mall after seeing "Marie Antoinette," Bill Crouch, of Chicago, inquired, "How was it, Min?" "Fine" she replied with a furtive dab at one eye, "but very, very sad. It's definitely a four-handkerchief picture."

"IT IS NO LAUGHING MATTER . . ."

Mr. Richard Tauber, international singer—including Hollywood (for Universal, United Artists, MGM)—was interviewed by the Sydney, Australia Morning Herald. Part of the results follow:

"... A singer uses a delicate mechanism to make his music. His throat becomes hot; he goes into cold air; and, before he knows what has happened, he has caught a chill and cannot sing for a fortnight. It is no laughing matter. . ."

A-Mike Vogel jocularly dampened the ardor of a group of Bronx exhibitors the other evening during a "pep" meeting conducted by big-time circuit executives for and in behalf of the "Motion Picture's Greatest Year" campaign.

The circuit chiefs had traveled to the Bronx from their offices on Broadway to supply inspiration to the neighborhood owners. One of the big guns from Broadway waxed eloquently on the subject, concluding with the psychological observation that the campaign might well bring the $50,000 prize to a patron of some exhibitor present, and thus bring to the owner much good will in his neighborhood. Came A-Mike to the rostrum. "Yes," he cracked, "and maybe that patron will take the $50,000, and run right across the street and build a theatre of his own in opposition."

He has, however, obtained a commitment from the organized industry for a movie history, "Cavalcade of the Screen," which Hollywood and the Hays organization are going to turn over as a present. But Whalen will have to worry about the where and how it will be screened.

There Goes My Heart

(United Artists)
Contemporary Comedy

Extraordinary trade interest attaches to Hal Roach's initial contribution to the United Artists portfolio and Mr. Roach has taken extraordinary measures to satisfy it. He has turned in a picture rich in name values, expensive in detail and whole, yet a picture strictly in the Roach tradition—a comedy composed of individually comic sequences tied together by a running story. At least two of these sequences rank with the funniest that have borne the Roach insignia.

To consider first the names that mean something on the marquee, there is Fredric March, playing a hardboiled reporter with a heart of wax, and there is Virginia Bruce, playing a goldlined heiress with as much money as Barbara Hutton, derived from a similar source, but with no husband when the picture opens and only one when it closes. There is Patsy Kelly, miraculously slenderized and with her native wit seemingly sharpened in the process, who steals the picture every time she shows up in it, which is most of the time.

There is Alan Mowbray as a correspondence school chiropractor all too fleetingly on the screen in brittle, brilliant passages. There is Claude Gillingwater as the heroine's crusty grandfather, Eugene Pallette as a distraught newspaper editor, Etienne Girardot as a jittery male secretary, Arthur Lake as an ineffectual photographer, and Nancy Carroll as a ritzy sales girl. And way down in the last few minutes of the picture, but high up in the list when merit marks are to be passed out, there is Harry Langdon as the undenominationalized cleric who pops up on a deserted island prepared to tie the necessary knot. His small chore in this picture is a big guarantee of those Hardy-Langdon pictures coming up.

The screen play boils down to the old story about the reporter who goes out to interview the despised heiress and winds up by marrying her. But Eddie Moran and Jack Jevne, experienced as they are in the Roach school, didn't write it so simply as that. They did write a series of intrinsically comic episodes which add up to tell the story, but it wouldn't make much difference what the plot was. Probably the funniest episode is one in which Patsy Kelly solves the problem of the gas meter and the missing quarter by plugging two floor lamps into alternating flasher-type signs in reach of the apartment window. Miss Kelly has another screaming bit with a vibrating machine and shares three or four rollicking tussles with Mr. Mowbray besides. Mr. March and Miss Bruce get robust laugh reaction to a knockabout adventure in an ice ring. Messrs. Pallette, March and Lake have, and make, a lot of fun with a three-cornered drinking bout. Director Norman C. McLeod handled each and all of these with the nicety of timing and emphasis of point that are so characteristically Roachian.

The picture opens in European waters with millionaire and heiress aboard the family yacht, which she promptly commandeers and orders to New York. There she gets a job as salesgirl in the family store, under an assumed name, and falls in love with the reporter assigned to expose her. Most of the action transpires in the city but the story winds up, rather unexplainedly, on a barren island off the coast. By that time the location, or anything else but laughs, doesn't matter much.

Straight, Place and Show

(20th Century-Fox)
Comedy

"Straight, Place and Show" is an audience entertainment picture and a showman's exploitation show. True burlesque, it's mainly a comedy vehicle for the Ritz Brothers. In the dialogue lines that have been given them and situations provided, plus their own improvising, they appear to better advantage than ever before. Even those who are skeptical of their fun-making abilities may be inclined to change their opinion if they see this picture. Exhibitors have much potential exploitation material at hand.

While there are several funny incidents in the show, two stand out. One is a comedy wrestling match which for laughter content causes the similarly conceived bout in "Swing Your Lady" to seem dignified. The other is the picture's big spectacle feature, a steeplechase race in which the brothers participate. Both had the preview audiences holding their sides.

Romantic troubles between gentleman rider "Denny" and horse worshiper "Barbara" are the cause of all the excitement. Thinking she loves the horse more than she does him, "Denny" makes a bet with her. The horse is the stake. He wins it. He gives it to the Ritz Brothers, owners of a threadbare pony ride. Thereupon the fun begins. Through "Linda" (who sings a couple of typical Ethel Merman songs), her ambitious rival for "Denny's" affection, "Barbara" learns of the horrible folk to whom "Playboy" has been given. A woman of some determination, however, she lines up with them to run the horse in a big steeple chase. Getting money to enter the steed brings the ludicrous wrestling match; desire to have "Denny" do the riding brings on the sequence that sees the "Russians" nicely rubbed out. Then comes the race. For straightaway action fun this episode has but rarely been equaled on the screen. "Denny" wins as the Ritzes mess up everything, and of course he wins "Barbara."

"Straight, Place and Show" is a picture exhibitors can offer their patrons in full confidence that it will give them 65 minutes of amusement. For exploitation, ideas that emphasize the comedy values are first in order. Advantage may be taken of the value of cast names and attention can be directed to the fact that humorists Damon Runyon and Irving Caesar wrote the original, that David Butler directed his players, story and production values in a way that causes ridiculous comedy to dominate. A word or two may be said that Lew Brown and Lew Pollack composed the two numbers which Miss Merman sings.

Previewed in the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal. Reactions of the audience, particularly those in the balcony, indicated that any crowd which is in the mood for fun should derive considerable enjoyment from the picture.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Youth Takes a Fling

Comedy Romance

This is the kind of picture entertainment that doesn't appear so promising at first. Then, as was the case with the preview audience, in a quiet way it begins to exert its appeal. Basically it's a love story, with natural comedy and pathos. The theme does not provide much action, or anything spectacular. Dialogue, characterizations and situations are the forces that make it go. In plot it is one of those "could have happened" ideas. Joel McCrea gives one of the best performances of his career. At times Andrea Leeds seems to be trying too hard, but it is consistently well acted with Frank Jenks, Dorothea Kent and Isabel Jeans effective in the support cast.

Timed to the present, the major locales are New York City, the waterfront, a gown shop, middle class apartment house and a vacation resort. "Joe Meadows," fresh from Kansas, is in love with the sea. Shop girl "Helen Brown" wants a sweetheart, sees "Joe" and decides that he is the man for her. With "Frank" and "Jean" the sources of secondary comedy, "Helen" embarks upon her campaign to wrest "Joe's" affection from the ocean to herself, but he appears to be living in another world. She cooks dinner for him to demonstrate her domestic talents, inveigling him into going on a store outing. Events follow that are heart-rending to her because they have no effect, but amusing to the audience. "Jean" encounters two debacles. First, "Joe" turns her down for good and all. Then she ruins an expensive wedding dress which she had been entrusted to deliver. Partly to square "Helen" with the prospective bride, "Mrs. Merrivale," "Joe" gets the would-be groom, "Dunham," to force a postponement. Then "Joe" gets his job on a boat. He misses it, but hires a tug to help him catch it. "Helen," making one last desperate bid, jumps aboard. Comes fog to halt the chase and sea sickness to leave the prairie mariner a dream blasted mortal who suddenly realizes that life ashore with "Helen" would be happier than roving the seven seas.

As screen merchandise, the primary appeal of "Youth Takes a Fling" is to girls whose station in life is similar to the one which Andrea Leeds portrays, who dream of romance and a shining prince. It is not unlikely that more mature persons, men and women, who once dreamed as "Helen" did and acted as Joe acted, will find the picture considerable entertainment. It might be wise to direct preliminary exploitation activities in such a way that a large audience may be attracted to initial performances, for word-of-mouth comment recommendation.

Previewed in Pantages theatre, Hollywood. In the beginning the patrons were only vaguely interested. However, once they came under the spell of the story and the capable manner in which Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds, Frank Jenks, Dorothea Kent and the supporting cast members played their parts, attention perked up noticeably.—GUS MCCARTHY.

The Last Express

Crime Club Melodrama

This Crime Club production for Universal release raises itself over the entertainment levels of its predecessors in the series because of its closely woven story, the crisp direction which sustains suspense until the final fadeout, the well adapted comedy relief in dialogue, and the craftsmanship of its players. And as in the predecessors it uses a formula of bringing all suspects together at the finale for the denouement. At the preview it was evident from the audience reaction that the entertainment rating was high.

Kent Taylor, Dorothea Kent, Don Brodie, Paul Hurst, Addison Richards and Greta Granstedt head the cast, supported by Robert E. Keane, J. Farrell MacDonald, Edward Requello, Albert Shaw, Samuel Lee and Charles Trowbridge. Otis Garrett, familiar with other Crime Club pictures, directed from the screenplay by Edmund L. Hartmann based on the novel, "The Last Express," by Maynard Kendrick. Irving Starr carries on in his capacity of producer.

The title may be confusing for exploitation purposes. It refers to a New York subway express, the maze of tunnels under the city playing an important part in the plot.

Taylor as "Duncan MacLean" and Brodie as "Spud Savage" make most of the meaty roles of a private detective and stooge, respectively. Brodie adapts himself readily to the comedy relief while Taylor has the role of a detective who "can solve any case—provided he doesn't meet a pretty woman first."

Laid against the background of New York City politics, the story development shows "MacLean" and "Sprague," threatened by gangsters on one hand, and by arrest as murder suspects, on the other, while attempting to solve the murder of a special prosecutor appointed to rid the city of gangs. Stolen evidence for which ransom of $300,000 is demanded from the gang leader, a bombing, rival private detectives and other elements are interjected.

A Man to Remember

(RKO Radio)

Human Interest

Potential showmanship values of this picture are embodied in the impressive quality of the story and the excellent performances of the featured and support players. It is not a big film. Other than Ann Shirley there are no big names in the cast, but the principal character players, Edward Ellis, who gives an exceptional performance, Lee Bowman, William Henry, John Wray, Granville Bates, Harlan Briggs and Frank M. Thomas have all acquitted themselves creditably.

"A Man to Remember" is the first directing job of consequence for Garson Kanin. His technique in handling players, story material and production details strikes a wholesome new note in making seriously premised entertainment. The picture narrates segments of the career of an old fashioned country doctor who sacrificed personal ambitions in his love of his fellow man.

It is not always a serious story. There are many times when smiles should prevail. Up-the-sleeve humor counterbalances emotional tugs. Each time the doctor seems to be persecuted beyond the ability to recover, he triumphs over the agencies seeking to discredit him.

Mr. Wong, Detective

(Monogram)

Melodrama

The first of Boris Karloff's series of four detective films is of a kind and quality to suggest that the sequence may continue far beyond present plannings. Mr. Karloff's portrayal of the Chinese criminologist has nothing about it to remind audiences of the late Warner Oland's "Charlie Chan" or of his own past performances. This Oriental is a thoroughly occidentalized sleuth who takes his work seriously and refrains from kidding the blundering constabulary. He has the dazzling courage to confess himself baffled now and again by perplexing circumstances, and this unique device has the result of baffling the audience doubly. One suspects it was F. Scott Dunlap who figured that one out for his staff.

Houston Branch developed this screen play from the Colliers magazine stories by Hugh Wiley, and veteran William Nigh directed it for associate producer William T. Lackey with strict attention to the melodramatic side and only occasional momentary obeisance to comedy. The plot has to do with the successive deaths of three partners in the poison gas export trade, each death occurring while the individual is alone in his quarters and each without visible cause. Suspicion points to half a dozen suspects. "Mr. Wong" eventually establishes that death has been caused in each case by release of gas from a bulb spun of glass so attuned that the sound of a police siren effects its destruction. Police and audience have held and discarded many a theory before that comes out.

Grant Withers plays the police captain without burlesquing him. John St. Polis is a convincing chemist, Evelyn Brent an appropriate villainess with little to do, while William Gould, Hooper Atchley and John Hamilton enact the three partners adequately. A timeliness derives from the foundational equation, which is to the effect that a foreign nation knowing of poison gas about to be shipped to an enemy power would seek not only to prevent the shipment but also to obtain the formula for making more of the same for itself. Naturally, no nations are specifically identified in the picture, although Lucien Prival, as resident operative for the enemy power, has so often portrayed an office of a certain European country that anyone who wishes to do so could whittle out a theory for himself if he worked hard at it.

King of Alcatraz

Melodrama

Despite its title this picture never so much as gives a library shot of that rock in San Francisco Bay, never has anything to do with that institution or the desperadoes there caged by Uncle Sam. This discrepancy, however, in no way detracts from the value of "King Alcatraz" as a thrill action picture in which melodrama is double dyed and yard wide.

All action happens aboard ship. Although it starts out like a continuing "sez-you-sez-me" brawl between a couple of radio operators over any girl, particularly a ship's nurse, it soon assumes its true character. An escaped convict, making bold bid for freedom and supported by loyal henchmen, in true buccaneer fashion takes over a ship. The most vital point aboard is the radio room, presided over by the squabbling radio men. Like the heroes of tradition at sea they are at first inclined to combat the convict, but a couple of bullet wounds demonstrate that valor under duress is not wise. But while the nurse performs a life saving operation on one radio man as the other relays doctor's instructions, the captain and crew, to the tune of much gun blasting carnage regain control of the vessel. Naturally the

Down in Arkansaw

Hillbilly Episode

Ralph Byrd, heretofore featured in serials, the Weaver Brothers and Elviry, June Storey, Pinky Tomlin, Berton Churchill and Guinn Williams are the principal players in "Down in Arkansaw." It is a mixture of specialty vocal and instrumental music numbers, romance, comedy and melodrama. The time is the present and the locale is any hillbilly country. All the characters, save Byrd and a few of the gangster element, are such as would be native to the locale.

About to build a dam, the government would buy the natives' property. The mountain folk are content with their shacks and hovels. Comes agent "John" to serve the papers, but as the Weavers and Elviry, "Pinky" and the "Judge" provide music and comedy, "John" soon is involved in a squabble with "Juble" over mountain nymph "Mary." But "John" has a way with him and is making progress in having the hillbillies look upon things as the government wishes they would and is also capable of exciting "Mary's" romantic interest and "Juble's" enmity.

At this point the real villain of the piece enters. It happens to be a power company, which is loathe to give a prosperous business up to one of these Washington boondoggling schemes. Rather than resort to political pressure, however, the power company calls in gangsters, who goad the mountaineers into feuds among themselves and fights with "John's" dam builders. Things get pretty exciting, in a melodramatic manner for a while, yet comedy and music is not forgotten. Eventually Elviry begins to see the light and rallies her kinfolk and neighbors to "John's" cause. The power company and its minions defeated, "Juble" loses "Mary" to "John" and the work of completing the project proceeds.

The picture affords several good exploitation leads to interest those patronizing the houses in which it will be played. There are three or four well-known names to talk about and the idea of a corporation seeking to throttle the common folk as well as the government may easily be adapted to topical showmanship.

Previewed in Forum theatre, Los Angeles. A neighborhood house, typical of many in which

Western

This is another entertaining outdoor picture of the west featuring the Three Mesquiteers. The Mesquiteers are usually fortunate in the selection of their stories. They generally have a workable plot. For the patron, too, there are three stars for divertissement.

John Wayne makes his second appearance as "Stony Brooke." Ray Corrigan is still playing "Tucson Smith" and Max Terhune likewise is in the role of "Lullaby Joslin" and still carries the "fourth" Mesquiteer, the dummy Elmer. Louise Brooks is the girl in the case. Others in the supporting cast include Anthony Marsh, Ralph Bowman, Gordon Hart, Roy James and Olin Francis.

The story, set in the west, is modern in theme. A bus carrying gold from a mine to Oro Grande, a small town, is stopped and robbed. "Stony" convinces the mine owners that they should ship their gold by airplane, and when they consent he invests his money in the airplane venture along with the other Mesquiteers and the ranchers. He buys a plane.

"Mullins," owner of the bus line and leader of the gang that robbed his own buses of the gold shipments, hires two eastern gangsters to stop the shipments by plane. They take passage on the plane and force the pilot to land on Furnace Mountain. The Mesquiteers locate the plane and overpower them. "Mullins" and his outfit arrive and in a gun battle the Three Mesquiteers, with the aid of the sheriff and his deputies, rout the bandits.

This Man is News

(Pinebrook-Paramount)

Comedy Melodrama

Most noteworthy of consideration about this lighthearted if fictitious essay in a vein more than familiar to Hollywood production, is that it cost 75,000 dollars and looks like 200,000 dollars. An estimate of its British moneymaking potentialities would be based, however, on the fact that it translates the venerable formula of the reporter who becomes entangled in a crime racket into the English idiom, exchanges the crispness of American wisecrack for the more facetious and less subtle English wit, and sets it all against a background of London instead of Chicago. American appeal thus hinges on the pull of a theme which is by now a little hackneyed, in compensation for which "This Man is News" has but little that is new to offer, despite its creditable production and direction values.

From an original by two Scots newspapermen, the film unfolds the story of a star reporter who by coincidence becomes involved in a crime he has invented, and finds the ruthlessness of the gangsters in pursuit of his body just one degree less difficult to bear than the skepticism of his Scots news editor. Something happens all along the line, with attempts at murder a recurrent motif, until after a gun battle in the newsroom itself the chief slayer is captured in ignominious circumstances by the reporter's wife.

It is frankly fictitious stuff, but Macdonald keeps it moving and the jaunty personality of Barry K. Barnes as the traditionally self-assured reporter at traditionally consistent odds with his news editor, a joyously etched study in Scottish skepticism, this from Alistair Sim, flows pleasantly through the action. Valerie Hobson in the role of the faithful and self-possessed young wife, displays not only poise and beauty, but no small intelligence. The newspaper background is no more transparent than a score of Hollywood prototypes, and camera-work and sound reach satisfactory levels.

"This Man is News" augurs well for the new British quota film, but its extra British appeal

Walt Disney, Hollywood's favorite history maker, wrote a bright new chapter on Tuesday evening when he submitted to guests, in observation of Mickey Mouse's tenth birthday, a special pre-release preview of eight short subjects completed for RKO-Radio distribution during the new season.

The Filmarte theatre, commonly devoted to revivals of both silent and talking films in the bracket loosely defined as arty, was taken over for the evening, and the eight subjects were exhibited in straightaway sequence without intermission or individual emphasis. Reaction was of a kind to suggest that a program similarly composed might be drawn up by the exhibitor in the field to pack their theatres with gratified customers. The following subjects were exhibited in Hollywood's first cartoon preview.—WILLIAM R. WEAVER.

Mother Goose Goes Hollywood

(RKO-Disney)
Christmas Release

This is scheduled for release on Christmas Day and if you've been worrying about how to get the patrons in that afternoon and evening this provides an ideal way. The film is a swift and brilliant spoofing of the great cinema personalities in terms of "Mother Goose." It opens with a kidding of Leo the Lion, explains soberly that any resemblance to real life persons is purely coincidental, and then identifies the story book characters, with rare accuracy and wholesome abandon, with just about all the marquee magnets in the box office blue book. Katharine Hepburn runs through the string of familiar fables as Little Bo Peep looking for her sheep, with everybody from Garbo to McCarthy given due attention by the animators. There'll be nothing better on any showman's Christmas tree. Running time, 7½ minutes.

Brave Little Tailor

Mickey Mouse is a hero by force of mistaken acclaim this time, a tailor commissioned to slay a giant who threatens the castle, and successful in the chore by reason of his dexterity with needle and thread. Minnie Mouse is the princess he wins. The appeal is primarily juvenile, although there is an incidental satire on the over lavish type of Hollywood spectacle.—Running time, 9 minutes.

SHANGHAI BUSINESS GRADUALLY IMPROVES

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

In spite of the "Shanghai War" that was raging a year ago and the exceedingly upset conditions that followed it, the business of our theatres is gradually but steadily getting back toward normal.

Many thousand of homeless and impoverished Chinese are in refugee camps in Shanghai, both in the International Settlement and in the French Concession. These are the two areas into which Shanghai is divided, each having its own municipal government and regulations.

The French Concession, on January 1st, levied a temporary "refugee tax" on all tickets sold at theatres. This amounts to from 8 to 10%. Our theatres in the International Settlement make a voluntary contribution equivalent to that tax. Our total contribution to date amounts to about eighty thousand dollars. This appears to have had little, if any, effect on attendance.—A. R. HAGER, President, Asia Theatres, Inc., Shanghai, China.

out, ultimately and unharmed, from an egg in the nest of the appropriately chosen bird. The action is brisk and the animators have discovered vast possibilities in the anatomical equipment of the grasshopper.—Running time, 8 minutes.

The Practical Pig

Exploitation Gem

Here they are, showmen, the Three Little Pigs of 1933, again menaced by the Big Bad Wolf and with the practical member of the trio again the hero, aided this time by a lie detector of his own invention which functions spectacularly. The film derives directly from its forebear but is in no sense dependent upon it for point and effectiveness. No showman need be told the exploitation value of the subject and none will be long unaware of its entertainment quality.—Running time, 8½ minutes.

Donald's Lucky Day

Donald and a Black Cat

The garrulous fowl is a messenger boy this time, commissioned to deliver an infernal machine on Friday the 13th. His errand is stymied by a playful but very black cat which is unintentionally but most amusingly instrumental in preventing Donald's death by dynamite. Donald is less quarrelsome and a deal more understandable than commonly. It's one of his best appearances.—Running time, 8 minutes.

Ferdinand the Bull

From the Novel

This is a Disney treatment of the best seller, "The Story of Ferdinand," by Munro Leaf and Robert Lawson, the first outside work ever purchased by the studio for a short subject. As handled by Disney, the story is a lightly and amusingly narrated presentation of a bull which didn't care about fighting and so spent its life happily squatting under a cork tree, smelling flowers. The book has been mentioned by certain literary critics as pacifistic propaganda, but the Hollywood audience witnessing it on a night when Europe was seething could find no evil intent in the film. It is, in any case, a most diverting Disney novelty.—Running time, 8 minutes.

Farmyard Symphony

Rustic Roundup

An amatory rooster and a capricious hen sing the lead roles in a rustic roundup of the barnyard citizenship executed in consonance with a brilliantly performed musical accompaniment from the classical portfolio. Horses, cows, sheep and so on figure in the proceedings in something close to symphonic integration. The subject is the sort that sends the men out chuckling, the women smiling down deep and the kids tickled pink.—Running time, 8 minutes.

The Ugly Duckling

Cleverly Retold

Hans Christian Andersen's beloved fairy tale is retold here without distortion or undue modernization, yet smilingly and cleverly. The subject is designed to evoke the gentler variety of laughter and does so.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Football Thrills

(MGM)
Pete Smith Subject

With a new football season underway, Pete Smith has culled through the miles of film of last year's games and has selected some of the highlights. Long broken-field runs, prodigious punts, exceptional drop-kicks, in fact, everything that goes to make the game of football a great sport is covered. Running time, 10 minutes.

The Early Bird

Cartoon

Scrappy, reading aloud from one of those how-to-become-successful books, impresses a little bird hovering nearby, especially when he comes to the passage about the early bird that catches the worm. Spurred to action, the little bird sets out to find the worm, which proves easy, but catching it is still another matter, as the bird learns to his sorrow. A battle of wits ensues. The worm, who knows no code of fair play, is very much victorious. It is a Charles Mintz production.—Running time, 6½ minutes.

Sea Melody

(RKO Radio)
Excellent Musical

The value of a well written story supplementary to an orchestral short subject is illustrated in this Headliner Comedy. Logically, with none of the inconsistencies of thrown-together plots that sometimes throw the patron as well on a spur-track, and the orchestra with him, action and music proceed side by side. Ted Fio Rito varies the orchestral offerings with women's trio and the singing of Muzzy Marcellino. Rita Oehman provides the feminine pictorial interest and Rolfe Sedan extracts the last bit of comedy from a role as a bogus count.—Running time, 19 minutes.

Fisticuffs

(MGM)
Featuring Max Baer

Pete Smith, that enterprising short subject producer extraordinaire for Leo, Jr., presents Max Baer, former world's heavyweight boxing champion and now contender for the title. Mr. Baer's presence is not new to motion picture screens but in this he confines himself or is confined to a demonstration of the art of boxing. The Pete Smith comedy touch is very much in evidence. Running time, 10 minutes.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

MAKING THE HEADLINES: Jack Holt, Beverly Roberts—A fair picture, but it took a nosedive.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

PENITENTIARY: Walter Connolly, Jean Parker—Fair mid-week business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

START CHEERING: Jimmy Durante, Walter Connolly, Joan Perry—This pleased a fair Sunday crowd.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

THERE'S ALWAYS A WOMAN: Joan Blondell, Melvyn Douglas—As good a mystery comedy as anyone can make.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Empire Film

SHADOWS OF THE ORIENT: Regis Toomey, Esther Ralston—Rather tame.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

First National

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland—Beautiful color, perfect cast, good story, fair business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MY BILL: Kay Francis, Anita Louise—Nice little picture. Will please all. The best Kay Francis picture in months. Price is right. Stands alone in small spots; second half in big spots. Running time, 65 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BAD GUY: Bruce Cabot, Virginia Grey—Well received on a weekend double bill. No regrets.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce, Dennis O'Keefe—Very good production that was liked by all. It would do a lot of these would-be western stars good to see this picture, and learn what it is all about. Wallace Beery very good. Make more of these, Metro. Running time, 89 minutes. Played September 2-4.—Otto W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

BLOCKHEADS: Laurel & Hardy, Patricia Ellis—The usual Laurel & Hardy comedy that they all seem to like. Personally, I think it is zero in entertainment, but the patrons like them. Running time, 57 minutes. Played September 7-8.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

CROWD ROARS, THE: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan—Good picture which failed to draw as I had the Al G. Barnes-Sells-Floto Circus for opposition on opening night of two-day run. However, those who saw it were pleased and had only words of praise. Played September 7-8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FAST COMPANY: Melvyn Douglas, Florence Rice—Here is a comedy drama that is a sleeper if there ever was one. Douglas and Rice are a team that should be kept together from now on. He is better liked than Powell in our situation and we trust that MGM will keep this series intact. One of the finest we have played this season. Absolutely tops for this type of show. Running time, 76 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LOVE FINDS ANDY HARDY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Lewis Stone—Not much can be said of this picture except in superlatives, as it is tops with any house and tops of the series. When better pictures are made, MGM will make them. They have something here that no producer can top. The entire cast is good, but Mickey, as usual, steals the show. This one is the best of the season with us for general audience appeal. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD

LOVE IS A HEADACHE: Gladys George, Franchot Tone, Mickel Rooney—Clever and entertaining comedy drama.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy—Lost plenty on this picture.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

RICH MAN, POOR GIRL: Robert Young, Ruth Hussey, Lew Ayres—A story of the "great middle class" that is tops for entertainment. Robert Young is very good and Lew Ayres really goes to town. Leo's new star, Ruth Hussey, is fine, while Guy Kibbee, Sarah Padden, Lana Turner, Rita Johnson, Don Castle and Gordon Jones form a family group that is hard to beat. Was not so good at the box office because the stars are not well known and it takes stars to get them in, but it pleased one hundred per cent and hope they make more pictures of this type. Running time, 72 minutes. Played September 8-10.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

Monogram

FEDERAL BULLETS: Milburn Stone, Terry Walker—OK for a double bill.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LUCK OF ROARING CAMP: Owen Davis, Jr., Joan Woodbury—A few walkouts on this one.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BIG BROADCAST OF 1938, THE: W. C. Fields, Martha Raye, Ben Blue, Dorothy Lamour—Good Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

BUCCANEER, THE: Fredric March, Akim Tamiroff, Margot Grahame—Good picture, which did not gross film rental. Picture was too long. Running time, 126 minutes. Played September 9-11.—Otto W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S PERIL: John Barrymore, John Howard, Louise Campbell—Fair midweek business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

PROFESSOR BEWARE: Harold Lloyd—A good picture. We didn't do well with it, but it's a good picture. Why it didn't click at the box is a mystery. Lots of action, good comedy and plenty of laughs. Running time, 98 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

SPAWN OF THE NORTH: George Raft, Dorothy Lamour, Henry Fonda—A swell picture which did better than average business. Plenty of action and everyone stayed to the end. Advertise this plenty and you will get the crowds. Played September 11.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TEXANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Joan Bennett—Good picture for any spot. Will stand extended runs. Not a knockout, but one of those big westerns that has everything to give it audience appeal. Running time, 92 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

TEXANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Joan Bennett, May Robson—It is just a big, overgrown, glorified Western, coming into the Sunday spot, which was an error. It was May Robson's picture, and a darn good thing that she was in it, for the picture itself is nothing to write home about.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

TEXANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Joan Bennett—A picture with a name like this should do big business in a small town, but this had a reaction just the opposite, and justly so, as it was pretty bad. Paramount collected percentage on this, but I can honestly say that I've played much better shows as the poorer end of a double feature bill. Business poor the first day and dropped to practically nothing the second and third. Running time, 92 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

WELLS FARGO: Joel McCrea, Frances Dee, Bob Burns—Perfect entertainment; good Saturday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Republic

ARIZONA GUNFIGHTER: Bob Steele, Jean Carmen—Drew fairly well on Friday-Saturday. Nothing extra. Played September 2-3.—G. W. Barber, Jr., McCrory Theatre, McCrory, Ark. General Patronage.

ARMY GIRL: Preston Foster, Madge Evans—One of the finest productions to come from the Republic studios. Baby tank performs feats anyone thinking of invading United States should see. Filled with thrills and action. Doubled business the second day due to favorable word of mouth publicity. Running time, 88 minutes.—Ralph Swanson, State Theatre, Ely, Minn. General patronage.

DUKE COMES BACK, THE: Allan Lane, Heather Angel—Don't overlook, my exhibitor friends, a real action boxing picture which brought the house down with applause. Business average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—Business good, and this Autry picture was better than the average, I believe. Running time, 60 minutes. Played September 9-10.—G. W. Barber, Jr., McCrory Theatre, McCrory, Ark. General patronage.

MAN FROM MUSIC MOUNTAIN: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Another splendid musical western by this organization. Running time, 60 minutes.—Ralph Swanson, State Theatre, Ely, Minn. General patronage.

OUTLAWS OF SONORA: Three Mesquiteers, Jean Joyce—Average western which pleased all. Played September 9-10.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SPRINGTIME IN THE ROCKIES: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—Poor picture; fair weekend business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

WILD HORSE RODEO: Three Mesquiteers, June Martel—An excellent picture in all respects. Republic has something that no other producers have in their western and they go over nicely. The airplane stunt in this picture is different and rounds out the show nicely by adding to the plot. Running time, 56 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNAPOLIS SALUTE: James Ellison, Marsha Hunt—Not too bad.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

HIGH FLYERS: Wheeler and Woolsey—Good Saturday business. Sorry to lose this team.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

HITTING A NEW HIGH: Lily Pons, Jack Oakie—Fair entertainment; poor Sunday business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

TRUE STORIES FROM ALTEC FILES

W. E. ROBERTS, Manager
The Lyric Theatre of the Public-Saenger-Sparks
Circuit, Gainesville, Fla.

Detects "Scratch" When Big Truck Shakes Theatre

GAINESVILLE, FLA.—"Right after completing a routine inspection, my Altec man, W. M. Shubert, noticed a trace of scratchiness in the sound, just when a heavy truck rumbled by the theatre," said W. E. Roberts, manager of the Lyric Theatre here.

"Shubert was immediately suspicious and went back to the booth. He found that a wire to the amplifier, covered by insulation, was broken. The only reason the amplifier wasn't completely dead was because by accident the lead sheathing of another wire was touching the frame of the amplifier, making a shaky contact.

"All we would have needed, to lose a Saturday night's full house business was to have another big truck go by in the middle of the show. It's a good thing that Shubert has such a sensitive hearing—and such a suspicious nature."

The Altec Service Inspector is thoroughly trained and equipped to service all makes of sound equipment, however modified or modernized since equipment was purchased.

Adams, Mason Theater, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Bob Burns, Jack Oakie—Pleased a fair sized crowd on Sunday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

SKY GIANT: Richard Dix, Chester Morris, Joan Fontaine—An inexpensively-made airplane picture with shots I am certain that I had seen before in other plane pictures. It did fair business because there seems to be something that attracts the people. But it takes a "Test Pilot" to send them out satisfied with what they have seen, and they weren't on this one.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

THIS MARRIAGE BUSINESS: Victor Moore, Vicki Lester—Duck it if you can. It is not worth running. However, we sneaked up on the patrons on bargain night, and the audience, I think, thought that we gyped them, and I know we did. Reason: behind the eight ball for a picture on that particular date.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theater, Columbia City, Ind.

YOU CAN'T BEAT LOVE: Preston Foster, Joan Fontaine—Lively comedy drama that pleased the Saturday crowd.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche—Tops in entertainment. Both the exhibitor and the customers happy. Nuf sed!—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

ALI BABA GOES TO TOWN: Eddie Cantor, Tony Martin, June Lang—We put off playing this for the last six months, but think it was unwise. It got a lot of laughs and a little extra business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theater, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

HEIDI: Shirley Temple—Entertaining picture; fair business.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

KEEP SMILING: Jane Withers—After a year's absence, this little gal drew very good considering. Picture seemed to please, although Jane seems to have tamed down considerable. I believe it was this unlimited pep and devilishness that my patrons came to see, but they seemed pleased at a different Jane. Running time, 77 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

KIDNAPPED: Warner Baxter, Freddie Bartholomew—Not worth running. Set it out unless you have a Scotch patronage.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

LITTLE MISS BROADWAY: Shirley Temple, Jimmy Durante, George Murphy—Fair entertainment but not up to standard of Temple pictures. Shirley losing her drawing power but Fox keeps her in top allocation.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

SPEED TO BURN: Lynn Bari, Michael Whalen—Average program picture which got by on Bargain Night. Evidently made for the duals. Has lots of action. Played September 12-13.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

THREE BLIND MICE: Loretta Young, Joel McCrea, Marjorie Weaver—Fair entertainment, but no drawing power.—R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Neb. General patronage.

United Artists

MURDER ON DIAMOND ROW: Edmund Lowe—Another English sleeper; everybody sleeps, cashier, doorman and ushers. Reason: Nobody comes.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Universal

ADVENTURE'S END: John Wayne—Good adventure drama.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

JURY'S SECRET, THE: Kent Taylor, Far Wray—This went over OK on a double bill.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

LAW FOR TOMBSTONE: Buck Jones—OK for Saturday.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

RAGE OF PARIS, THE: Danielle Darrieux, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—A dandy picture. Universal has something in this new star. Good story, good comedy, good cast.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

STATE POLICE: John King, Constance Moore—

An excellent Saturday action feature.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

Warner Bros.

COWBOY FROM BROOKLYN: Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell, Priscilla Lane—Go to town with this in any spot. Good story, plenty of action and plenty of laughs. Buy it right and mop up. Running time, 90 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

MEN ARE SUCH FOOLS: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane—A fair comedy and a good cast, with the exception of Wayne Morris. It has action, and fair sprinkling of situations that get the laughs, much better than most that have come through from Warner Brothers this season.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

Shorts

Columbia

GYM JAMS: Krazy Kat Cartoons—A very good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

HALFWAY TO HOLLYWOOD: Johnny Arthur, Tom Kennedy—I can see one good thing in the coming season and that is that the producers, most of them, have realized that it is impossible to make two-reel comedies that are worth running. Sure, it will take a lot of one-reelers to make the schedule on these short shows, but at least there is a chance of getting one or two with some quality in them. Further, we have found that most travelogues, whether they are in color or black and white, get a hand and it is the only reel that does. The laughs went out of the comedies when sound came in.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

MAN BITES LOVE BUG: Charley Chase—A small natural for a good laugh.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

NEW HOMESTEAD, THE: Scrappy Cartoons—Cartoon with a lot of laughs.—C. E. Fismar, Jr., Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 9—Very good. The small town audiences eat this series with gusto, as it is the only chance they have of seeing how the other half lives. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SPORT OF THE SEASONS: New World of Sport Series—A nice diversified sports reel.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

SPRING FESTIVAL: Color Rhapsodies—An excellent colored cartoon. The groundhog sees his shadow and wishes to master nature.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BEAR FACTS: Our Gang—A very fine "Our Gang." Not as good as the old two-reelers.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

BLUE MONDAY: Captain and the Kids—Very good. These shorts please all. Running time, 10 minutes.—Otto W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamosa, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

COPENHAGEN: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—The voice of the globe that remains with you. Thanks for a FitzPatrick.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

FISTICUFFS: Pete Smith Specialties—A fine boxing reel with Max Baer.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

FORGOTTEN STEP, THE: MGM Miniatures—Fascinating. Held interest. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

GLIMPSES OF AUSTRIA: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Very Good and timely. The subjects selected were well chosen and the off screen talk and music made this reel the tops of anybody's program. FitzPatrick is still tops in travelogues with us. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GLIMPSES OF PERU: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Perfect as usual.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOW TO FIGURE INCOME TAX: Robert Benchley—Okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

IT'S IN THE STARS: Musical Comedies—A very good two-reel musical. Beautifully done and photographed.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LITTLE BANTAMWEIGHT: Harman-Ising—This series is tops. Even the adult patrons like them and they are not usually too enthusiastic about cartoons. Why don't you make more of 'em, Leo? Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

LITTLE BANTAMWEIGHT: Harman-Ising—Too bad that the producer let this series slip, as it is as good as any colored cartoon on the market. This one was exceptional, and "with great reluctance we bid farewell" to this series. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LITTLE RANGER, THE: Our Gang—One of the best of this season's Gangs. These Gangs need more new children. Alfalfa getting too large. Have not had a new face this year.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LITTLE RANGER, THE: Our Gang—Nice. Drew a few chuckles. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

MIRACLE MONEY: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—This line of shorts is very good, and "Miracle Money" holds the interest to the last fadeout. Running time, 2 reels.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

MODELING FOR MONEY: Pete Smith Specialties—A better Pete Smith than usual. The comedy in this helps the reel out a lot from being draggy as they have been in the past. You can't go wrong with this one. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MUSIC MADE SIMPLE: Robert Benchley—The reaction to "An Optical Poem" played on the same bill with this killed all chances of their enjoying this one. Any other time we think they'd have liked it.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: O. K.—Pearce Parkhurst, Paramount Theatre, Schron Lake, N. Y. Small town and summer patronage.

OPTICAL POEM, AN: Heaven forbid another like this! It nearly precipitated a panic. Too heavy a dose of science for 99 per cent of our audience. They didn't appreciate it nor try to.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PARIS ON PARADE: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—This line of travel talks is the best filmed but "Paris on Parade" is an extra special. Several told me it was worth the price of admission. Color is beautiful. The aquatic scenes are the highlight. Advertise this like a feature. You will not be disappointed. Running time, 1 reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

POULTRY PIRATES: Captain and the Kids—Very good, this one.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PYGMY HUNT, THE: Captain and the Kids—These cartoons are improving steadily and this one is a dandy.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

RURAL SWEDEN: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—Again Jimmy FitzPatrick gives you an outstanding short, keeping up his high standard in his work. Excellent. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SHIP THAT DIED, THE: Historical Mysteries—Excellent. It'll make your folks think and wonder.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SNOW GETS IN YOUR EYES: Musical Comedies—Fair musi-comedy.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STOCKHOLM, PRIDE OF SWEDEN: FitzPatrick Travel Talks—These color travel talks please all and are eagerly waited for. Running time, 10 minutes.—Otto W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Amoose, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

STRANGE GLORY: Historical Mysteries—These historical reels are the class of the shorts. Very educational and very interesting and a credit to the screen, yet please the audience. Fascinating is the word for them.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

STRANGE GLORY: Historical Mysteries—An excellent reel enjoyed by all. This series has not had one poor subject. Don't waste it. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STRANGE GLORY: Historical Mysteries—Nothing to interest the average person here. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

Paramount

EASY ON THE ICE: Henry King and Orchestra, Shirley Foster—The best band short of the season outside of Spitalny's girls. Miss Foster, the skater, will be a star in her own right before long. So different that it is refreshing. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL: No. 10—The reel is

FOUR SHOWMEN JOIN REPORTERS

Four new contributors to the department which treats of "What the Picture Did for Me" include one from Canada and three from near-western states. They are:

J. L. Macdonald, Hedley Theatre, Ace Theatre Circuit, Hedley, British Columbia.

Albert Hefferan, Lynx Theatre, Coopersville, Michigan.

R. V. Fletcher, Lyric Theatre, Hartington, Nebraska.

Ralph Swanson, State Theatre, Ely, Minnesota.

The three last-named are not strangers to the readers of the department, but more than a year has elapsed since any of them has had a report in the columns.

very fine with the exception of the subject "Clouds" in color, which has no place in any picture as there is nothing to it. Just a waste of footage. The balance of the reel is very entertaining. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PLUMBING IS A PIPE: Poyeye the Sailor—The top black and whites of the business again score with this very funny reel. Very good. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DONALD'S NEPHEWS: Walt Disney Cartoons—Just an average Disney. Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

FOOL COVERAGE: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Another good Edgar Kennedy comedy.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 12—The subject, "G-Men of the Sea," is so different and outstanding that it is positively gripping. There was not a sound in the entire theatre when this was shown, so attentive was the audience. This is truly sensational. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Universal

STARS AND STRIPES: Mentone Musical Comedies—A dandy two-reel vaudeville reel. Good acts and good music.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

VOODOO IN HARLEM: Oswald Cartoons—A dandy black and white Oswald cartoon.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

Vitaphone

DON BESTOR AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Excellent band short as it is different than most they have given us this season. The organ number is exceptional. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FIGHTING JUDGE, THE: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—A better Headline Hunter, if that is possible. Delving in the history of the Civil War, Gibbons has an exceptionally good subject. Excellent, as they all have been. Running time, 11 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MILT BRITTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Why do they take a good band and try to make a slapstick comedy with it. They are about as good comedians as the "Three Stooges" would be musicians. Pass this one.—Charles Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa.

The Savoy theatre, Cleveland, has been added to the circuit owned by Meyer Kaplan and Nate Schultz, each of whom also owns and operates other houses individually. The Savoy, closed since June, is being re-decorated and equipped.

Chicago Stage School to Include Screen Training

The Columbia College of Drama, Chicago, is extending its courses this year to include motion picture training. Norman Alexandroff, dean of administration, has concluded cooperative arrangements with major companies for making screen tests. The 48-year-old college is occupying the entire room floor of the Fine Arts Building and transferring it into a completely equipped professional film studio.

In extending the courses to include film training Mr. Alexandroff said: "Those who are blaming motion pictures and radio for the decline of the American theatre are merely revealing the major weakness which brought the stage into bad times."

Trade Commission Dropping Grand National Action

The Federal Trade Commission will drop its complaint against Grand National Films, Inc., because of the recent reorganization of the company, Merle P. Lyon, the commission's attorney, said at a hearing this week.

The complaint, which was issued March 31st, charges that Grand National used "misleading" advertising in connection with the sale of the film "In His Steps." It was claimed that the advertising matter gave the impression that the picture was based on the best seller of the same name written by Dr. Charles M. Sheldon in 1896, and that the two stories were unrelated. A formal stipulation will be entered at a later date, according to Mr. Lyon.

The complaint charges that "certain individuals and groups, hostile to the program and purposes of the league, coerced and intimidated the theatre management into withdrawing the picture." When the theatres failed to show the film the second night, as scheduled, the league picketed the houses.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor

GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

IT ALL ADDS UP

The lad we have in mind is a longtime member, a honey of a showman who puts plenty on that boxoffice ball. Taking over a new spot some months ago, he now writes the bossman has given him to understand that participation in Round Table activities is not encouraged or looked upon with favor. Well, those things can happen and we suppose they do.

On the other hand, up across the border, the Famous Players-Canadian folks have their own way of looking at it. The top men of that powerful coast-to-coast circuit are kind enough to speak a good word for your Round Table. They even go out of their way to encourage managers to contribute. At one of the recent F. P.-C. conventions, for instance, headman J. J. Fitzgibbons had occasion to tell his boys that managers who had the opportunity of advertising their good works in these pages and did not take advantage of it were passing up a valuable bet. "Fitz" says other nice things about this department's concrete worth to the boxoffice, but this will give you an idea.

And, then, there is R. J. O'Donnell, chief of that able crew of Interstate theatremen down in the Texas sector. His folks are represented here frequently and it wasn't so long ago that Bob sent Louis Charninsky all the way to the state capital to have the Quigley Award presented by Governor Allred.

An offhand listing of further firm Round Table supporters would include Loew's, Warners', Lucas and Jenkins, Malco, Robb and Rowley, Wometco, Minnesota Amusement, among others, including the Indiana-Illinois gang, as fancy a set of fast-flying showmen as you'd meet in a month of Sundays.

No, we're not taking bows. Just pointing out that in the outfits here listed, the grade of intelligent showmanship is consistently high, men are treated with consideration, are contented, well paid and stay put.

On the other hand, the circuit first mentioned always seems to be in a mess for manpower. Managers write in to say they are not very happy.

THEY'RE DOIN' ALL RIGHT

The visiting brother was saying: "Yes, it's Oke to congratulate Round Tablers when they are promoted to executive positions, but you say little about them afterwards. Why not run a piece, now and then, about how they're doing?"

And just then, in walked Harvey Cocks.

Hard-hitting theatreman and frequent contributor to these pages, Harvey, last year jumped to the general managership of the Quimby Theatres, of Indiana, is now concerned with remodeling and further expansion. In deciding on expenditures and policies, Cocks is pretty near Number One Boy.

Yes, sir, Harvey's doin' all right. And so are most of the other members elevated to the Big Time who bow a little in the direction of your Round Table for support in getting up there.

THE EVIDENCE IS TO HAND

Question: With everything else equal, what is the difference between good grosses and poor grosses?

Answer: The difference is showmanship.

Question: By what authority?

Answer: Results, so far, in the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign.

Question: Give specific evidence to support this contention?

Answer: In those situations where the local committees of theatremen did the job expected of them, grosses have increased commendably. Where the committees have sat down upon their respective fannies, the results have been a bit on the sad side.

Question: What proof is there?

Answer: Statements from executives in high places supported by the actual boxoffice records.

Question: Why should theatre showmanship receive the major share of the credit?

Answer: Because everyone had the same goods to sell. There was only one campaign to put over. Every city started from scratch. The real showman allowed to "go to town" went there. The others fell by the wayside.

If Motion Pictures' Greatest Drive marks a milestone in the progress of this business that milestone must also mark the time when the industry finally got around to agree that the able theatreman is just about the most important thing at the party.

A-Mike Vogel

The boat ballyhoo above illustrates two water stunts put on successfully for "Carefree" at the Warner in Atlantic City and reported by Mort Levine. Giant net sign with theatre name and stars served as an effective perambulating poster. To follow through from there, Levine worked with Al Hirschfield to design a small wooden float to which theatre cards were fastened and cast adrift. Note boys on barge setting floats in water.

Round Table In Pictures

Eye-arresting, indeed, was the window display promoted in leading music store by Charlie Taylor, advertising director of Shea's Buffalo Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., for advance buildup on "Alexander's Ragtime Band". All of the hit tune song sheets were prominently displayed, as were the records. For atmosphere, music stands and instruments were planted, together with credit card carrying scene still.

At left is float for Motion Pictures' Greatest Year which won first prize in the Harrisburg (Pa.) water carnival on the Susquehanna River. Float represented entire theatre front, towered three stories high and had girl in cashier cage, in addition to usherettes at either side. Theatres represented included the State, Senate, Victoria, Loew's Regent and the Colonial. Float was pulled along river by steamboat tied to its side; illumination added to impressiveness.

What with the European unrest, air raid precautions were demonstrated by members of the staff of the Savoy Cinema, Dublin, Ireland, during the recent screening there of Walter Wanger's "Blockade". At left may be seen theatre staff wearing latest in gas mask equipment.

Old-fashioned horse and buggy properly bannered toured the streets of Harrisburg, Pa., as an advance buildup for Sam Gilman's "Three Loves Has Nancy" date at Loew's Theatre there. Girl in sunbonnet and lad dressed as farm hand rode in the buggy.

Below may be seen Mayor Edward J. Kelly, of Chicago, in the act of issuing a proclamation for an official movie week in connection with Motion Pictures' Greatest Year. This was part of the local campaign reported by L. S. Stein of Warners and director of advertising for the Movie Quiz Committee. Reporters and photographers representing all dailies were present to cover the story.

Rather an effective animated street bally was constructed by Julius S. Fisher, Capitol Theatre, Singapore, S. S., for opening of "Yank at Oxford." Crew moved backwards and forwards on motors concealed in base of display, which advertised the attraction.

Giant postcard carrying title and cast of "Having Wonderful Time" was planted on marquee by Tom Cleary in advance of opening of that opus at the Princess Theatre. Typical resort scene in water colors was used as were cutouts of Rogers and Fairbanks for the Montreal date.

SHOWMEN'S LOBBY LAFFS

Omaha Proclaims World Premiere of "Boys Town"

This cartoon was created by Round Table Cartoonist Milt Rosenfeld.

MANAGER: "DON'T SULK, SHERIDAN, THERE ARE ROBBERS AS WELL AS COPS, YOU KNOW!"

Since Omaha is the locale of the picture, it was fitting that the world premiere of M-G-M's "Boys Town" be held in the Nebraska capitol, the occasion being celebrated at the Tri-States, Omaha, preceded by what was reported as one of the most comprehensive advance campaigns put over locally.

Under the supervision of G. Ralph Branton, circuit general manager, Ted Emerson, Nebraska's zone publicity director, working with H. W. Lambert, of Bill Ferguson's exploitation staff, corralled a general committee of local big names to cooperate in handling the premiere, these including the Mayor, the Governor, president of the Union Pacific, among others. The Mayor issued a proclamation setting forth the day of the opening as a special holiday. The Governor issued a letter, picked up by all state papers, calling attention to the opening and urging attendance of all Nebraskans. Further, the chief state executive invited Governors of all states bordering Nebraska to be present, four accepting. Invitations were also forwarded to high churchmen of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths.

Read at every mass the Sunday preceding in every Catholic church in the diocese was a letter signed by Bishop Ryan, of Omaha, calling attention to the picture and the premiere. Announcements were also made from the pulpits of many Protestant and Jewish churches. Bishop Ryan also spoke over the radio at the opening, as did Father Flanagan, founder of the actual "Boys Town," on which the picture is based.

Boys Run City for Day

Featured on opening day, was the turning over of the city government to the mayor and commissioners of Boys Town by the Mayor and Commissioners of Omaha. The boys took over the operation of each department for the period of the entire morning, the resultant publicity, local and wire, being one of the highlights of the entire campaign. Also featured in the publicity was a special section in honor of the picture and Father Flanagan, by the Omaha World-Telegram.

From Hollywood for the opening came Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney and Maureen O'Sullivan, starring in the picture, and in whose honor the Union Station was decorated with life-size cutouts of the stars and Father Flanagan. Covering the entire length of the waiting room was a giant banner reading "Let's Go to Town for Boys Town." Jumbo cards announcing the date were posted in every Nebraska station of the Union Pacific, and for a week ahead all tables in the road's dining cars carried fold-cards plugging the premiere. Bulletins were placed in every department at the general offices, shops and round houses.

Special police escort awaited the Hollywood delegation and 20 blocks of the downtown area were decorated in their honor. The larger stores carried individual decorations and the majority of the downtown shops featured special windows. Light posts and traffic signals, street cars and busses were hung with special cards and bunting.

Dance Magazine Features "Yam" Promotion Contest

More than 10,000 dance masters from coast to coast have been serviced with a practical method of a ballroom adaptation of "The Yam," "Carefree's" hit dance through a special section in the September number of Dance Digest, official publication of the National Dance League.

Cover is devoted to dance pose by Astaire and Rogers and center spread outlines for instructors procedure for teaching the dance originated by Astaire. Theatre tieups are suggested, including a "Yam" contest, tie-ins with schools, hotels and private dancing schools.

The dance is being featured in illustrated lessons by scores of the nation's newspapers. The Atlantic City Press ran an illustrated "to be continued" series of lessons and the Bridgeport Post, Rochester Evening News and Knickerbocker News have told their readers in illustrated strips how to do the "Yam."

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Study Guides Issued by Paramount on "Spawn"

In connection with "Spawn of the North," Paramount has for distribution a 24-page illustrated study guide to be used as standard photoplay studies on the picture in many schools throughout the nation. Exhibitors have found the guides extremely helpful in aiding their advance campaigns on the picture by effecting cooperation with their local high schools and colleges.

Star Presents Fan Photos For LaFalce in Washington

There's nothing unusual about presenting fan photos to publicize a picture or a personality, but the stunt takes on new importance when the star himself presents the pictures.

That's what happened at the Earle Theatre, Washington, last week. Frank LaFalce, Director of Advertising and Publicity, arranged for Tony Martin, making a personal appearance at the Earle, to be present in the lobby Thursday morning and present the fan photos to the first 1,000 women.

The stunt, which received breaks on all the dramatic pages in Washington in advance, drew women from all over Washington to the Earle for the chance to receive the photo from Martin's own hands.

Bernhard Drive Winners Get Awards from Goldberg

COOPERATION OF CANADIAN PAPERS AIDS DRIVE PROGRESS IN DOMINION

Campaigns Reported in Various Situations by Famous Players Canadian Executives; Other Members Continue to Hit Ball

Keeping pace with the top-speed campaigns for Motion Pictures Greatest Year put over by the theatremen on this side of the border, much activity is noted in Canada, especially among the Famous Players-Canadian boys, as reported by J. J. Fitzgibbons, circuit vice-president and general manager of theatre operations.

In Toronto, the Uptown Theatre has established an information booth for the benefit of the public and at another house, a giant register has been planted in the lobby for names and addresses so that follow-up information can be sent out from time to time. Top tie-in noted in Winnipeg, was an exhibit of the history of the development of the motion picture in one of the big department stores. This was arranged by all the local theatres.

Outstanding was the exploitation in Vancouver, B. C., from where Larry Bearg, F P-C district chief, reports the committee was successful in getting the city authorities to allow Drive banners to be strung across the main street. Another "honey" planted by Bearg was a giant board planted out in front of Vancouver's leading hotel during the circuit's convention, copying tying in the Drive to the meeting (see photo). In addition, other widespread cooperations by the circuit were effected with independent exhibitors in Regina, Saskatoon, Edmonton and Calgary with the theatres joining in underlining the national ads.

In Toronto, Fitzgibbons and Jim Nairn, director of exploitation and publicity, secured the cooperation of the newspapers on behalf of all the Toronto theatres, the biggest break being a page spread in the important Globe and Mail, paper preparing copy, providing space and cuts free of charge. Headed "The Magic Carpet of the Movies," copy referred to the enjoyment given by theatres and the low admission charges, etc. Special box across page carried copy reading:

"The Globe and Mail is glad to pay tribute to the great Motion Picture Industry, its Producers, Artists, Distributors and Exhibitors—for the part they play in bringing into the lives of countless millions of people the world over so much useful knowledge of themselves and of one another, so many hours of happiness and matchless entertainment.

The F P-C executives also promoted two half-pages in the Daily Star under the same arrangement and similarly, the Telegram is contributing another series of half-page displays.

George Reports Special Sections

In five of the towns under his publicity jurisdiction, Douglas George, publicist for the out-of-town theatres in the Warner Philadelphia zone, reports special newspaper sections, running eight pages and more, and put over in cooperation with the theatremen in the various situations. Sections are similar to those put over in previous years with the inclusion of the Movie Quiz copy. In addition celebrations of all kinds were held to plug the new season. Credited by George for major assistance in putting over the sections are the following:

In Reading, Pa.: George Peters, Peg Glase, Lester Stallman and Keeney. The Wilmington, Del., theatremen included Lew Black, Edgar Doob and A. J. Belair. In Westchester, Pa., Tom Magnan, did the job on his own, and Jack Mulhall, Warner district manager, helped in various spots.

Botwick Secures Proclamation

Marking September as Greater Movie Month was the proclamation secured by Harry Botwick, of the State, and John M. Divney, of the Maine, Portland, Me., from the City Council, to plug the Drive in his sector. Papers gave a spread to the break and Botwick arranged with the Chamber of Commerce to mail a copy of the proclamation to every one on the Chamber's mailing list.

In addition to the other mediums of advertising and publicity, Harry also sold the Drive over his two weekly sidewalk broadcasts. Quiz books distributed at the State are stamped with "see this picture at the State" alongside of the titles booked to play the house.

In St. Louis, the publicity committee, comprising Chick Evens and Harris, of Loew's, Les Kaufman and Plessner, of Fanchon and Marco, have functioning a series of newspaper ads contributed by the publishers in addition to editorials and other comprehensive publicity. Radio station KMOX is broadcasting a weekly program for the benefit of the Drive with prominent speakers such as the president of the Chamber of Commerce, among others. Mitzi Aloh, manager of the F. & M. Shady Oak, recently was interviewed on the same station's regular woman's program.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Capitol Hosts Kids At "Boys' Town"

Two hundred and fifty New York boys and girls, each a winner in a good citizenship award contest in 80 playground areas in the five boroughs of greater New York, were the guests of Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney at the Capitol Theatre to see their favorite stars in "Boys Town."

The 250 prize ticket winners in New York are all members of the New York Police Athletic League's neighborhood playground groups and they competed for their award in a contest in which they were required to explain the ten most important specifications of a good American citizen.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Golf Cover Reprints Used on "Carefree"

RKO is making good use of the September cover of Grantland Rice's Golf Magazine given over to a scene from Fred Astaire's novelty dance in "Carefree." These have been dropped into pressbook with suggestions that they be used in lobbies, as the basis for tieups with sporting goods stores and for newsstand cooperation. Golf Magazine also carries an interview with Astaire on rhythm on the fairways, which may be utilized for lobby blowups and incorporated in other publicity material.

Canadian Member Gives Opinion On Institutional Ads

by HARLAND RANKIN
Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Canada

Continuing the excellent discussion on Institutional Advertising, I feel the urge to put our views on paper. I believe that the successful showman of today must first of all be able to analyze his situation. To illustrate my point let me give you some illustrations of my findings in Ontario. In Northern towns personal contact isn't so essential, as they want action pictures and have the money to spend. I believe all the hand-shaking and good-nights are wasted on these people; just give them what they want.

I know of another exhibitor who does not mix with his community, gives real shows, books and knows how to balance and buy his programs, who is reaping nice profits, in face of the fact that he is the first showman to ever make a go of it in this situation.

Personal Contacts Questioned

Again I know another father of the town who gives all the kids shows who can't afford it, and passes to his regular customers, who he figures can only afford to come once a week. He has all the answers for Institutional Advertising, but people have taken too much for granted. He fills his show but does not get box office results.

Three years ago when I first opened in Tilbury, I made it a point, once a week to call on every merchant, have a chat with him and ask for suggestions. Well, I asked for it and got it, and nearly went crazy listening to them. They seemed to wait for me with their petty grievances, and I lent a patient ear, but found instead of being such a congenial personality if I went to work with tie-ups and proved to them what could be done, helping to get more business with the theatre, making them realize the theatre meant more to their interest than they realized, it worked out much better.

Finds Direct Tieups Best

Let me quote one instance of a merchant who sold eleven nationally advertised men's suits in eight months. He was a very fine fellow, so I convinced him to let me take charge of his advertising. I talked him into an appropriation for advertising, and put on a Fashion Show and theatre party, ran slides and had store pay for all our cards which we had in weekly holders. Last year he told us during the same length of time he had sold one hundred suits. We have at present four of our leading merchants giving out our passes for Thursday nights only which we supply them at a small weekly charge plus a 10-cent service on the pass when presented at the Box Office.

My contention is if you can show the merchants results, you'll do yourself a lot of good. We strive to keep in the limelight continually by being on the job when anything is doing in the town. If any community activity is worthwhile we do our best to cooperate to the advantage of the theatre as well and find it usually pays.

Awards Rulings

Competitions are now divided into four Quarter Periods:
Jan. 1-Mar. 31; Apr. 1-June 30; July 1-Sept. 30; Oct. 1-Dec. 31.

Entrants will compete in five classifications, according to population and situation:

- A—Cities, 250,000 and over.
- B—Cities, 100,000 to 250,000.
- C—Cities, 25,000 to 100,000.
- D—Cities, up to 25,000.
- E—Neighborhood and subsequent-run theatres.

Quigley Quarterly Awards will be given as follows:

Silver Plaque to best entry in each classification.

Citation of Merit Sheepskin Certificate to runner-up in each classification.

First and Honorable Mention Sheepskin Certificates in each classification to be awarded other entries deemed worthy of recognition.

An additional Citation of Merit will be awarded each Quarter to the entry selected as best from among that Quarter's Plaque winners, regardless of classification.

Every contribution, including institutional campaigns, to the Round Table will be considered in determining the Quarter winners. Although it is not necessary to forward complete campaigns, they are also eligible for consideration.

Entrants will be judged on their contributions to the Round Table over each Quarter period and not upon single picture campaigns, as heretofore.

Although their participation is not discouraged, theatremen contributing only one campaign on one picture during any one Quarter will not be given the same consideration in the judging as theatremen who enter more than one campaign during any one Quarter.

Entrants will all "start from scratch" in each Quarter. Winners of the Annual Awards will be selected from among contestants making the highest scores over the four Quarters of the year.

Setup of Division Ads Determined by Council Meetings

by BOB PASKOW
Ad Director, Warner N. J. Theatres

We play double features and the associate feature is given equal attention toward box office return. We determine the percentage to be devoted to each picture, entertainment value, names, type, title, copy, illustrations, emphasis, speed and flow. The second feature works into the general layout so that the eye sees at a glance what we are trying to convey. If copy is read so much the better, if not, the ad must sell without.

Credit for our advertising goes to George Steiner, Ben Adler, District Managers Richard Hill, Tony Williams, C. L. Dooley, Rudy Kuehn, 15 first run managers and the writer.

Each contributes ideas, after much discussion we arrive at definite conclusions on common grounds. Space used is limited, due in most cases to high newspaper rates. Space, however, is flexible and depends on merchandise to be sold.

Office Prepares Own Veloxes

We prepared our own veloxes from stills after retouching. Hand-lettering is frequently used but captions and copy are set, reduced or reversed as needed. Benday effect costs nothing as we use treated paper and get perfect results.

Proof sheets are sent out to the field of 55 theatres and each requisitions the mats needed from our local advertising department. This setup, in brief, has effected savings of quarter of a million dollars in three years, because we have standardized our space throughout the territory.

When the pressbook ads convey the angles we agree upon, we use them. Ideas, copy slant and material are lifted from all over the country, if we think the angle is correct. Naturally we make mistakes occasionally and switch to another idea pronto.

Several size ads are prepared from one column, one to two, three, five and seven inch, two columns, five, seven and twelve inch. All convey sales ideas desired with wide choice of angles. By knocking off theatre slug and substituting associate feature, the same mats are used for subsequent runs for newspapers, programs, heralds, etc.

Associate features are set up in white space so that substitutions may be easily effected. This applies one hundred per cent in small size ads and wherever possible in larger space if layout and balance of color is not destroyed.

Vets Aid "Mother Carey"

More than 25 members of the local Spanish-American Camp were guests of the Senate Theatre, Harrisburg, Pa., opening night of "Mother Carey's Chickens," the action of which takes place in that period. The veterans in uniform and accompanied by Boy Scouts paraded to the theatre and the Senate was the recipient of considerable newspaper space as a result of the tie-in.

Contest Exploits 'If I Were King'

A two-week contest offering cash prizes and based on questions to be answered on the subject "What I Would Do If I Were King," has been arranged with Journal American week ahead of the opening of the date at the New York Paramount. Winners of the 15 cash prizes will be announced during the second week of the run of the picture, thus giving the picture complete publicity coverage for three weeks. Special feature stories with art were in the cooperating paper and delivery trucks carried special one-sheets plugging both the contest and picture.

Another tieup was effected with the current issue of the Red Book magazine, which featured "If I Were King" as the best picture of the month. Special tack cards were distributed at all newsstands. Various fashion shows were arranged in addition to prominent window display in shop of Fifth Avenue decorator, which featured the complete bedroom suite of Louis XI as seen in the picture. Material was secured from the studio and displayed with appropriate credit cards.

M-G-M Announces "Great Waltz" Contest

Nationwide dance competition is announced by MGM for "The Great Waltz," coming musical to start September 26 and close December 5. Contest starts with a series of local contests in cooperation with theatres throughout the country where the picture is to be shown. Winners in these local competitions will be advanced to state contests and 48 special trophies will be awarded to the winning couple in each state. This part of the contest will be followed, in turn, by 12 "zone" contests and the winners in these will come to New York for the grand finals, which will be held in a big local auditorium.

The winning couple in New York will be awarded a three months' contract with MGM, with special prizes for the other contestants. Competitions will be judged on a basis of grace, rhythm, personality, dance deportment and general appearance. Professionals will be excluded. The slogan of the contest is "Bring Back the Waltz." Civic organizations throughout the country will lend their cooperation, and the stars of the picture plan to come to New York to attend the final judging.

Guessing Contest Helps Publicize "Clitterhouse"

For opening of "Dr. Clitterhouse" at the Stratford Theatre, Chicago, John P. Field erected a 40 by 60 in his lobby on which the titles of five of Edward Robinson's previous pictures were listed. To those submitting correct list of the star's screen name in each of the attractions, guest tickets were awarded.

Imitation police report on "Dr. Clitterhouse" was mimeographed on the back of postcards and sent to mailing list. Also planted about town in strategic spots were "wanted" heralds with due theatre, playdate and title credit.

MORE ON FOOTBALL

In addition to various Round Tablers' campaigns detailed in last week's issue, the following are further contributions from other members on what they have in work and are arranging to do on their attractions during the current pigskin season.

Lines Up Tieups with Brown University

This year at our opening game I am going to use the megaphone gag which I used so successfully in Syracuse last year. As you may recall, cardboard megaphone with merchant and theatre imprint are distributed at the games. Cost of these is underwritten by cooperating store in exchange for co-op advertising, megaphones printed in school colors.

Have arranged with Tuss McLaughry, Brown University coach, his field coaches and the first team to be guests at the theatre on a Sunday for a 30-minute program on the stage, using our organist. The gag is to have Tuss and his players talk over the microphone from the stage and have organist play football numbers. Am going to arrange to work out some way to have Brown University Night at our theatre one night a month, inviting the personalities such as Laughry, football line coaches and the players and work out some kind of a show whereby we might be able to get a lot of good publicity.—ED MCBRIDE, Loew's State, Providence, R. I.

Two Most Popular Teams Entertained at Theatre

Printing of score cards and on one side giving theatre credit and current attraction. Entertaining two popular teams night before the game at the theatre. This attracts attention of fans resulting in added revenue at box office. Displaying banner in field parade giving theatre attraction and playdate.

Printing of numbers on score cards and selecting 10 lucky persons who receive pair of guest tickets for Loew's theatres. Thus giving our attractions plug over public address system at the grounds. We want to print quantity of football schedules on small size cards that can be conveniently carried in pocket wallet. On one side we will print forthcoming attractions also plugging movie quiz contest.

Theatre furnishes megaphones to cheering section with institutional copy. "Loew's for Good Shows," also movie quiz copy and coming attractions. Occasionally use sound truck at gates before and after games playing music and making announcements.

Planning contest with one of leading daily papers inviting readers to guess the greatest number of correct scores over a period of weeks, offering worthwhile prizes. Another contest either with local daily or school publication offering prizes to persons naming the player who will end the season with the greatest number of scoring points. Prize to be awarded in tieup with newspaper, to the local gridder proving himself most valuable to his team. Sports editors invited to act as judges.

At important games we receive permission to "entertain" between halves, introducing trick horse with signs plugging our current attractions. At big games we let loose balloons carrying appropriate copy concerning Loew's shows for "stalling time."

Present window cards to popular schools, printing football copy on first half and bottom part imprint "after the game be sure to see," etc. The student body is used to distribute these cards and generally find exclusive spots among leading merchants.—MILT HARRIS, publicity director, Loew's Theatres, Cleveland, Ohio.

Special Football Night Planned by Holland

For theatres in or near college towns, there is a box office natural, especially if said college team is in need of funds for uniforms or a new clubhouse, etc. Hold a Blank (name of town) Football Night. Get the merchants' council to hold their monthly meeting at 6 P. M. instead of the usual noon-day session and have it a banquet-meeting in honor of the local team.

At 8 o'clock the team and merchants' council enter the theatre as guests and are placed in appropriately bannered boxes. Just before the last show, the mayor and committee auction off footballs autographed in advance by every member of the squad.—SID HOLLAND, city manager, Elco Theatres, Elkhart, Ind.

"Hold That Co-ed" Pressbook Lists Various Football Tieins

For "Hold That Co-Ed," exploitation in the 20th Century pressbook on the picture, emphasizes a number of ideas aimed for the attention of high school and college men. Newspaper contest suggests description of technique for holding a co-ed, readers invited to write a letter of no more than 200 words describing situation where they had to use finesse, skill, etc., to "hold that co-ed." Another contest idea is built around well known "holds," for instance, "hold that tiger," "hold that lion," etc., with prizes for the most interesting lists submitted.

For co-op ad tieins it is suggested that the title be used along the lines of "you can hold that co-ed if you can remember to say it with flowers," etc. Since the picture also has to do with politics, a torchlight parade is suggested, especially where elections are dated in about the time of the picture. The pressbook also lists 24 different items for football tieins that can be used with the date.

Church Gives Away Pony

Through tieup with four local merchants, Ed Church, Sierra Theatre, Susanville, Cal., promoted shetland pony complete with bridle, blanket and saddle for giveaway to kid holding lucky number ticket. Cooperating merchants distributed the tickets and advertised the giveaway in their ads and throughout stores. Ed reports the stunt as being highly successful from his own and merchants standpoint.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 127

Conducted by

F. H. RICHARDSON

Question No. 127 was: (A) Why does motion in a magnetic field generate a flow of current in a closed-circuit conductor lying within that field? (B) Why is it impossible to generate direct current in a closed-circuit conductor lying within a magnetic field by its motion within said field? (C) If d.c. cannot be generated magnetically, how is it obtained from the brushes of a d.c. dynamo?

(A) Paul E. Shell answers thus: "In a generator we have a magnet, usually a permanent one, which forms a magnetic field between its poles, the same consisting of lines of magnetic force. Within the confines of this field is a rotating piece known as an 'armature' upon which are wound certain coils of copper wire, the same insulated from the armature core upon which they rest, confined in slots. These coils are connected with the outside distribution wires through a contact ring if it be an a.c. that is delivered to the external circuit; or through a commutator consisting of copper bars if the machine is to deliver d.c. for distribution.

"Now what is known as Faraday's Law of Principle says that if a closed circuit be so rotated in a magnetic field that the number of lines of magnetic force passing through it will be varied, a current will be induced therein****. If an armature such as I have

(A) What is meant by a carbon spindling or needling? What is its cause and may it occur to both carbons simultaneously?

(B) If the carbons (or either of them) spindle, what should have your first attention?

(C) What is the effect of positive carbon spindling? Of negative carbon spindling?

(D) Does spindling tend to injure metal parts of high intensity lamps?

roughly described be rotated within the magnetic field described, one side of the coil will cut the lines of force in one direction while the other side cuts them in the opposite direction; also the number of lines of force cut each unit of time will vary, and thus a current be induced in the various coils wound upon the armature, in accordance with Faraday's Principle."

(B) J. R. Prater answers concisely as follows: "Motion in a magnetic field generates a flow of current in a closed-circuit conductor located within that field because of the principle of induction. According to Faraday's law when a closed circuit is moved in a magnetic field so as to cut—that is to say, alter—the number of lines of force passing through it, a current is induced therein, or more correctly speaking, an electromotive force (voltage) is induced in the said conductor, which, in accordance with Ohm's law, namely that current flow equals voltage divided by ohms resistance, results in an induced current flowing in the conductor."

(B) R. and K. Wells reply thus: "The answer to this question is found in the fact that when E.M.F. is induced in a conductor, and by that fact current is made to flow, the flow will be in a certain direction, namely, at right angles to the lines of magnetic force in the said magnetic field and at right angles to the direction of motion. That is a fixed law. To illustrate, if the right hand be laid upon the N pole of a magnet, with the fore finger and thumb extended and the larger finger bent downward across the face of the magnet, the fore finger would represent direction of lines of magnetic force which form the field, the thumb the direction of movement of the conductor in which E.M.F. is generated by movement, and the large finger the direction of flow of induced current.

"We observe (see figures 1 and 2 of Bluebook) that since the flow of induced current must be constantly in one direction insofar as concerns the lines of force and the direction of motion, and since the sides of armature coils must and do reverse their direction with relation to the lines of force each revolution, the direction of current flow must necessarily reverse itself with each revolution of the coil, hence d.c. cannot be generated by a rotating armature and stationary magnet."

May I commend this answer to study, even by those I have credited with having answered acceptably.—F. H. R.

(C) The answer of J. R. Prater is selected with the remark that in studying it you should refer constantly to figures 1, 2 and 3 in your Bluebook.—F. H. R.

"In order to obtain d.c. from an a.c. armature it is necessary to reverse the connections between each armature coil and the brushes each time the current in the coil reverses in direction. This is accomplished by the use of a 'commutator,' consisting of a series of copper bars insulated from each other and from the armature shaft, so mounted upon the armature shaft that their outer sides provide a smooth cylindrical surface upon which the brushes may ride. A separate commutator 'bar' is provided for each end of each armature coil, the bars connected to opposite ends of the same coil being placed opposite each other through the diameter of the commutator.

"Brushes connected to opposite sides (polarities) of the external circuit are similarly placed opposite each other through the diameter of the commutator. Since the commutator bars revolve with the armature coils, each time the current changes direction in the coils the corresponding commutator bars are also interchanged with relation to the brushes. Thus, although the armature coils always generate a.c., the commutator delivers d.c. to the brushes and external circuit.

"The direct current thus obtained from each single armature coil pulsates from zero to maximum voltage and back to zero twice during each revolution of the armature, but in most generators several coils are mounted on the same armature shaft and so interconnected that the voltage from any one coil does not drop far below maximum before the voltage from the next coil rises to maximum, thus maintaining very nearly constant d.c. voltage."

Exhibition and distribution of films form the central theme of a new play by Maxwell Weinberg of the Little theatre, Baltimore, and Joseph Julian.

Our editorial this week is reprinted in its entirety from the INDEPENDENT EXHIBITORS FILM BULLETIN.

Only the quotation marks are ours. Here's the editorial:

"TO METRO'S CREDIT."

"In an industry wracked with seeming endless inter-branch antagonism and baiting, it is pleasant to hear the virtual unanimity of exhibitor good will enjoyed by at least one distributor.

"One might suppose that its very position at the pinnacle of the industry would make Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer the most ruthless and arrogant of all film companies. Yet, this company displays greater consideration for its customers than any other.

"During the film selling season hardly a week passes but what at least one irate exhibitor writes or calls us asking how he might go about suing some distributor for selling away a product he has long played. Of course, we point out the right of any company to sell to whom it desires, providing no conspiracy can be proven. But what strikes us is the absence of complaints on this score against Metro.

"This company, it seems, places some value on good will. Many cases are known in which Metro persistently has remained faithful to old customers, regardless of opportunities to get greater revenue from new competitors. The fact that a theatre which has played M-G-M pictures in the past, has exploited its stars and its trade mark apparently enters quite prominently into the considerations of this company's sales executives.

"It is to the everlasting credit of M-G-M that it sets a fine example for other distributors in this respect. What a pity some of them refuse to follow!"

REMEMBERING

THE motion picture industry is becoming conscious that it has a history, that it has some events to recall and remember that bespeak attainment.

This week for two current commercial reasons, one the incidental interest of a department store, the other the quest of a publicity peg for "The Greatest Year" campaign, the place and time of the birth of the amusement screen as an institution were marked, in a special sort of way, with a piece of bronze and a ceremony.

It was the radio-broadcast and press-covered event of the unveiling of a tablet, at the extraordinary hour of 9:45 A.M., the remotest hour in the showman's day, October 4th, tending to commemorate that first presentation of the picture on the screen as an integral part of the entertainment business, on the night of April 23, 1896, at Koster & Bial's Music Hall in Herald Square, on a site now covered by the Macy emporium.

FOR "showmanship" reasons it was made exclusively an Edison anniversary, with the revealed plaque on the wall reading: "Here the Motion Picture began. On the night of April 23, 1896, on this site, in Koster & Bial's Music Hall, Thomas A. Edison with the Vitascope first projected a motion picture."

Poignant reflections arise on what Mr. Edison, with his generous and all dominant sense of accuracy, would have remarked upon a reading of that plaque.

The showing that night of April 23 was not entirely to Mr. Edison's liking. He invented the motion picture, but did not claim projection. His general manager, William E. Gilmore, had been much against it. The Edison plant was making money out of selling peep-show machines, and wanted no screen projection. Commercial pressure through Raff & Gammon, agents, had compelled acceptance of the first successful projector, the "Vitascope", invented by Mr. Thomas Armat of Washington, D. C. For commercial reasons, some called it "showmanship", the machine was presented as an Edison machine with the obscure line on the nameplate, "Armat Design". Mr. Edison was in the audience, and Mr. Armat was in the projection booth, where Mr. Percy Waters of the Raff & Gammon staff was the operator.

ALL this was made clear, with documents, to the committee which prepared the plaque and it was so drafted. Then the editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD got a letter from Mr. Harold Franklin of the Greatest Year campaign, which remarked: "Because there may have been some question as to who actually invented the Vitascope we were careful to prepare the tablet in such a way that the invention would not be claimed for Thomas Alvah Edison, yet Thomas Edison is the glamorous figure of this particular occasion and therefore it was felt that if this tablet marked the beginning of the motion picture, it would serve its purpose."

It is to be observed that Mr. Edison and Mr. Armat were friends after the patent wars, for decades. The only issue about the invention of the Vitascope was concluded with a concession of priority to him in 1896 in a patent interference action, No. 18,032. The commercial answer for the whole industry was the uncontested payment to him of royalties of $350,000 through the life of his patent, which founded motion picture projection. And—the conspicuous fact that Edison projectors were manufactured under license from Mr. Armat, as examination of any license plate will still show. Years ago the Smithsonian Institution tossed out of the National Museum, after tedious inquiry, a machine which evasively attempted to invade the Armat priority.

The tablet is at variance with the facts, and Mr. Edison's own oft-expressed statement of them.

Mr. Armat, still extant and merry, at his ease in Washington, was not invited.

Meanwhile, the attendance of Mr. Percy Waters, that first night projectionist, had a rather larger significance than the occasion noted. Mr. Waters, successively through the Kinetograph Company and later Triangle, became a figure of import in the industry through many of its evolutions. Continuing today in the Wilmer & Vincent organization he has the longest continuity of service in the whole industry.

FAME

MOTION PICTURE personages have made their largest advance into the special strata of fame represented by the selections of "Who's Who in America", with the publication of the new edition for 1938-39.

It is perhaps more accurate to say that with the march of the years "Who's Who" is becoming a shade more democratic, more conscious of the popular interest in the personalities of entertainment, sports and the spread into all of the arts, industries and media of that something called "showmanship".

This edition of the famous reference work contains a total of three hundred biographies that may be with reasonable accuracy called motion picture names. The issue contains 31,545 biographies, with 2,545 new names and with an elimination of 2,434 by death or decline in status. The net gain over the last issue, two years ago, is 111. About twice that gain is represented by new screen names. (See news pages of HERALD.)

It is of interest to compare "Who's Who" totals with Motion Picture Almanac's total of 12,000 biographies of persons in the art and industry of the screen, and Fame's approximate 1,200 names of persons importantly connected with the production of the "box office champions", the more successful pictures of the year.

Arithmetically this would tend to indicate that in the world of the screen about one person in ten could be considered of capacity for top flight performance in this industry. While in the national picture, by the judgment of "Who's Who", there are about three hundred screen-sector names, including authors and musicians, who rate attention. That gives the

Self-Regulation

Resumption of negotiations with distributors for self-regulation of trade practices is assured, Edward L. Kuykendall, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, made known on Wednesday. Meetings will be held within a month, representatives to be called to New York as soon as the dates are established, and with all exhibitor units invited, he added.

At the same time the attorneys of the large companies were conferring over complaints instituted by independent exhibitors and pending in three district federal courts, following last week's meeting with Thurman Arnold, United States assistant attorney general, over the anti-trust action of the Department of Justice against the majors.

The three suits in the field were the Gary Theatres Company action against the large companies, the Illinois Allied States suit against Balaban and Katz, and the A. B. Momand case against the majors.

Reel Censorship

A movement was started in England Tuesday to censor newsreels. The Warwick County Council has appealed to the County Councils Association to ask the British Home Office to impose a censorship on newsreels, aiming at the elimination of war and "horror" scenes.

FAME

motion picture's share in national fame as about one person in a hundred, or one per cent. Obviously the masses of the box office audience do not have a very big vote, and "Who's Who" is no fan paper, yet.

The first motion picture name to attain "Who's Who" is there yet—John R. Freuler of Milwaukee, dating there from about 1916. It came about because an article bearing his name appeared in World Court Magazine in 1915, making argument that the motion picture was an instrument toward universal peace. It got quoted in the then great "Literary Digest", which won "Who's Who's" attention.

All of "Who's Who's" biographical presentations are approved by the persons named. This makes the reading of many in the motion picture sector of particular interest. A surprising percentage of the screen world's people were born without date.

Lamp Suit Opens

The suit brought by C. S. Ashcraft Manufacturing Corporation of Long Island City, N. Y., against the Durkee circuit's Grand theatre and National Theatre Supply Company in Baltimore, went to trial this week before Judge William C. Coleman in federal district court, Baltimore.

The Ashcraft company, manufacturers of projection lamps, charge that Peerless Magnarc lamps used in the Grand theatre infringe patents which the plaintiffs claim on the mechanism by which direct current is applied to the use of the so-called "suprex" carbons. The lamps employed in projection at the Grand theatre, manufactured by the J. E. McAuley Manufacturing Company of Chicago, are designed for the use of such carbons with direct current. Mr. McAuley was one of those called early for examination.

Federal Judge Coleman may make a personal inspection of the lamps at issue by witnessing a demonstration of them at the Baltimore branch of the National Theatre Supply Company, distributors of the devices. Taking of testimony is expected to require most of the week.

Counsel for the plaintiff is Samuel Darby, while L. O. Watson represents the defendants.

Box Office Champions	Page 37

Upturn

Tangible evidence that box office receipts are better came this week with reports by the United States Government that its tax income on admissions had jumped more than $1,000,000, from $17,367,439 to $18,423,307.

Less encouraging was the news from Washington that exhibitors can expect no relief in federal taxes this year, some having nurtured the hope that the tax exemption might be lowered from 40-cent tickets to 10 cents.

Would Bar "Sit Down"

Studio labor and studio production executives are studying their positions under Los Angeles' new ordinance curtailing labor picketing, also the more severe referendum to be proposed to the state's voters in November outlawing "sit-down" strikes and drastically restricting picketing and boycotting.

Pinanski Reelected

Allied Theatres of Massachusetts on Wednesday reelected Samuel Pinanski to the presidency for the third year. He is a partner in Mullin and Pinanski Theatres. Others reelected were John H. Devlin, Loew's, vice-president; Stanley Sumner, University Theatre, Cambridge, treasurer, and Joseph H. Brennan, secretary.

The new advisory committee is composed of Abner Eilenberg, Frank C. Lydon, Philip Blumberg, Nathan Goldstein and George A. Ramsdell.

The board of directors now consists of Charles W. Koerner and Benjamin Domingo, RKO Theatres; H. M. Addison and George A. Jones, Loew's; J. J. Mullin and Edward A. Cuddy, M & P Theatres; B. E. Hoffman and Max Mellincoff, Warners; J. J. Ford, Maine and New Hampshire Circuit; Al Somerby, Lothrop Theatres; James H. Doyle, Broadway theatre, South Boston; John S. Giles and Walter Brown, Boston.

Lasky Broadcast

Jesse L. Lasky said on Wednesday that his entrance into the radio field would be over the Columbia network. Mr. Lasky still is in New York after traveling through mid-western key cities in behalf of his plan, which is believed to involve a radio-film tieup with Mr. Lasky acting as master of ceremonies. A complete announcement is expected early next week.

Still Dark

Scores of theatres in the flood-stricken areas in New England, principally in Connecticut and Rhode Island, are still dark, although the work of rehabilitation and reconnection of power lines is proceeding rapidly.

Some 40 odd houses in Connecticut alone were put out of commission by the hurricane, and theatre damage generally in the states affected is conservatively estimated at $200,000, with Loew's alone losing $6,000.

As is usual in local distress of large proportions, exhibitors began planning for benefit shows for other persons who suffered, Hartford owners starting off with a Paul Whiteman show at the State for residents thereabouts.

Film shipments still are being made circuitously because of washouts of railroads and auto roads. The main automobile route through western Massachusetts will probably remain closed until next spring, authorities say.

Exhibitors suffering losses and who are insured are expected to take advantage of the central clearing house for handling of hurricane claims as set up by the policy underwriters.

North Carolina exhibitors were worried for a while last Friday when a one-minute hurricane hit that state, sending water into many theatres.

RKO Plan

The plan to reorganize Radio-Keith-Orpheum under Section 77B of the Bankruptcy Act finally emerged this week for approval by the court, after four years of legal entanglements and the countless arguments of many factions. The plan had the agreement of major creditors and stockholders and it is expected to be approved by the court. A consolidated net loss of $480,176 was reported by the Irving Trust for RKO operations for the 26 weeks ended July 2nd. This compares with a net profit of $1,442,710 for the same period last year.

The plan and the financial statement are found in a story starting on page 33.

Who's Who and Films

Some 300 persons connected with the motion picture industry are listed in the current issue of Who's Who in America. The percentage is about one-one hundredth as there are 31,545 names in the 2,919 pages of the volume. The youngest person in the book is still Shirley Temple and one of the veterans of past issues, Maude Adams, recently signed with David O. Selznick to appear in a picture.

British Problem

The issue of "strangulation bars," such as what in the States is called "protection" and "zoning," is heading up in the United Kingdom as a specific point of conflict between circuits and independent exhibitors, writes Aubrey Flanagan from London, with fur to fly at the resumed round table conferences between the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association and the Kinematograph Renters Society. Figuring in the dispute also is the use of the double feature policy particularly in circuit theatres.

MPTOA Convention

The convention in Oklahoma City October 30th to November 2nd of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America will be a round-table for a general discussion of the industry's problems it is hoped by its directors. Invitations have been sent to producers, distributors, circuit and independent exhibitors, affiliated and unaffiliated. A list of subjects to be discussed at the convention was issued this week and they range from trade practice legislation to the development of new film audiences.

After the Rumbings

A brighter ray was seen this week over Europe, as demobilization orders followed the signing of the four-cornered pact which halted war with dramatic suddenness last Thursday night. With demobilization thousands of film workers in Italy, Germany, France and England, were returned to their posts, and the minds of millions put at rest. This immediately reacted favorably at theatre box offices where business had been practically at a standstill during the two-week crisis.

Campaign Progress

A brass tablet commemorating the first showing of motion pictures to a paying audience was unveiled Tuesday on the site of the old Koster & Bial's Music Hall at the 34th street side of the R. H. Macy & Company building in downtown New York, under the sponsorship of Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign. Other developments of the campaign included preparation of an all-industry fashion show, decision to inaugurate a Musical Week, and the launching of a second series of newspaper advertisements.

Columbia Signs Three

At the annual meeting last Monday of Columbia's stockholders, new employment contracts and stock purchase options were approved for Samuel J. Briskin, studio executive; A. Schneider, treasurer, and A. Montague, sales manager. The retiring members of the board of directors were re-elected. Members of the board are Harry Cohn, Jack Cohn, Leo M. Blancke, S. Bornstein, A. Schneider, Charles Schwartz and J. Kerner. Among those present at the stockholders' meeting was Dr. A. H. Gianini.

Grand National

Grand National has set 70 features for their program to date under the new corporate set-up and the first is due for release October 14th. The program as announced this week includes 44 features, two "specials," 24 westerns, divided into four groups of six each. The company also set 44 short subjects, 18 in two reels, the balance in one-reelers, all comedies and all coming from Educational. The company formally went into operation with its first sales meeting, held in Chicago last weekend.

This Week in Pictures

Maurice Silverstone, chairman of the executive committee of United Artists, was host on Monday to company officials, other notables and representatives of the trade press at a luncheon at the Rainbow Room, atop the RCA Building in New York, for Hal Roach, marking the delivery of the latter's first United Artists release, "There Goes My Heart." Mr. Silverstone is shown above with one of his guests, Paul Moss, license commissioner and brother of B. S. Moss. At left Mr. Roach is pictured with Terry Ramsaye, editor of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

It was a press party that was held by Harold Orlob, producer of "One Third of a Nation," at the Eastern Service Studios in Astoria, L. I., but the photographer knew his business and confined himself to Mr. Orlob himself (extreme right), Frank K. Speidell, head of the studios; Charles L. Glett, vice-president; and Sylvia Sidney, star.

Inevitably, Jackie Cooper is growing up—had another birthday just the other day, which is the occasion celebrated in this record of the cake-cutting festivities that took place at the Monogram studios, with W. Ray Johnston, president of Monogram (at Jackie's left), and Scott R. Dunlap, production chief, on hand to get their slice. Jackie, incidentally, was 16 years old.

Bill Langford, who's been drivin' a team of mules adrawin' a covered wagon across the country to exploit the premiere in Little Rock, Ark., October 6, of Bob Burns' new Paramount picture, "The Arkansas Traveler," meets up with Commissioner Melvin Hazen and Miss Dorothy Parker ("Miss Washington of 1938") in the nation's capital.

When Paramount began to make "This Man Is News" in England, it was a "quota picture," officially. But it turned otherwise, worthy of a gala premiere at London's Carlton theatre. Shown attending the event are Earl St. John, director of Paramount's British theatres; Anthony Havelock-Allan, author; Valerie Hobson, co-star; David MacDonald, director; and Alastair Sim, player.

McCausland, Leon Goldberg, Major L. E. Thompson, Mr. O'Connor, Senator J. Henry Walters, Malcolm Kingsberg, W. G. Van Schmus and O. R. McMahon.

UPTURN REFLECTED BY TAX INCOME; NO REDUCTIONS SEEN FOR EXHIBITORS

Collections by Government
Total $18,423,307 for Year,
Compared with $17,367,307
Previous Year; 25 States Gain

United States admission tax income, barometer of box office conditions, indicates a definite betterment of theatre business, the Bureau of Internal Revenue reporting on Thursday an increase of $1,000,000 in tax income collected by Uncle Sam from theatres in the season just closed.

Total tax receipts for the year were $18,423,307, compared with $17,367,307 for the previous year. Twenty-five of the 48 states shared in the increase, others either remaining at about the same level as in the previous year or showing some loss.

Less favorable tax news from Washington, however, was the branding as baseless of the reports that the exemption from admission taxes might be reduced for exhibitors from 40 to 10 cents next year.

The legitimate field, regardless, is going ahead with plans to obtain preferential treatment on taxes on tickets in an attempt to aid in the rehabilitation of the stage.

Little Tax Legislation Seen

Barring an emergency which calls for immediate large new revenues, tax legislation during the coming session of Congress will be confined to a minimum, according to Washington opinion. The admission tax will be continued, it is predicted, and at its current rate, any additional revenues which may be sought, other than emergency, coming from an increase in income taxes in the so-called middle brackets, and if the need for funds is pressing, from a broadening of the tax base by the lowering of personal exemptions.

No tax legislation whatever is expected to be taken up by Congress until well along toward Spring, after the March income returns have been filed and analyzed and the Treasury can estimate how closely revenues will approach expectations.

Thus, any tax bill will become effective only a few months before the opening of the 1940 presidential campaign, admittedly the most important in a number of years, and the Administration is not desirous of going into that campaign under the handicap of a heavy new tax law, say Washington observers.

All Classes Share in Increase

The total admission tax collections for the year from all amusement sources, according to the Revenue Bureau, were $20,800,779, compared with $19,740,191 in the fiscal year 1937, with all classes sharing in the increase except admissions to roof gardens and cabarets.

In addition to the increase in taxes on theatre box office sales, increases were reported on free or reduced rate admissions, from $560,444 to $575,954; on leases of boxes or seats, from $51,393 to $55,196; on admissions in excess of the established price, from $35,514 to $42,954; and on brokers' sales, from $170,047 to $186,618. But collections on admissions to roof gardens and cabarets dropped from $1,555,352 to $1,516,748.

While the greatest dollar increase in box office taxes was shown by California, where they jumped nearly a half-million dollars, Delaware led in percentage with an increase of Approximately 70 per cent of all box office collections were reported by five states, New York, of course, leading with $6,933,909, followed by California with $2,042,397; Illinois, $1,629,549; Massachusetts, $1,058,915, and Pennsylvania, $900,874. The smallest tax total was reported by North Dakota, $3,056.

Belgium Found Continuing Good Market for U. S. Films

The market for American films in Belgium continued to be good during the first half of 1938. Competition from British and French product declined both as to quality and quantity, and the Belgian government continued to put no obstacles in the way of American producers and distributors, according to the U. S. Department of Commerce. Local production remained almost insignificant.

The number of theatres has increased to 1,100, with yearly gross income estimated at 300 million francs.

MGM on Wednesday signed, as individual cartoon producers, Hugh Harman and Rudolph Ising to seven-year contracts, each to produce nine one-reel cartoons a year, all in color.

Army Officer in Hollywood To Study Production Trends

Captain Dwight L. Mulkey of the Signal Corps of the United States Army, the sixth officer to be sent to Hollywood to study under the cooperative officer training program carried on between the War Department and the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, arrived in Hollywood this week to begin his study of motion picture studio problems.

In addition to spending some six months in the studios, studying technique, the training course includes several weeks' study of the various types of motion picture equipment. His first two weeks will be spent in the plants of Eastman, Dupont and Agfa Film, studying raw stock. This will be followed by several weeks to be spent with sound equipment companies.

"Drums" Is Involved in Suit Over Canadian Distribution

Sam Smith, for Anglo-Canadian Distributors, asked the High Court in London Wednesday for an injunction to restrain London Films from exhibiting or distributing "Drums" in Canada. The action was ordered held over to October 14th, London Films agreeing to cease supplying prints to United Artists for the Dominion.

Mr. Smith said Anglo-Canadian has an agreement for exclusive handling of all London films in Canada for seven years.

DISTRIBUTORS PROMISE MPTOA SELF-REGULATION

Meetings Will Be Held Within a Month, Says Kuykendall; All Exhibitor Units Invited to Send Representatives

Announcement that assurances pointing to self-regulation are in hand from distributors was made late Wednesday by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, over the signature of its president, Edward Lee Kuykendall, Mississippi.

Word of the resurrection of negotiations was dispatched from MPTOA headquarters in New York's old Mecca Building, and was received with considerable surprise by many in the business who had been pessimistic on the subject ever since the United States Government, in an unexpected move, sued the entire organized industry on July 20th under anti-trust laws.

It was believed that the suit had endangered self-regulation to the point where adoption could not be effected for a long time. The program was abandoned with the filing of the suit.

MPTOA Meets October 31st

In other quarters, however, reports had it that the distributors were planning to allow the MPTOA to make announcement of the resumption of negotiations when the MPTOA meets in annual convention in Oklahoma City on October 31st.

Now, Mr. Kuykendall said, the MPTOA "can definitely assure theatre owners of immediate meetings with the distributors out of which will come decisive adjustments in trade practices."

"We have the assurance of Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, and William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Loew's who represent the distributors' committee that meetings will take place at the earliest possible date consistent with ability of interested parties to come to New York," according to Mr. Kuykendall.

All Exhibitor Units Invited

The meetings will be held within the month. As soon as definite dates are set, representatives of the MPTOA will be ordered to New York from the field.

Mr. Kuykendall said in his announcement that the MPTOA invites the representatives of all exhibitor units, "regardless of affiliation"—presumably including Allied, too—"to sit in with us for a discussion of common problems."

"Whether they sit with us or not we hope they will attend these conferences," he continued, adding: "We are seeking results; let credits fall where they may."

"Naturally," the MPTOA president said, "the discussions will be around our 20 per cent cancellation demands, local conciliation boards, abolition of score charges and designated playdates. There will, of course, be other problems to work out."

Mr. Kuykendall in the announcement gave credit to his organization for bringing about a resumption of the negotiations.

Lawyers Busy on U. S. Suit and On Three Cases in the Field

The business of adjusting some of the differences existing over trade practices in distribution-exhibition continues largely in the hands of the motion picture's lawyers. Last week they were engaged in conversations with the United States Government in the matter of the anti-trust suit filed by the Department of Justice, and this week on complaints pending in three district federal courts, as instituted by independent exhibitors.

With their usual professional silence as to what transpired, nine of the industry's biggest lawyers, accompanied by "outside" advisory talent, emerged last week from the Georgetown home of Colonel William J. Donovan, RKO counsel, after holding a chatty dinner-table discussion with Thurman Arnold, U. S. assistant attorney general, on the pending Government suit. Apparently it resembled a "feeler" expedition, with all hands seemingly friendly at coffee and cigars.

Invited by Arnold

The meeting was a belated outgrowth of an invitation from Mr. Arnold to the defendant majors to discuss an agreement which would bind the five distributor-circuits to refrain from any further theatre expansion pending disposition of the action, which action, besides attacking virtually all distribution-exhibition practices, seeks to divorce exhibition from distribution and distribution from production. Someone at Washington had, subsequent to the "invitation," let it be known that if the majors refused to agree to maintain the status quo in circuit operation, the Department of Justice would use the strong arm of an injunction to force cessation.

It was assumed, then, that the nine film lawyers and the Government lawyers talked about maintaining the status quo of circuit expansion. There was, however, no way of officially determining that. As a matter of fact, speculation on the subjects discussed at the meeting ranged all the way from laying the groundwork for the industry to enter into a consent decree to the possible effect adoption of self-regulation would have on the case.

Before entraining for the Capital, lawyer spokesmen on Broadway said they were mainly interested at this time in matters of legal procedure and in exploring possibilities of obtaining further extension of time for their filing of answers, which, as legalities now stand, are due the first week in November, two previous extensions having expired.

Forerunner of Meetings

There was some denial that an "agreement" had been reached on abandonment of circuit expansion but generally there was little doubt that an agreement to abandon such expansion eventually will be effected. In any event, it appears that last week's meeting was but the forerunner of a series of discussions between the industry's lawyers and those of the Government on the circuit subject and on the manner and methods of procedure.

Among the majors' attorneys who met with Mr. Arnold and Paul Williams, who is in direct charge of the case for the U. S., were, besides Colonel Donovan; John Kaskey and Ralph Harris, representing Twentieth Century-Fox; John W. Davis and J. Robert Rubin, Loew's-MGM; Thomas D. Thacher and Austin C. Keough, Paramount; Robert W. Perkins, Warners, and William Mallard, representing RKO with Mr. Donovan. The three non-circuit major defendants were not in attendance, giving further evidence that the basis of the meeting was in connection with circuit expansion.

Meanwhile the film lawyers visiting Washington took the week-end to study notes, to report to the lawyer body of the whole on Monday, at the headquarters set up especially for defense discussions in the same building that holds the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, at 28 West 44th Street, New York. A date for a second Washington meeting with the Department is to be made.

Trust Suits in the Field

The motion picture's lawyers this week answered the Gary, Ind., trust suit, obtained a postponement of the Chicago case to October 13th and a postponement in the Momand-Oklahoma case to October 24th.

Complete denial of any anti-trust violations was made by Balaban and Katz, Warners and other majors named in the suit of Gary Theatre Company of Indiana. The answer was filed in federal court, Chicago, and stated that no agreements existed among the majors on sale of product or clearance. Federal Judge Will Holly received the answers, filed individually, but all following the same lines.

Federal Judge Wilkerson, in Chicago, set October 13th as the new date for a hearing on a temporary injunction requested by Allied and independents against B. & K. and majors in their anti-trust suit alleging unfair clearance accorded the circuit.

A. P. Murrah, United States district judge, in Oklahoma City, postponed until October 24th hearings in the suit of A. B. Momand against majors. Mr. Momand, an independent, asks damages of $4,900,000, charging conspiracy to eliminate him from exhibition.

Within a few days the Department of Justice will start an investigation of the complaint of Prefect Theatres against Skouras, involving clearance held by Skouras in Portchester, N. Y., over the Pickwick in Greenwich, Conn., according to Clarence D. Lowe, an executive of Prefect.

Mr. Lowe said he had received information from Thurman Arnold that the investigation would get under way without delay.

The dispute is of long standing and involves complaints of unreasonable protection held by Skouras over the Greenwich house, which in some instances runs to a maximum of 90 or 120 days, according to Prefect.

Fox Will Attack Foreign Violations With New Methods

Twentieth Century-Fox has served notice on Neerlandia Films, Holland, that it will bring court action if the Dutch company goes through with its plans of filming "Daddy Long Legs," to which Fox owns the film rights.

There have been several cases involving copyright violations in Holland, and in each case the claimants have relied upon the Berne Convention, to which the United States is not a signatory. Edwin P. Kilroe, Twentieth Century's counsel, said this week that the American company will not base its action on the Berne Convention, but, instead, the reciprocal copyright relations act of 1891. The act provides the nationals of any country with the same rights in regard to copyright matters in another signatory country that they would have in their own, providing it is duly certified in a proclamation by the president of the United States. This has been done with Holland.

The case involving Sax Rohmer's story, "The Daughter of Fu Manchu," was lost in the Hoge Raad, the highest Dutch court, when Mr. Rohmer relied upon the Berne Convention for protection. The story has been copied in a Dutch publication, De Combinatie, after appearing in Liberty magazine. Mr. Rohmer's contention was that the story should be protected by the Berne Convention because it had been published simultaneously in this country and Canada, which is a party to the Berne Convention. The court, however, ruled that Liberty showed no statement of Canadian publication, and that the wording of the English text of the convention did not fully convey the meaning of the French text, which contained the phrase, with reference to published works, "les oeuvres editees" (English text translation, "works, copies of which have been issued to the public"). The Dutch court did not define the phrase, nor did it state what constituted a publication under that provision of the Berne Convention.

Twentieth Century, in adopting the new line of action, is trying to avoid the lack of definition in the Berne Convention, and is bearing in mind the course followed by "Gone with the Wind," which has been before six different Dutch courts without being settled.

Warner Shorts Heard On New Radio Program

A new radio program, entitled "Our America," in which Warner Brothers' historical short subjects are dramatized, has been inaugurated by station KFWB, Hollywood, and its allied stations. The first of the series presented was "Give Me Liberty," the Academy Award prize winner of two years ago.

The program will be heard on Wednesday and Friday evenings. Subsequent shorts to be broadcast will be "Man Without a Country," "Romance of Louisiana" and "Declaration of Independence."

Columbia's "You Can't Take It With You," which was nationally released on September 29th, has opened in over 70 cities.

Film Case on Sound Patents Set As First Supreme Court Action

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

With more than 400 cases pending, the first suit to be heard by the United States Supreme Court when it gets down to the business of the term October 10th will be one of interest to the motion picture industry, involving the liability of the Schlesingers' General Talking Pictures Company for patent infringement in the use of talking picture equipment of amplifiers carrying license notices restricting their use to radio reception.

Formal opening of the 1938-39 Supreme Court term occurred October 3rd, but was merely a short session for the purpose of announcing that the court was meeting. The week is being devoted by the Justices to the consideration of the appeals filed during the summer recess, a number of which will be disposed of by order next Monday, either being set for hearing or the lower court decision affirmed through denial of appeal.

The talking pictures case, memorable for the vigorous dissent last May of Associate Justice Hugo L. Black, then new to the bench, from a majority decision holding General guilty of infringement, comes up for argument on the questions whether the owner of a patent may restrict the use made of his device after it has come into possession of a purchaser and whether he may, by merely attaching a notice to the device, place an enforceable restriction as to the use to be made thereof by the purchaser.

Validity of a distributor ban on the showing of double features is involved in two cases, one from Dallas and the other from Philadelphia. The Dallas case, a monopoly suit brought by the Government, was before the court last term on appeal of the distributors and the two Texas circuits with which they were alleged to have made contracts violating the anti-trust laws, and was remanded back to the District Court with instructions to comply with the rule requiring the making of findings of fact and, separately, the conclusions of law on which the decision was based.

The Philadelphia case, before the court on appeal of the distributors, involves a ban sought to be imposed in that area and contested by Harry and Louis Perelman, independent exhibitors, who charged it to be part of a scheme to maintain high rentals and give protection to chain houses.

In another case, the West Virginia authorities appeal from a decision that the West Virginia occupation tax may not be extended to an out-of-state distributor, in this instance United Artists, and state authorities also are the appellants in another case, in which they contest a District Court injunction against enforcement of the Florida statute regulating the licensing of copyrighted songs.

Before the Supreme Court completes its new term a number of other film suits are expected to come before it. In the near future, appeals are expected to be filed in the Washington ASCAP case and the North Dakota divorce law suit.

Goetz Says MGM British Production Not Changed

Ben Goetz, head of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's British production, has said that outside acquisitions of British films will have no effect on the company's production program in England. The company recently arranged to acquire three Gainsborough productions and Gabriel Pascal's "Pygmalion."

Among the films planned for production in England are "Good Bye Mr. Chips," "National Velvet," "And So Victoria," "Busman's Honeymoon," "Death on the Table" and "Kindling."

Industry Faces New Legislative Sessions in 45 States in 1939

Nineteen thirty-nine is state legislative year, legislatures in 45 of the 48 states being duly required by law to convene, all but two of them opening their law-making sessions in January. This means, of course, that the regular bi-annual flood of bills, proposed or enacted, affecting motion pictures and various of its component parts might be expected. Congress also meets again in January.

While a dozen or more of the state legislatures met during 1938 in special or emergency sessions, called, for the most part, to meet economic conditions, only nine states, in addition, had regular sessions scheduled: Kentucky, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Mississippi, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island, South Carolina and Virginia. Of these, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Rhode Island and South Carolina are again set for 1939 sessions, leaving Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi and Virginia the lone states not meeting next year.

Practically all of the states, save the few mentioned above, meet every second year—1938 being the "off" year.

Exhibitors and circuits may be expected to go to state legislative halls to battle against industry opponents proposing new taxation, circuit "divorcement"—of which considerable will probably be heard in 1939—and other forms of anti-film legislation. No change is expected in "Blue Law" or state censorship statutes now existing, nor are any such new proposals likely.

With the idea that exhibitors and others of the motion picture business in the states involved might be apprised of legislative opening dates and local procedure of law, the following tabulation is presented:

Talks Continue on Coast Talent Front; Trouble in Chicago

The long drawn out arguments continue in Hollywood over the respective rights and demands of studio employer and employee. The highlight still is the Screen Directors Guild controversy before the National Labor Relations Board over the Guild's petition to be designated as sole bargaining agent.

Witnesses this week continued to show variances of opinion between workers and producers over the right of the Guild to also represent unit managers. On the stand were Fred Leahy, Paramount, and Samuel Goldwyn, disputing the Guild's claims, followed by Val Paul, Universal, and B. B. Kahane, of RKO, offering similar testimony. Guild witnesses were presented in rebuttal. To present a picture of the motion picture industry's value to Hollywood and Los Angeles in National Labor Relations Board records, board attorney William Walsh introduced in evidence at the Directors' Guild hearing questionnaires filled out by M-G-M and Universal showing expenditures of $52,000,000 during the last fiscal year for production.

M-G-M declared it made 39 features and 67 shorts for $32,000,000 and Universal 44 features and 20 shorts for $20,000,000.

In another Hollywood worker controversy, Dr. Towne Nylander, NLRB director, set October 14th as the date for conferences between him and IATSE and major studio officials named in the complaint filed some weeks ago by Jeff Kibre, chairman of the Motion Picture Technicians Committee, who alleged that the IATSE had become a "company union" in Hollywood through producers' payments to IATSE leaders. The charges were denied at the time by all.

Hollywood studio unions affiliated with the IATSE were continuing to hold elections in line with the parent union's recent decision to return autonomy to the individual locals.

Closing Books Is Authorized

Hollywood headquarters of the Screen Actors Guild has approved the request of the eastern branch of the guild for authorization to close its membership books October 15.

The authorization was given with the provision that the closing apply only to extras and that a standing committee be designated to pass upon future applications for membership from either veteran or qualified players, who may be made exceptions to the closing. Membership rolls for bit and part players will be kept open.

The eastern branch of the guild now has 900 members. Its membership fee will be increased from $10 to $25.

The advisory committee of the guild commended the administration of the eastern branch, headed by Mrs. Florence Marston, in a resolution to the senior guild in Hollywood.

A closer understanding between junior and senior members of the Screen Actors' Guild in Hollywood is aimed at in proposed new by-laws, which were mailed to members for ratification Tuesday, with a meeting set for Friday on the subject, also on the matter of the new eight-year agreement with studios.

Under the bylaws the guild is divided into three classifications of membership, senior, Class B, which includes extras, and part players. The new rules give the Class B members the right to withdraw in a body on a 51 per cent vote, prohibit senior members from calling a strike of Class B members until the latter approve by a 75 per cent vote, and, in effect, give the Class B members a larger voice in the affairs of the guild.

Dr. Towne Nylander, regional N. L. R. B. director, also set October 14 as the date for a conference with Screen Writers' Guild representatives on the writer's formal charges that studios have failed to negotiate with it as the exclusive collective bargaining agency. The conference is expected to determine the procedure to be followed.

Members of any branch of the Association of Actors and Artistes of America who accept engagements in the jurisdiction of any sister branch must immediately make application for membership in such other branch, according to a ruling issued Tuesday in New York by Frank Gillmore, president, to all branches. The decision is expected to assist materially in the current organization drive of the American Federation of Actors in motion picture theatres which have vaudeville or stage shows.

Charles C. Moskowitz has been designated as representative of Broadway houses to conduct negotiations with the A. F. A., it was learned at union headquarters yesterday and Harry R. Calkins, chief organizer, will act for the union during the absence of Ralph Whitehead who is at the A. F. L. convention. Jurisdiction of the A. A. A. extends over screen actors and radio artists and it is believed here that personal appearances may be blocked in the event that present negotiations fail to lead to an agreement.

Laboratory Dispute

In New York, a union conflict continued between Du Art Laboratory and members of Local 702 of the laboratory workers union. Some workers were arrested on charges of assaulting non-union employees of DuArt.

Chicago theatre engineers are picketing 30 theatres in protest of the refusal by circuits to restore a voluntary 10 per cent pay cut. Both union and exhibitor leaders refuse to take first steps toward a settlement.

Negotiations for the settlement of operators' contracts are being delayed until next week. An Allied meeting over the weekend resulted in the decision to absolutely refuse restoring the union 10 per cent pay increase which it voluntarily accepted as a cut last July.

Projectionist Suit

Suit has been filed in the New York Supreme Court by Joseph D. Basson, as president of Local 306, for $5,240 back wages in behalf of six operators, against Edjomac Amusement, Max Rudnick, Edward Madden and Joseph Quittner, operators of the Eltinge at 242 West 42nd St.

Mr. Basson charged that the defendants breached a contract made March 1, 1932, with the union, by discharging six operators May 4, 1933. Subsequently, the complaint stated, in May, 1934, the defendants were ordered by the Supreme Court to reinstate the operators, but have allegedly failed to pay their wages for the period during which they were not employed.

Basil Rathbone is on a personal appearance tour of New England cities in connection with the pre-release engagement of Paramount's "If I Were King," in six Mullen and Pinanski circuit theatres. In New Haven, Mr. Rathbone will present a working script of the film to the head of the English department at Yale, and also address the dramatic class under Professor Nichols.

SEC Reports Marked Activity In Film Trading

Officers and directors of film corporations traded more actively in the securities of their companies in August than over a considerable period, it was disclosed this week by the Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington.

The largest transaction reported in many months, more than 30,000 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox common, changed hands in a series of trades reported for three "top" men in the company.

The summary showed a series of transactions extending throughout the month whereby Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, disposed of 10,400 shares of common, while William Goetz, Los Angeles, and Darryl Zanuck, Beverly Hills, in single trades, each disposed of 10,000 shares. At the close of the period, Mr. Schenck still held 119,443 shares of the company's common, Mr. Goetz 194,643 shares and Mr. Zanuck 142,130 shares.

Another large transaction reported was a series of buys whereby Daniel M. Sheaffer, Philadelphia, Universal Corporation director, acquired 1,200 common voting trust certificates, bringing his interest to 14,800 shares, in addition to 26,500 held through Standard Capital Company.

Other film trades included those of Kirk W. Todd, Pittsburgh, Grand National Films director, disposing of 150 shares of common stock, his entire holdings; John D. Hertz, New York, Paramount director, disposing of all of the 1,000 shares of second preferred stock he held through Lehman Brothers; Sam Katz, Culver City, bought two shares of Loew's, Inc., common stock, bringing to 752 his holdings of that class in the company of which he is an officer.

Loew's, Inc., continued its policy of acquiring the common stock of Loew's Boston Theatres, getting 36 shares during the month to bring its total holdings to 99,670 shares.

New Patent Suit

Nakken Patents Corporation filed suit in the U. S. District Court Tuesday against Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc., a subsidiary, for an alleged infringement of a patent obtained in 1920 by Theodor H. Nakken for improvements in "means for transforming light impulses into electric current impulses." The complaint charges that the defendants infringed by manufacturing and selling photo cell amplifier equipment. An injunction, damages and an accounting of profits are sought.

In connection with the Loew minority stockholders' suit seeking to abrogate executive "profit sharing" contracts, the examination of Nicholas M. Schenck, president; David Bernstein, vice-president and treasurer, and Jesse P. Mills, comptroller, has been postponed to the week of October 24th, at which time the officials will be asked to submit the company's books of accounts. J. Robert Rubin, vice-president and general counsel, was examined Tuesday and Wednesday by Emil K. Ellis, attorney for the plaintiffs.

GRAND NATIONAL STARTS RELEASING 70 OCTOBER 14; SETS SALES STAFF

One Feature Weekly Will Be Released, Besides Westerns and Educational's Short Subjects; Sales Meeting Held

The "new" Grand National, into which E. W. Hammons placed his Educational Pictures, and Edward L. Alperson, as trustee, brought the "old" Grand National, now is definitely set to go.

Actual releasing will commence on October 14th, and continue at the rate of a feature picture every week, exclusive of westerns and short subjects.

In the few days remaining before the initial release, Grand National's newly constituted executive and sales forces will go to exhibitors in the field with the portfolio of the new project's first full lineup, as described late Saturday. It is now definitely set to include 44 features, two "specials," 24 westerns, divided into four groups of six each, and 44 shorts, 18 in two reels, the others in one, all comedies, and all coming from Educational. This commits the company to 70 features alone.

First Sales Meeting

The company formally went into operation with its first sales meeting, held at the Stevens hotel in Chicago last weekend. District and branch managers of the west and middle west attended. Sales representatives from the east and south are attending a second meeting in New York this week at the St. Moritz, presided over by Mr. Hammons, as president; Mr. Alperson, as general manager of distribution, and J. H. Skirball, in charge of production.

Mr. Alperson presided over the Chicago session personally making the first official announcement of the company's product, and also announcing sales and executive appointments. Sam Berkowitz attended from Hollywood as representative of Franklyn Warner's Fine Arts, which will make 26 features for the new company. Also on hand was Gordon White, advertising and publicity director.

The reading of the new appointments, which include six district sales managers, was followed by a statement that the sales organization would be more than doubled. The new district sales managers include: Morris Safer, formerly assistant to Mr. Alperson in Los Angeles, to head the west coast, embracing Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Portland, Salt Lake City, Denver and Butte; James Winn, former San Francisco manager, to head the middle west, including Chicago, Minneapolis, Omaha, St. Louis, Kansas City, Des Moines and Milwaukee; Ralph Kinsler, former Cincinnati manager, to the middle eastern district, including Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit and Indianapolis; Jules Lapidus, former Pittsburgh manager, to the middle Atlantic, embracing Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Washington; Jack Lamont, former Atlanta manager, to the south, including Atlanta, Dallas, New Orleans, Charlotte, Memphis and Oklahoma City, and Harry Asher, former Boston manager, to the east, including Boston, Buffalo, New Haven and Albany.

Williams Is Treasurer

Sol Edwards, formerly New York branch manager, has been appointed circuit sales manager, and Peter Rosian has been moved from Cleveland to manage the New York branch.

T. R. Williams, Educational treasurer, has

INSURANCE FORMS NOW SIMPLIFIED

The Treasury Department has abolished, effective immediately, form SS-3 entitled "Employer's Information Return." Employers, including those in the motion picture business, have been required to file this form when employees reached age 65 or died before reaching that age.

According to the Treasury decision, form SS-3 should not be filed by employers "for any employee who dies after September 30, 1938, or whose 65th anniversary of birth occurs on or after October 2, 1938."

been designated treasurer of Grand National Pictures, completing the new corporate family, which, besides Mr. Hammons, as president, and Mr. Skirball, as vice-president, includes George Blake, secretary, and Harold Saxe, assistant treasurer. Edward L. Alperson is general sales manager, but is not an officer of the company.

Educational and Grand National headquarters will be established in the new Associated Press Building now nearing completion in Rockefeller Center, New York. A long term lease for office space will be signed Monday and the premises will be occupied when the building is opened about November 1st.

Moving quickly to set worldwide distribution, principally in English-speaking countries, Mr. Hammons sails for London next week to arrange British distribution to supplant the two-year arrangement with Associated Film and Grand National, which expired August 31st. Associated may be continued as United Kingdom selling agent. Also, Jack C. Barnstyn, "old" Grand National's foreign sales manager, may continue in that post.

Three Features Screened

Three of the completed features were screened at both conventions. These included: "Shadows Over Shanghai" and "Frontier Scout," both Fine Arts Productions, and "Sunset Strip Case," starring Sally Rand.

The program will include the works of several wellknown authors, among them Robert Hitchens, author of "Garden of Allah," whose story "Snake Bite" will be made; Gouverneur Morris, with "Alimony Racket;" Vina Delmar's "Uptown New York;" Ursula Parrott's "Two Kinds of Love;" Eugene O'Neill's "Recklessness;" Edna Ferber's "Summer Resort," from "Not a Day Over 21;" Rex Beach's "The Racket King," from "Quicksand;" Tiffany Thayer's "Where Lonely Ladies Walk;" Sada Cowan's "What Price Paradise," from "Fool's Paradise;" Faith Baldwin's "The Way of All Women;" Martha Stanley's "My Son," from the stage play of the same title by Alla Nazimova.

Anna Sten will be starred in two productions, the first of which, "Exile Express," is now in production.

Others Completed

Other pictures already completed include "Cipher Bureau," a spy story with Leon Ames and Joan Woodbury, and "Titans of the Deep," a story of under-sea exploration made on the Dr. William Beebe-Otis Barton expeditions.

Now in production are "Seven Seas," "Never Mind the Guard," "Empire of the West," a story of Billy the Kid, featuring George Houston, and "Wonder World," a story of prehistoric animals being made with the aid of the American Museum of Natural History.

"Snow Covered Wagons" will tell the story of the Donner party expeditions, based on the book by Julia Cooley Altrocci; "Oh, Susannah" is based on Bernard McConville's musical, "Slave Trade," and will be an action film, and "Jitterbug" will have a cast of swing favorites.

Of the westerns six will be "Girl Musicals," starring Dorothy Page, of the radio. Others will be based on "Trigger Pal" and "Troubadour of the Plains" stories.

Educational Comedies

Educational's two-reel comedies will continue to feature stars, including among early releases Willie Howard, Buster West and Tom Patricola and the Pat Rooney, Jr.-Herman Timberg, Jr., team. Thirteen of the one-reelers will constitute a new series of the "Treasure Chest." The second group of 13 one-reelers will be the "Personality Parade" featuring stars from the stage, radio and screen in a group of comedy-musicals.

The new company will also continue to sell some 58 features on various schedules of the "old" Grand National. ## 90% of ASCAP Members Sign New Contract Plan

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has received acceptances on its new contract plan from over 900 of its 1,000 author members and 125 publisher members. The new contract automatically extends the present agreement, authorizing ASCAP to act as agent in licensing the authors' works for public performance, until December 31st, 1950. The present contracts were due to expire on December 31st, 1940. To date there has not been a single rejection, according to ASCAP.

Save in the case of broadcasters, ASCAP's contracts with its public performing licensees go on from year to year, subject to written notice from either party terminating the agreement, as no change is expected.

The Law West of Tombstone

(RKO Radio)
Adventure

Motivation for "The Law West of Tombstone" is an original screenplay based on various western legends. John Twist and Clarence Young wrote it. The Cliff Reid production is being directed by Glenn Tryon, who made "Gridiron Flash" and "Two in Revolt" for RKO-Radio. Twist's earlier story credits include "Flight from Glory," "Sea Devils" and "Outcasts of Poker Flat." Young collaborated on "Mother Carey's Chickens."

The time is the 1880's. Locales are New York, El Paso and an Arizona frontier town. Thematically the story is a character study of a blustering, flea-bitten, quick shooting Westerner of the old school. Underneath his fire-eating exterior, however, he is well meaning and kindly. Around this figure is woven a story of romance and revenge, and that of a young desperado swung around to a more sensible life through the influences of the old two-gun man and a young girl. Action support concentrates on a long continued feud that culminates in a roaring gun battle exterminating an outlaw gang.

With but few exceptions "The Law West of Tombstone" will present a group of players seen in many RKO-Radio films. It will feature Harry Carey in what the trade calls a "fat role." Romance will be handled by Jean Rouveral and Tim Holt. Among the character actors are Clarence Kolb, Evelyn Brent, Allan Lane, Bradley Page, Paul Guilfoyle, Spencer Charters, Esther Muir, Monty Montague and George Irving.

Release date: November 5, 1938.

The Storm

(Universal)
Exciting Melodrama

Naturally there will be a place, and an important one, for a love story, but in consideration of the film's sensational production features, it undoubtedly will be forced to take rank second to other things that will be happening on the screen.

Three spectacular episodes will be welded into the story. One is the crash of an ocean liner into a iceberg during a storm at sea and the subsequent loss of the ship. The second is a fire and explosion aboard a gasoline tanker, and the third is the performance of an operation aboard a storm tossed vessel as million on land listen in on the directions broadcast by a doctor aboard another liner.

The story being used is an original screenplay on which Daniel Moore, Hugh King and Theodore Reeves collaborated. The film is being directed by Harold Young, who made "Little Tough Guy," "Let Them Live" and "The Scarlet Pimpernel." "The Storm" is being produced by Ken Goldsmith, who functioned similarly in the cases of "Little Tough Guy" and "Sinners in Paradise."

An exceptionally strong cast, the individual members of which have proved their ability in earlier pictures, will be seen. Practically every one of those listed is a feature player in the story. The three about whom the action melodrama rotates are Charles Bickford, Preston Foster and Barton MacLane. Tom Brown and Nan Grey share the romantic and some of the melodramatic story phases. Important roles will be handled by Andy Devine, Frank Jenks, Samuel S. Hinds and Joseph Sawyer.

Release date: October 28, 1938.

Going Places

(Warner Brothers)
Comedy and Music

When the hero of this forthcoming picture finds that his own faking, boasting, bragging and love making have got him into a situation that requires that he ride a vicious horse in a steeplechase, his hopes and ambitions crash about him. Then he learns that the wild steed likes music, and that when the strains of a swing tune called "Jeepers Creepers" ring in the beast's ears it is as docile as docile can be. So in the big race which is going to settle lots of things, of romantic and business nature, he arranges with a trumpeter to play the tune along the route of the race. When the road and route part, he sings the song until he is breathless and the horse, reverting to type, is a hellion on hoofs. But the band catches up with him again, plays the tune, the girl is won and so is new business success.

The production is an adaptation of a play by William Collier, Sr., and Victor Mapes, and in which Collier appeared many times. The modernized screen play was devised by Maurice Leo, Jerry Wald and Sig Herzig. The musical numbers were composed by Harry Warren and Johnny Mercer.

Dick Powell will be seen in the role of the man afraid of the horse. The girl will be Anita Louise. Larry Williams will be the hero's romantic rival. The gangster element will be represented by Allen Jenkins and Harold Huber. Others who will have a hand include Minna Gombell, Walter Catlett, Thurston Hall, Ronald Reagan, Louis Armstrong and his cornet, Rosella Towne and Janet Shaw.

Ray Enright, maker of "Head Over Heels," "Goldiggers in Paris" and "Swing Your Lady," is directing.

Release date: To be determined.

Unfit to Print

(Warner Brothers)
Character Regeneration

Despite the title, also the fact that several of the leading players will be seen as newspaper folk while others are criminals, "Unfit to Print" will not be, exactly, a newspaper story. The general theme concerns how a boy's regeneration was affected and how, through this happening, a sob sister writer and an ace reporter found romance.

Pat O'Brien and Joan Blondell, previously together in the newspaper picture "Back in Circulation," will be featured with Bobby Jordan, one of the "Dead End-Crime School" group. The other important principals are Alan Baxter in a gangster character role, Joe Cunningham, an editor, Douglas Dumbrille, now in "The Mysterious Rider," as the brains of a gambling clique, Armand Kaliz, a jewelry merchant, and Ed Deering, a detective.

Sympathetic to youngsters in trouble, Miss Blondell agrees to marry O'Brien on one condition. O'Brien doesn't understand the condition until after the wedding. It is that they shall provide a home for Jordan so he can be paroled from a reformatory. At first he considers the boy only an unreformable little tough mug, but softening, eventually, he gets him a job as a news photographer. Things go nicely until the boy becomes involved with his brother, who has broken jail. O'Brien is ready to give him up to the police, sure that he has robbed Kaliz to turn money over to Baxter, until he finds that the boy only has pawned his camera. Aware that the boy has reformed, he is satisfied to obey his wife's judgment in the future.

Saul Elkins and Sally Sandlin did the original story which Earl Baldwin, Niven Busch, Lawrence Kimble and Robert Buckner adapted. James Flood, maker of "The Mouthpiece" several years ago, is the director.

Release date: To be determined.

English and American Spoken in Films To Be Analyzed

The difference between the English and the American languages and their comparative influence on film speech will be analyzed in the course on the History, Technique and Aesthetic of the Motion Picture conducted by the New York Museum of Modern Art Film Library, which opened October 4th.

Walter Wanger, David Selznick, King Vidor, Frank Lloyd, James Cagney and Talbot Jennings are among those who have indicated their willingness to talk at the class meetings.

Chodorov Contract Renewed

Edward Chodorov has been signed to a new long-term producer-writer contract by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He recently produced "Rich Man, Poor Girl" and "Woman Against Woman." Another contract announced by MGM is one with Jane Hall, writer.

Warners Screen Short

Thursday, at the Warner Brothers home office, there was a lunch and screening of the color short, "The Declaration of Independence." The short is one in the same series as were the Academy award winner, "Give Me Liberty," and "The Man Without a Country," which won the Exhibitor Award.

Milton H. Bren, executive producer at the Hal Roach studio, this week signed A. Edward Sutherland as associate producer for a straight four year term. Mr. Sutherland's first assignment will be on "It's Spring Again."

Howard J. Green, producer for six months in the Sol Wurtzel unit at Twentieth Century-Fox, has left the lot following his completion of three pictures.

TABLET UNVEILED IN FILM CAMPAIGN; FASHION SHOW, MUSIC WEEK PLANNED

Daughter of Edison at Macy Ceremonies on Site of Koster & Bial's; Exhibitor Contest Committee Named

The unveiling of a tablet marking the site of the first showing of motion pictures to a paying audience, preparation of an all-industry fashion show, decision to inaugurate a Musical Week, and the launching of a second series of newspaper advertisements combined to present a new phase this week in the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign.

Appointment of the committee to establish rules and receive campaigns in the $2,100 contest for theatre managers, publicity and advertising for the best local campaigns in the drive was made by Howard Dietz, chairman of the executive promotion committee.

On the committee, called the Contest Bureau, are Monroe Greenthal, of United Artists; William Ferguson, MGM; Alec Moss, Paramount; Lou Lifton, Monogram; Maurice Bergman, Columbia; Arch Reeves, Twentieth Century-Fox; Mitch Rawson, Warner Brothers; Lou Pollock, Universal. Paul Gulick, coordinator of the general campaign, will be ex-officio member.

Mrs. John E. Sloan, daughter of the late Thomas A. Edison, drew the cords of an American flag and a Greatest Year banner, unveiling the bronze tablet, on Tuesday, on the site of the old Koster & Bial's Music Hall at the 34th street side of the R. H. Macy & Co. building in downtown New York. Mrs. J. Leon Lascoff, first cousin of the late Albert Bial, attended the ceremonies, which opened at 9:30 a.m. Mrs. Lascoff recalled that she was present the night of April 23, 1896, when the motion picture—it was "The Buffalo Express," short subject showing a railway train speeding directly towards the audience—was introduced on the variety program. Albert Wolheim, nephew of Mr. Bial, also was at the ceremonies.

Will Hays and Jack Straus, vice-president of Macy's, spoke on the significance of the event in the industry's campaign. Paul Hollister, Macy vice-president, was master of ceremonies.

On the Dais

On the dais erected for the occasion also were Percy Waters, president of the old Motion Picture Patents Company and the Kinetograph Company, and projectionist at the showing; Frank J. Marion, president of the old Kalem Company; C. M. Withington, secretary of the Edison Pioneers; Carl E. Milliken and Kenneth Clark of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; Howard Dietz; Hal Roach, representing the producers; Nino Martini, Walter Slezak, Ben Serkovich and Paul Gulick.

The plaque reads:

"Here the Motion Picture began. On the night of April 23, 1896, on this site in Koster & Bial's Music Hall, Thomas A. Edison with the 'Vitascope' first projected a moving picture. In commemoration of the event, this tablet is here affixed by the motion picture industry. October 4, 1938."

ANSWERS, EXTRA PRIZES IN "QUIZ"

"Modern Screen" is publishing short synopses of the "Quiz" pictures in which, the publication says, are the answers to the contest questions. They are also printing "sample letters" as a help in writing the 50-word statement required in the contest.

This was advertised last week as "another scoop for Modern Screen", in the New York Daily News.

The Chicago Herald and Examiner is running an extra prize series, with awards totaling $2,500 for those of its readers who may be among the winners in the industry's campaign contest.

Mrs. Sloan, dedicating the Macy tablet, said: "My father had a high ideal for motion pictures. He felt that people might be educated through their eyes, that those who stay at home might travel to far places, and gain in human understanding; that through his work romance and laughter and the lessons which the theatre can teach might be brought within the reach of everyone. May the next fifty years see the motion picture steadily advance toward the ideal he had of it."

Consummate Art

Mr. Hays said in part:

"We are witnessing the development of a consummate art which serves with highest quality just as certainly as it lines the blank walls of the simplest imaginations with world-wide tapestries and fills the drab hours of loneliness with satisfying entertainment, hilarious amusement, and food for sober thought.

"This is rather confusing to those critics who refuse to find true art elements in this newest and greatest of all arts because of the very fact that it is universal in its appeal and truly democratic in its service. There are still those few who speak loftily of 'the lowest common denominator' as a contemptuous reference to movie audience intelligence. Such criticism is a libel of the public, a slander on democracy. Those who thus indulge themselves indict not the movie but the public, forgetting that in this country alone the average weekly attendance is 85,000,000. I hold no such despised opinion of the American people, whose servant the industry is."

Exhibitors' Contest Bureau

Members of the newly appointed Contest Bureau for theatre campaigns in the "Greatest Year" drive held a preliminary meeting Monday on amplification of the rules under which prizes will be awarded theatremen in three classifications: (1) cities of more than 100,000 population; (2) cities of 15,000 to 100,000 inhabitants; (3) those of less than 15,000. First prize is $500, second $100, third $50, fourth $25, and fifth $25.

Judges in the Exhibitors' Contest will be Will H. Hays, Martin Quigley, of Quigley Publications; Jack Alicoate, of Film Daily; Maurice Kann, of Box Office; Charles E. Lewis, of Showman's Trade Review; Jay Emanuel, of Jay Emanuel Publications; Epes

Sargent, of Variety, and A. Mike Vogel, of Motion Picture Herald.

Suggestions to theatre managers in a bulletin issued by Harold B. Franklin, business manager of the drive, included appeals to decorate the lobby, carry lines referring to the drive and the "Quiz" contest in all advertising and on lobby cards, one-sheet lobby frame use of state or municipal proclamations on the campaign, lobby posters of letters from civic groups and leaders, banners across streets, the supplying of material for newspaper stories and editorials, and distribution of "Quiz" booklets in the community.

Mr. Franklin suggested that the trailers be changed frequently, using only one at a time.

Public Relations

Civic officials are more accessible than ever to exhibitors because of the campaign, the committee said this week. Ordinances barring street decorations have been waived, notably in New York and Atlanta. Merchants of Prospect Avenue (Bronx) donated $10 apiece for street decorations. The Cleveland Public Library is putting on a special exhibit of books from which 1938-39 pictures are being produced.

Exhibitors have compiled mailing lists from names of those receiving the "Quiz" booklets, and some have gone personally to the homes with the campaign appeal.

Fashion Show Deadline

October 10th was set at a conference of New York fashion editors of motion picture companies as the deadline for receiving sketches and designs from Hollywood stylists for the all-fashion show. Planned was a preview with Junior League members as mannequins. When the sketches all have been received, the committee will call another meeting to which will be invited representatives of the Conde Nast publications, Harper's Bazaar, and noted designers.

The show, to be known as "The Motion Picture Industry's First Annual Fashion Salon," will be repeated in hundreds of cities through tieups with manufacturers and stores. R. H. Macy & Co. will feature the show in New York.

Sidney C. Davidson is arranging the tieups through Modern Merchandising. Besides Mr. Davidson at the meeting were Kenneth Hallam of RKO; Wilma Freeman and Eileen Filiak of Warner Bros.; Aileen Brenon, Paramount; Hortense Schoor, Columbia; Pat Reese, MGM; Jeanette Sauer, Twentieth Century-Fox; Ruth Schwerin and Miriam Gibson, Monogram; Tess Michaels and Dee Lawrence, United Artists.

All the studios have agreed to supply designs for the show. The plan is for the licensing of one manufacturer in each branch of the fashion trades.

Musical Week Starts Oct. 31

The Musical Week observance, which starts October 31st, will feature old and new song hits on dance band programs on the radio, in hotels, night clubs and theatres. Among the numbers being compiled from motion pictures are "Mickey," "The Sheik of Araby," "Charmaine," "Sonny Boy," "Singing in the Rain" and "Forty-Second Street," the series to be known as "A Cavalcade of Motion Picture Music."

Named to the committee are celebrities in all parts of the music world, including Irving Berlin, Ben Bernie, Gene Buck, Henry Busse, Ted Lewis, Abe Lyman, George Olsen, Will Osborne, Irving Caesar, George M. Cohan, Duke Ellington, Ferde Grofe, Horace Heidt, Richard Himber, Andre Kostelanetz, Gene Krupa, Leo Reisman, Sigmund Romberg, Gustave Schirmer, Phil Spitalny, Deems Taylor, Rudy Vallee,

ASCAP Cooperates

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers is issuing, in cooperation with the event, a pictorial layout in matrix form, to be sent to 3,000 newspapers, featuring pictures of composers of old theme songs and illustrating hits developed by motion pictures.

A special theme song will be made up into a trailer, using the Max Fleischer "bouncing ball" device, for theatre use.

Music dealers are being invited to cooperate with the drive.

Liberty magazine, starting October 29th, will include in all its reviews of "Quiz" pictures a reference to the contest.

A new day-combination for use with previews of "Quiz" pictures, devised by National Screen Service, combines at the same time, and in the same frame, the day or days the picture is to be shown, a replica of the "Quiz" seal, and the campaign slogan, "Motion pictures are your best entertainment."

Field Activities Widened

In the field, exhibitors widened the scope of their campaigns and new devices to attract public attention to the drive, and to their theatres.

At Battle Creek, Mich., Richard Watson of the Regent theatre had $50,000 in cash brought to the theatre by armored car from Detroit, for display in the "Quiz" contest, with the cooperation of businessmen. The Battle Creek Inquirer News and the Moon Journal are cooperating with editorials and news stories.

John H. Harris of the Harris Amusement Company, Pittsburgh, will speak over station WOR of the Mutual system on October 17th, on "First Facts in the Movies."

Governor Charles H. Martin of Oregon in a statement last week urged the people of the state to participate in the campaign.

The Oregonian and the Journal are both cooperating with articles and illustrations.

In New Orleans, exchange managers voted to cooperate with the local committee, and all salesmen were urged to seek the support of the independent exhibitors in smaller communities.

KGW, the National Broadcasting Company outlet in Portland, has had regular spot announcement tied in with the theatre pages.

Detroit "Times" Contest

The Detroit Times is to run a contest offering $250 in prizes for the best answers to the question: "What I will do with the $50,000 Movie Quiz prize should I win it."

The Chicago Herald and Examiner has a thirty-day contest based on the campaign, each day carrying a picture strip of stars. Four full-page promotional ads are being used by the Evening American and an "Inquiring Reporter" column. The Chicago Times plans to distribute rubber checks for $50,000 among passersby.

Merchants in New York's East Side printed and distributed a four-page bulletin on the contest.

Vic Gauntlett, advertising and publicity director of Hamrick-Evergreen theatres, will preside over a radio program from station KOL each Saturday, answering questions on the "Quiz."

Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner theatres, addressing the Philadelphia Real Estate Board last Saturday, urged civic organ-

MAY EXTEND THE DRIVE

The "Greatest Year" drive may be extended, possibly for another four to eight weeks beyond the present closing date of December 31st, according to members of the campaign committee. Formal discussion of the idea is expected at a meeting of the committee next Thursday.

The basic reason for the extension is reputedly attributable to a desire to permit the subsequent-run theatres to play more of the "Quiz" pictures.

izations to form a "Promote Philadelphia Committee."

Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann of St. Louis proclaimed the week starting this Friday as Motion Picture Week. More than 150,000 of the "Quiz" booklets have been distributed in the city.

Exhibitors at Cleveland, led by M. B. Horwitz, decided to launch a $100 local contest with newspaper cooperation.

"Go to the Movie Week" in Washington, D. C., continued through Thursday of this week, with extensive newspaper advertising by the theatres.

In Canada the campaign was moving forward rapidly, with a parade at Toronto now set for October 27th, and nine exchanges, four circuits, independent theatres and laboratories and IATSE projectionists to have decorated floats, 16 thus far promised.

At Ottawa it was announced that $30,000 had been collected for the campaign from theatres representing 315,000 seats or 60 per cent of all seats, and with 164,000 seats in Famous Players Canadian represented.

Await Election Of Silverstone As UA President

With the deferred election of Maurice Silverstone to the presidency of United Artists expected Friday, news from other U. A. partners and executives came this week from London, Hollywood, New York and Philadelphia, concerning for the most part, indications of new activity in the line of product to be delivered.

Expected at the meeting are Emanuel Silverstone, representing Alexander Korda; Dennis O'Brien, for Mary Pickford; James Mulvey, for Samuel Goldwyn; Charles Schwartz, for Charles Chaplin; Douglas Fairbanks, or his attorney, Edward C. Raftery and Mr. Silverstone.

Mr. Silverstone's election was originally scheduled at the September board meeting, at which time he received control over all administrative affairs.

In Philadelphia, last Thursday, George J. Schaefer, U. A. general manager, answered exhibitors' protests against the company's sales policies. He agreed to negotiations for adjustments, in the "round-table" talk held with members of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of that territory.

From Hollywood came word that David Selznick, distributing through United, has seven features either in production or preparation, although it is not certain that U. A. will release all of them. Announcement last week of Mr. Selznick's signing a new contract with John Hay Whitney as president of Selznick International was followed by the producer's disclosure of advances made on 1938-39 product, as ready, "The Young in Heart" and "Made for Each Other."

United's British partner, Alexander Korda, returned to London from New York and Hollywood, with indications that he would return in November.

From London to New York came partner Douglas Fairbanks, Sr., who said he intends proceeding with a previously announced plan of producing at least one feature in Hollywood for the company, starting this winter. The life of Lola Montez will be the basis of the story, for probable release this season.

Broadway heard reports that Mr. Fairbanks may also produce multi-lingual features in several countries in Europe.

U. A. production associate Hal Roach this week turned over his first print, entitled "There Goes My Heart," and the occasion caused Mr. Silverstone to give Mr. Roach a luncheon atop the RCA Building, Rockefeller Center on Monday. It is not likely that Mr. Roach will make any four-reel films under his new U. A. feature contract. Last year, while a short subject producer at Metro, he expressed the belief that four-reelers might be a solution to the double bill.

Present at the Silverstone-Roach luncheon were: Dr. A. H. Giannini, motion picture banker and former U. A. president; Merlin Hall Aylesworth, former head of NBC and of RKO and now with Scripps-Howard newspapers; Terry Ramsaye, editor, Motion Picture Herald; Colvin Brown, Quigley Publishing Company; Paul Moss, New York License Commissioner; George Schaefer, general manager of United; Arthur W. Kelly, in charge of U. A.'s foreign sales; Harry D. Buckley, Harry Gold, Lynn Farnol and Monroe Greenthal, of United Artists; W. G. Van Schmus, Music Hall managing director; J. M. Jerauld, Motion Picture Daily, and Jack Alicote, Allen Stearn, Joe Vogel, Jack Harrower, E. J. Churchill, Maurice Kann, Henry Linet, John Nolan, Jack Smith, William Mapes, Frank Seltzer, Paul Lazarus, John J. O'Connor, Ben Shylen, Fred Myers, Max Solomon, Sam Shane, Chester Bahn, Roy Chartier, Tom Walker and Eddies Moran.

Paramount Plans Campaign For "Men with Wings"

Paramount is planning an aggressive advertising, publicity and exploitation campaign to mark the opening of "Men with Wings" on October 28th in 21 key city day and date engagements. The campaign will be backed by a $100,000 advertising appropriation with pages both in black and in color set for key city newspapers, "fan" and class magazines.

"Big" Pictures

Between now and New Year Day, not counting Sundays and holidays, Hollywood is going to spend money at the rate of $325,000 a day on big feature production. More millions will be allotted less important pictures. The combined budget for approximately forty expensively planned films totals more than $25,000,000.

Three companies — MGM, Twentieth Century-Fox and Warner Brothers — will toss more than $15,000,000 into the pot, with MGM contributing the lion's share.

MGM has scheduled six pictures, the average cost of each of which will exceed $1,000,000. On the list is "Honolulu," music and dancing, with Eleanor Powell starred and Burns and Allen in feature roles along with many of the studio's stars. "Stand Up and Fight," an action romance melodrama with Robert Taylor, Wallace Beery and Florence Rice, is ready for immediate work. Although the featured cast has not been completed, preliminary work has been started on the ice skating background shots for "Ice Follies." About the first of November Mervyn LeRoy's "The Wizard of Oz" will be before the cameras. Such names as Frank Morgan, Judy Garland, Ray Bolger and Buddy Ebsen will be offered in the cast. "Idiot's Delight," the Robert Sherwood story which has long been a matter of controversy and negotiation, also is definitely slated for production before the end of this year. Norma Shearer and Clark Gable will be featured. Spencer Tracy's next appearance will be in "New York Cinderella," a romantic story in which Hedy Lamarr will assume the leading feminine role. Winfield Sheehan will return to activity under the MGM banner with "Florian."

At Twentieth Century-Fox, Darryl F. Zanuck is concentrating on six big pictures. The Ritz Brothers, Gloria Stuart, Don Ameche, Binnie Barnes and Armanda Duff have been assigned to "The Three Musketeers," a comedy travesty. "Jesse James" has come back to the studio after completing locale shooting. "The Little Princess," which will be made in color, has been allotted the biggest budget of any Shirley Temple picture. Jack Haley, Adolphe Menjou and Arleen Whalen have been set in "Thanks for Everything," a musical. No cast has been chosen for "He Married His Wife," a love story, or "Stanley and Livingstone."

The Warner big picture schedule is one short of those of MGM and Twentieth Century-Fox, but the combined cost of the five pictures will be more than that allotted to any group which ever was working at one time. "Dark Victory," a melodramatic romance with powerful human interest content, will star Bette Davis and George Brent. Many of the studio's ace players, including Olivia de Havilland, will be seen in "Dodge City," a story of the tough frontier west. James Cagney will work in "Oklahoma Kid," which deals with the historic Cherokee land rush. Paul Muni and Bette Davis have been assigned to "Jaurez," a picturization of the careers of the Emperor and Empress of Mexico, Maximilian and Carlotta. Although it will definitely start this year, no assignments have been made to the Sigmund Romberg operetta, "The Desert Song."

"COLONEL" JENKINS COMES TO TOWN

"Colonel" J. C. Jenkins, the HERALD's Vagabond Correspondent and the Sage of Neligh, Neb., whose "Colyum" has been a feature of the HERALD for nigh onto fifteen years come plantin' time, arrived in Hollywood last weekend on a personal inspection tour of indefinite duration and, 'though he won't admit it, to skip that unusual weather they have back thar around the home place most years.

Both Paramount and RKO-Radio have sizeable quotas of high cost productions. Cecil B. DeMille's "Union Pacific" is awaiting the starting gun. Jack Benny has been reserved for "Man About Town," a topical comedy. "Midnight," an unusual love story, has been chosen for Claudette Colbert. The long deferred debut of Italian Isa Miranda will be in "Hotel Imperial," title of a picture that was started once but subsequently halted. "Cafe Society" will feature Fred MacMurray.

RKO-Radio is completing "Gunga Din," the most expensive undertaking the company has attempted since "Cimarron." It has three more big ones ready for work. Leo McCarey's first producing-directing job will be "Love Match," in which Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer will be seen. Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers will be starred in "The Castles."

It will take a lot of money to manufacture the four pictures Universal has tabbed for quick production. "Three Smart Girls Grow Up" is scheduled for Deanna Durbin, Nan Grey and Helen Parrish. "Rio" has been assigned as a Danielle Darrieux feature. "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man" will team W. C. Field, Charley McCarthy and Edgar Bergen. Bing Crosby will be engaged in making "Three's Company."

And "Gone with the Wind"

Although Clark Gable and Walter Connolly are the only certain cast assignments, it's a good wager that David O. Selznick will have "Gone with the Wind" in the work about the time Santa Claus arrives. Meanwhile other United Artists producers will be busy. Samuel Goldwyn will start two pictures. Merle Oberon will be featured in the adaptation of Emily Bronte's classical novel, "Wuthering Heights." "The Last Frontier," a tale of how Uncle Sam brought civilization to the Philippine Islands following the Spanish War will have Gary Cooper and Andrea Leeds.

The writing-directing team, Dudley Nichols and John Ford, is busy getting ready for "The Stage Coach," which Walter Wanger will produce. It will concern romantic and melodramatic events while traveling across New Mexico in the days of Chief Geronimo's Indian Uprising in the 1880's. Wanger also has "The Illusionist," a Sascha Guitry story.

Hal Roach will continue his big production program with two expensive films. A story concerning the settlement of Australia, "Captain Midnight," will provide work for Brian Aherne and a new star, Francine Bordeaux. Although a comedy, with Oliver Hardy, Harry Langdon, Alice Brady and Billie Burke heading the cast, "It's Spring Again" already bears a price tag of more than $500,000.

Columbia will spend plenty on four productions. No cast has been set for the picturization of the stage play "Golden Boy," nor has a title been chosen for Frank Capra's next production. "Our Wife" will feature Jean Arthur and Cary Grant. William Perlberg, who will make "Golden Boy," will also have "Good Girls Go to Paris."

Forerunners

Hollywood started eight productions the last week in September. Practically all are of more than ordinary importance and they are the forerunners of the big picture making spurt to come this month. Meanwhile five pictures were removed from the active shooting lists.

Two films were started at 20th Century-Fox. More important, undoubtedly, to both patrons and exhibitors is "The Little Princess," which will feature Shirley Temple.

"Tailspin" will feature Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Nancy Kelly, Joan Davis and Charles Farrell.

Universal also started two pictures. Edmund Lowe, Helen Mack and Dick Foran will be the principals in "Westside Miracle." "Little Tough Guys in Society" will present Mary Boland, Edward E. Horton, Helen Parrish, Mischa Auer, Frankie Thomas, Hally Chester, Harris Berger, Charles Duncan, David Gorcey, Lester Jay and Jackie Searl.

Columbia began work on "There's That Woman Again." A follow-up of "There's Always a Woman," it again will feature Melyvn Douglas but with Virginia Bruce. "Spring Dance" was started at MGM. The most important players assigned are Lew Ayres and Maureen O'Sullivan.

Paramount will return Gladys Swarthout to the screen in "Ambush."

Upon completing "The Lady and the Cowboy," Samuel Goldwyn immediately started "The Restless Age," in which the violinist Jascha Heifetz will be featured and in which Joel McCrea, Andrea Leeds, Adolphe Menjou will be starred.

Two of the completed pictures are credited to 20th Century-Fox. "The Arizona Wildcat" is a Jane Withers feature in which she will be presented with Leo Carrillo, Pauline Moore, Douglas Fowley, Henry Wilcoxon, William Henry Etienne Girardot, Harry Woods and Rasita Harlan. Peter Lorre is the star of "Mr. Moto Takes a Vacation."

Robert Cummings, Helen Mack, Lyle Talbot, Gordon Jones, Thomas Jackson and Leona Roberts will be seen in Republic's "I Stand Accused."

"Gangster's Boy," Monogram, will present Jackie Cooper, Robert Warwick, Tommy Wonder, Lucy Gilman, Teddy Bryant, Louise Lorimer and Bobby Stone.

300 FILM PERSONALITIES LISTED AMONG 31,545 IN NEW WHO'S WHO

Motion Picture Industry Represented by One-One Hundredths of Names in 2,919 Pages of Biographies

Some 300 persons in or associated with the motion picture industry are listed in the 1938-'39 Who's Who in America. The biographies are of executives, engineers, inventors, producers, directors, stars, authors, song writers and others actively engaged, in west coast studios or in the home offices in New York. Included also are individuals who have contributed indirectly to motion pictures, chiefly authors whose works have been made into films.

With the motion picture industry variously estimated from the third to the eighth largest in the country, a check of this latest edition of Who's Who shows one-one hundredths of the names, or 300 out of 31,545, are of persons connected with films.

The greatest number of film names found in the volume are located in Hollywood and its environs, in the hub of the world's amusement center. New York is a poor second but still is far ahead of any other city than Hollywood.

The youngest of those entering the listing for the first time with the 1938-39 group is Frances Langford, 24, actress and singer. Others in this group are Fred Astaire, actor and dancer; Jack Benny, film comedian and radio entertainer; Roy Larsen, publisher of Life and former editor of March of Time; Margaret Mitchell, author of the illusive "Gone with the Wind"; Paul Muni, actor; Frank Capra, director; Clifford Odets, playwright, and Darryl F. Zanuck, head of Twentieth Century-Fox production.

Shirley Temple is still the youngest person in the entire volume of 2,919 pages.

RKO REORGANIZING PLAN SET AFTER 4 YEARS; $6,073,791 CASH ON HAND

Federal Judge Bondy Reserves Decision, with Acceptance Reported Virtually Assured; Odum Counsel Favors Plan

Moving for nearly four years, through the slow processes of intricate legal entanglements and the countless arguments of many different factions, the plan to reorganize Radio-Keith-Orpheum under Section 77B finally emerged Monday for approval by the United States courts.

Being duly notified that as finally constituted the plan had the agreement of all major creditor and stockholder interests, Federal Judge William Bondy, in New York, reserved decision, with acceptance reported virtually assured.

The request for confirmation of the plan was presented to the court by Colonel Hamilton C. Rickaby, attorney acting in behalf of Floyd Odum's Atlas Corporation, an investment trust, which, as principal holder in RKO, sponsored the reorganization.

Opponents Get 10 Days to File

Awaited is the decision by the principal creditors on the personnel of the reorganized company's management and directorate. Seven board members appear to be definitely slated for designation at this time. They are David Sarnoff and Lunsford P. Yandell for RCA; Nelson Rockefeller and W. G. Van Schmus for Rockefeller Center; Floyd Odum and Peter J. Rathvon for Atlas Corp., and either John Moroney, attorney, or Lawrence Green, investment broker, for unsecured creditors. Additional management men, when set, will be added to this list for a total of either nine or 11 members.

Arguments on the provisions, were continued by minorities right up to the plan's submission to Judge Bondy, who, nevertheless, indicated that he would not disturb the findings for recommendation of approval as made by George W. Alger, who has been conducting hearings on the reorganization as special master—unless, added the federal judge, evidence arises contrary to the master's findings that the plan is "fair, equitable and feasible."

The opponents of the plan were given 10 days to file briefs, and proponents will have five days thereafter to reply. A technical adjournment was taken until October 25, but this was done merely to permit the court to retain jurisdiction.

Mr. Rickaby, for Atlas, told the court that Atlas had received assents for adoption of the plan from more than 80 per cent of the holders of RKO bonds and debentures and from more than two-thirds of the stockholders.

One of the last arguments was started by H. William Ihrig, attorney for minority interests led by Ernest W. Stirn, of Milwaukee, holder of 1,234 shares of old Class A stock. He opposed the plan on the ground that conversion of these shares into common stock on Jan. 1, 1931, had been illegal. Judge Bondy reserved decision.

This week's final hearings began before Judge Bondy last Thursday, when Attorney Ihrig held that common stockholders never filed actual claims against RKO so that no proceeding under Section 77-B of the bankruptcy law as ever started, and that consequently no consents to reorganize had been given and that the present proceeding should be governed by the proceedings of the new Chandler act.

WARNERS, FOX LAUNCH NEW AD CAMPAIGNS

Twentieth Century-Fox plans the investment of about $2,000,000 for the world-wide exploitation of some 52 feature releases this year. This includes $750,000 to be spent on newspaper and fan magazine ads on the bigger percentage "specials" and $100,000 for a campaign on "Suez". A 15 per cent increase in sales is reported by the company.

Warner Brothers will start a national fan magazine advertising campaign for "Angels with Dirty Faces", with ads appearing in 14 magazines with a circulation of 18,000,000.

Arthur N. Gleason, associated as counsel for Mr. Stirn, said that in examining proxies of the December, 1931, stockholders' meeting, when Class A stock was converted into common, Mr. Stirn found that two-thirds of the stockholders had not assented, and that actual fraud on the part of the corporation had been committed.

Demands Adequate Proof

Judge Bondy said he would refuse to accept Mr. Gleason's statements with adequate proof.

Judge Bondy expressed the opinion that if Mr. Stirn knew of any defect with respect to the validity of the common stock and permitted thousands of investors to purchase and sell shares during more than seven years, he could not come into court at this late date and take advantage of that defect. To permit him to do so, the court said, would be to inflict untold damage to the value of the securities traded in since 1931.

Mr. Stirn's petition requested the indefinite postponement of the plan, an invitation to the Securities and Exchange Commission to inspect it, and the voiding of all consents now secured with provisions for obtaining new consents.

Mr. Ihrig contended that under the Chandler Act, the Atlas group has lost the right to propose a plan and that only the Irving Trust Company, as trustee, could formulate a plan. Mr. Ihrig disclaimed any desire to obstruct an early formulation of a new plan and suggested that the trustee could present the identical plan if it so desired.

Argue Word "Practicable"

Although it appeared to be generally conceded that the proceedings suggested by the Stirn petition are required under the Chandler Act, it was argued that reorganizations started before the passage of the act are not affected. Argument hinged on the word "practicable" found in the law. Proponents of the plan contended that speed was essential and said the S.E.C. could add nothing to the report of Special Master Alger.

Judge Bondy stated that he had the utmost confidence in the ability of the master and that he felt that the intervention of the S.E.C. would "inspire no greater confidence in the report." The court also disagreed with Mr. Ihrig's contention that Atlas had lost any right to propose a plan. Judge Bondy declared use of the word "practicable" gave him unlimited discretion in the application of the Chandler Act and that he was "disinclined" to have it affect the present proceedings.

Attacks Atlas Group

John S. Stover, another Stirn attorney, attacked the Atlas group, proponents of the plan, as "outsiders" and urged that the trustee be called upon to formulate a plan. He also charged that Merlin H. Aylesworth, former president of RKO, was now acting as consultant to Atlas although he is still a director of Irving Trust. He also pointed out that Leo Spitz, the present head of RKO, receives additional compensation from Atlas. Mr. Stover contended that both Atlas and Irving Trust had violated a fiduciary relationship.

He asked that the court reopen the hearings to take additional testimony on the "good faith" of the proponents, and urged that all profits earned by Atlas be turned over to the debtor corporation. He also raised the question of the constitutionality of the reorganized company incorporating under Delaware laws although it is now a Maryland corporation.

Says Participation Was Reduced

Joseph M. Cohen, attorney for the Independent Stockholders' Protective Committee, declared that RKO assets had been "written down" $58,000,000 to $41,000,000 in 1932 and that the revaluation had greatly reduced the stockholders' participation in the plan. He urged acceptance of the plan but asked that present common stock be exchanged at the rate of four for one instead of the proposed six for one. Mr. Cohen pointed to the $1 valuation placed on four subsidiaries which had paid $105,000 in dividends to the parent company in 1937 and had actually earned $173,000. Abraham K. Weber, who also represents common stockholders, asked that Atlas be compelled to present an underwriting agreement before the plan is confirmed.

Mr. Cohen charged that his committee of independent stockholders, despite a balance sheet equity of $7,000,000, had ascertained by investigation that the stockholders' equity is in excess of $13,000,000.

One Major Creditor Dissent

Nathan Rosenberg, attorney for H. Cassell and Company, holders of $175,000 of ten-year six per cent debentures, presented the only major creditor dissent with the plan. He pointed out that debenture holders could not be deprived of their security without adequate compensation. He asked that the debentures be given securities which would permit immediate liquidation at the full value of the bonds with interest.

The plan, he charged, "will give control of the new company to unsecured creditors having claims of $8,000,000 and is wholly unfair to creditors with claims of $18,000,000."

Judge Bondy indicated interest in this argument and made suggestions which would maintain the creditor status of the present debenture holders but Mr. Rickaby insisted at each stage that the best plan had been worked out and no further amendments could be made.

David Stock, also representing Cassell interests, charged that the proposed certificate of incorporation would not be passed by the SEC as it granted too many liberties to the board of directors. Counsel for Si Fabian, exhibitor, who is a contingent unsecured creditor, argued that the plan was unconstitutional because it failed to provide for compensation for certain guarantees.

Later, when newspaper writers inferred that the SEC had been injected into the hearings as a possible source of "advice" to the court in making the plan final, Judge Bondy openly said that "no administrative body will ever influence me in construing what I believe to be the law."

IRVING TRUST ACCEPTANCE INDICATED

Securities and Exchange Commission quarters in Washington emphasized that the commission had not sought to enter into the reorganization proceedings before Judge Bondy and that the request for its participation made by a stockholder was solely on the stockholder's initiative.

Officials of the SEC indicated complete agreement with Judge Bondy that the RKO case, which began long before adoption of the Chandler act which gave the SEC certain restricted rights of participation if the court agreed, was not one in which the SEC should seek to intervene.

"Would Have To Be Shown"

Regardless, Judge Bondy, while taking the Stirn petition under advisement, declared that he "would have to be shown why seven years were permitted to elapse" before protest was made on the Stirn grounds.

The judge later remarked that he expected Irving Trust to report to the court in the event it, as trustee, regarded the plan as unfair, but representatives of the Trust company who were present in the courtroom indicated that they did not expect to file any report attacking the plan.

$480,176 Consolidated Net Loss

A consolidated net loss of $480,176 was reported by the Irving Trust for RKO operations for the 26 weeks ended July 2nd. This compared with a net profit of $1,442,710 for the same period last year.

The RKO operating companies reported a net profit of $416,478 for the period, compared with a profit of $751,595 for the corresponding period last year. RKO Pathe News showed a net profit, after all charges, of $117,574 for the 26 weeks, compared with a profit of $2,080 for the first half of 1937.

RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., and subsidiaries, the producing and distributing company, reported a net loss of $1,135,522 for the 26-week period, compared with a profit of $476,491 for the same period in 1937. This result includes the accrual of interest on indebtedness of the subsidiary to its parent company in the total amount of $1,038,047 during the 26-week period. For the 11 weeks from July 2 to September 17 the estimated loss of the picture company was reduced to $214,683, and during the past two weeks the company has operated profitably.

The parent company's cash position was improved by $791,177 during the period, to a total of $6,073,791. In addition, the fixed indebtedness of RKO was reduced by $967,095. Film inventories declined more than $2,000,000 in the period.

$12,037,066 from Admissions

Income during the period from theatre admissions of $12,037,066, film rentals and sales of $15,932,796, and from other sources, totaled $29,789,064, while expenses of operations amounted to $28,082,823.

Payment of allowances and a distribution to creditors of the balance of the assets of the Orpheum Circuit, Inc., was ordered this week by Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum in a decision which confirmed, with some modifications, the report of Referee Oscar W. Ehrhorn. Judge Mandelbaum reduced an allowance of $7,172 awarded to Marcus Heiman, trustee, to $5,500, and allowance of $24,250 to Beekman, Bogue, Leake, Stephens and Black, attorneys for the trustee, to $20,000 and disbursements of $213.

According to the report $104,398 is on hand, less payments of allowances for final distribution to creditors, aggregating $2,152,523. The attorneys for the trustee had originally petitioned for a $50,000 allowance. Orpheum Circuit, Inc., had filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy on Jan. 27, 1933.

10 Playwrights Selected By Bureau of New Plays

Theresa Helburn, director of the Bureau of New Plays, said this week that a group of 10 young playwrights has been selected from more than 100 candidates for the advance practical course in playwriting offered by the bureau two months ago. The organization is sponsored by the large film companies to develop a new source of writing talent supply.

The group will meet twice a week to discuss their plays in work, analysis of current production and playwriting in general.

SWITZERLAND FOUND GOOD MARKET FOR FILMS DESPITE INCOME DROP

Domestic Production Practically Nil, but Exhibition Also Is Unsatisfactory, Says Consulate; Import Control Near

Switzerland offers a good market for American motion pictures and Hollywood producers continue to hold a strong position in that country, says the American consulate general at Zurich, in his annual report to the United States Department of Commerce, Motion Picture Division, at Washington.

The report discloses that exhibition business in the country is very unsatisfactory, however; that efforts to establish domestic production have virtually been abandoned, and that a government bureau is about to be organized to control film imports.

The growing desire to keep out films with concealed propaganda and the fact that a smaller number of suitable films is available from Germany, the principal competitor of the United States, favor American producers. The absorption by Germany of the Austrian film industry, for which Switzerland offered a good outlet, is likewise expected to benefit American films.

While domestic producers have achieved a measure of success with educational, travel, and industrial films, mostly shorts, experiments in the field of full length theatrical films have not been encouraging. Judging by recent experiences, it is doubtful that the Film Chamber, which is expected to start functioning soon, will be able to further successfully the domestic production of such films.

The movement for the establishment of a domestic industry to produce full length theatrical films has lost ground. Recent experiences in connection with domestic productions have resulted in a realization that Switzerland cannot produce such films on a commercially profitable basis without the cooperation of recognized international producers.

The indications are that if domestic production of feature films is successfully developed it will probably be in cooperation with foreign producers. From the standpoint of language, Germany constitutes a natural export market for such Swiss films. On the other hand, cooperation with the increasingly improving French film industry seems more likely.

Film Chamber

A bill to establish a Film Chamber in Switzerland to promote, supervise, and regulate the motion picture industry was defeated in the Lower House. In order not to interrupt the work begun by a special commission of investigating the film industry, a new film commission was appointed pending the final passage of the bill. This commission is at present examining the practicability of domestic news reel production and of legislation prohibiting the construction of new cinemas. It is also studying the problem of relieving cinema owners of the system of block and blind booking.

The principal sources of film supply are the United States, Germany and France. Approximately 60 percent of all rental charges collected from Swiss exhibitors went to the United States, and indications point to an even larger share of the Swiss market for American producers.

Of the secondary sources of supply, Austrian films enjoyed a wide measure of popularity.

ANTI-CRIME SOCIETY AFTER THEATRES

The Society for the Prevention of Crime in New York told Magistrate's Court Tuesday that it had independently undertaken an investigation of chance games in the Negro section of Harlem. The Society recently had the entire house staff of the Jewel theatre arrested, charging them with conducting a lottery, based on a screen game for cash prizes.

Local exhibitors are considerably agitated over the arrests, and are cooperating through Allied of New York and the New York Independent Theatre Owners to fight the case. A brief filed by Harry G. Kosch, counsel for Allied, and Max A. Cohen, whose circuit operates the theatre, cites decisions by the Court of Appeals under which chance games as conducted at the Jewel are held legal. Milton Weisman, I. T. O. A. counsel, is working with Mr. Kosch in the case.

The two exhibitor organizations plan to obtain a final ruling on chance games in the courts. Meanwhile, attorneys point out that unless theatres advertise that the games are free, they may not be legally in the clear.

But now that the Austrian film industry is completely dominated by Germany, it is doubtful that Austrian productions will retain their typical characteristics to which their popularity is attributed. It is believed that this should also favor films of American origin.

Imports of exposed motion picture films in the past season follow:

Country	Length in Meters	Declared Value in Swiss Francs
Austria .....	399,065	135,690
Belgium .....	119,300	38,563
Czechoslovakia .....	66,015	29,994
Denmark .....	2,400	1,805
France .....	1,900,805	637,729
Germany .....	1,012,268	492,737
Great Britain .....	188,922	88,660

Total .....	4,886,583	1,860,593

At present imports of films are not subject to restrictions. However, an import control office is expected to be established this summer, with the right to reject pictures considered objectionable. Imported films, it is stated, will have to be registered, but import permits are to be granted without difficulty. It appears that the purpose of this arrangement is to aid independent Swiss film distributors who are having difficulty in competing with the branch offices established in this country by internationally known American and other foreign producers. The business of Swiss distributors is confined, for the most part, to pictures of producers not directly represented in Switzerland.

Independent Swiss distributors also favor a system of import quotas to be allotted on the basis of actual imports in previous years. While old-established foreign distributors would thus be assured of an adequate contingent, foreign rental agencies established in this country more recently would be at a decided disadvantage. They would have to buy surplus contingents from domestic distributors in order to meet their actual requirements. This method of compensating old-established firms at the expense of new enterprises is not without precedent in this country. It is known to exist in other branches of the Swiss import trade.

Over 50 percent of the motion picture theatres are operating without profit and are unable to take care of amortization and interest on their indebtedness. The remaining theatres which are operating without deficit make only a small profit. The new modern cinemas are regarded as commercially profitable.

Box office receipts, including amusement tax, for 1937 were estimated at 26,000,000 francs compared with 28,000,000 in 1936, and 29,900,000 in 1935.

In considering the low average attendance at Swiss cinemas, it should be pointed out that, owing to the rigorous Swiss restrictions governing the admission of juveniles, the relative potential number of actual theatregoers is considerably smaller than in the United States.

Competition among motion picture theatres is not free. Admission prices, as well as the number of showings are strictly regulated. While the fixed prices for the various categories continue unchanged, some of the theatres have resorted to the policy of allotting more rows of seats to the 1.65 franc class, which formerly cost 2.20 francs.

The combined seating capacity of the 354 Swiss cinemas is close to 133,000. The city of Bern has 34 seats per 1,000 inhabitants, Zurich 49, Basel 59, Lucerne 63, Geneva 75, Lausanne 82, and Biel 103. The average for the country is 32 seats per 1,000. On the other hand, in rural districts, notably the half Cantons of Obwalden, Nidwalden and Appenzell there are no permanent cinemas.

The agreement between the Association of Swiss Cinema Owners and the Association of Swiss Film Rental Agencies, whereby cinemas which are not members of the Association are unable to obtain an adequate supply of films, is, in effect, a restriction on new theatres. Since this agreement became effective in 1935, only 4 new theatres were established in German-Switzerland. Two of these had been planned prior to the agreement and finally managed to obtain membership in the Association, and thus access to the regular channels of film supply.

In the years 1936 and 1937, the Association of Swiss Cinema Owners succeeded in killing plans for 25 new theatres. This was done chiefly by articles in the press cautioning house owners and supply firms against concluding contracts with non-member theatres which are unable to obtain films from regular distributors. The Association also warned banks against the risk of financing enterprises faced with this difficulty.

Canada Film Imports From U. S. Increased

The Customs Statistical Division of the Canadian Department of National Revenue has issued a preliminary report on motion picture imports for the fiscal year ending March 31st last, which shows an increase of 210,368 feet of film from all countries, the total being 5,414,913 as compared with an imported 5,204,545 feet for the previous year. The valuation was $432,687 as compared with $416,095. Imports from the United States increased.

The Arkansas Traveler

(Paramount)
Comedy-Drama

Showmen and fans with good memories count among their happier cinema experiences the early films in which Will Rogers and Irene Rich portrayed plain Americans engaged in plain American pursuits. There have been no films possessing quite the same wholesome, earthy flavor. Some of the domestic-series pictures have tapped a closely adjacent vein of interest. "The Arkansas Traveler" is in the exact channel of the Rogers-Rich appeal, and there could be no sounder, surer one.

Robert Burns is the star of this production in the Rogers tradition and it is about time for someone to say that Mr. Burns is the first man, woman or child in the history of the motion picture to carry on successfully and with honor in the footsteps of a departed great. It is time for showmen to say that to their customers and to themselves, for this is a far too important truth and a much too important first to be left unrecorded. This is a precedent of vast significance, a further proof that nothing is impossible to this art-industry, and it is an overdue acknowledgment of Mr. Burns' art, ability, acumen and general worthwhileness as a professional and a gentleman.

It is not the intent of the foregoing to indicate that Mr. Burns' performance in "The Arkansas Traveler" is in the Will Rogers' format, or that Fay Bainter's performance in the role opposite him is a carbon copy of the portrayals achieved by Miss Rich opposite Mr. Rogers. It is the intention, however, to indicate that "The Arkansas Traveler" is such a picture as Will Rogers used to make and no doubt would be making today, and that these players play it as he and she would have played it. That is equivalent to saying it is a very good kind of picture and a very good sample of its kind.

As has been reported somewhat widely in the press, the story by Jack Cunningham and the screen play by Viola Brothers Shore and George Sessions Perry is about a small town, its newspaper and its people. The picture has been dedicated to William Allen White of Emporia, Kansas, who is on record as pronouncing it a fair and fit representation of life and affairs in the mid-American small town. It is exactly that, no more and no less, from start to finish, with only a slight reliance upon the virtues of distortion for dramatic effect in the closing minutes in behalf of consumer satisfaction.

Miss Bainter plays the publisher of a small town paper coveted by the local moneybags, played by Lyle Talbot, with ulterior purpose. Mr. Burns plays a hobo printer who stops in the town long enough to outwit the covetous bigwig and patch up a stymied romance between two young folk, played by John Beal and Jean Parker, living the while in a jail cell politely provided by the friendly constable (Irvin S. Cobb). The details are credible for the most part and completely entertaining.

Mr. Burns' performance is straight, a pleasing characterization embracing no resort to bazooka or libelous reference to Van Buren relatives. Miss Bainter's is earnest and compelling. There is no straining for laughs or tears, but both accrue. The production is suitable for any theatre and any occasion and for all the members of any family.

George Arthur, the producer, who is credited with the idea from which the story was written, and Alfred Santell, the director, who seems to have known precisely what it was all about, have here the first of what might well turn out to be a sequence of pictures as notable as the Rogers vehicles in the "State Fair" bracket.

Stablemates

Sentimental Melodrama

"Stablemates" is not "another race track picture." Although race tracks and a race horse are used to develop the story, add to its suspense, form the background for some of the moments in which pathos is permitted full sweep, and provide the thrill action episodes, the photoplay essentially is a sentimental character melodrama. Mainly it concerns two persons, a jockey and a booze drenched old veterinarian, a down and out race track hanger-on who is ducking the law. Thematically it is the story of the great love which the two have for a horse, "Lady Q," and the bonds of devotion and affection that unite the oddly contrasting pair.

In substance it is heart interest entertainment. Generally it is serious, yet there is human humor, some comic hokum, provocative suspense or pulse-tingling action. The plot is understandable and believable. Both the original story and screenplay are well written. The acting is convincing. It is so staged that good advantage is taken of production value.

Wallace Beery and Mickey Rooney both have appeared in many important pictures. Their name value is a matter of showmanship merit. Beery's character, here, approaches that in which he was seen in "The Champ." His relationship with Mickey Rooney parallels that which existed between him and Jackie Cooper. Consequently "Stablemates" has much of "The Champ" character.

In lieu of wages, jockey "Mickey" accepts the crippled "Lady Q." Uninvited derelict "Terry" moves in with the boy and horse. When, by flashlight and with unsteady hand, "Terry" performs an operation on the animal's hoof, first links in the chain of devotion between boy and man are welded. The episode brought applause from the preview audience. Reconditioning "Lady Q." the pair set out to race him. A pause is made for some gay comedy at the farm home of "Mrs. Flanders," where "Terry's" efforts to charm money out of the widow almost result in romantic entanglements. Meanwhile, "Mickey" learns that if "Terry" shows up at the race track where "Lady Q." is to run, he will be arrested. He tries to break the bonds of affection existing between himself and "Terry," but the old fellow will have none of it. "Lady Q." wins, but detective Donovan recognizes "Terry." As the old veterinarian starts off to jail, "Mickey," with the money he has won, leaves for school, to be graduated just about the time "Terry's" sentence is completed.

Whether folk know or care anything about race tracks is of no consequence so far as the entertainment value of "Stablemates" is concerned. It is the human element that counts.

That Certain Age

(Universal)
Romantic Whimsy

As the title and credits of this picture lighted up the screen, the audience broke into applause, and while the production was being shown there were ample indications that interest in and appreciation of what was happening on the screen never lagged. Not only is "That Certain Age" full of worthwhile entertainment but it is also full of showmanship material easy to adapt and develop.

It's a wholesome picture, novelly different. It's not a musical show, although Deanna Durbin's singing and incidental numbers are definite assets. Always down to earth, it blends the fundamentals of romance, comedy, suspense, pseudo-melodrama and pseudo-tragedy. Nothing oversteps the bounds of credulity. Careful writing, acting, directing and production technique never allow it to strike a false or artificial note.

A story of today with a theme as old as the ages, the incidents and situations are those which are confronting young girls of today, like the heroine, her family, victim and associates. A fifteen-year-old miss falls in love with a man years older. Only her diary shares her secret. Her boy friend suspects, convinces himself that he's right, and is ready to pack off and join the Navy. Gradually her father and mother become aware of what's bothering their child. Realization that he is the victim of a grand crush comes to the man with a shock. While a dire predicament is created for those directly concerned, rare amusement is provided for audiences. All the young girl's dream castles come tumbling down about her when another woman is introduced to her as the wife of the man of her heart. But childhood tragedy doesn't last very long, and soon the little lady is eagerly rehearsing her role in an amateur show, happy that the Navy-bound boy is at her side.

The Sisters

(Warner Bros.)

Melodrama

A glance down the right hand side of the cast listing appended to these paragraphs is the practical showman's short cut to the exploitation technique for this early Twentieth Century melodrama. The cast is impressive and the names of director and writers are likewise significant in the box office sense. There is manifest magnetism in the generic similarity of this title to that of "Four Daughters."

Myron Brinig's novel deals with the varying romances of three sisters who arrive at maturity in Silver Bow, Mont., during the election of the first Roosevelt. The story is produced here carefully and on a broad scale without sacrifice of detail. It covers four years and the marriages of the three sisters, focusing on one but flashing back periodically to the other two. Most of the action transpires in San Francisco and the melodramatic high spot is the earthquake and fire of 1906.

Chiefly emphasized is the marriage of "Louise" (Bette Davis) to "Frank" (Errol Flynn), a brilliant but drunken newspaper reporter intent upon writing a great novel but unable to quite bring it off. In one of his sober stretches he tells him she is going to have a baby, and he is jubilant, but a gestative mishap occurs and he resumes his alcoholic dalliance. When he loses his job she goes to work in a department store. Her success shames him and he ships off to Singapore on the night before the quake. She survives the disaster and finds refuge, ill, in a certain house in Oakland full of player pianos and negligees. When she recovers she continues her department store work until summoned home by a younger sister whose banker husband has become involved with what the Warner synopsis calls "a small town harpy." With the aid of the third sister, who married an aging millionaire, now dead, and is engaged in divorcing his successor, "Louise" rids the town of the harpy. Then she and Frank start anew.

The film has been produced with much earnestness and is manifestly expensive. Miss Davis plays her role severely and Mr. Flynn makes no gesture toward ennobling his.

Supporting performances are evenly matched and footage is evenly allotted to the several excellent players, but Henry Travers' portrayal of the small town pharmacist, whose daughters these sisters are, stands out as especially distinguished.

Vacation from Love

Farce

This is a fast, frothy farce in the general format of the "screwball comedies" so plentiful a while back. It is mainly about love, with dashes of radio and a sprinkling of show business thrown in. Some of the incidental comedy is quite funny and there are a number of crisp lines in the dialogue.

Dennis O'Keefe and Florence Rice play the leads, swiftly, with Edward S. Brophy and Reginald Owen supplying effective comedy support. June Knight is the second girl in the case and background performers are of the usual high MGM calibre.

The story and screen play by Patterson McNutt and Harlan Ware, has "Bill Blare," saxophonist, in love at first sight with "Patricia Lawson," society girl, whose fashionable wedding, next day, he breaks up by shouting his objections during the ceremony. They escape together, decide to get married, are delayed.

The thing starts in New York, which it covers rather thoroughly, and winds up in Paris.

Producer Orville O. Dull and director George Fitzmaurice gave the film nice dressing, essential speed and thoughtful attention generally.

Previewed at the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal., where it met with audible appreciation.—W.R.W.

Produced by Orville O. Dull. Distributed by MGM. Directed by George Fitzmaurice. Screen play and story by Patterson McNutt and Harlan Ware. Song by Edward Ward, Bob Wright and Chet Forrest. ## It's in the Air

Flying Comedy

Service flying is surely well in the English air these days, and it is fitting that this latest comedy extravaganza designed for the sure fire Mr. George Formby, would have such a setting. The R.A.F. personnel and behaviour, as witnessed in this highly vivacious and energetic comedy romp, may not be an exact or respectful replica of modern service conditions, but the audience bent on enjoyment of Formby's escapades and misadventures is not likely to worry about this. That it offers an illimitable field for the most boisterous brand of slapstick, with sergeant majors propelled down fire escapes, a hair raising trip on a dispatch rider's motor cycle, and familiar but certainly funny antics in a service plane, is the major consideration, but the audience's doubts should be lost soon in the sheer gusto and effervescence of its incident.

Formby here has been cunningly induced into a slightly more human role, that of an unwilling "rookie" teased by all and sundry, and despite an occasional tendency to get away from clowning to acting, handles his material well. Director Kimmins seems to have an intuitive knowledge of Formby's powers—and limits—and his handling of the more ferocious slapstick sequences is excellent.

It scarcely can be said that "It's in the Air" boasts a story. It is rather the adventures of George, dragged by his love for a uniform and general misunderstandings into a week's training at an Air Force Camp. There are the usual comedy ingredients of irascible sergeant majors, and mischievous rivals for the girl's hand, George finding his way into the sergeant major's bed, manhandling a plane he cannot control.

Formby develops rather than recedes as a screen comedian, and this is one of his more hilarious efforts. Though his fame is mainly British, there must be audiences in other territories who would get many laughs from it.

Previewed to a London trade audience, the film provoked frequent gusts of laughter and was generally accepted as a very easy brand of box office.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Produced by Associated Talking Pictures. A Basil Dean Production. Distributed by Associated British Film Distributors. Directed by Anthony Kimmins. Associate producer, Jack Kitchin. Original story, scenario and dialogue by Anthony Kimmins. Camera, Ronald Neame and Gordon Dines. Art director, W. Shingleton. Running time, 87 minutes. General audience classification.

taches almost of the handlebar variety, an accomplished actor and a singer to boot. The other performances also were well received but the film was overly long and at times disconnected, with much dialogue and very little action.

On occasion the fairly large audience at the Yorkville Casino in New York's Deutschland area responded with appreciative laughs but long barren spots detracted from the film's entertainment value. There are no English titles and the picture is difficult to follow without knowledge of at least a modicum of German.

The setting is Vienna. "Weinzierl" (Slezak), one of the last of the hackney-coachmen in Vienna, has a hard time adjusting himself to all the modern innovations. He refuses to sell his house to an auto magnate, a young man who has fallen in love with "Weinzierl's" daughter. She is a salesgirl in a music shop. When "Weinzierl" finds out that his daughter has been seeing the rich young man he forbids her to see him again and orders her to marry another man. Before the marriage, however, "Weinzierl" has a change of heart and permits his daughter to marry the man of her choice.—P. C. M., Jr.

The March of Time— No. 2, Vol. 5 (RKO Radio)

Fire and Europe

This, the second issue of the fifth volume, has two subjects.

The first is called "U. S. Fire Fighters" and deals not with fires but with the steps taken and being taken to prevent them. The subject revolves around Franklin H. Wentworth, fire prevention expert, and his theories. The cities of Memphis and Houston are used as illustrations of the before and after technique.

The second subject is "The British Dilemma" and because of the rapidity of developments in European affairs it is, in a sense, dated. The subject matter concerns British foreign policy in relation to Hitler's ambitious plans. The subject traces briefly the growth of the British Empire and the expansion of Germany under Hitler. The subject is premised on the belief that Hitler was convinced England would not fight and continued to think so until the invasion of Czechoslovakia was threatened. Then England began to mobilize. The subject ends on Prime Minister Chamberlain's first visit to Hitler. Running time, 19 minutes.

Red Barry (Universal Serial) Action, and Plausible

The new Buster Crabbe serial, first chapters of which now are appearing in theatres, has been wisely written for the serial audience, both in settings and in action. The three opening chapters take the patron to an Oriental warlord's field camp, aboard a liner, undersea with a diver recovering stolen bonds, to a vaudeville theatre and the murder of a spy member of a balancing troupe at the climax of the act, through a trapdoor to a fight with a lion, and via another trapdoor to a plunge into the waters below a dock after a kidnapping by an underworld king. While the action moves rapidly through these settings, with four clashing interests trying to get the bonds, it is all logically done, and Buster Crabbe's performances, though at times approaching nonchalance, is uniformly in the best serial manner. The first chapter runs 20½ minutes, the second 19½ and the third 21 1/3.

They're Always Caught (MGM) Excellent

This is another exceptionally fine subject from the "Crime Does Not Pay" series. The story is very interesting, the acting first class and the direction excellent. The picture sets out to show how an apparently perfect crime is solved with only the scantiest evidence available. A murder is enacted and the police arrive to ferret out the smallest clue. Through the instruments of the police laboratory the criminal is revealed. It is not only a scientific adventure but a powerful melodrama as well. The cast includes Stanley Ridges, John Eldredge, Charles Waldron and Louis Jean Heydt. Directed by Harold S. Bucquet.—Running time, 22 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 55 (Universal) Lukewarm

Subjects covered include ducks and fish fighting for bread in a state fish and game refuge, a chap who exacts a tune from a rubber glove, the making of artificial flowers in Paris, a woman blacksmith, a mud factory, an American who raises silkworms, a homemade "iron lung," and a bird taught to haul up his meals from outside the cage. Too frequent closeups and repetitions retard movement and interest.

Submarine Circus (RKO Pathé) Novelty

From the standpoint of novelty, this Reelisms subject, with its underwater photography of a trick circus in action at Silver Springs, Florida, has its points, such as the capture of an alligator, tight rope acrobatics and snake charming. What likely will sustain interest, however, is the study of the photography of action on the river bottom, made possible by the extraordinary clarity of the water, and the lowering of the circus tent structure and the training of the cast for its marine performance.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Football Giants (Columbia) The Autumnal Pastime

The game of football as it is played professionally is demonstrated in this subject by the New York Giants. The training period is shown, with signal practice, kicking, forward passing, and when the boys are sufficiently toughened a scrimmage takes place. Those who receive individual attention are Mel Hein, Tilly Manton, Ward Cuff, Willie Walls, Ed Danowski, Jim Poole, Ox Parry, Orville Tuttle, Ed Widseth, Nello Falaschi and Tuffy Leemans. Of course the members hail from all over the country. Narration by Jack Kofod. Described by Ford Bond.—Running time, 10½ minutes.

Beaux and Errors (RKO Radio) Passing Fair

Edgar Kennedy's type of comedy is all the stronger than in his earlier days for the less frequent but more judicious distribution of his pate-moppings and dashings about from scratch. In "Beaux and Errors" this conservation of his stock physical portrayals of humor for telling moments give the subject strong points that compensate in a measure for the quiet gaps, though the subject seldom gets above lukewarm interest. The action is mounted upon a story of mistaken identity and the boomeranging of Kennedy's plan to stop his wife's criticism of his growing paunch, all because his father-in-law has confused another acquaintance with the wife's former sweetheart. With him in the antics are Vivian Oakland, Bill Franey, Ed Dunn and Eva McKenzie. For Kennedy fans the picture is mildly complete; others might call for more entertainment.—Running time, 18 minutes.

Buzzy Boop at the Concert (Paramount) (Swing Session in Boop Time)

The spotlight in this Betty Boop cartoon is taken away from the category's namesake and given to Betty's little and troublesome cousin, Buzzy. Taken to a highbrow concert to get a dose of culture, the youngster applies the revolutionary tactics peculiar to her age and disposition to turn the classical trend into a jam session. Working first with the performer of the evening, the bosomy prima donna, the child turns the songbird into a "hot" swing singer, and before the evening is over has the dressy audience joining the jazzy musicale. For those who are violently "swingeroo," the laughs from this short should be plentiful.—Running time, seven minutes.

The Man on the Rock (MGM) Historical Mystery

Another of the "Historical Mystery" subjects from Metro, this questions the accepted fact that Napoleon died on St. Helena Island. Produced with the care and exactness of detail of all these subjects, the film traces various phases of the Corsican's career and reveals that the Little Corporal on occasions was represented by a double. The film proceeds to show how the double could have died on St. Helena and goes further to show how the "real" Napoleon might have died. It is an interesting presentation and like others in the series it serves the double purpose of being entertaining and educational. The cast includes Edward Raquello, Claude King, Claire MacDowell, Fred Warren, Rex and Barry Downing, and Kenneth Casey. Edward Cahn directed. The commentator is Carey Wilson. Running time, 11 minutes.

Gym Jams (Columbia) Krazy Kat, Gym Trainer

In this his newest cartoon adventure, Krazy Kat is drawn along the lines of a feline health builder-upper. Trouble starts when an escaped convict, a brutish hippopotamus, barges into the establishment and demands that his person be considerably altered in order that he may elude the police. Krazy sees his duty and does it, which is to return the fleeing criminal to the law. All the demonstration on the business of the gymnasium as well as the collaring of the culprit is managed with results that, if not riotous, are satisfactory laugh getting material.—Running time, 6½ minutes.

Fisherman's Paradise (RKO Radio) Action on the Deep

What with the fact that the subject of deep-sea fishing has been plumbed extensively from the standpoint of photography alone, retention of audience interest now is largely a matter of building the material to a climax. In this Sportoscope that has not been achieved, in that a catch is made too early in the reel. However, the opening shots of Cat Cay, resort colony for enthusiasts of the rod, in the Bahamas, and the concomitant pictorial instruction in fishing technique, do help.—Running time, 9 minutes.

The Animal Cracker Circus (Columbia) Color Cartoon

The circus comes to town in the guise of animal crackers. A boy perched on his high-chair, with animal crackers and spinach in front of him, remonstrates when his mother insists he eat the spinach. Whereupon one of the crackers, a circus ringmaster, speaks up and promises the boy a circus treat if he'll give in. The clowns, lions, bareback riders and acrobats go through their paces until the lad falls asleep. A Charles Mintz production.—Running time, 7 minutes.

MPTOA INVITES ALL BRANCHES TO JOIN IN CONVENTION PEACE TALK

Invitations Extended to Producers as Well as Distributors to Attend Convention and Discuss Exhibitor Problems

The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America apparently hopes to turn its annual national convention, October 30th to November 2nd, into a general industry round-table, if not "peacefest," for the discussion of all problems, and with any and all factions participating—producers, distributors, circuit and independent exhibitors, affiliated and unaffiliated.

Following up last week's invitation to sales managers and distribution executives to attend the Oklahoma City meeting, the MPTOA is now inviting Hollywood, independent distributors, Allied States executives and the heads of unaffiliated exhibitor organizations.

Invitations to attend the session were sent out last Saturday by MPTOA headquarters in New York to Harry Cohn, Columbia; Adolph Zukor, Paramount; Samuel Goldwyn, United Artists; Louis B. Mayer, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Pandro S. Berman, RKO Radio; David O. Selznick, Selznick International; Darryl F. Zanuck, Twentieth Century-Fox; Cliff Work, Universal and Jack L. Warner, Warner Brothers.

The forum is designed to give exhibitors an opportunity to provide a cross section of national opinion on various types of product, casts and advertising, and the producers an opportunity of hearing and answering such views.

Independents Invited

Independent distribution executives and independent exhibitor leaders also are urged to attend the MPTOA national convention in letters sent out over the weekend. Invitations went to W. Ray Johnson, president; Edward Golden, vice-president, and George Weeks, sales-manager of Monogram; James R. Grainger, Republic president and distribution head; Edward L. Alpers, Grand National sales manager; Clinton White, GB sales manager, and Charles Kranz, Malmar Pictures.

Bids have also been sent to Abram F. Myers, board chairman; Nathan Yamins, president; W. A. Steffes, H. A. Cole and H. M. Richey, directors, Allied States Association; P. J. Wood, Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio; Frank Durkee and Louis Rome, Maryland and District of Columbia exhibitor leaders; Max Cohen, president of New York Allied, and Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners Association, who has already accepted.

Last week invitations were sent to distribution executives including A. Montague, Columbia; William F. Rodgers, Loew's; Neil F. Agnew, Paramount; Ned E. Depinet, RKO Radio; Herman Wobber, Twentieth Century-Fox; George J. Schaefer, United Artists; William A. Scully, Universal, and Gradwell L. Sears, Warner Brothers.

Questions for Discussion

Some of the questions that will come up for study and discussion at this MPTOA Convention include the following inquiries:

1. What chance is there for organized self-regulation in the trade practices in motion picture distribution and exhibition? Can

Plans for Support of Neely Bill To Be Set at Allied Convention

Plans for the support by Allied units of a campaign to push the Neely anti-block booking bill through the next session of Congress will be outlined at the eastern regional conference of independent exhibitors sponsored by Allied of New Jersey at the Ritz-Carlton, Atlantic City, October 19-21.

Abram F. Myers, national general counsel, and Nathan Yamins, national president, will be the principal speakers, and other national officers and directors are scheduled to attend.

Mr. Myers will speak on the Government's anti-trust suit, the North Dakota "divorcement" law which is being appealed to the supreme court and legislation generally. The Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign will also be a topic.

One session will be devoted to a survey of theatres represented at the convention on the terms of their 1938-'39 contracts and an analysis of new product. Another session will be given over to discussing exhibitors' complaints.

The meeting will be the 19th annual convention of the New Jersey group and in conjunction the New York Allied unit will hold its first annual convention. Max A. Cohen, president of the New York group, expects 100 of its members to attend.

The total attendance is expected to be around 300, with representatives also from Massachusetts, eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia, Connecticut and other points.

The Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio having decided to hold their state convention in conjunction with the Regional Allied Conference will meet November 14th at Columbus. On that day a meeting will be held of the Central States units of National Allied. The first business session of the State Convention will be held November 15th, and the final business session on November 16th.

Allied plans and policies will also be aired by Allied Theatres, of Michigan, at its annual convention, opening Monday at the Morton Hotel, Grand Rapids, where Abram Myers, national counsel, will speak. Distributor heads are expected, among them William F. Rodgers, of MGM; Frank Downey and Jack Flynn, Paramount; Fred Norris, Vitagraph; C. H. Townsend, Columbia, and J. F. Goldbar, of United Artists, all but Mr. Rodgers being local sales executives.

clearance and competitive over-buying disputes be adjusted locally by organized conciliation or arbitration?

2. Do the present anti-trust laws actually prohibit constructive cooperation between exhibitors and distributors?
3. Will the government anti-trust suit clarify the confusion and uncertainties that legal opinions and interpretations have created about the law?
4. If regulation of the business practices in distribution and exhibition by criminal statute is inevitable, what sort of laws will be acceptable to the responsible independent exhibitors?
5. Should the responsible independent exhibitors and the country town theatre owners have any voice in Federal and state legislation to regulate business practices?
6. What is required of exhibitors by the new Federal Wages and Hours Law?
7. Will there be new Federal and state admission taxes for relief and social security?
8. Will the unions force a closed shop on small town theatres through unionized film exchanges?
9. Was the National Advertising Campaign worth the cost and effort? Should it be repeated next year?
10. What can exhibitors do to curb unfair competition between theatres? To increase box office receipts? To improve theatre operation?

11. What should local exhibitors do to curb and restrain (rather than encourage and inflame) public prejudice and hostility towards our business and towards motion pictures?
12. What pictures will be released the rest of the season that have box office possibilities?
13. What's new in theatre equipment, supplies, design and materials?
14. What does the public want in entertainment? What is being done around the country to develop new audiences?

Wild West Setting

A general bulletin from national headquarters in New York says that the Oklahoma City Round-Up of theatre owners that is planned by MPTOA will be a big, triple feature program in a wild west atmospheric setting.

"It may be quite appropriate for this big national conference of exhibitors to be held in a wild west setting at a time when hellzapoppin in the motion picture industry. With the Federal government launching a major attack on the motion picture business in the form of a Department of Justice anti-trust suit, with the largest number of private anti-trust suits pending the industry has ever faced and with the legislative deluge about to break loose in the 44 states whose legislatures meet in regular session within the next year, and with the failure of general business conditions to improve as expected, the importance of exhibitor organization and the coordination of effort between responsible independent exhibitors cannot be overemphasized," the bulletin continued.

Morris Lowenstein, convention general chairman, said that Zenith Radio Corporation had informed him that the company's television sets could not be brought to Oklahoma City for the convention to be on display because the equipment is not sufficiently portable to be moved. Zenith Radio has a permit to operate television in the city of Chicago.

Claude E. Ezell, distributor of the "Magic Eye," reserved space for exhibits of their device at the convention and said that W. W. Rice, president of the company and inventor of the "magic eye," would be present.

Dan James, manager of the Black hotel in Oklahoma City, a long time friend of M. A. Lightman, head of Malco Theatres in Memphis, has written a letter to Mr. Lightman inviting him to occupy the penthouse atop the Black hotel during the convention.

Votes Against Dissolution

The majority of the members of the Independent Theatre Owners of Kansas City, Mo., voted last Friday not to dissolve the association. Such a motion was presented and defeated. The group will retain its charter and continue, according to E. E. Webber, Jr., president. Effort will be made to effect a cooperative tieup with the Kansas-Missouri Theatres Association.

Directors of Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina will meet Monday in Charlotte to decide the time and place for the association's next annual meeting, according to Mrs. Pauline Griffith, secretary.

Mahon Re-Elected Head of Canadian Exhibitor Group

P. W. Mahon, Prince Albert, was again reelected president of the Saskatchewan Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, at the annual meeting which was held September 18 in the Bessborough hotel in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan.

The meeting was featured by the decision to send a delegation to see the provincial attorney-general about extending and enforcing the provisions of the Cinematograph Act in an effort to try and halt the spread of itinerant 16mm. and 35mm. operators and exhibitors, especially in the northern half of the province. It was contended that any disaster that might follow from their operations would naturally reflect on the whole industry. The practice of some of the itinerants in showing "Wild West" pictures and other such topics under the guise of "educational" films particularly got a going-over.

Gerald Deaultry, of the Trades and Labor Council of Saskatoon, particularly attacked the

BLAMES PERCENTAGE FOR LOWER GROSS

"Grosses are consistently 25 to 30 percent under a year ago at the same time," Glen W. Dickinson, whose theatre circuit operates more than 40 houses in Kansas and Missouri, said this week.

Selling pictures on percentage was given by Mr. Dickinson as the chief factor in declining grosses.

S.M.P.E. failure to demand the government take action. He spoke during the luncheon which broke the regular business sessions. Mr. Deaultry contended that the industry had only itself to blame for the predicament it now finds itself in, seeing it had not made the government act, especially during recent years when economic conditions have been such as to force people more and more into the arms of the 16mm operators. In this he was joined by H. Johnson, Saskatoon, of the Canadian Union of Projectionists, who pledged cooperation.

The meeting also touched on the need for express rate film revision and film contracts. The value of membership in the association was pointed out by P. W. Mahon, the president. He also led discussion in regard to the effect of the Industrial Standards Act on the industry.

A report that 80 per cent of the exhibitors in Saskatchewan had joined in the Movie Quiz campaign was made by W. Novak, secretary. He said the main reason the remaining 20 per cent gave for not joining was the lack of funds owing to the failure of the crop in their areas again and the fact some theatres were unable to obtain enough of the pictures mentioned in the Quiz owing to their system of booking.

A vote of sympathy was made Harry Bercovich whose theatre, the Rex, burned down to the ground earlier the same week.

The officers reelected at the meeting were: P. W. Mahon, president, Prince Albert; E. P. "Jack" Fields, vice-president, Moose Jaw; W. Novak, secretary, Regina; I. Reinhorn, Regina, treasurer; Harry Hurwitz, assistant secretary, Saskatoon; F. W. Miley, Saskatoon, G. R. Miller, Wynyard, Frank Shepherd, Biggar, A. L. Dove, Bengough, R. C. Sutherland, Weyburn, H. S. Humphrey, Grenfell, directors.

Those present at the luncheon which marked the annual meeting were: P. W. Mahon, Prince Albert; W. J. Donlon and C. S. Palmer, Saskatoon express company representatives; B. Bailey, Humboldt; D. M. Brickman, Paramount Films, Winnipeg; E. P. Fields, Moose Jaw; W. Novak, Regina; H. S. Humphrey, Grenfell; Babe Coval, Warner's representative, Winnipeg; W. J. Passmore, Moose Jaw; Alvin H. Reetz, Radville; Gerald Deaultry, and H. Johnson, operators' representatives; Dave Griesdorf, United Artists, Winnipeg; H. Walch, Watson; J. A. Vopni, Davidson; C. E. Meilike, Rosthern; H. Cohen, Empire-Universal, Winnipeg; B. Rackow, United Artists, Winnipeg; Harry Hurwitz, Saskatoon; I. Reinhorn, Regina; Charlie Krupp, 20th-Fox, Winnipeg; G. R. Miller, Wynyard; T. J. Gould, Regal Films, Winnipeg; Gus Carlson, Craik; R. Redis, Empire-Universal, Winnipeg; Frank Miley, Saskatoon; Jack Whitehouse, Saskatoon; H. A. Bercovich, Regina; J. Zaitzow, Melville; D. M. Brickman, Paramount, Winnipeg; F. Goldhar, Columbia, Winnipeg; Charles Bahrynowski, Regina; W. E. Winterton, Saskatoon; I. Leavitt, Columbia Pictures, Winnipeg; Reg Plumb, Jack Whitehouse and W. E. Winterton, Saskatoon, and Les Paine, Prince Albert.

AMPA Sets Plans; Film Club at Astor

Notices sent this week to members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in New York on the resumption of meetings for 1938-39, also disclosed plans of the Hotel Astor at Times Square for installing a club devoted to all motion picture interests in the east.

After a series of meetings, the AMPA board has placed in the hands of the membership the decision of a new meeting place. Neither Sardi's or International Casino, both former AMPA luncheon headquarters, are available this year, and the board has now narrowed down its recommendations to the Hotel Piccadilly, Jack Dempsey's and the Hotel Astor, with the preference apparently going to the Astor in view of the hotel's contemplated conversion of its basement grill into a "Film Industry Club."

The hope of the hotel management is to have all intra-industry organizations meeting there for its luncheons and dinners, maintain the room as an exclusive clubroom, available only to members of the film organizations holding regular meetings or other affairs there.

AMPA's directors feel that this would provide the "permanent home" that has been AMPA's goal for years, a commitment to meetings at the hotel also bringing membership in the contemplated club to AMPA members at no extra cost beyond the regular weekly luncheon tariff.

The AMPA board, however, refuses to act on the proposal without a definite pledge of support from the membership.

Also on the AMPA agenda is whether the organization should continue as a luncheon club with vaudeville entertainment as its sole purpose, or else indulge in a more serious approach to industry problems.

Announcements of the first fall meeting will be made as soon as the membership signifies its wishes on these two matters.

The Hotel Astor's contemplated "film industry club" is the third such venture to be undertaken in a few years. The Motion Picture Club, in the Bond Building, at Longacre Square, and the following film club in the Hotel Algonquin both failed for lack of film executive interest and financial support.

Paramount May Tie in with "Look" on New Shorts

Paramount, in connection with "Look" magazine, may issue a new series of shorts, of a "behind the Hollywood scenes" type. The Des Moines Register-Tribune, which publishes "Look," has had an exploitation tie-up with Paramount for some time. However, no definite decision has been made.

George McCall, Hollywood radio commentator for Old Gold cigarettes, will do the same thing for Universal newsreel.

Selznick International has signed Alfred Hitchcock to direct "Rebecca," from the Daphne du Maurier novel soon to be published in the United States.

Production Returning to Normal in London and France Following Sudetenland Agreement

London and Paris reports to New York this week gave indications of a new optimism in the motion picture business which only last week, like all other European industries, was threatened with dire consequences from what seemed like unavoidable warfare.

Production in both English and French capitals was being resumed as the governments of each ordered demobilization, thereby returning clerical and other workers to film offices and the studio talent which had been suddenly ordered out for military duty.

In Paris, record-breaking business was reported in theatres, as Parisians gave expression to the happy relief.

Raymond Luissiez, president of the French Exhibitors' Association, asked distributors Monday to reduce rental and percentage guarantees for those theatres affected during the past two weeks by the international crisis. Many theatres had been compelled to close because managers and staff members were mobilized. Bad business was generally the order at box offices, and in some houses the military ordered exhibitors to turn over their auditoriums to house soldiers. Joint distributor-exhibitor committees now are studying the situation.

In London persons who had not been mobilized from production, distribution and exhibition, were putting away their gas masks and turning attention to normal operations, although surrounded in many sections by hurriedly-dug trenches that had been ordered by the government as a precaution against attack.

No word was forthcoming from Berlin's industry, but it was assumed that similar situations existed there, with box offices probably benefiting from the holiday atmosphere created by Herr Hitler's personal march into his newly acquired Sudetenland. Demobilization in Germany was ordered for October 10th, thus returning thousands of production, distribution and exhibition workers to their normal posts.

What affect the situation will have on the industry in Czechoslovakia and on American film exports to that country are yet to be determined. Hollywood has had a comparatively good market for its films in Czecho, without Nazi influence.

Italy also ordered demobilization for October 10th, allowing for a return of mobilized film workers to its film industry.

In New York, however, the majors were still trying to determine their position in connection with Mussolini's new decree which places Italian distribution virtually in the hands of the government. Last week's crisis in Europe had halted the majors' discussions in New York on the Italian decree, but these talks were being resumed this week. This much is known: all American companies will be compelled to file existing distribution contracts with the new governmental agency, known as ENIC.

The majors here are still awaiting a clarification of the official decree, parts of which seem vague to their foreign experts at New York home offices.

In last week's MOTION PICTURE HERALD, pages 14 and 15, appeared a world map showing the status of the foreign market for American motion pictures, particularly in the areas which were the center of mobilization under the dipping and dripping war clouds.

Fox Newsreel Costs Rise

Truman H. Talley, producer of Movietone News, has said that recent European developments have raised production costs 20%. The newsreel has quadrupled its staff, and an emergency laboratory has been established at Marseilles.

Warners Extend Debenture Date

Albert Warner, vice-president of Warner Brothers, acting "by order of the board of directors," has sent the following to the holders of Warner Brothers optional six per cent convertible debentures, series due 1939:

"The board of directors of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., has extended to December 1, 1938, the right to deposit its optional six per cent convertible debentures, series due 1939, under the plan of exchange and deposit agreement dated as of July 22, 1938, which was previously mailed to you.

"Of the $29,400,000 principal amount of debentures outstanding, $17,457,000 have already been deposited with the New York Trust Company, as depository.

"A large number of debenture-holders have expressed their intention of depositing their debentures under the plan but have delayed doing so, and others, for various reasons, have thus far deferred depositing their debentures.

"We believe it is to the best interest of the debenture-holders and the company that all debentures be deposited as soon as possible in order that the plan of exchange may become effective and thus remove the uncertainty in regard to the debentures.

Sabu Returns to England After American Visit

Terminating a visit of three weeks to the United States, Sabu, young Indian actor who stars in Alexander Korda's "Drums," returned to England last Tuesday on the S. S. Paris. He will be starred next in "The Thief of Bagdad," which Mr. Korda plans to make in color.

High points in Sabu's American visit, for exploitation, were a visit to Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House, a trip to Hollywood, a meeting with Babe Ruth, a weekend at the Marshall Field estate in Long Island, meetings with the Boy Scouts and the Boys' Clubs of America and the opening of "Drums" at the Music Hall.

Dudley Murphy the Director

Dudley Nichols inadvertently was listed as director of "One-Third of a Nation," instead of Dudley Murphy, in the article in last week's issue on the round of entertainment for the winners of the July exploitation contest of Managers' Round Table. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lancaster attended the Monogram luncheon as guests.

U. S. Seeks Stronger Film for Records

Increasing use of motion picture film for the making of permanent records has resulted in the launching of an investigation by the National Bureau of Standards to determine the ability of various types of film to withstand the ravages of time. This may be of importance to the motion picture industry from the viewpoint of raw stock sales and determining stronger film texture.

Film records are being adopted to ever increasing extent by both business organizations with large volumes of records which must be retained more or less permanently, and U. S. government agencies which are finding that the accumulation of years are beginning to tax storage resources.

The pressure for record space for Government documents has increased tremendously since 1914 as a result of the World War, and the depressions, which called into existence a large number of new agencies with accompanying increased filming.

Since a 300-page document can be transferred identically to as many frames of motion picture film and stored in a fraction of the space which would be required for the original material, the advantages of film records are manifest.

At the Bureau of Standards a number of tests are being made on the effects of age upon film, undertaken since the creation of the National Archives, in which are to be stored motion pictures and other film records.

Falls Theatre Sold

No Ads on Warner Screens: Bernhard

Joseph Bernhard, general manager of Warner theatres, told the Philadelphia Real Estate Board last Thursday that he does not allow "any advertising of specific merchandise on our screens." This policy, he added, "has been maintained at the sacrifice of millions of dollars of revenue, because I believe patrons pay to see entertainment and the newspaper is the proper medium for advertising merchandise."

Mr. Bernhard addressed the Board at a luncheon in the Board's Philadelphia offices, where he pledged Warners' 76 local theatres to a campaign of civic betterment, disclosing that his company's business in Philadelphia and environs reached over $10,000,000 annually, represented real estate holdings of $30,000,000, paid local taxes of $500,000 a year, pays rents of $1,400,000 annually for properties which the company does not own, and collects rents of $350,000 from tenants.

Warning the Board that a new civic life is necessary in the community, Mr. Bernhard warned that, "Municipal policies toward capital and labor often determine whether there are strikes, lock-outs or arbitration in labor disputes. And when you have strikes or lockouts, everybody loses."

"What surprises me," he declared, "is that the newspapers, who also have a very important stake in the prosperity of the city, do not unite to propose and sponsor a non-political program for the benefit of the city, instead of spending all their time and space criticizing the political views of each other."

PROTECTION ISSUE HEADING TOWARD OPEN CLASH IN BRITISH EXHIBITION

Independents Link "Strangulation Bars" with Movement Toward Monopoly by Circuits; Double Features Also Argued

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

While England is settling down following the agreement with Germany over the Sudetenland situation and a relieved film industry is returning to normal there is impending a conflict between the circuits and independent exhibitors. Despite the self-administered anesthesia which has made others than the old realists oblivious to the essential facts of the situation, it is becoming increasingly clear that the conflict, long widening beneath the surface, is intensifying rapidly, and, unless a complete change of mind and attitude is forthcoming, may well break into open war.

Latest and most vexing of problems with which British exhibitors are concerning themselves, and the object of discussion and debate in every circle of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, is that of "strangulation bars" ("protection" and "zoning," for example). It has been raised in branches and at the General Council, and is now down for ultimate discussion at the forthcoming resumption of the joint CEA round table with the Kinematograph Renters Society. It is on the cards, too, that it will be tackled, in relation to co-operative booking combines, by the Government-appointed Films Council.

In practically every instance it has been linked up, directly and pointedly, with the allegedly monopolistic methods of the circuits. Any solution, it has been indicated, must be sought only in a solution of the independent-circuit problem, any key designed to open the door to peace must be wielded, it seems, by the circuits themselves. Even the renters, to whom an appeal for collaboration is to be made, are known to take the view that bars, though essentially a matter of joint trading, part and parcel of the bargaining between producer and consumer, can best be settled by the exhibitors themselves, best though not necessarily entirely. It is their view, just as it is that of the slowly awakening body of independents, that so long as the circuits are the holders of bargaining power, so long, too, as the CEA seeks either deliberately or unconsciously, but primarily, to preserve the circuit interest in the CEA, they, the KRS, are powerless to act.

Linked with this crucial problem is the vexatious question of two long films in one program, an irregularity long the objective of an antipathetic CEA policy, but an irregularity still obtaining, quite frankly, for the most part in the circuit houses. Here again the naked elements of the situation are driving a deeper wedge between the independent picture house operator and the larger circuits. Linked as the matter is with the current shortage of product, with the circuits naturally cornering the bulk of the worthwhile films, it is not surprising that a cri de coeur has been heard in more than one local area.

Nor has it surprised those with their ears

VALUES ESTIMATED ON AD VALOREM DUTY

In the world map in the October 1st issue of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, showing the problems of American product in various countries and the participation of Hollywood in their exhibition and distribution activities, there appeared dollar estimates of American film exports, for the first eight months of 1938, from the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

These totals represented the Department of Commerce estimates based upon ad valorem duties upon negative and positive film shipments from America admitted to censorship in those countries. The actual value of the motion pictures is established when the productions are shown.

The map also showed in percentages the extent of American participation in total pictures shown in the countries, quota regulations, restrictions upon money shipments, the degree of censorship, and governmental monopoly.

to the ground that from Leeds, storm center of the independent revolt, should come an urgent demand for the assembly and consolidation of an independent group within the CEA. For instance, John Xavier Prendergast, fighting Irishman with the accents of the Ridings coloring his battle cries, made such a direct and unequivocal demand, provoking the applause of his fellow members by the contention that there could be no solution from Pantons Street, that the independents should organize into a solid fighting front whose interests are divorced from, as he termed them, the trusts which have long monopolized product and booking situations to the virtual extinction of their lesser brethren.

As far back as 1927 history records the efforts of Frank Hill, secretary of the KRS, to regularize or solve the problem of the barring clause. It records, too, the stultification of those efforts by the disinterest of John Maxwell, not only a renter-producer but chief of one of the major circuits. Not only are exhibitor interests supposedly affected by the distribution and production holdings of the circuits, but the policy of the renters is not unaffected by the exhibiting interests of some of their members. Currently it would be too much to expect drastic practical assistance from the members of the KRS. In their view, although the question of bars affects both sides of the renting bargain, it is predominantly one between exhibitor and exhibitor. Nonetheless they will not take kindly to the suggestion that circuit deals, often running into £50,000 ($250,000) for a picture, should be impaired because of what they would describe as "a few bars, some of them possibly unfair."

American Factor

Even more crucial a reason for their unwillingness to take action would be the fears that a body, or its members, predominantly American, might be open to the accusation of restraint of British trade. This consideration, essentially vital and raised by J. C. Graham at the last CEA-KRS round table, is certain to cover their attitude, not only on bars but upon the booking of films generally, and even on the redundancy question, a solution of which has been suggested by the CEA in the withholding of product.

Exhibitors say that the vast majority of the "strangulation bars" are imposed by the circuits against the independents. These time and space bars vary, but one instance already has been given of one town barring another 76 miles away. Bars of five and six miles, imposed by circuit houses in the larger towns and country areas, are quite habitual. It is asserted that, in the face of this, not only is there a marked falling off in attendances but third and fourth-runs are being asked to pay the same percentage as first-runs. Suggestions for a remedy include imposition of a three-mile maximum for bars and the offering of less onerous terms for second and later runs.

Divided on Tactics

Although exhibitor opinion appears to be united in the belief that the circuits are the chief offenders, there is a division of opinion on both corollaries and tactics. Whereas some believe that it is useless to expect the renters to take any action, another body of opinion claims that heavy barring is likely to reduce the ultimate gross on a picture, that there is a limit to the distance which the public will travel to see a film, and to the period during which its enthusiasm lasts, that long distance bars may bring in one patron to the first-run house but leave out five or six from the later runs.

The current shortage of product is greatly concerning independents of the Prendergast school of thought, who foresee an exhibitor crisis arising if the circuits continue their monopoly and exercise it not only in the imposition of "strangulation bars," but in the showing of two "A" films in one program.

It is a battle, they claim, not only against the circuits but against increasing trustification of the industry and ultimate elimination of the smaller exhibitor. They are supporting the General Council's plea for data as ammunition, but place little hope of improvement under present CEA circumstances. The renters themselves might not be averse to a complete reexamination of the whole system of trade, but a rearrangement is another matter.

Silence on Redundancy

The KRS has considered the CEA's redundancy memorandum and has made no reply thus far, but it is authoritatively forecast that the renters will not offer collaboration, with the probable attitude that it is an exhibitor problem, though at the same time diplomatically avoiding a complete dismissal of the plan.

An annual conference of licensing authorities covering the territory in which the London and Home County Branch operates, is planned under the leadership of the London County Council.

The Film Group of the Federation of British Industries held another lengthy meeting to discuss the future of the organization, which is threatened with collapse, but no final decision was reached.

Profit of £122,224 ($611,120) after interest payments and taxation, and profit of £368,197 before those payments, were reported by Oscar Deutsch, president, at the first annual general meeting of the Odeon Circuit.

Lorry Drivers

Selected to play the role in "They Drive by Night," story of England's all-night lorry drivers, is Emyln Williams, actor-playwright. Williams will have the role of a young criminal, who, falsely accused of murder, takes to the lorries of the Great Trunk Roads to evade capture. Arthur Woods will direct.

"They Drive by Night" is to be adapted from a novel by James Curtis and is set against a background of all-night cafes and roadhouses of the Great North Road. Its personnel are the hitch-hike girls and lorry drivers whose business takes them along the great arteries of England while the rest of it is asleep.

Production will be under the Warner First National banner at Teddington.

Ice-Rink

For several sequences in "A Gentleman's Gentleman," the new Eric Blore comedy now in production at Teddington, Warner Brothers took over in its entirety the ice-rink at Richmond, Surrey.

On a hot Indian Summer day, typical Swiss alpine scenes were shot there, early September not being practical for similar scenes even in Switzerland. The rink was cut in half and with the collaboration of the arts department it was possible to shoot indoor and outdoor sequences.

A hundred film extras in flashing woollens and gay mufflers waltzed, glided and "cock-tailed" on the ice against a background of pine clad mountains and timbered chalets.

Later the unit went to the Albert Hall, London, where, with the aid of hundreds of extras, was shot a reproduction of the annual Chelsea Arts Ball, which takes place on New Year's Eve.

Another location trip has taken the Teddington cameramen to Croydon aerodrome.

Co-directors on "A Gentleman's Gentleman" are Austin Melford and Graham Cutts.

Nursing Homes

A nursing home forms one of the sets used in the Gaumont British production of the Jessie Matthews film, "Climbing High," at Pinewood. Now, following the Pinewood precedent, a nursing home set has gone up at the Associated British Studios, Elstree, for a sequence in the film "The Outsider," in which Mary Maguire, Australian, is playing the lead. In the roles of four famous surgeons are London actors Kynaston Reeves, Walter Hudd, Edmond Breon and Ralph Truman.

Pleased with the success of Miss Maguire in "The Outsider," producer Walter Mycroft has signed her to play the part of the

AIR RAIDS POPULAR— IN NEW PICTURES

Air Raid Precautions—colloquially known as ARP, are the inspiration of the new Butcher-Rembrandt production, "Anything to Declare", currently on the floor at Walton-on-Thames under the direction of Redd Davis.

The story, written by Hayter Preston, Fleet Street figure and expert upon international affairs, is designed as a thriller, despite its propaganda leaning. The leading roles are handled by John Loder, Noel Madison and Belle Chrystall. Madison appears as a peace campaigner who has ulterior motives for his pose.

Another ARP film made by British National earlier this year is to be extended from a 3,000-foot documentary into a 6,000-foot feature. It has now been given a dramatic interest by writing in a story showing the effect of ARP on the lives of an everyday couple.

17-year-old heroine in the forthcoming production for Associated British of "Black Eyes." Wilfred Lawson is to appear in the leading male role as a Russian waiter who masquerades before his daughter as a wealthy business man.

It has now been arranged that "Me and My Girl," to be produced at Pinewood, will be directed by Albert de Courville from a scenario by John Paddy Carstairs, and Anthony Havelock Allen will be executive producer.

The rights for the film were obtained in the face of strong American competition by Pinewood interests and already negotiations are under way for a French version. Distribution by General Film Distributors will be worldwide.

A replica of Lambeth Walk will be built in the studio. Lambeth Walk is a noted street in South London's working-class quarters from which the song, "Me and My Girl," derives its name.

A Pinewood personality, Elisabeth Bergner, will execute the intricacies of "The Lambeth Walk" in her film "Stolen Life," and not, as might first be imagined, in the new Lupino Lane production.

Her Fourteenth

Jessie Matthews has completed her fourteenth, and last, film for the time being. It is "Climbing High," now in the cutting room.

"Climbing High," a Gaumont British production, is the second G-B picture to be distributed in this country by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The first was "The Lady Vanishes."

It is the first time that Carol Reed, one of Britain's youngest directors and creator of "Penny Paradise" and "Bank Holiday," has directed Jessie Matthews.

Formby's Brother

Frank Formby, younger brother of British comedy star George Formby, has been signed by Gainsborough to star in a new screen version of the perennial stage success, "Charley's Aunt." With him will be Graham Moffatt and Moore Marriott; hitherto they have been associated with Will Hay.

Special film tests of Formby Number Two were made by Maurice Ostrer, Gainsborough chief, and the results were so satisfactory that a contract immediately was offered.

Itemized

Just off the floor is the Gainsborough Will Hay production, "Old Bones of the River," which is now in the cutting room, under the directorial aegis of Marcel Varnel.

* * *

Shooting has been completed at Elstree on the Associated British spy thriller, "Luck of the Navy," directed by Norman Lee. Geoffrey Toone, Elstree's new discovery, and Judy Kelly have the leading roles.

Canada 16mm. Field Declared Growing

Canada is experiencing a boom in 16 mm. film development, both in the non-theatrical and educational fields, and the large rural areas which have no established theatres are being amply supplied by circuits of 16 mm. operators, according to Helen Mason of General Films, Ltd., of Toronto, who was in New York this week on a film buying trip.

General Films alone supplies more than 80 circuits of itinerant exhibitors out of its Toronto and Regina offices, providing projection equipment and programs of features and short subjects. A recent development is the entry of the N. L. Nathanson organization in the 16 mm. field in opposition to General.

The films used are from one to five years old. General Films has a library of 180 programs consisting of features and short subjects.

FOREIGN PROPAGANDA AGENTS MUST REGISTER

But State Department Hasn't Decided Whether to Include Films under Ruling

The State Department at Washington has yet to determine whether it should compel individuals or companies distributing so-called foreign "propaganda" films in this country to register under the new governmental regulations requiring registration with the Secretary of State of all persons in the United States engaged in propaganda or other activities for political purposes on behalf of a foreign principal.

The State Department, acting under a law passed at the last session of Congress, ordered enforcement of the regulation by this Thursday. Specifically affected are agents of foreign principals whose activities are those of public relations counsel or publicity agent or are in furtherance of any political activity of foreign principals. But, when the question came up this week as whether distributors of foreign "propaganda" films here also are subject to the decree, State Department officials decided to await a concrete test wherein the question is brought formally before the Department.

Refer to Regulations

They did, however, refer to the regulations, which are basically defined as requiring the "registration of any person (meaning an individual, partnership, association or corporation) who acts or engages to act or agrees to act as public relations counsel, publicity agent, agent, servant, representative or attorney for the government of a foreign country, a political party of a foreign country, a person domiciled abroad, a foreign business, foreign partnership, foreign association, foreign corporation, or any domestic organization subsidized directly or indirectly in whole or in part by any of the above."

Disputed Films

The information to be supplied in the registrations was listed as follows: (a) The name, business address and residence address of the registrant; (b) The name of the foreign principal or other person or organization for which such person is acting as agent; (c) A copy of all contracts of employment under which such person acts or agrees to act as such agent, if written, or a full statement of the terms and conditions thereof, if oral; (d) The date when such contract was made, the date of commencement of activity thereunder and the period during which such contract is to be in effect; (e) The compensation to be paid, if any, and the form and time of payment under such contract; (f) The name of every foreign principal, or other person or organization which has contributed or which has promised to contribute to the compensation provided in such contract; and, (g) If the registrant be a partnership, association or corporation, a true and complete copy of its charter, articles of incorporation, co-partnership, association, constitution and by-laws, and any other instrument or instruments relating to its organization, powers and purposes."

Last year Pennsylvania's Governor Earle became embroiled in a dispute over the State Censor Board's banning of Spanish "political" films on the grounds they constituted "subversive" propaganda. Both "Spanish Earth" and "Spain in Flames" were the subjects of similar disputes elsewhere.

Chinese "political" forces, too, have been quietly sending in film preachments on their cause. And there are the "Red" Soviet films distributed in America by Amkino, from New York, many being considered films with a message.

"China, 1937" and "China Strikes Back" were both the cause of skirmishes on "political propaganda" arguments, as were the Soviet's "Baltic Deputy," a pro-labor film, "Millions of Us," and others.

The new governmental regulation followed an investigation by a special committee of the House. It will be administered by the Office of Munitions Control in the State Department for the Secretary of State.

The registration lists will be open to public inspection. Failure to register as required is subject to a fine of not more than $1,000 or imprisonment for not more than two years in a federal penitentiary, or both.

Graham Resigns Paramount Post

John Cecil Graham, for the past 22 years Paramount managing director in Great Britain, resigned last Monday. No successor has been named yet, but indications are that John W. Hicks, the company's vice-president and foreign head, who is now in London, will make an appointment shortly.

Mr. Graham's resignation was cabled from London to Barney Balaban, president, who expressed regret and appreciation of Mr. Graham's long service with the company. Mr. Graham has long been identified with the film industry, having been with the Western Film Company, St. Louis; the Swanson Crawford Film Company, St. Louis; Reliance Motion Picture Company, New York; United Pictures Corporation, Universal Film Manufacturing Company, New York, and Mutual Film Corporation, New York.

He was a director in the following companies: Paramount Film Service, Ltd., London; Paramount Film Service, Sydney, Australia; Paramount British Productions, London; Olympic Kinematograph Laboratories, London; Carlton Theatre Company, Ltd., London; Paramount-Astoria-Theatres, Ltd., London; Paramount-Manchester-Theatre, Ltd., London; Paramount-Newcastle-Theatre, Ltd., London; Paramount-Leeds-Theatre, Ltd.; Paramount-Liverpool-Theatre, Ltd.; Paramount-Glasgow Theatre, Ltd.

Tito Guizar has had his 26 week option taken up by Paramount. In addition to starring in two Spanish pictures, he will be seen in "Lives of a Texas Ranger" and "Guns Over Havana."

Broadcasters Map Winter Program

Members of the executive committee of the National Association of Broadcasters this week laid the ground work for their winter program, taking up, at their first meeting in Washington, in several months, a number of important questions.

Bulking large in the discussions was the copyright situation and the broadcasters' fight against ASCAP, the Florida and Washington ASCAP cases being considered with a view to planning for action by the association to further the cause of the royalty payers.

With no analysis yet available of the data developed by the questionnaire sent out by the association earlier in the month, asking for information as to the use of film material by individual stations, there was little discussion of the association's fight to secure advertising recognition from the motion picture industry.

Officials of the NAB explained that it has been some months since the executive committee met and that the conference this week was called in anticipation of the acceleration of activities during the fall and winter, and the approaching session of Congress and the meetings of the state legislatures. There are a number of matters in which the association is interested, in which developments may be looked for in the near future—legislative and other—to deal with which it is necessary to make plans now.

20th-Fox Appoints Lachmann As Exploitation Director

Twentieth Century-Fox has announced the signing of Marc Lachmann as national exploitation director. Mr. Lachmann, who has been general publicity director for Charles Dillingham and studio publicity director for Universal, has most recently been operating his own advertising and publicity offices in Hollywood. He will make his offices in New York, but will travel to Hollywood frequently.

Sidney Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, and Charles McCarthy, director of advertising and publicity, have returned to New York after a trip to the Coast to view recently completed pictures.

Mae West Has New Backing

A certificate of incorporation filed at Sacramento this week discloses that the name of Mae West's new company is Mae West Empire Pictures, Inc. United Press reports that Louis Lurie, real estate dealer, promoted the plan, which is reputed to have a $5,000,000 backing by San Francisco capitalists. Miss West's first picture will be "Catherine the Great," for which she wrote her own scenario.

20th-Fox Promotes Three

Twentieth Century-Fox this week announced three changes in the foreign department. J. M. Amodio, manager for Colombia, has been made manager of Venezuela; Stanley J. Day, manager of Trinidad, will succeed Mr. Amodio in Colombia, and Herbert White, assistant to Mr. Day, has been appointed manager for Trinidad.

CALL OF THE ROCKIES: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—A return to good weather meant a return in receipts of a normal nature. Satisfied the usual western fans. Running time, 54 minutes. Played September 24. C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y.

CITY STREETS: Leo Carrillo, Edith Fellowes—Very good program picture. Business fair. Played August 31-September 1.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town and rural patronage.

COLORADO TRAIL, THE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—These westerns have been outdrawing our old house-filler, "Hopalong Cassidy," due perhaps to the fact that they are always filled with action. This one pleased all; had a couple of good fights and some good songs and very nice music. Columbia has a sure Friday-Saturday pleaser and drawing card with their Charley Starrett westerns. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

FLIGHT INTO NOWHERE: Jack Holt, Jacqueline Wells—One of the best Jack Holt pictures we have played, but that isn't saying much. Not popular and Columbia thinks he's good, but my audiences can't see it. Played September 7-8.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town and rural patronage.

GLADIATOR, THE: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—The best Joe E. Brown yet.—Mrs. A. H. Krumviede, Lyric Theatre, Box 100, Preston, Iowa.

I AM THE LAW: Edward G. Robinson—Fair picture. Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 25-26.—Floyd Faubion, Long's Theatre, Angleton, Texas. General patronage.

I AM THE LAW: Edward G. Robinson, Wendy Barrie—This picture definitely pleased patrons and brought many voluntary compliments as to its entertaining qualities. The direction is superb and the story unfolds in a manner that builds up both sympathy and admiration for the star and the cause he upholds. Business was slightly better than average. Continued sympathetic roles of this type would, in time, greatly increase Robinson's popularity in the smaller situations. Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 15-17.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

START CHEERING: Jimmy Durante, Joan Perry—Fairly satisfactory to normal business. Running time, 79 minutes. Played September 10.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

First National

CRIME SCHOOL: Gale Page, Humphrey Bogart, "Dead End" Kids—Here is a picture which we did fine business on, due particularly, I believe, to the fact that it featured the "Dead End" kids, which group has established a very fine reputation and will continue to do so if they do not become too typed. I do not believe too many pictures of the "Crime School" type will help them, although it was received with favorable comment by the patrons. Running time, 86 minutes. Played September 22, 23.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Neighborhood patronage.

SECRETS OF AN ACTRESS: Kay Francis, George Brent—Kay Francis in another good picture. It may be a "B" to the producers but it's good entertainment to our patrons, who spoke well for the picture. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 13-14.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Gaumont British

patrons very much. The closing thrill scenes had the audience on the edge of the seats. Good photography and sound. This picture is exceedingly well-cast with everyone contributing great performances. The new GB product is certainly a vast improvement over anything we have had before and indicates this company is making a new and definite bid for recognition with the small town exhibitor. Running time, 70 minutes.—Ernie C. Grindley, Community Theatre, Missoula, Mont. Small town and college patronage.

Grand National

MYSTERY OF THE HOODED HORSEMAN: Tex Ritter—For western fan fare I believe this held its own with average westerns. It brought them in. That's the exhibitor's answer.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RENFREW ON THE GREAT WHITE TRAIL: James Newill, Terry Walker—Patrons seemed to like this show very well. Newill is a good singer and the picture has plenty of action.—Mrs. A. H. Krumviede, Lyric Theatre, Box 100, Preston, Iowa.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BLOCKHEADS: Laurel & Hardy, Patricia Ellis, Billy Gilbert—Out of the ordinary Saturday night business and audience in an uproar. Why anybody would knock this picture we cannot understand. It has its place and wish we could buy more of them. Running time, 57 minutes.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

BLOCKHEADS: Laurel & Hardy—Good comedy. Laurel and Hardy are still popular around here. Too bad they plan to break up. Running time, 66 minutes. Played September 23.—Floyd Faubion, Long's Theatre, Angleton, Texas. General patronage.

CHASER, THE: Dennis O'Keefe, Ann Morris, Lewis Stone—Just a picture that might get by on the double end of a strong feature—but you sure won't miss anything if you don't play it at all. Running time, 75 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

CROWD ROARS, THE: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Morgan—Picture was good. Picture pleased. Had plenty of excitement and comedy to suit all, but, like all features with Taylor in it, it failed to draw. It was played on Bank Night too. Morgan was good in his part. That man's good. Running time, 92 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

FIRST HUNDRED YEARS, THE: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce—Fair picture. Pleased on Bargain Night. Virginia Bruce not very popular here. Played September 14-15.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLD THAT KISS: Maureen O'Sullivan, Dennis O'Keefe, Mickey Rooney—Swell comedy. Drew extra business principally because of Mickey Rooney, who has been getting such a world of publicity in Omaha papers in connection with "Boys Town," which had its world premiere there the same night we opened with this picture, and it satisfied—and then some! Running time, 79 minutes. Played September 7-8.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LONDON BY NIGHT: George Murphy, Rita Johnson—Although English pictures as a whole have not met with much success in our situation, we will say this proved very outstanding on a double bill, with loud applause at the finish. Business average.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MANNEQUIN: Joan Crawford, Spencer Tracy—Seemed to please and that is all that can be expected. Running time, 95 minutes. Played September 16-17-18.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

OF HUMAN HEARTS: Walter Houston, James Stewart, Beulah Bondi—These kind of pictures are very much liked. It is something different from the usual run of pictures. Was very well liked. Running time, 105 minutes. Played September 23-24-25.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

TEST PILOT: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy—One of the best. Be sure and play it. Biggest business we ever had. Played September 5-6.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town and rural patronage.

THREE COMRADES: Robert Taylor, Margaret Sullavan, Franchot Tone, Robert Young—This picture definitely stamps Margaret Sullavan as being of box-office star value. This is not any attempt to minimize the splendid work done by Robert Young, Robert Taylor, and Franchot Tone. But after an absence from the screen, one naturally expects a letdown and it is a source of much delight to see that in this case we had a great story, great stars, and good business. Running time, 97 minutes.—Played September 17, 18, 19.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Neighborhood patronage.

THREE COMRADES: Robert Taylor, Margaret Sullavan, Franchot Tone, Robert Young—A wonderful production from the standpoint of cast and production, but the story is too sad. I like to see them come out smiling, not wiping the tears from their eyes. Taylor, Tone and Young as the "Three Comrades" give an unforgettable performance. Margaret Sullavan has personality, but is a little hard to understand, perhaps on account of German dialect. Photography is excellent. Hard to get the young people in to this type of show. Running time, 98 minutes. Played September 16-18.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

TOY WIFE, THE: Luise Rainer, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young—Yes and no. Generally believe the rank and file of our patronage liked it. Some of the men thought it too mushy and silly but the women went for it. Personally it only enhanced our liking for Luise Rainer and we believe she is fully entitled to her great Award victories the past two years. Running time, 96 minutes. Played September 18-19. Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TREASURE ISLAND: Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper, Lionel Barrymore—Old, but certainly we cannot complain about its drawing power. Did exceptional business on midweek program. Played September 14-15. Running time, 95 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

Monogram

BOY OF THE STREETS: Jackie Cooper, Kathleen Burke, Maureen O'Connor—Just as fine entertainment as one could wish. Built itself up on the second night so that we asked if our factories were started again. Lots came twice to see it. A small town natural if properly exploited.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE LIMBERLOST: Jean Parker, Eric Linden—Good family picture enjoyed by all. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

THIRTEENTH GUEST: Ginger Rogers—Lay this one on the shelf. Absolutely the tops in flops. Running time, 63 minutes. Played September 24.—Floyd Faubion, Long's Theatre, Angleton, Texas. General patronage.

Paramount

BAR 20 JUSTICE: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—Good. Nothing outstanding, but good enough to get by nicely. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

BOOLOO: Colin Tapley, Suratna Asmaka—Step on this, will please most all your patrons. With little extra advertising and special lobby this outgrossed any of the big specials shown here this year. Several thrilling scenes and plenty action and suspense. Running time, 61 minutes. Played September 2-3.—E. L. Fawks, Ritz Theatre, Graford, Texas. Labor and rural patronage.

DOCTOR RHYTHM: Bing Crosby, Mary Carlisle—Here's a funny situation. For the life of us we can't find anyone who says they really like Bing Crosby but as a general rule the gross receipts on his pictures are at least normal and often above. This was true with this one also. Beatrice Lillie helped this picture no little bit. Played September 12-13. Running time, 80 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

IN OLD MEXICO: William Boyd, George Hayes—While this no doubt will please in cities, it is too slow for small towns. Boyd is slipping unless he puts more action in his films. Our patrons won't go for a western star unless he has a fight or two. Come on now, Bill, let's hold the kids' trade, get into action again. Remember, no action has killed the draw for many a western star. Running time, 63 minutes.—E. L. Fawks, Ritz Theatre, Graford, Texas. Labor and rural patronage.

PARTNERS IN CRIME: Lynne Overman, Roscoe Karns—More complaints on this one than in a long time, and the box office certainly showed it. Played September 9-10. Running time, 62 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PRISON FARM: Shirley Ross, Lloyd Nolan—Good double feature; rather depressing to be played alone. Didn't please any too well. Running time, 67 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

SING, YOU SINNERS: Bing Crosby, Fred MacMurray—We played this hot, advertised it to the sky by mail and radio and took in enough to pay for film rental and advertising expense. The picture seemed to please, but we couldn't get them in. To me, "Sing You Sinners" was ruined by about 200 feet of film showing Crosby intoxicated. I don't know how you or your patrons feel about scenes dealing with the star getting intoxicated, but I do know that about 75% lose a lot of interest in any star who has had the misfortune to be so cast. It may seem like a small matter, but any feature we have played with any such scene has taken a tremendous box-office drop after the first day. Irene Dunne lost all draw here after the drinking scene in RKO's "Joy of Living," and now Crosby, who had a big draw here, will also be out due to said scene in "Sing You Sinners." Why will the producers, for the sake of a half-wit's laugh, ruin the drawing power of highly respected and honored stars? Let the supporting cast do the drinking. May Robson in "The Texans" is another example. Running time, 87 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Small town and rural patronage.

SING, YOU SINNERS: Bing Crosby, Fred MacMurray, Ellen Drew—Best Crosby film since "Rhythm on the Range." Grand cast of players and a very interesting story. People loud in their praise for this one. Paramount Dallas exchange gives me real service, fine prints and a square deal at all times. Running time, 85 minutes. Played September 13, 14.—E. L. Fawks, Ritz Theatre, Graford, Texas. Labor and rural patronage.

SPAWN OF THE NORTH: George Raft, Dorothy Lamour, Henry Fonda, Akim Tamiroff, Lynn Overman—Here's a picture that will make you some money. However, the producer saved this one with a hard dive down the home stretch, neck and neck under the wire, and beat old mother failure by a nose, but the old faithful public will not notice this and you will click for some real dough. The finish and the seal are great. Running time, 112 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

SPAWN OF THE NORTH: George Raft, Dorothy Lamour, Henry Fonda—Please hear all: Best to date from Paramount. Believe this company has best action and comedy features for any small town. Good prints, fine service at all times from Dallas exchange. Running time, 110 minutes. Played Sept. 16-17.—

FIVE NEW REPORTERS FROM FIVE STATES

Newly contributing to "What the Picture Did for Me" this week come five showmen from as many states. They are:

CHARLES F. DEARMAN, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tennessee

ERNIE C. GINDLEY, Community Theatre, Missoula, Montana

DONALD D. MUNGELLO, Mary-Ann Theatre, Burgettstown, Pennsylvania

MRS. A. H. KRUMVIEDE, Lyric Theatre, Preston, Iowa

E. L. FAWKS, Ritz Theatre, Graford, Texas

Mr. Fawks' reports are familiar to older readers of the department, but it is almost two years ago since he last reported.

E. L. Fawks, Ritz Theatre, Graford, Texas. Labor and rural patronage.

STOLEN HEAVEN: Olympe Bradna, Gene Raymond—Very agreeably surprised with this, both as to the picture itself and the draw it had. Did extra business on Pal Nights and pleased generally. Personally like this little girl very much and the German music was swell. Running time, 85 minutes. Played September 21-22.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

TROPIC HOLIDAY: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Bob Burns, Martha Raye—This picture may not be the best Burns-Ray, but the bullfight was enough to put it over. My patrons got a good laugh, and mouth advertising brought back good business the second night.—Mrs. A. H. Krumviede, Lyric Theatre, Box 100, Preston, Iowa.

YOU AND ME: George Raft, Sylvia Sidney—If Paramount doesn't give Sylvia Sidney a little better break as far as a story is concerned, one of filmdom's great actresses is due for a downfall. I believe she did as well as she could with the material and so did George Raft, but it was much too flimsy and that goes for business too. Running time, 92 minutes. Played September 20, 21.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Neighborhood patronage.

Republic

BILLY THE KID RETURNS: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Smiley Burnette—Pleased. Drew considerably better than his first picture, although I believe it's Smiley Burnette they come to see here anyway. Running time, 56 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

GANGS OF NEW YORK: Charles Bickford, Ann Dvorak, Alan Baxter—Charles Bickford was really outstanding. Where has he been the past few years? This picture was class "A" production and didn't receive any unfavorable comments. Although it played on a double feature, it did enough to offset what business I lost on account of the annual County Fair. Republic is coming fast and I hope they hold this pace. Running time, 67 minutes.—Donald D. Mungello, Mary-Ann Theatre, Burgettstown, Pa. General patronage.

OLD BARN DANCE, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—This held up well against county fair opposition.—Roy W. Adams, Mason Theatre, Mason, Mich. Small town patronage.

TRIGGER TRIO: Ray Corrigan, Bob Livingston, Max Terhune—Not up to par; business off. Played September 2-3.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

CAREFREE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers—This one deserves all the playing time you can give it. It is the best Astaire and Rogers have delivered and it does carry strong word of mouth advertising. It picked up on the final day of the run here. Gags, plot, and musical numbers are right up to the minute, so don't be bashful in plugging this one heavily. Running time, 83 minutes. Played September 15-16-17.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y.

CRIME RING: Allan Lane, Frances Mercer—Was interesting enough to hold the complete interest of a Friday-Saturday group. We double-featured it, but that wouldn't be necessary, as it's very good. Running time, 70 minutes.—E. A. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

I'M FROM THE CITY: Joe Penner, Kay Sutton—A picture for Penner fans only. The worst he has ever made, but his fans liked it, so why kick. Here Penner is washed up. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LAW OF THE UNDERWORLD: Chester Morris, Ann Shirley—The world's worst melodrama. No reason to make such a picture. The answer to the producer for the trouble of double features. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS: Ruby Keeler, Anne Shirley, James Ellison, Fay Bainter, Ralph Morgan—This is an old fashioned picture of simple country folks. Poorly done, implausible story, not a smile or a cry in a million miles of it. Where, oh where, to find people with money to spend on this kind of goods. Running time, 82 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS: Ruby Keeler, Anne Shirley, Fay Bainter—Good family picture. The little boy Peter (Donnie Dinagan) is very good. This drew well at the boxoffice. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS: Ruby Keeler, Anne Shirley—Well produced feature from the famous book. Will especially please the women. Nothing big but has several good laughs as well as inspiring story. Running time, 85 minutes. Played September 11-12.—E. L. Fawks, Ritz Theatre, Graford, Texas. Labor and rural patronage.

MUSIC FOR MADAME: Nino Martini, Joan Fontaine—Martini does his best in this one. The story if off the beaten path and the music and Martini's singing is excellent. Alan Mowbray and Billy Gilbert help make this picture into good all-around family entertainment. It's old, but don't be afraid to play it. Running time, 75 minutes. Played September 11-12. Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Bob Burns, Jack Oakie, Ann Miller—Very lively musical and enjoyed by all my patrons. Running time, 9 reels. Played September 8.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

RENEGADE RANGER, THE: George O'Brien, Rita Hayworth—A good western. The usual type, but George O'Brien is tops here.—Mrs. A. H. Krumviede, Lyric Theatre, Box 100, Preston, Iowa.

SKY GIANT: Richard Dix, Chester Morris, Joan Fontaine, Harry Carey—One of those airplane pictures not worth a hoot. Little conversation. Not much of a story. Richard Dix poorly cast. Harry Carey in the lead—you heard me—in-the-lead, and it did business at that, as they always do. Running time, 86 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Me. General patronage.

VIVACIOUS LADY: Ginger Rogers, James Stewart—One of the laughing hits of the year. Unfortunately we played this during the time the tail end of the hurricane reached this section. Business was naturally poor. Running time, 90 minutes. Played September 21-22. C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

VIVACIOUS LADY: Ginger Rogers, James Stewart, Beulah Bondi, Charles Coburn—This picture definitely does several things. 1.—Stamps James Stewart as one ring closer to the pinnacle of being a top ranking boxoffice attraction. 2.—Shows that Ginger Rogers needs no dance opus to really "give out." 3.—Places Charles Coburn and Beulah Bondi as being really up there when it comes to extra support. A paradoxical portrayal of Coburn's college president, after seeing a doctor whose ethics did not include inebriation, caused great comment. Seeing Beulah Bondi as more or less of a comedienne was a distinct shock, but comments were favorable. Running time, 90 minutes. Played September 10, 11, 12.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis. Neighborhood patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche—This report is sent in after the first day run. Business good today but doubt if a show of this type will continue to draw after the first day here. The ladies all seemed to enjoy this, while the men just seemed fairly interested. Personally thought it a swell show and one that should even please my farm trade. Running time, 105 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

BATTLE OF BROADWAY: Victor McLaglen, Louise Hovick, Brian Donlevy—Fair business and fair satisfaction. Running time, 84 minutes. Played September 17.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

FOUR MEN AND A PRAYER: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, George Sanders, David Niven, William Henry—Had read the book. It followed it quite closely and is a good picture. But it was so loosely connected and so many of the scenes were dark that it made it very hard for the general movie fan to follow. Running time, 85 minutes. Played September 23-24.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

JOSETTE: Don Ameche, Simone Simon, Robert Young, Joan Davis—This would be a very good feature if it were not for Simone Simon with her unintelligible chatter. Wish she would go back to France. Don Ameche, Robert Young and Bert Lahr are very good. William Collier, Sr., gives a fine performance and Joan Davis is a scream. Ruth Gillette in a very small part is excellent. Good story. Running time, 73 minutes. Played September 14-15.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

JOSETTE: Simone Simon, Don Ameche, Robert Young—A mediocre comedy. It is a little enhanced by the fact Simone sings again. Don Ameche and Robert Young steal the show, with Joan Davis suffering through a part truly unworthy for a leading slapstick comedienne. Business above average, opinion divided.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

KEEP SMILING: Jane Withers—Have previously double-billed this star with great success. However, with this year's increased allocation it was necessary to try her on a single bill. In this vehicle she held up surprisingly well for three days and gave complete satisfaction. While by no means a "big" picture, there is entertainment in "Keep Smiling" for almost everyone. Just a hint to Jane: a surprisingly number of women patrons complained that she was getting "just a trifle too plump." Running time, 77 minutes. Played September 18-20.—W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

KIDNAPPED: Warner Baxter, Arleen Whelan, Freddie Bartholomew—This didn't go over here and it sure didn't have any draw. Companies seem to find it necessary to make these old-timers at a greater cost than something modern, and then—a flop. Baxter is always good, but as we said before, he'd do a lot better in roles less romantic. Played September 16-17. Running time, 90 minutes.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS BROADWAY: Shirley Temple, Jimmy Durante—Not the best Temple production, and by no means could it be ranked as among the poorer ones. It is very extraordinary that this star can continue year after year to turn out such delightful entertainment. Business was the poorest of any Shirley Temple picture ever played here, but this could well be attributed to the times and the fact that our play date was several weeks after all nearby towns. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 11-13. W. J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

RASCALS: Jane Withers, Robert Wilcox, Robert Kent, Borrah Minevitch's Harmonica Rascals—They came and she conquered them. One of the four most potential box-office stars that Fox has, and yet she is being ridiculed by the build-up that she is getting. She is given weak stories, supporting stars and poor direction, but she slaughters all of them and comes out on top. The Harmonica Rascals supplied a relief to her general run of pictures and to this day my patrons are Jane Withers crazy. If Fox would only ease up on putting all of their thoughts on foreign productions and foreign importations of stars that are failures from the day they are given a contract, stars of the caliber of Jane could emerge to the top. Give us more of the Harmonica Rascals and by all means give Jane Withers a break and she will more than repay that break with hit productions. Running time, 77 minutes. Played June 7-8.—Donald D. Mungello, Mary-Ann Theatre, Burgettstown, Pa. General patronage.

SPEED TO BURN: Lynn Bari, Michael Whalen—One of the best audience pictures of the year. Everybody liked it. Running time, 62 minutes.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

THIN ICE: Sonja Henie, Tyrone Power—A small town natural. Some of the old school chums of the star live in this vicinity and boosted her picture. Enjoyed by all, however. Played September 1.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

YOU CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING: Alice Faye, Ritz Brothers, Don Ameche—We played this a little late, but it gave satisfaction to ordinary business. Running time, 100 minutes. Played August 31-September 1.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

United Artists

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER: Tommy Kelly, May Robson, Jackie Moran—A grand picture. Will please all. Every theatre should play it. Business OK. Running time, 91 minutes.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

"A GREAT HELP IN SELECTING THE BEST"

"I read the HERALD each week and use it as my reference always."

"I find this Department to be a great help in selecting the best pictures." — CHARLES F. DEARMAN, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn.

SCARFACE: Paul Muni, Ann Dvorak, Karen Morley—An excellent picture, but print in terrible shape. Fortunately it was a gangster picture and the noise was such that the guns were going most of the time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

DEVIL'S PARTY, THE: Victor McLaglen, Beatrice Roberts—Might hold up on double bill. Print very bad. Running time, 65 minutes. Played September 13.—Floyd Faubion, Long's Theatre, Angleton, Texas. General patronage.

DRACULA AND FRANKENSTEIN (Reissues): Bela Lugosi, Boris Karloff—These pictures cleaned up when they first came out. Imagine my surprise when crowds stormed my theatre to see these two pictures on different play dates. I still can't get over it. Dracula played on a Western double feature and Frankenstein also played on a Western double feature. If Universal put these pictures back out on an experiment basis, the experiment evidently worked. The public must like horror pictures and I hope that Universal will follow up with more of them. Played August 29-30, and July 23-24.—Donald D. Mungello, Mary-Ann Theatre, Burgettstown, Pa. General patronage.

LITTLE TOUGH GUY: "Dead End Kids," Robert Wilcox, Helen Parrish—Fine, cool weather and the desire to see the "Dead End Kids" gave us two good audiences. Satisfactory. Running time, 83 minutes. Played September 7-8.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

LITTLE TOUGH GUY: "Dead End Kids," Robert Wilcox, Helen Parrish. Fine, cool weather and the storm. There must be a reason and that reason is obvious. A picture that can satisfy the masses and not the few. This picture was right down the groove. I will venture to say that these boys will be the greatest box-office attraction of the coming year. Keep up the good work, Universal, and give the public what they want and not what you want. Running time, 83 minutes. Played, August 21-22.—Donald D. Mungello, Mary-Ann Theatre, Burgettstown, Pa. General patronage.

RAGE OF PARIS, THE: Danielle Darrieux, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—This picture holds my all time low for a Friday-Saturday playdate. When will the majors realize that the American exhibitors are wise to the set-up of importing a foreign star of renown in Europe to this country and building her up to pass inspection and then attempt to clean up in Europe on her pictures. The picture was very good, the girl was excellent, the critics gave this picture the best write-ups, but the critics do not pay to see a show and I am also a free customer. This picture did not make expenses, but if Universal used any other American star I would have done much better. Running time, 78 minutes. Played, August 19-20.—Donald D. Mungello, Mary-Ann Theatre, Burgettstown, Pa. General patronage.

RAGE OF PARIS, THE: Danielle Darrieux, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.—We had more compliments on this picture than we have had on a picture for a long time. Give this your best date. Running time, 78 minutes. Played September 14-15.—Floyd Faubion, Long's Theatre, Angleton, Texas. General patronage.

SINGING OUTLAW: Bob Baker, Joan Barclay—Through an error Universal sent this show while we had the "Outlaw Express" advertised. The kids soon noticed the difference. However, the show pleased and we had fair business. Rain cut down the attendance. Running time, 56 minutes. Played September 3.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

Warner Brothers

COWBOY FROM BROOKLYN: Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell, Priscilla Lane, Dick Foran—Here is a picture that with us did not make its guarantee on percentage.

As goofy a plot as ever thrown together that hit a new low at the box-office. Again Miss Lane comes to the front with her ability. Running time, 77 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

COWBOY FROM BROOKLYN: Pat O'Brien, Dick Powell, Priscilla Lane—Excellent musical comedy that kept the house in an uproar of laughter just about all the time. An A-No. 1 comedy. We had the misfortune of rain on the first night's showing of this picture. Warner pictures are getting better all the time. Keep up the good work, Warner Brothers. Running time, 79 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

CRIME SCHOOL: Gale Page, Humphrey Bogart, "Dead End" Kids—A fair picture. Drew well and pleased all who came. Running time, 91 minutes. Played September 9-10.—E. L. Fawks, Ritz Theatre, Graford, Texas. Labor and rural patronage.

MEN ARE SUCH FOOLS: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart—Another slapstick comedy that got by on a double bill. Do not try it single as it is just fair. Priscilla Lane is showing more talent in each show. Running time, 71 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OVER THE WALL: Dick Foran, June Travis—Sold as a special, this does not come up to a fair program picture. Title and advertising very misleading. Pass is up. Running time, 61 minutes. Played September 4-5.—E. L. Fawks, Ritz Theatre, Graford, Texas. Labor and rural patronage.

WHITE BANNERS: Claude Rains, Fay Bainter, Jackie Cooper—Good picture, good story, good acting and directing. What more would anybody want? This drew quite well. Sound only fair. Running time, 96 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BLUEBIRD'S BABY: Broadway Follies—Had read so many good comments on this that we thought it would be a knockout, but was disappointed. Just fair. Perhaps we figured too much on this one. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 6—We always have a feeling of satisfaction in showing this series.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CLEANING HOUSE: Captain and the Kids—A whoop went up from our child audience when the Katzenjammers were flashed on the screen. I think making shorts with definite tie ups with Sunday comic sections is a good idea. Running time, 8 minutes.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.

FOOTBALL THRILLS: Pete Smith Specialty—A dandy sport reel showing the forward passes of last year. Give it preferred time. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

JUNGLE JUVENILES No. 2: Peter Smith Specialty—Excellent for the kids. They ate it up, and I think even the adults enjoyed it. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAN IN THE BARN: Historical Mystery—These shorts might be good, but they do not care for them here. Running time, 10 minutes.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

NEW AUDIOSKOPIKS, THE: Special Subject—Very good and was liked by all. Make more of these novelties. The people like something different. Running time, 8 minutes.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

PARTY FEVER: Our Gang Comedy—An average Gang and OK.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PENNY'S PARTY: Prudence Penny, Gwen Lee—Pete Smith rings the bell again with this extraordinary color short. If as much care were taken with the continuity and direction of other shorts, I am sure the dome of the single feature presentation would not be very far hence. The "getting across" of a subject like home-making with comedy is definitely a good idea. Running time, 9 minutes.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.

SNOW GETS IN YOUR EYES: Virginia Grey, Roger Converse—Fair musical with some comedy. Running time, 20 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

THREE MEN IN A TUB: Our Gang—Although we have contended the Our Gang comedies are slipping, this brought the house down.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

MAGIC ON BROADWAY: Screen Song—About the poorest band act we have played.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Very good newsreel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

STRIKE: Spotlight—Excellent. If all shorts were as good as Husing's this exhibitor would have no kick coming. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TEARS OF AN ONION: Color Classic—A dandy colored cartoon novel and good any place any time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

YOU LEAVE ME BREATHLESS: Screen Songs—This one is worse. Running time, 6 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BIT AND BRIDLE: Sportscope—A very nice high-class sport reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FALSE ROOMERS: Edgar Kennedy—This one is also a marked improvement in Kennedy's comedy. A series of sure-fire gags accompanied by well-written situations. Running time, 17 minutes.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

MARCH OF TIME: No. 7—One of the best reels to play.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Can. Small town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME (MEN OF MEDICINE): No. 11—I do not believe we would have very many dissenting votes if we nominated this short one of the outstanding ten of the season. I believe the "March of Time" would do well to continue making specialized "March of Times" of this type, especially controversial subjects, because they seem to attract much attention and are of great value to the box-office. Running time, 11 minutes.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.

ASKS CONSENSUS OF EXHIBITORS

"This is my first attempt to enter the 'What the Picture Did for Me', and I have put some thought in my reports. I believe that more exhibitors should wake up and openly state what pictures are boxoffice and what are not. The distributors are coming around to the exhibitors and they should be encouraged rather than knocked for what steps they take to better production."

"It would be a smart move on the distributors' part to seek a general consensus of the exhibitors as to what type of pictures would mean box-office and what pictures or type of pictures the exhibitors hesitate about dating."

"You, the MOTION PICTURE HERALD, should work this up for the sake of the industry, of which you are an important part. I possibly may be wrong but I stand in front of my theatre and try to judge people and sometimes bark about a show that is supposed to be good, but the average person has his or her mind made up about types of pictures and they are guiding themselves accordingly. If this is countrywide, why shouldn't the distributors follow suit and make an attempt to play up to this advantage?" — DONALD D. MUNGELLO, Mary-Ann Theatre, Burgettstown, Pa. General patronage.

MICKEY'S PARROT: Walt Disney Cartoon—The best Disney we've played so far. Running time, 8 minutes.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

SALT SHAKERS: Nu-Atlas—I have read several bad comments on this reel and when we showed it was agreeably surprised that it is as good as it is. Our trade enjoyed this little vaudeville act immensely. Would say above average. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

GOOSE FLIES HIGH, THE: Terry-Toons—A very good black and white cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PORTRAITS OF PORTUGAL: Magic Carpet Series—The travelogues are always acceptable and instructive. We always feel we are giving the audience a cheap trip.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Can. General patronage.

Universal

RHYTHM CAFE: Musical Comedy—Just another Mentone, but it is a little better than its predecessors. Running time, 20 minutes.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

MY LITTLE BUCKAROO: Merrie Melodies—Good. Running time, 9 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa.

OUT WHERE THE STARS BEGIN: Broadway Brevities—One of the best color reels we have had the privilege to show. Wonderful, so do not waste it. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SEPTEMBER IN THE RAIN: Merrie Melody—Another excellent color cartoon from Warner.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SNEEZING WEASEL: Merrie Melody—Very good gags and color in this one. Running time, 7 minutes.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

ZERO GIRL: Broadway Brevities—A remarkably good short woven around an ice ballet wherein many of the principals out-Sonja Sonja Henie. It certainly does prove that some Yanks are pretty good on ice skates also. Running time, 18 minutes.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Serials

Columbia

MYSTERIOUS PILOT, THE: Capt. Frank Hawks—We are playing this serial in midweek and feel that it is doing us extra business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Republic

LONE RANGER, THE: Lee Powell, Herman Brix—Perhaps it was due to the tremendous radio publicity, perhaps to the fact that one of our metropolitan dailies launched a tremendous campaign on the opening of this subject as a comic strip, or perhaps it was just luck, but our opening of this serial has accomplished something for our house that in the past two years we have been unable to do, namely, to attract large kid Saturday matinee audiences.—H. J. Quartemont, Parkway Theatre, Milwaukee, Wis.

IN COURTS

Argument on "Lynton" Scheduled for Tuesday

The final hearing before Special Master Kenneth E. Walser in the infringement suit brought by Margaret Ayer Barnes and Edward Sheldon against the Moredall Realty Corporation, owners of the Capitol theatre, New York, has been set for Tuesday. The hearings, which have been going on for months, are being held to determine the profits at the Capitol on "Letty Lynton."

A decision is also expected shortly in the authors' suit against Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures Corporation, MGM Distributing Corporation, Loew's, Inc., and Culver Export Corporation.

Shubert Ordered to Testify in Duco Case

Lee Shubert, as treasurer of Duco Corporation, has been ordered by New York Supreme Court Justice Samuel H. Hofstadter to submit to examination before trial Friday in the suit brought by Jacob J. Shubert, as an officer of Duco Corporation, against Charles D. Coburn for an accounting and damages of $674. Justice Hofstadter, who directed Mr. Shubert's examination on application of Mr. Coburn, also granted an application of the Shuberts for an examination of Mr. Coburn, the defendant.

The suit charges that the defendant, as an officer of Duco Corporation, sold the film rights of the play, "The Farmer's Wife," in May, 1937, and failed to turn over the proceeds to the company. The defendant has counter-claimed against the Shuberts for $6,000 claimed received for the sale of scenery and properties of the play.

Decision Reserved on "Pilot"

Federal Judge Alfred G. Coxe this week reserved decision on a motion by Mrs. Dolores Lacy Collins Henderson, widow of the late James H. Collins, test pilot, for an injunction restraining Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer from continuing to use the title "Test Pilot" or any incidents from her husband's posthumous book, "Test Pilot," in the motion picture of the same name. The court also reserved decision on a defense motion for dismissal of the complaint in Mrs. Henderson's suit for an injunction and $1,000,000 damages.

Wadsworth Sues De Luxe

A suit for $100,000 damages against De Luxe Laboratories, Inc., in the New York supreme court was revealed when Mason Wadsworth, the plaintiff, filed papers seeking permission to amend his complaint. The plaintiff, who produces commercial pictures, contends in his complaint that in September, 1935, he delivered the negative of "Courage of Kay" and in March, 1937, the negative of "The House That Jack Built" to De Luxe for storage. Without the consent of the plaintiff, the complaint continued, the defendant removed the negatives to New Jersey, where they were destroyed by fire. The suit seeks $40,000 for loss of the negatives and $60,000 for loss of profits on contracts and leases.

WHY NOT TELL THEM

For what the theatre gives in exchange for what it gets, the average picture show ranks among today's best bargains.

That's been said before and will continue to be, here and elsewhere. It is repeated now because of a hand-bill from Bill Johnson, advertising a date sometime back on "Conquest" at the Opera House, Millinocket, Me.

Headed: $3,000,000 for 35c, the Johnson copy points out:

"Three million dollars was spent in creating the superb motion picture 'Conquest.' Yet those who see it at the Opera House will get that amount of entertainment for 35 cents. This is probably the best buy in the history of the world."

"It cost only seven cents to make a loaf of bread, but you pay ten. An automobile that costs $400 to make sells for $700. A rancher sells beef for 6 cents a pound. You pay 60 cents for a pound of steak."

"But when you attend a truly great picture, you buy two hours of the most magnificent entertainment ever conceived for a tiny fraction of its cost."

Johnson does not take for granted his public knows the theatre gives more for value received than most any other merchant in town. His way of telling it is recommended.

IT'S GOOD BUSINESS, INDEED

The cry from the field for better exploitation in pictures isn't as loud as it used to be. Hollywood is doing a more showmanly job of it. Not the least important reason is the increasing list of theatremen in production. For instance, Bill Thomas, of Paramount.

Thomas recently produced "Campus Confessions". It wasn't intended to be an epic. In fact, it isn't even colossal. But Bill, experienced showman that he is, was smart enough to incorporate something new, a basketball background, with the famed Hank Luisetti doing his magic ball-handling abetted by two of the best college fives on the Coast. Wherever there are basketball fans—and the number runs into millions—able theatremen plugging this unique and thrilling entertainment will profit thereby.

And able theatremen will continue to hustle behind other productions bearing the stamp of men who started on the firing line. That's only good business.

From date of this issue, there still remains exactly one week for theatremen to forward all remaining entries for the third Quarter of the Quigley Awards. Deadline is set for October 15th, midnight, which, as usual, means that all campaigns to be eligible must be received here no later than that time.

It is again emphasized that exploitations effected in behalf of Motion Pictures' Greatest Year may be entered for the Competitions. Entrants are requested to select those individual ideas for which they wish to be credited and forward in the usual manner. Campaigns on openings, anniversaries and institutional drives, etc., are also eligible.

WORDS CAN HARDLY DO IT

What the winners of the July Contest have to say about their week in New York as guests of the participating companies, is set down on a following page. The boys did not feel up to writing much about it. They opined the welcome was a bit overwhelming, that words would not go far in describing their reactions and appreciations.

It can well be imagined. The reception given the visitors ranks right at the top in coverage and enthusiasm. To those who contributed in making the memory of the occasion something to be long treasured, the fortunate theatremen and your Round Table bow gratefully.

PROFITABLE SCREWBALL-ERY

It happened in Boston, during the recent high wind, relates Monroe Greenthal. Art Catlin, United Artists' exploiteer, in town on behalf of "Hurricane," prevailed upon the theatre to take out hurricane insurance in the expectation of some free and unusual publicity. The papers refused to bite hard, giggled at the angle, and that was just about that.

Time passed. Came the hurricane. It blew off the canopy of the theatre carrying the insurance, still in effect.

The old saw says a showman does not have to be crazy—but it helps. It sure did, this time.

Opening morning Sam staged a bicycle parade that rode around town for two hours, winding up at the theatre where kids parked the bikes out front and went inside to see the first episode.

Round Table In Pictures

An effective piece of front-of-house exploitation was engineered by Castro Ramos at the Cine Plaza in Rio de Janeiro on the occasion of the opening of "Her Jungle Love." Giant cutout palm trees were effectively planted at entrance which necessitated patrons walking between them to enter.

Effective indeed was window display promoted in Gimbel Brothers by Manager Charles Kurtzman for the opening of "Marie Antoinette" at Loew's Penn Theatre, Pittsburgh. Back drop consisted of pastel painting of characters in the picture; prominently displayed was neat credit card.

Sightseeing trip covering the main points of interest in Radio City was one of the featured events arranged for the July Contest winners. Stopping off at the observation tower atop the RCA building, the boys paused for pictures through the courtesy of S. Barret McCormick, RKO Radio Pictures advertising and publicity director. In the group to right are Paul Shipley, Seth Field, Harry Rubin and Rex Williams. Field, visiting in New York at the time, went along for the fun.

Tracy Serial Receives Quaker Cooperation

Tied in with the Republic serial, "Dick Tracy Returns" by a $50,000 cooperative campaign, the manufacturers of Quaker Puffed Wheat and Quaker Puffed Rice bring the famous cartoon strip character back to the air in a 15-minute five-day-a-week program, coast to coast via NBC's red network.

Half-page ads in full color, headed "For All Adventure Fans—'Dick Tracy Returns' to the Air Tomorrow," run in the comic sections of 40 newspapers. More than 300 Quaker Oats salesmen are now in the field with special instruction booklets on theatre cooperation. Local jobbers are supplied with tieup window streamers, counter cards, etc.

Republic's serial will receive weekly plugs nationally over the entire network. Theatre spot announcements are being handled locally. Regular trailer on serial draws attention to Tracy in both newspaper strip and air progress.

Warners Effect National Tieup for "The Sisters"

National tieup arranged by Warner Brothers with General Mills' product, Softasilk Flour, for "The Sisters," will be based on national distribution by flour company of 500,000 boxes of flour, each carrying a portrait in four colors of Anita Louise and picture credits. General Mills will be supplied with playdates on the feature, and will contact its sales force throughout the country, in order to arrange displays.

Yam Session Held by Ralston for "Carefree"

Howard Ralston, manager of the Granada Theatre, Santa Barbara, allowed the kids one more flight at fun before the opening of school by holding a "Yam session" on Saturday afternoon. To every boy and girl who brought two yams to the "Mickey Mouse" show, free tickets were given in exchange, these admitting the holder to the showing of "Carefree."

Hook-ins were made by Ralston with several big stores who featured the sale of yams along with an announcement of the run of the picture. All the yams accepted in exchange for the free tickets were distributed among Santa Barbara's less fortunate persons. Yams sold at two for one cent.

Sonja Henie's "Junior Olympics Club", which had its beginning shortly after the star made her first skating appearance on the screen, reports an enrollment of over 14,000 American youngsters, including grammar and high school students. Tie-ins with local clubs are being made in various sectors on advance campaigns for "My Lucky Star".

Domestic and foreign winners in Paramount's $5,000 advertising and exploitation contest held in connection with the celebration of the company's international sales drive, "Paramount on Parade," have been announced by Neil F. Agnew, vice president of Paramount Pictures, Inc., in charge of domestic distribution.

In the domestic contest, entries were divided into five divisions according to populations of the various cities. The following managers were the winners:

Class A, for cities where the population is above 250,000, resulted in first prize, $500 being won by Charles B. Taylor, of Shea's Buffalo Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y. Second prize, $250, was taken by John Hardgrove, Loew's Broad Theatre, Columbus, Ohio. Third prize, worth $150, was won by Ray Bell, Loew's Capitol Theatre, Washington, and fourth prize of $100 was awarded to John H. Echols, Denham, Denver, Colo.

Round Tablers Well Represented

Second prize of $250 was awarded to Bob Fulton, Paramount Theatre, Waterloo, Iowa. "Doc" Elliott of the Ohio Theatre in Lima, Ohio, won third prize of $150 and Frank W. Miller, Metropolitan Theatre in Morgantown, W. Va., won fourth, receiving $100.

July Contest Winners Write Their Impressions of Prize Trips to the Big City

How the visiting theatremen felt about their journey in these parts is conveyed on this page, being set down here the sentiments of Harry Rubin, Tivoli, Michigan City, Ind., Rex Williams, Hoosier, Whiting, Ind., J. P. Shipley, Dunkin, Cushing, Okla., and Wm. Saxton, Loew's, Baltimore, Md. The fifth member of the party, Rodney Collier, who won the Warner Bros. prize, afflicted with an eye infection, was unable to make the trip at this time. Listen to Harry Rubin:

Rubin Impressed by Sincerity

To the average individual from a small town, New York seems a big and tremendously cold place. But contrary to my previous thoughts, I found it to be the warmest spot in the country last week. Not only were we entertained royally but were given every attention and courtesy by every one we met. The big men of the industry dropped everything to extend us a cordial welcome. To me, it was amazing, especially now when they are unusually busy with the industry drive and the new season product, for them to lay by their work to see we were properly taken care of.

These courtesies gave me an entirely new slant on the film industry which we usually are led to believe is a pretty cold proposition. To me, that feeling has been completely reversed. I believe there is more good fellowship in the business today than in many other industries. That's how it impressed me and will remain in my mind more than anything else during our week's sojourn in New York.

Now Rex Williams will go on from there and give you his version of the eventful week. Meet Rex, folks, and thanks for listenin'.

Williams Praises Ad Departments

Yes, Harry, I agree with you 100 per cent. Never in my life have I ever received such genuine good treatment as has been extended to us this past week. However, I was particularly impressed with their eagerness to consult with men in the field. To get their views on exploitation, advertising and publicity setups as well as star value public reception to type pictures.

I have had an idea as to the tremendous task each company has in properly servicing its various exchanges, but never gave the processing much thought. Facing a schedule of some 50 or so pictures a year and knowing that a complete campaign has to be made up on each and every one of them is in itself one mighty difficult task. How complete advertising campaigns are laid out in detail, gone over time and again, giving every consideration to suggested copy, layout and tie-ins. Trying to cover every possible medium to give a flawless campaign to the exhibitor regardless of the size of his city or type clientele he has.

Some of us have been laboring under the impression as to so called specials and percentage pictures getting the bulk of expert thought with the less powerful program attractions taking the hindmost. Such is definitely not the case—every single picture, no matter who the star or director may be, gets every possible attention from the very same minds that work the specials. Naturally, some specials are more adaptable to extra tie-ins and such but the meat of all pictures is handled in the same manner.

They appreciate the fact that we are all different. I may like one style of cut or mat, a certain press story or an attention-compellor with more punch. My cousin exhibitor nearby will have opposite opinions, but the ad men work as hard as they can to satisfy both of us.

I compliment these boys in New York, that sweat over their desks day in and day out to give us a complete variation of publicity, advertising and exploitation ideas, and am more appreciative of their work. My word to the boys in the field is to feel free at all times to send along any suggestions or ideas to these men in the home offices who impressed me as being on the alert and anxious to cooperate in every way.

Well, I've said my piece, and leave the floor to Paul Shipley, who can tell you more about where we were and what we did. Take it away, Paul, and good-by, friends.

Shipley Enjoys It All

From the very moment that we arrived starting each day at a very early hour, our time was entirely taken up with entertainment. The schedule was so full that at first glance it seemed impossible that we would be able to meet all of our engagements.

For the first time after many years in show business, I fail to find a superlative that would adequately fit the situation. It would be impossible to set down all of the places that we were taken to. The side trips to the various spots of interest in and around New York are as follows:

The first day, we attended the open golf tournament held at the Fenway Golf Club in White Plains. There we met Ralph Goudahl, Gene Sarazan, Paul Runyon and many other top golfers. Incidentally, the writer found out what was wrong with his golf game.

Finds Conference Interesting

A very interesting conference was held at the United Artists' home office with George Schaefer, Monroe Greenthal, and Ben Washer. A trip through their offices included an explanation of how pressbooks are originally approached and after listening to the tremendous amount of research work necessary in covering all angles we had very few suggestions to make.

One of our most enjoyable luncheons was held the second day as guests of Monogram Pictures, with Edward Golden, George Weeks and Lou Lifton present. We held a discussion on general theatre ideas and the business end of motion pictures.

Met Babe Ruth at the Brooklyn game and Billy Terry, the Giants manager. Attended the Jai Alai games, visited the Queen Mary, and made the special tour arranged through Radio City and Music Hall through the courtesy of Mr. Van Schmus, Mr. Eysell and Mr. McCormick. These were just a few of the many interesting things that were arranged for us, including lunch as guests of RKO-Radio.

Attends Studio Party

Mr. Gillham, director of advertising for Paramount Pictures arranged a party for us at the Astoria Studios. Spent several hours on the set of "One Third of a Nation," with Sylvia Sidney and Leif Erickson who were making scenes for this picture. We also met Aline McMahon, being directed by William Howard in a picture yet to be named. Immediately after the work in the studio ceased, a party was held which all of the press and fan magazine writers attended.

Most interesting was the reception arranged by Mr. Quigley in his offices at which industry leaders were present.

Of course, it is almost impossible to mention even a small number of the many things that were arranged for us, but not to be overlooked was attending the performance of "I Married an Angel" and an informal meeting with Zorina back stage.

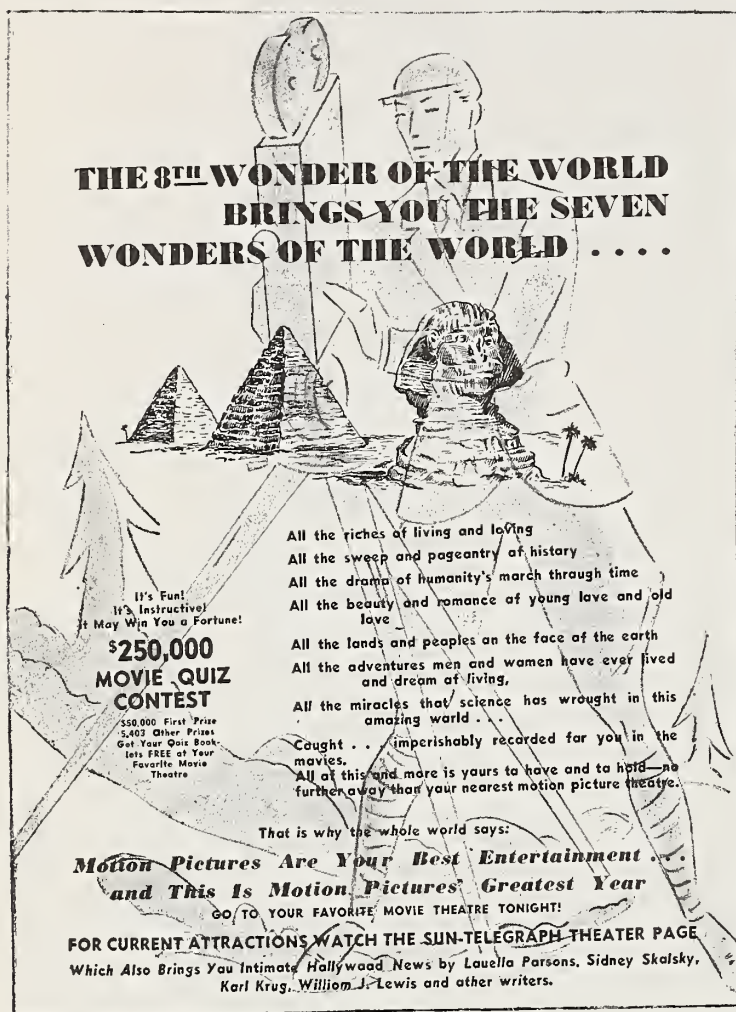

All in all, it was one of the biggest weeks in my life, and I will not forget it in a hurry. Now, I'll let Billy Saxton pick up from here.

Saxton Bows to Round Table

Of course, the opportunity of getting together with boys from various parts of the country and getting their views on exploitation and theatre operation is a real education to anyone. Although my co-winners were from distant Oklahoma and Indiana, I must admit my discussions with them regarding various phases of our business has given me a lot of food for thought and feel it would be a great help to theatremen if they could get together occasionally and discuss the various problems between themselves. Many times, the men in the smallest towns will be doing things unbeknown to the fellow in the big town that may turn out to be an asset to the fellow in the big city. I realize now, more than ever, that your Round Table has done a great deal to foster that thought amongst theatremen throughout the country and what a marvelous help MOTION PICTURE HERALD has been to the thousands of theatremen.

Typical of the effective copy and layout in large size ads contributed by important newspapers are the above from the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and the Pittsburgh Press. Approximately a quarter of a page each in size, Harry Goldberg, Warner Theatres advertising director, reports these displays as representative of the cooperation given by leading dailies to all theatres in various key city situations.

Newspaper Contest Aids "Alexander's Ragtime Band"

Planted in the Cleveland Plain Dealer by Manager Ed Miller and publicist Manny Pearlstein for "Alexander's Ragtime Band" date at the Warner Hippodrome was contest in which readers were invited to write an essay on what they considered the most outstanding scientific advancement of the past 25 years. First story of two columns by 85 lines broke three days in advance and continued daily right through opening day. Final story announcing the winners, broke during the engagement. Cash and ticket prizes were awarded.

Tieup was effected with Neon Clock Company, whereby 11 by 14 size cards plugging the picture were spotted in all of their 100 clocks throughout the city. Boys promoted 100 word announcement following special Berlin program broadcast 10 days ahead of opening and various plugs were given ahead and during run. Numerous windows were planted and tieup with local news company brought window cards.

Various Slants Used to Publicize "Carefree"

The skeet episode in "Carefree" was made the basis for a tiein with the Local Bridgeport, Conn. skeet club during the musical's run at the Warner Theatre. The Skeet Club named one of its shooting contests after Ginger Rogers and the winner was awarded passes to see the picture. Display cards were used around the club grounds.

At the Roger Sherman Theatre in New Haven, hookup was arranged with station WELI for a three day contest in which various Irving Berlin numbers from the picture were broadcast and listeners guessing correct titles were awarded passes. Ten paid were given at each broadcast and sidewalk interviews were also a highlight of the tiein.

A "Carefree" rose was given to each feminine patron of Loew's Penn, Pittsburgh on the opening day through the courtesy of cooperating florist. Tiny tag attached to the stem of each bloom bore title and name of the donor.

"Room Service" Gets World Premiere in Chi.

For the world premiere of "Room Service" at the Palace Theatre, Chicago, campaign was highlighted by hotel tieups tying in with the "room service" theme. Postcards with caricatures of the Marx Brothers as waiters were placed around front office desks of all leading hotels. Mammoth sized easel on which were mounted stills was also planted and attraction and theatre notices tacked on all hotel boards in addition to announcement cards on tables in grilles of leading night spots.

A "room service" drink was featured in 30 drug stores and five and ten tied in the stars with a display of nuts. Three boys dressed in red bellboys' uniforms properly bannered and made up to look like Groucho, Chico and Harpo, paraded streets. An animated lobby front featured large cutouts of the Brothers with legs, arms and eyes moving. Radio campaign embraced man-on-the-street broadcast over Station WIND, who questioned folks on the picture.

"If You Must Cut Prices, Then Don't Go Half Way"

So Advises Member in Observations on Results of Reducing Admissions

To cut or not to cut is the problem that may be faced by many a theatre manager, particularly in an off-season. Within the past year I have had an unusual opportunity to observe the effects of high prices and low prices, bargain prices and cut prices, on the grosses of one certain theatre. Some of these observations may be of interest.

For several years the house of which I am manager had been the only theatre in this town. Regular prices were, and still are, 10 cents for children and 25 cents for adults in the afternoon; 15 cents and 35 cents in the evening. The house seats about 850 and was a profitable situation as long as it had the town to itself.

Three hundred adults in an evening was a fair crowd and we drew up to twice that figure on the better pictures. Business was fairly steady and consistent through the week. During the fall and winter months about all that was necessary to insure good business was to plug the pictures and make up for the poorer ones with some extra attraction when possible.

Suggests Bargain Days

When warm weather set in and business went into a slump, a bargain day always seemed to help snap us out. A fairly good program picture advertised at two-for-one well in advance would invariably draw enough extra people to give us as good a gross as we would have had without the cut. The people appreciated these bargains and generally came back within a day or two to see another program at regular prices. Sometimes two or even three bargain days fairly close together were necessary to get the crowd coming this way, but once the "movie habit" was well established it usually lasted for several weeks. All in all, bargain days were a thoroughly desirable booster.

Then competition moved in and attempted to either grab off some of the profits or sell out at a good price. They had poor equipment, a decrepit building which has since been condemned and razed, and very little to offer in the way of pictures. They got neither profit nor a good price and were soon cutting prices desperately in order to get any business at all. Since this town is definitely not large enough nor rich enough to support two theatres of any sort, it soon became necessary to do some cutting on our own part to hold our business. Bargain prices eventually became cut prices, and competition became cut-throat.

Practically every angle was used at one time or another. Some with considerable success; others without. The following are among the general principles governing price cutting learned as a result of this experience.

Discourages Half Way Measures

When cutting against competition it does not pay to go half way. We take in more money and have a happier crowd when we slash to 10 cents straight than when we try a two-for-one or even stop at 15 cents. A possible exception is when the opposition is running a high priced picture at, say, 15, in the afternoon; 25, at night.

The author of this article, an active and well-known Round Tabler, in expressing his views on price-cutting, in this instance desires the elimination of the usual by-line. It is meant to be nothing more than the experiences and recommendations of the writer in a situation he indicates was forced upon him for the information of other readers who may find themselves so beset.

Running at 10 cents will bring out a crowd of people who practically never go inside a theatre at any other time. Running at 15 cents barely scratches the surface.

On a really outstanding picture there is no advantage in shading the price at all. On such a picture it would be ridiculous to cut below a top evening price of 25 cents, and there will not be enough more people come at that price to make up for the loss of $10 per hundred on the "paying guests."

It is not profitable to cut on pictures that appeal to a limited class of customers. In this town historical or costume pictures and sophisticated comedies do not do good business. The few who do like them go for them in a big way. They will come as quickly at regular prices as they will at a dime. Other people do not care for them at all. They will go up street to see a "horse opera" or a "penny thriller" regardless of what we charge. Therefore it pays to stay at regular prices and get what we can.

Recommends Balanced Program

A crime or mystery picture, or a good old-fashioned comedy drama, together with a lively selection of shorts, makes the best fare for a bargain day. A program of this nature has the widest appeal and when you run for a dime you must play for the big crowds. Also, pictures of this nature produce a more audible audience response. A full house will laugh, sigh, and thrill together at such pictures and leave with the feeling that they have seen something pretty swell. It helps the next day's business if they depart with the conviction that they have received more than their money's worth. But those same pictures, if played to a house with a few scattered patrons, would fall pretty flat.

Advertise a bargain day at least two days in advance. Play it up big as something special you are proud to offer your patrons. don't sneak it across as a cut you were forced to make because your picture isn't worth full price. Let them know they are getting a darn good bargain in entertainment for their money. Give them time to find out about it and to spread the word among their friends. Starting the advertising more than two days in advance will detract from the pictures playing just before your bargain and will give your competition more time to prepare a monkey wrench to toss into your machinery. Starting the advertising less than two days in advance doesn't give it time to take effect.

Offering different types of bargains on different days sometimes help attract attention, but the plan should be simple and easily understood. A complicated plan will usually fall flat.

One stunt I tried with excellent results consisted of running a special matinee for school children on Friday, for which regular prices were charged, and then admitting those who came Friday free on Saturday to a different program. In effect that was about like admitting them two successive days at half price. But as it worked out it drew a large crowd Friday and as many more new customers at full price the following day. The plan was simple, they got two full shows for the price of one, and it was a novel idea. It gave us a virtual monopoly on Saturday afternoon business and our gross was nothing to be ashamed of.

On the other hand, an attempt to build business by charging adults 25 cents one day and admitting the same persons for five cents the following day just didn't click. That averages only 15 cents per day, and the shows were well worth it. But the idea is not quite so simple and dramatic as "pay today—come free tomorrow!" It missed fire.

Finds Coupons Unprofitable

Another plan that sounds good but never worked out here is that of scattering a lot of coupons admitting the bearer for a special low price. Theoretically that should bring in a lot of bargain customers at a special figure without preventing the house from collecting full tariff on the rest of the folks. But as things have turned out it has often meant that a few people with coupons came at a low price while a lot who did not have the coupons got sore and stayed away. In other words, it is safer to treat all the folks alike.

Of course, if you can find a good and sufficient reason for making a special price to a certain class of people you can sometimes build business. Recently I had a picture containing some rather high-grade music, but practically foredoomed to failure in this town. I had a number of special tickets printed admitting the bearer to certain performances at less than the regular price. I distributed these to choir leaders, school music supervisors, band and orchestra leaders, music club presidents, etc. On the bottom of each ticket was a line for the group leader to sign and these leaders were asked to put out the tickets to people they thought would "appreciate" such a picture. A little appropriate "hokum" made all concerned feel especially honored and privileged through being able to give or receive these tickets. The result was I was able to get a large number distributed and a high percentage of them were used. Many brought friends along who paid the full price and the picture did unexpectedly good business. Best of all, those who got the tickets were pleased and those who did not, did not resent it.

Price Cutting Effective If Used Intelligently

My general conclusion on price cutting is that price cutting is an effective business getter when adroitly and intelligently used; a dangerous procedure when not. Any bargain price scheme should be simple and dramatic if it is to be effective. It should be ballyhooed as loudly and as proudly as any other special attraction you have to offer your customers. It should be treated as something extraordinarily good that you are giving them gladly—never as something you were forced to do because of inferiority in your product or service. News of the "break" they are getting should be loudly trumpeted; never slipped out as an ashamed whisper.

For the theatre manager alone in a town it is a matter of simple experiment to find out what the people will go for in the way of a bargain. Once learned, the manager has a powerful and effective tool of showmanship. But when competition moves in; competition that not only wants business for itself but also wants to hurt yours; competition that will try to make your carefully made plans ineffective and silly; competition that will even run a free show against your Dime Nite if it thinks by so doing it can kill your gross; then, my friends, you are up against a situation that will test your ability as a showman, keep you on your toes, and—if you prove clumsy in handling the tools of your trade—leave you miserably holding the bag as your rival neatly snares the crowd from your house and packs them in his own!

When a price war starts, more than at any other time, it is necessary to think fast, act fast, and always be one jump ahead. If you're left at the post, you're out of the race!

His previous experience, starting when he was only sixteen years of age, certainly was a fine background for him. He joined forces with Broadway Theatres Circuit as assistant in the advertising department, leaving there three years later to cash in on some country experience. He left the country exhibitor, returning to the city and played at free lancing for a while, handling publicity for well-known Sydney dance palaces and several independent exhibitors for a couple of years, coming to his present spot three years ago.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

F. H. RICHARDSON

Question No. 128 was: (A) What unit of measurement is employed for expressing carbon diameters? How may that unit be reduced to the fraction of an inch? (B) at what temperature is carbon volatilized—transformed into gas? (C) Do carbons contain chemicals? If so, for what purpose? (D) For what reasons was carbon selected as the base for electric arc electrodes?

The following answered acceptably: C. Rau and S. Evans; G. E. Doe; J. R. Prater; H. Edwards; L. Cimikoski; W. E. Limmroth; J. A. Zachritz; O. H. Schmidt; L. Johnson; M. and J. Devoy; L. H. Kelley; R. Brown; M. Samuels and W. R. Allen; M. and B. Walker; K. Irwin; J. M. Kelner and A. W. Baxter; P. Somers; D. N. Logman; N. S. Reid and H. T. Watkins; T. S. Anderson; A. Leonard and G. T. Jones; H. A. Ames and F. E. Dorp; W. V. Henderson; B. L. Morris and H. M. Jackson; E. Exline; P. L. Goldstein and M. Samuels; W. Jones and T. L. Ward; L. B. Daniels and M. A. Ordell; G. L. Goss; T. D. Brady.

Incidentally, in answering Question No. 130, Marion B. Stout, Petersburg, Alaska, appends a note saying, "I find the necessary study involved in being an active member of the Bluebook School to be highly beneficial. I thought after going through the Bluebook I knew practically everything it contained, but when it came to answering some of the Bluebook School questions—well, that was something else again. I find, however, that the study involved and necessity for writing out the answers, plus the wait to see how correct the answer is, fixes the answer permanently in one's mind."

Which is precisely what I have told projectionists many, many times. It is the study and wait to compare your answer with the one published that fixes it permanently in your mind.

I have had the engineering department of the National Carbon Company compile answers to all carbon questions for purposes of comparison in deciding which answers are best. I have selected the answer of C. Hawkins to Section A for publication. He says essentially what hundreds of others said, but covers the matter a bit more completely. He says, "Carbon diameters are expressed in millimeters, one millimeter

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 134

(A) What general and specific inspection should the projectionist give carbons when they are received?

(B) Name the important points concerning carbon cores.

(C) Are small cracks running circumferentially harmful? How about those running lengthwise?

(D) Does an attempt to utilize carbon stubs represent true economy? Explain.

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

(mm.) being equal to 0.03937 of an inch. To reduce millimeters to inches, divide by 25.4. This gives the diameter in decimal fractions of an inch. To convert the decimal to a common fraction you may use the equivalent table, page 708 of your Bluebook. Or if you have no Bluebook, after you have done with excusing yourself (if you can) for such remissness, divide the decimal by 0.015625. The final result will be the nearest common fraction in sixty-fourths of an inch.

"Example: A 13.6-mm. carbon is  $13.6 \div 25.4 = 0.535$  of an inch in diameter, and  $0.535 \div 0.015625 = 34 \frac{1}{4}$ . Therefore the 13.6-mm. carbon is slightly over  $34/64$  or, reduced,  $17/32$  of an inch."

(B) This also was answered correctly by hundreds, all of whom set the figure of volatilization of carbon at approximately 3,500 degrees Centigrade as per the Bluebook. However, the National Carbon Company now revises this as follows: "The temperature at which carbon volatilizes lies between 3650 and 3700 Centigrade." It therefore is recommended that owners of the Bluebook, sixth edition, turn to page 336 and pencil in a correction in accordance with the above figures.

(C) G. E. Doe replies, "Those carbons designed for low-intensity arcs have cores made from a soft carbon mixture, the same being necessary to give the arc proper steadiness and stability. The cores of high-intensity arcs contain a percentage of rare earth metals. This mixture not only affects the quality of the light produced by such arcs, but also has much to do with their performance characteristics."

(D) J. R. Prater says, "Carbon was selected as the base for electric arc electrodes because: (1) It is the only available material capable of withstanding heat up to approximately 3,500 degrees Centigrade. (2) When heated to such temperature it produces illumination exceeded only by that of the sun. (3) In commercial forms for arc lamp use, carbon is a relatively good electrical conductor. The addition of cores and metal coatings further increases the electrical conductivity. At the same time, carbon is a poor conductor of heat, which enables its use in lamps without danger of melting the metal holders. (4) Pure carbon can be manufactured in almost unlimited quantities, reduced to a very fine powder, mixed with inexpensive, readily available binders and moulded into any desired exact diameter and length of straight rods. Cores of different composition may be included in the process. These carbon rods, when baked and finished, have ample strength and rigidity to give reliable service in practical projection and other arc lamp use."

Buying American Equipment

Equipment purchases totaling $100,000 are being made in this country by Dr. Domingo A. Narvaez, president of Cinematografica Venezuela, which has scheduled eight Spanish language films a year for Latin American release, he said this week in New York. Purchases amounting to $20,000 already have been made for the studio and laboratory in Caracas. The first film is being rerecorded and cut in New York and the second will be started in a few weeks. Dr. Narvaez has appointed Fally Markus his New York representative for one year. Finy Vrcococha, the company's general manager, accompanied Dr. Narvaez to New York.

Clarion, Pa., to Have New Theatre

The Hepinger Amusement Company, which operates the Orpheum Theatre in Clarion, Pennsylvania, has closed negotiations for a new theatre site. They will build a modern theatre, completely air conditioned, and with the finest of sound, projection and acoustical equipment, as well as a fully equipped stage. The new theatre will show the best productions, while the Orpheum will specialize in action pictures at a lower admission, according to Mr. Hepinger.

Theatre Service Signs Jor Hurd

The Jor Hurd circuit of New Orleans joined the buying and booking facilities of the Theatre Service Corp. last Tuesday, making it one of the last of the important country circuits to give up independent booking.

Trailer-Made Closes Deal

Trailer-Made, Inc., has closed a 10 year franchise deal with J. R. Powers of Exhibitor Poster Service Exchange, Minneapolis, for handling its product in that territory.

Schick Joins National Theatre Supply

Henry G. Schick, formerly head of a theatre supply company in Vienna, has joined the New York sales staff of National Theatre Supply.

THE INSIDE JOB

CONSTRUCTIVELY minded showmen will be looking with favour on the planned resumption, after many haltings and doubts, of the trade practise conference project for internal adjustments of distribution problems and issues.

Conspicuous among the objections stood the technical position of lawyers, massed in defense tactics pertaining to the charges of the government equity action, who have been most fearsome of any slight intimation that powers of the industry might act in concert.

This attitude ignores quite the fact that such action in concert has been observable with respect to trade practises in times past, less timorous times. An example of considerable significance is afforded to those who can remember the rise of the advance deposit system, and its abandonment. If that termination of the advance deposit system was not concerted it was a concatenation of coincidences beyond a serial writer's dream.

There would seem to be something in favour of the viewpoint that the more completely the motion picture industry proceeds to the tending to its business the less there will be for the government to tend to. It is probably all too true that there is no device or policy by which American business can today prevent increasing invasions by government and its bureaucracies. There are, however, some possibilities in the direction of not offering encouragement to the process. One method to encourage the approach is to sit and wait for it.

A REFLECTION of the possibilities of internal adjustment, and decidedly apparent recording of a considerably extensive exhibitor state of mind about issues before the industry, is afforded in a statement in the organ of the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware, over the signature of Mr. George P. Aarons, secretary, saying:

¶ The local exhibitors, accustomed to being bounced around by the film companies, got a new thrill last week. A major grievance against one of the Big Eight was settled in 60 minutes by an application of boss sense and fair play.

¶ In this turbulent era of anti-monopoly suits, governmental investigations, boycotts, and what have you, one top-flight executive came to Philly, demonstrated to the satisfaction of all concerned that the difference between buyer and seller can be settled without the hair-pulling and name-calling. George Schaefer, general sales manager of United Artists, gave the other film executives something to shoot at, when in one hour of plain talk at a meeting called by the U.M.P.T.O.E. Penna., which was held on September 29th, he settled the exhibitors' peeve against his company, thereby winning more genuine goodwill for United Artists than that company has enjoyed locally for some time.

¶ It was through the efforts of Lewen Pizor, President of the U.M.P.T.O.E. Penna., that George Schaefer appeared at this meeting.

¶ For one whole generation now the distributors and their customers have been rasslin' around with no holds barred and much dirty work afoot. All of which brought Uncle Sam into the ring as referee with the gentle admonition that eye gouging must cease and the game be played according to a new set of rules which will protect the little feller.

¶ But the Uncle Sam of today is not the benevolent gentleman of yesterday, but a composite character who is part politician, part job seeker and part idealist bent on making over the industry to conform to his own notion of the perfect set-up.

¶ And in the hearts of the exhibitors are misgivings and foreboding lest they find themselves swapping one boss for another.

¶ And so the theatremen are again lending an ear to the distributors' proffer of self regulation, with the Government apparently sympathetic to the adoption of any workable plan that will solve the existing complaints. A little more of the George Schaefer attitude on the part of the other distributors would go far toward bringing about a permanent peace in the trade.

¶ The differences between Paramount and the exhibitors a year ago could have been avoided just as the inevitable showdown forthcoming between the theatremen and Columbia can be avoided by a clearer recognition of the exhibitors' grievances and a more sympathetic consideration of his problems. The refusal to deliver completed pictures sold in the worksheet, the insistence on percentage for last runs, the highjacking of exhibitors in tightly competitive spots—these are practices that must stop! The alternative is guerrilla warfare, protest meetings, buyers' strikes and a bad press.

SPEAKING of the press, a document from the Hays Office reporting on "recent comment on motion pictures" in the daily press finds: "Favorable 95.7 per cent, Adverse 2.7, and Neutral 1.6." This has a certain coincidence with the period in which the organized industry of the motion picture has poured something like $600,000 in display space into the daily press. It is probably more really coincidental that this has occurred just along with the floreation of the Department of Justice action relating to trade practises.

The "comment", however, appears in editorial expressions. More accurately the reputé and public status of the motion picture is made through the impressions made at fifteen thousand theatres where the consumer meets the retail front of the industry, and in the news columns of the daily press which tell a story of the motion picture based on how much trouble it gets into with itself, with its investors and society. In the end business makes its reputation by how it does business.

A DISPATCH to Motion Picture Daily says that "a spokesman for Samuel Goldwyn" says that agents have been advised that when anything is to be said about Mr. Goldwyn's talent deals he will say it. When Mr. Goldwyn acquires a spokesman it's news—and another Hollywood extravagance of the most obvious sort.

This Week

Regulation

Self-regulation of trade practices within the industry as opposed to arbitrary rules laid down by Government or the courts came nearer to reality as national and regional exhibitor organizations prepared to meet next week with distributors at the first of what was hoped will be a series of round table conferences designed to evolve a workable and satisfactory set of rules under which film buying and selling will be conducted. The industry's plan for the conferences, begun with enthusiasm early last summer with the formation of a distributors' negotiating committee headed by Sidney R. Kent, has lain dormant since the filing of the Government's suit in equity late in July. Last week word came from headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America that assurances had been received from the distributors committee that negotiations would be resumed. Officials of Allied States Association announced that an invitation to confer had been received and would be placed before the board of directors. Regional independent organizations received telegraphed invitations. The meetings are to start October 19th.

The exhibitor-distributor conference plans and statements of the leaders are contained in the articles starting on pages 12 and 15.

Monopoly Inquiry

The extent of the research to be conducted by the joint legislative departmental committee appointed by Congress to survey monopoly and the concentration of economic power is indicated by the activities of the group in Washington even before the opening of public hearings which will not start until late in November. Experts, researchers and their secretaries are busy preparing and sending out questionnaires and requests for information. Others are exploring records of all kinds and tabulating their findings. Early this month questionnaires were sent out to some 2,300 trade associations.

Conventions

The convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to be held in Oklahoma City October 30th-November 2nd will take up trade practices, double bill decisions by the United States Supreme Court and current anti-trust conferences. Meanwhile Allied Theatre Owners of Michigan held a three day meeting in Grand Rapids Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday which was highlighted by addresses by William F. Rodgers, general sales manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and Abram F. Myers, Allied States chairman.

Supreme Court Acts

Paving the way for review of four suits of direct interest to motion picture interests, the United States supreme court on Monday refused to review the so-called Perelman double features case in Philadelphia, where the district court, and the circuit court of appeals in effect, had held that six large distributors had violated the anti-trust laws by enforcement of a contract clause prohibiting double featuring. In the Dallas case, involving double bills and fixed admission prices, the supreme court found "probable jurisdiction."

Two of the decisions concerned the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. In the one, the court dismissed the appeal of the Society that the Washington state law, under which combination to fix prices for use of copyrighted works or to collect fees or issue blanket licenses, is unconstitutional.

In a Florida case the court denied a motion by the states attorney to vacate a decree by the federal district court and held that it had probable jurisdiction over an injunction action to restrain enforcement of the state law.

Newspaper Space

Publishers of Los Angeles newspapers have agreed to concessions on film news in theatre sections of their papers, promising an appreciable increase in the space given, and agreeing to stop subsidizing sports events, circuses, and carnivals, except for charity purposes. The film men, led by Rodney Pantages, pointed out that approximately 1,750,000 people attend motion picture theatres weekly in Los Angeles and vicinity, compared to the 50,000 to 100,000 who witness sports events.

The publishers have also agreed that Drama sections will henceforth be called theatre pages and will be standardized in position as much as possible, and that the only passes to be given newspapers will be one pair for each paper reviewing critics. The papers affected are the Examiner, Times, Daily News, Evening News and Herald-Express.

Answering Critic

The public is the real censor of motion pictures, not the censor boards in a few scattered states, Hal Hode, executive assistant to the vice-president of Columbia Pictures, said Monday night in a radio address in answer to criticism of production and distribution practices by Leslie Bain. Mr. Hode pointed out that the reports of exhibitors in MOTION PICTURE HERALD's department of "What the Pictures Did for Me" are sufficient evidence of the importance of the likes and dislikes of audiences in small towns, wherein are located 80 per cent of the theatres.

Radio Censorship

A study of American radio completed by the Department of Research and Education of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America shows the council to be opposed to any form of censorship of the medium. The report says: "In a democracy freedom of speech is a priceless possession. No administrative government agency is wise enough to be entrusted with power to determine what people shall hear."

The National Association of Broadcasters also is making a study of newspaper and periodical material opposing government censorship of radio. Editorials and press comment from all over the country have been forwarded to NAB headquarters in Washington. Additionally, a library containing all information and literature ever published about radio is being compiled by the NAB. The Library of Congress and the United States Archives Bureau in Washington are cooperating.

Banned in Britain

Called "dangerous" and "likely to make trouble," March of Time's latest issue dramatizing the background and cause of the Czechoslovakian crisis has been banned by the British Board of Film Censors. The distributors were informed that the picture would be passed only if drastic cuts were made, and since the contract called for the film's release on Friday it was withdrawn. Similar action was taken recently by Paramount with regard to a British newsreel release on the Czechoslovakian situation at the instigation of the Foreign Office. There have been seven similar cases in the last few months and March of Time has figured in four of them. The pictures dealt with the crisis in Algeria, the armament race, the "threat to Gibraltar" and the resignation of Foreign Minister Anthony Eden.

Unofficial political censorship of newsreels was publicly condemned by Herbert Morrison and Reginald Stamp, spokesmen for the London County Council this week. They appealed to the trade not to submit to political censorship and party propaganda and threatened to consider the next case in their official capacities.

Canadian Peace

Famous Players Canadian will have United Artists product this season, including "Drums," Alexander Korda's latest film, in accordance with an agreement reached between N. L. Nathanson, circuit head, and Maurice Silverstone, United Artists operating chief, this week. United Artists sold away from the Canadian circuit last year. Mr. Nathanson also will drop his London suit in which he sought to compel performance under his interpretation of a contract relating to the delivery of "Drums." He claimed that the picture, having started before the cameras in September, 1937, belonged to him under an original deal with London Films for Canada which expired in October, 1937.

Independents

The Independent Motion Picture Producers' Association has been revived in Hollywood after being dormant for several years as a result of the curtailment of independent production through rising costs. The first aim of the organization will be to seek concessions from the Screen Actors' Guild and labor groups which will permit lower labor costs on films than the scales set up for the major studios. Officers of the organization are: Phil Goldstone, president; Phil Krasne, George Hirliman and Sig Neufeld, vice-presidents; Sam Wolf, secretary and general counsel, and Bud Barsky, treasurer. I. E. Chadwick was the last president of the group.

Holiday Grosses Up

Standing room only and grosses substantially larger than those recorded last year were general in theatres in and around New York for the Columbus Day holiday. With the World Series over and no major football games, there was little competition for the film industry. The Paramount with "If I Were King" grossed $10,000 for the day, approximately $2,500 better than last year. In its ninth week at the Astor, "Marie Antoinette" sold out for both performances. "Drums" at the Music Hall equalled Columbus Day figures set by "Stage Door" last year. The second week's business was estimated at $83,000. "Straight, Place and Show" at the Roxy played to standing room all day and "Too Hot to Handle" did a capacity business at the Capitol.

Radio Propaganda

Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Italy have joined Germany in sending a radio representative to this country, with a view towards studying foreign language broadcasts here, and winning the support and opinion of their nationals in this country. The Federal Government has learned of the situation, and now has a staff at work to determine the extent and value of the propaganda that is being planted with the foreign language stations.

Patent Decision

Judge John P. Nields, in United States district court in Washington, Monday, decreed that the Patent Office erred in awarding priority to Henry Joseph Round (RCA) on a potassium layer photo-electric cell with discrete particles or elemental areas, used in television apparatus, and that priority to the patent application belonged to Vladimir Zworykin (Westinghouse). The United States Commissioner of Patents, therefore, is directed by Judge Nields to allow some 14 claims in controversy in Mr. Zworykin's 1923 application. Westinghouse sued Radio Corporation of America over priority rights to the patent.

Greatest Year

The Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign entered its seventh week on Thursday. Among the developments of the sixth week was the suggestion of Gilbert Seldes that a plan be devised whereby free tickets be given to contestants for local theatres if they answer a reasonable number of questions. Entry blanks are being distributed among exhibitors of all theatres participating in the drive with a view to obtaining their registration in the exhibitors' contest.

Hearst Radio Sale

William Randolph Hearst has sold WINS, New York radio station, and purposes to dispose of all except two of the 10 stations in his radio chain to hasten the reorganization of his holdings. In disclosing the sale of WINS, E. N. Stoer, a Hearst executive, said that the transaction is subject to approval of the Federal Communications Commission, which has been advised of the deal. The station was bought by Milton H. Biow, New York advertising man, and president of the Biow Broadcasting Company, which operates WAAT, in Newark. The price was said to have been "under $200,000." Retaining only Stations WCAE, in Pittsburgh, and WBAL, in Baltimore, Mr. Hearst intends to go out of the radio broadcasting business, according to Mr. Stoer.

Problem in Italy

Large distributing companies in America have halted film shipments to Italy and sales services there, pending the outcome of negotiations for modification of the monopoly decree, the date of application of which has been extended to December 31st. Dubbing activities of Hollywood producers in Italy also have come to a standstill as a result of promulgation of the law.

The new developments in the situation at Rome, together with antecedents and the reactions in film circles overseas, are discussed on page 17.

INDUSTRY, SUPREME COURT, GOVERNMENT ACT ON FILM REGULATION

Regulation of trade practices within the industry by freely acting representatives of the industry came markedly closer to reality this week as negotiations toward that end, interrupted abruptly during the summer by the filing of an anti-trust suit by the Federal Government, were resumed with every omen favorable for the constitution of a satisfactory program. That external and arbitrary regulation by legislation and litigation was still proximate however, was indicated in collateral news from Washington concerning the Government's complaint in equity against the industry, a Supreme Court decision on an appeal from a previous anti-trust decision, and the Congressional monopoly inquiry.

First discussions between distributors and exhibitor groups will be held next week, the opening conference having been set for October 19th by William F. Rodgers, acting chairman of the distributors' negotiating committee. The board of directors of Allied States Association will meet Monday in New York to consider the distributors' invitation and, if it is approved, to appoint a negotiating committee. Allied officials insisted that negotiations with them be conducted "separate and apart from those with any other group."

The executive committee of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America also will meet Monday in New York to discuss the organization's trade practice views and to appoint a negotiating committee for the Wednesday conference. Invitations to attend the meetings were telegraphed to eight independent regional exhibitor organizations by Mr. Rodgers. Abram F. Myers and Mr. Rodgers addressed Michigan Allied this week. (Page 15.)

The supreme court decision denying a review of a court of appeals decree in the Perelman anti-trust suit in Philadelphia under which distributors were enjoined from enforcing contractual prohibitions against showing their films as part of double feature programs is reported on page 13, together with other news of trade practice disputes in the courts.

Progress made by the joint Congressional committee appointed to investigate monopoly in business as outlined on page 14, indicates that the inquiry will have unprecedented scope.

Plans for the MPTOA convention in Oklahoma City at which trade practice regulation will be the primary topic are on page 15.

The first indication that distributors' plans for comprehensive discussions with exhibitor

What National Exhibitor Organizations Demand in Trade Practice Regulation

The two national exhibitor organizations, Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors and Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, both have definite points of departure on the trade practice question which they have been pressing for many months and on which they demand that discussions be based. They are listed below.

MPTOA

The MPTOA program was embodied in a ten-point plan which was first submitted to distributors nearly three years ago, and which has formed the basis of previous preliminary talks. It includes:

1. Twenty per cent cancellation.
2. Local conciliation boards.
3. Score charge elimination.
4. Short subject forcing.
5. Designated playdates.
6. Overbuying.
7. Clearance and zoning.
8. Short form of contract.
9. Cut-rate competition.
10. Non-theatrical competition.

Plans for meetings among representatives of the two organizations and of regional independent groups with the distributors' negotiating committee appointed last summer under the chairmanship of Sidney R. Kent are reported on this page. Related developments on the question of trade practice regulation from within or without are detailed in stories on the supreme court, page 13; the monopoly inquiry, page 14, and on exhibitor conventions, held or planned, page 15.

Allied

The Allied program as outlined by Abram F. Myers, chairman of the board, before the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio on December 7, 1937, includes nine points. They cover:

1. Compulsory block booking, one of Allied's primary complaints.
2. Unreasonable protection.
3. Undue theatre expansion.
4. The "right to buy."
5. Contract revision.
6. Designated playdates.
7. Unfair allocations.
8. Non-delivery of pictures.
9. Radio competition.

groups on a trade practice program were about to be resumed after being held in abeyance since August came last week from Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA, who announced in New York that he had received definite assurance that conferences were planned. Immediately afterward Abram F. Myers, chairman of the board of Allied, and Nathan Yamins, national Allied president, conferred in New York with Mr. Rodgers and released a statement announcing that the matter would be submitted to the board of directors and stipulating the conditions on which their organization would join the discussions.

Broad Discussion Sought

The Allied statement said that Mr. Myers and Mr. Yamins had been assured that the distributors' committee would not limit the trade practice discussions to the MPTOA's ten point program but would permit them to become "as broad as the problems involved in the sale and distribution of film," and that the negotiations with Allied would be conducted apart from those with other groups.

The statement follows:

"In pursuance of arrangements made several days ago Nathan Yamins and I have had a comprehensive interview with Mr. Rodgers with reference to prospective industry conferences to discuss trade practices.

"We were assured by Mr. Rodgers that the distributors' committee stands authorized and prepared to treat with a committee of Allied in respect of the numerous proposals which Allied States Association has advanced from time to time including all of those summarized in the address which I made before the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio last year.

"Indeed we were assured that the scope of the discussions would be as broad as the problems involved in the sale and distribution of film and would not be limited to the program of any particular exhibitor group. Mr. Yamins and I have deemed it necessary to make this explanation to overcome the possible bad effects of premature publicity calculated to create the impression that the movement grew out of the activities of any particular group or was initiated as ballyhoo for a particular national convention.

"Following the resolution adopted at the

COURT RULES AGAINST MAJORS IN ONE DOUBLE BILL CASE, MAY HEAR SECOND

Supreme Bench Agrees to Review of Composers' Society's Appeal from Washington State Law on Prices and Fees

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Announcing its decisions with respect to hearing appeals in some 250 cases, the United States supreme court on Monday paved the way for review of four suits of major interest to the motion picture industry, but refused to review the Philadelphia double-features case, thereby in effect affirming the decision of the lower court holding that six large distributors had violated the anti-trust laws through the enforcement of a ban on double features.

The question of double bills, however, will come before the court during its current term, it having found "probable jurisdiction" in the so-called Dallas case, in which dual features and fixed admission prices are involved.

In this suit, a civil case in equity brought by the Government, Paramount Pictures Distributing Corporation, Vitagraph, RKO, Columbia, United Artists, Universal, MGM, Twentieth Century-Fox, MGM of Texas, Twentieth Century-Fox of Texas, Interstate Circuit, Inc., and Texas Consolidated Theatres, Inc., were enjoined by the Dallas district court in 1936 against the continuance of an alleged conspiracy in restraint of interstate commerce arising out of licensing agreements between the distributors and the two circuits under which subsequent-run houses exhibiting pictures shown first-run by the chains at an admission of 40 cents or more were required to charge an admission of not less than 25 cents for night performances and were prohibited from using such features as part of a double bill.

Returned to Supreme Court

The distributors and circuits appealed the decision January 17, last, but, after argument, the case was remanded to the Dallas court with instructions to comply with the rules requiring that formal findings of facts and the court's conclusions of law be stated separately. The order was complied with and the case returned to the supreme court during the summer recess.

In the Philadelphia case, brought by Harry and Louis Perelman, Philadelphia exhibitors, against Vitagraph, RKO, Paramount, MGM, Fox and United Artists, the distributors were charged with violation of the anti-trust laws by conspiring to restrain interstate commerce through insertion in their contracts with exhibitors of varying provisions whereby the exhibitors agreed not to show another full-length feature film on the same program with a feature licensed by the defendants. Although the companies showed that, in forbidding double features, each distributor acted independently, the district court held that conspiracy in restraint of trade existed and entered the decree of injunction sought by the Perelmans, the circuit court of appeals later affirming the decree, which was appealed then to Washington by the distributors.

FRENCH REQUIRE SAFETY LEADERS

With the expressed aim to reduce the danger of ignition of films, all reels of motion picture film shown in France are now required to have a leader, dyed in blue, of at least six meters, printed on a noninflammable base, the American Embassy in Paris has notified the Department of Commerce at Washington.

The safety leader is now obligatory for copies if the films were printed after July 31, 1938, and, beginning September 1, 1940, for copies of films printed before August 1, 1938. However, if for any reason the introductory section of a film copy must be replaced before September 1, 1940, the new leader must be printed on a non-inflammable base.

The Perelman case involved the legality of a contract clause prohibiting the showing of a second feature on the same program with any picture covered by the license agreement. In refusing to review the lower court decision holding such clauses to be illegal, the supreme court barred the regulation of duals by this means. In the Dallas case, the contracts involved applied only to specific pictures which, if exhibited by the first run at designated minimum admissions, had to be exhibited in subsequent runs at other designated admission prices and then only on a single feature program.

Dallas Case Jurisdiction

With the high court's finding that it had "probable jurisdiction" in the Dallas case, the way was left open for distributors and the Interstate Circuit to apply to the court for a review of the lower court's decision holding such contracts to be in violation of the Sherman and Clayton Acts. The case was before the supreme court last term, but was remanded to the Texas court for further action because of the failure of that court to show findings of fact and conclusions of law, as required by the rules.

The case, however, involves only the limited regulation of double featuring in that it can be applied only to specific pictures. Distribution companies are more hopeful of a solution of the double feature problem being reached through intra-industry agreement now than through court rulings on contract prohibitions.

Act on Two ASCAP Cases

In addition to the two double-bill cases, the supreme court acted on two cases brought by the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to restrain enforcement of state anti-Ascap laws, holding it had "probable jurisdiction" in both.

The most important ASCAP suit was the Washington case, brought in the district court by the music organization to enjoin enforcement of a state law providing that it shall be unlawful for two or more persons owning copyrights to combine for the purpose of fixing prices for the use of their copyrighted works or for the purpose of collecting fees or issuing blanket licenses, but permitting the issuance of licenses on rates assessed on a per piece system of usage not to exceed those in effect in other states.

The court dismissed the case on the ground that the jurisdiction amount of $3,000 was not involved, but the Society contended that the statute interferes with and destroys 528 contracts which it held with Washington users of its music, from whom the Society has received $60,000 a year. The organization also contended that the statute deprives it of equal protection of the law and deprives it of property without due process of law, in that it discriminates against the owners of copyrighted musical compositions and makes investigation of copyright infringements within the state conclusive evidence of "doing business" therein.

Another Technicality Case

The other ASCAP case also was before the court on a technicality, on appeal by the Florida authorities that death of the attorney general against whose enforcement of a state law regulating copyright was secured nullified the proceedings because the law provided that all proceedings for enforcement of the statute are committed to his exclusive direction. The supreme court, however, denied a motion of the state attorneys to vacate the injunction granted by the district court and direct dismissal of the complaint, but did grant a petition that the present attorney general and the state be substituted as parties at interest.

Schwartz & Frolich, counsel for ASCAP, announced that it had been decided to introduce arguments before the supreme court on the constitutionality of legislation prohibiting ASCAP from operating in Nebraska, Montana and Tennessee, when the Washington and Florida cases come up.

In the fifth case dealt with, the court held it had "probable jurisdiction" in the appeal of the West Virginia authorities from an injunction by the district court against enforcement of the so-called "use tax" against United Artists, from which company it had sought to collect one per cent of the gross proceeds received from exhibition of films in West Virginia. The district court ruled that the company was not engaged in business in West Virginia and that its activities constituted "interstate commerce." In appealing to Washington, the state contended the company is sufficiently engaged in business in West Virginia to be subject to the tax, and is not engaged in interstate commerce relative to local exhibition of its films in West Virginia, the only activity sought to be taxed, and that the tax does not place an invalid burden upon interstate commerce, which, it is argued, is purely incidental to a local activity in the state.

MONOPOLY INVESTIGATORS GATHER DATA FROM ALL BUSINESS SOURCES

Questionnaire Sent to Trade Associations and Projected Study of Patent Situation Among Phases To Be Explored

The joint legislative-departmental committee known as the Temporary National Economic Committee, appointed at the last session of Congress to survey monopoly and the concentration of economic power will not start public hearings until late in November but an estimate of extensive ground which it will cover can be gained from the organization and spade work accomplished to date.

Elaborate machinery has been established in Washington designed for exhaustive study of every phase and kind of big business, the cooperation of corporations and trade associations has been solicited, and extensive questionnaires have been sent out, the answers to which will form the basis of the committee's program of inquiry.

When the inquiry was first proposed many business interests saw in it a threatened "witch hunt," possibly planned to make political capital for the fall elections, but Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Democratic senator from Wyoming, who is chairman of the committee, has said repeatedly that this is not its purpose. Addressing the New York Board of Trade this week he said the committee would be willing to "hear all sides" in its study.

"If we must have a planned economy," he said, "it must be planned by public authority but perhaps it is not necessary to have it at all. Perhaps we can still find a formula which, in the basic industries at least, will eliminate the evils of destructive competition while securing an adjustment that may be expected to stabilize employment and mass purchasing power."

Senator O'Mahoney on Thursday called the investigating committee into session for a preliminary study of antitrust information gathered by six government agencies. He said he expected the committee to agree tentatively on a date for open hearings, probably about mid-November.

Since its last full meeting in midsummer the committee has appointed Leon Henderson, former economic adviser to the WPA, executive director of the inquiry work and a full time staff of some 75 experts, secretaries and clerks has been assembled. A thorough study of the patent situation in the glass industry, selected with the idea that it is a typical one, has been started. Elaborate questionnaires were sent out early this month to some 2,300 trade associations such as the motion picture industry's Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, Inc., to determine their scope and practice. Another questionnaire was sent through the Securities and Exchange Commission to more than 400 life insurance companies to obtain information on their investment policies, financial activities and allied matters.

PENSION PLAN IS HIT BY GOVERNMENT

In response to a large number of inquiries from California exhibitors and other business men as to where they would stand should the state adapt its plan of giving "$30 every Thursday" to unemployed citizens; the Federal Government, through the Treasury Department, has stated that it will not accept the state warrants as legal tender in any bank under Federal supervision.

By law, the Federal Government has the sole right to issue money, and it is felt in administration circles that the California plan is unconstitutional.

upon the motion picture industry is the committee's survey of patent law designed to give a full picture of the place of patent litigation in the economic structure. The ownership or licensing of patents will be involved intimately in the research.

Material on competition and pricing is being gathered together with data on the relationship which price cuts or price advances bear to costs of every sort, to general business conditions, to the situation affecting the particular industry, and to the timing of the price changes as between companies in an industry.

Financial control is another point being covered with much of the information already available through the records of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Paramount Net Estimated $800,000 for Quarter

Paramount's net for the quarter ended October 1st is estimated at $800,000, bringing the company's earnings for the first three quarters of the current year past the $2,000,000 mark. Earnings for the year may approximate $4,000,000.

Wall Street looks for an improvement in RKO and Universal earnings. RKO has been operating in the black for the past five weeks.

Hal Roach on Radio

Hal Roach, guest Tuesday night in New York on the "We the People" program over station WABC and the nationwide network of Columbia Broadcasting System, was interviewed by Gabriel Heatter in tribute to his 25 years as a producer. Mr. Roach recalled Harold Lloyd's debut, and anecdotes in the careers of Laurel and Hardy, Patsy Kelly, Will Rogers and the "Our Gang" comedies.

Columbia Dividend

The board of directors of Columbia Pictures Corporation on Tuesday declared the regular quarterly dividend of $.68¾ per share on the $2.75 convertible preferred stock payable Nov. 15, 1938, to stockholders of record Nov. 1.

Hearings Ended On Petition of Directors' Guild

Testimony by Kenneth MacGowan last Friday ended the taking of evidence in the regional Labor Board hearing on the petition of the Screen Directors' Guild for designation as collective bargaining agency for directors, assistants and unit managers. William R. Ringer, trial examiner for the Board in Los Angeles adjourned the hearings to this week when closing arguments from counsel for the producers and the Guild were to be heard.

Mr. MacGowan, the last witness for producer rebuttal, testified that he knew only one instance of an assistant director taking charge of shooting and that that was when a director was taken sick on the set.

Guild Responsible for Members

The Screen Actors' Guild, in the new eight year contract negotiated with producers which will go into effect November 1st has undertaken the discipline of its members who may cause loss of money to their employers. If a player is late for work and causes overtime to be paid principals of the cast through his tardiness, it will be up to the Guild to investigate and if it is found to be the player's fault, the Guild must pay overtime to the cast, excluding extras.

The new contract sets a 48 hour week for players and provides for a scale of overtime pay from time and a half to double time if work on any one day exceeds eight hours.

Complaint Hearing Delayed

Conferences between producers and leaders of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees on charges filed by Jeff Kibre and a group of union members that the IATSE is a company union were postponed to October 21st by Dr. Towne Nylander, Los Angeles regional director of the NLRB. George Browne, IATSE president, was unable to leave New York in time for the conferences on the originally scheduled date, October 14th.

Truce in Laboratory Strike

Some of the 35 striking employees of the Du Art Film Laboratories in New York returned to work this week pending settlement of the strike under a ten day truce agreed upon by Arthur Gottlieb, head of the company and Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians Union, Local 702. A ten per cent increase in wages has been granted and other terms are to be worked out by Dick Walsh, IATSE vice-president, Mr. Gottlieb, and John H. Rugge, president of the local.

Crockett Heads Exchange

James C. Crockett, formerly of Atlanta, has been appointed manager of Affiliated Producers, New Orleans exchange, succeeding Bill Minder, who returned to Atlanta.

Pabian Joins Fleischer

Anthony A. Pabian, animated cartoonist, formerly with Harman-Ising, has joined Max Fleischer. He will arrive at the new Fleischer studio in Miami next week.

RODGERS AND MYERS POINT TO HOPE OF SOLUTION OF TRADE PROBLEMS

Leaders Address Michigan Allied; Iowa-Nebraska Group Indorses Anti-Trust Suit; Indiana Exhibitors To Meet Nov. 1

Self-regulation through massaging to straighten out the kinks in trade practices was proposed Wednesday before the three-day annual convention of the Allied Theatre Owners of Michigan in Grand Rapids, with William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, presenting the case of distribution, and Abram F. Myers, chairman and general counsel of Allied States Association, extending cooperation but with reservations.

"Fruits of Our Labor"

Mr. Rodgers spoke directly and to the point. "Generally speaking," he said, "the fruits of our labor have been good to us all. The ideals are about to be realized.

"We distributors sincerely want a state of confidence to exist, and we are ready to discuss every phase of our different problems, and will do our level best to bring about the understanding that will enable us all to more completely enjoy the benefits of our great industry."

"I have had sufficient cause to believe," he went on, "that your organization and personnel are interested, as other exhibitor bodies are, too, in the solution of any existing problem by self-regulation from within our industry."

"Conciliation, rather than legislation, is our keynote."

"In the next 65 days (Distributor-exhibitor meetings will be resumed October 19th.—Ed.) motion picture history may be written," Mr. Myers told the convention.

"If there is a sincere desire on the part of the distributors to set their house in order, great things may be accomplished. If it should develop that the present overtures are merely a political trick to lull the exhibitors into quiescence until the Big Eight can square things with the Government and slip unscathed through another session of Congress and the state legislatures, the whole thing will blow up with a bang that will be heard from Maine to California."

Extends Cooperation

"There is no evidence of any such sinister purpose, and I would not have issued a call for the board if I had not believed what Bill Rodgers told Nate (Nate Yamins, Allied States president) and me. And so I am uttering a prayer for the success of the movement which Rodgers has so skilfully launched, a plea for continued confidence in and support of Allied and a committee which it may name, and a solemn warning to distributors and exhibitors alike that during the next 65 days they will be very much on the spot. All concerned in the forthcoming deliberations will be under close observation by the entire industry, the Government and the organized consumer groups. Any display of insincerity, bad faith, personal selfishness or attempted conniving will meet with swift retribution.

"The annual January board meeting will come on Allied's tenth anniversary. Possibly I am a hopeless optimist, but I profoundly believe it will be the occasion for great rejoicing. We may even receive that friendly

61 TAXES ON ONE THEATRE TICKET

According to the National Consumers Tax Commission, 61 taxes included in the price of a motion picture ticket take $104,300 annually from Omaha theatre patrons. More than 16 percent of the cost of a ticket is represented by 41 federal and 20 state and local taxes, said the Commission's report.

recognition by the Big Eight that has been withheld through the intervention of the industry politicians.

In opening his address Mr. Myers said that "at least 75 per cent of the deviation from normal" within the industry "represents slack of vision, leadership and plain horse sense," but added that "we now have our eyes turned to the day when we may perform a constructive work that should have been done ten years ago."

Cites Rodgers' Address

Mr. Myers recalled the address he had made on April 26th before the Twentieth Century Club in Boston, in which he "compared the motion picture trust with the Fascist dictators," but the same evening, after hearing Mr. Rodgers tell the Independent Theatre Owners of New England that his company was ready to join with others in establishing fair trade practices, he had followed with the statement that "Mr. Rodgers' words were the most encouraging I had ever heard any distributor utter."

Mr. Myers said that he had hoped in vain that "something definite along this line" might develop before the Allied convention in Pittsburgh, whereupon Allied "girded for a continuation of the battle for exhibitor rights," and "plans were made for prosecuting the Allied program by legislation and litigation." He recalled the passage by the Senate of the Neely bill (against block booking), the upholding by the federal court of the North Dakota theatre divorce law, and the filing of the anti-trust suit by the Department of Justice against "the Big Eight under the Sherman Law."

[Paramount on Thursday asked the court for extension of time for filing its appeal on the North Dakota "divorcement" law from October 24th to November 23rd.—Ed.]

Mr. Myers added that "it is clear that the aggressiveness of Allied . . . finally put into motion the forces of reason and moderation within the industry."

Most of the officers and directors were renamed for another year, including Ray Branch of Hastings, president, and E. E. Kirchner of Detroit, secretary-treasurer. C. R. Beechler, Charlotte, was elected vice-president. The new directors are Allen Johnson, Walter Semeyn, Grand Rapids; H. Carley, Holland; W. A. Cassidy, Midland; G. A. Cross, Battle Creek; W. J. Olson, Clare; J. H. Ross, Lansing; P. C. Schram, Kalamazoo; William Schulte, J. E. Stocker, Detroit; W. G. Thick, Marshall, and George Wilbur, Wyandotte.

Iowa-Nebraska Session

Pledges of support of the federal anti-trust suit against motion picture monopoly and indorsement of the Neely anti-block booking bill, were given in resolutions adopted at the annual meeting of the Allied Independent Theatre

Owners of Iowa and Nebraska held in Des Moines Monday and Tuesday.

Approximately 1,120 independent theatre men, film exchange managers, and others connected with the industry were present for the noon luncheon that opened the session.

G. Ralph Branton, Iowa and Nebraska chairman for the Greatest Year campaign, outlined the progress of the "quiz" in that territory. The assembly moved that Mr. Branton request the New York headquarters to extend the contest time two months to allow theatres that receive later pictures to take part in the contest.

Leo F. Wolcott, president of the organization, visualized a world without war and an industry without abuses. He stressed the fact that theatres in the average town are 10 years ahead of other business in point of modern methods of merchandising.

MPTOA's Plans Advanced

Trade practices will also be the chief center of discussion at the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America convention in Oklahoma City, October 30th-November 2nd.

Advance reservations for the four-day convention already total 300, it was said this week by Morris Loewenstein, convention committee chairman. Among those invited to speak are Leo Spitz, president of RKO Radio; William F. Rodgers of MGM, and Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution for Twentieth Century-Fox.

L. C. Griffith, chairman of the reception committee of the national MPTOA convention has mailed letters to all national directors of the association and to all directors of the Oklahoma Theatre Owners, Inc., informing them that they have been appointed members of the committee. He asked the directors to advise him when they will arrive in Oklahoma City for the convention and urged them to make their reservations immediately.

Out of 32 display booths available at the Biltmore Hotel, convention headquarters, 19 have already been taken, according to Mr. Loewenstein.

Companies making reservations for booths this week were Motiograph, Inc., Chicago; Salem China Company, Salem, N. C.; Oklahoma Theatre Supply Co., Oklahoma City; National Theatre Supply Company, Oklahoma City; Tad Screen Advertising Service, Dallas, Tex.; Wagner Sign Service, New York City, and the American Seating Corp. and National Screen Service of Dallas. Motiograph and National Screen have reserved double spaces with the latter expected to enlarge its space to four booths.

A. E. Warner, lighting engineer for the Oklahoma Gas and Electric Company research department, will put on a co-operative display with General Electric and give an address explaining the principle of the new three dimensional motion pictures and the Polaroid system of lighting which eliminates all glare in electric lights. Mr. Warner will also give a series of demonstrations at the convention of advancement in the lighting field and will show those present how to commercialize dead space on theatre fronts.

Kansas-Missouri Plans

The following have sent in reservations for the convention from the delegation of the Kansas-Missouri Association which will hold a meeting in Oklahoma during the MPTOA meeting: Frank Cassil, director; George Hartman, direc-

SCHAEFER WILL HEAD RKO WHEN REORGANIZATION PLAN IS APPROVED

Resigns from United Artists; Make-up of RKO Board of Directors and Executive Committee To Be Determined

Next week George Schaefer is going fishing for a spell somewhere off the Carolina coast. About the time he comes back, somewhere near the end of the month, he is to be announced as the new president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, coincident upon the formal approval of the corporation's "77B" reorganization plan by United States court.

That much came out of a meeting of the assorted elements of control, including the "downtowners," in New York Thursday afternoon.

Personnel To Be Determined

This meeting, the latest of a long and tedious series extending back over weeks, was the most decisive of the weighty councils, resulting in an agreement to prepare a statement to be issued the next day, Friday, covering the agreement with Mr. Schaefer, and some related details.

It was indicated that the make-up of the board of directors and the membership of the executive committee were yet under consideration as to personnel. There were indications that Nelson Rockefeller, occasionally discussed as a possible member of the board, would not take such a post. It seemed probable that W. G. Van Schmus of the Music Hall and one other would represent "The Center" on the new board.

Spitz To Return to Law Practice

It is said that Leo Spitz, who by the plan will be retiring from the presidency, by long intent, is to return to the practise of law, and probably is to be retained as general counsel of the company.

Reports were that Merlin H. Aylesworth, who had been mentioned as a possible chairman of the board, what with his various friendships and associations, including the Atlas-Odlum interests, would not find it practical to divide attentions with his post as publisher of the New York World-Telegram and related commitments to the Scripps-Howard papers.

How Board May Line Up

While the membership of the board of directors remained to be completed, it was said that it would, under the reorganization, include two representatives of the creditors, two for the Rockefellers as mentioned, two for the Radio Corporation of America, three for the banks, possibly one for the M. J. Meehan group, and enough additional for management to make up fifteen.

Resigns United Artists Post

Mr. Schaefer resigned from his post as vice-president and general manager of American sales for United Artists a week ago, presumably at a point indicated by the progress of negotiations for the presidency of RKO.

At United Artists Murray Silverstone,

GEORGE J. SCHAEFER

executive head of the concern, announced that no one was to be brought in to direct its domestic sales. The sales responsibilities concerned are to be shared by Harry Gold, eastern sales manager, and Jack Schlaifer, who occupies a similar position in the west.

Television Broadcast Continuation Sought

American Television Corporation has called a series of cooperative conferences between manufacturers of television receiving sets, parts manufacturers and broadcasting officials with a view toward assuring continuation of experimental television broadcasts. It is hoped that as a result of the conferences dealers will be able to demonstrate receivers at definite hours. Broadcasts in New York were suspended this week because new equipment is being installed in the NBC-RCA station in the Empire State Building. The CBS station in the Chrysler Building is not expected to be completed before next spring.

Columbia Directors Reelect Officers

The reelections of Harry Cohn as president of Columbia, Jack Cohn as vice-president, A. Schneider as treasurer, and Charles Schwartz as secretary, were announced following a meeting of the board of directors this week. A regular quarterly dividend of 68¾ cents per share on the $2.75 convertible preferred stock, payable November 15th to stockholders of record November 1st, was declared.

'Snow White' Seen Headed for Record

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," which cost $1,670,000, is headed for an all time record high, the film doing a domestic gross of nearly $4,000,000, and probably aggregating $6,000,000 around the world. This is the more remarkable in that much of the continental European business has been lost because of trade barriers set up by the dictator-controlled countries. Although the recent war scare cut into the picture's early playing engagements in England as on the continent, the British take, alone, it was indicated, may go to $1,250,000.

The nearest grosser of record is Warner Brothers' Al Jolson film which was the first "talkie," "The Singing Fool." This had a world gross of about $5,250,000. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" took $4,500,000, and its "Ben-Hur," made in 1926, did $4,000,000. Six films have made $3,000,000 or better. They are: Warner's "Jazz Singer," $3,500,000; M-G-M's "Big Parade," $3,500,000; D. W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation," $3,500,000; Fox's "Cavalcade," $3,500,000, and "Sunny Side Up," $3,300,000; M-G-M's "Broadway Melody," $3,000,000. In the $2,000,000 or higher class are United Artists' "Whoopie," "Kid from Spain," "The Gold Rush" and "The Kid," all of which did more than $2,500,000, as did Paramount's "The Ten Commandments." RKO's "Little Women" grossed $2,250,000. Though still playing, Columbia's "Lost Horizon" has already established a gross in excess of $2,000,000; while Universal's "All Quiet on the Western Front" made slightly under $2,000,000. "Snow White" has had numerous repeat bookings.

Wisconsin Musicians Vote Film Music Cut

At its semi-annual convention in Milwaukee, the Wisconsin Musicians Association voted approval of the national campaign to restore orchestras in theatres by eliminating music from films. All officers of the group were re-elected as follows: Volmer Dahlstrand, president; Walter Smith, vice-president; E. J. Sartell, secretary, and A. F. Vandenberg, treasurer.

Speakers at the meeting included Senator F. Ryan Duffy, F. W. Birnbach, international secretary of the Association, and William Hooper, investigator for the American Federation of Musicians in the mid-west.

H. M. Richey resigned as public relations head of Cooperative Theatres of Michigan on Tuesday after a protracted session of the board of directors. Ray Moon was replaced by Carl Buermele as general manager on October 1st.

FILM SHIPMENTS TO ITALY HALT PENDING MONOPOLY NEGOTIATIONS

Dubbing and Sales Services Also Await Results of Con- versations to Modify Law; Currency Exports a Factor

Large American distributing companies are keeping their offices open in Italy while negotiations are underway for modification of the decree establishing a government monopoly through the ENIC (Ente Nazionale Industrie Cinematografiche), but the American companies are making no more film shipments and providing no sales services despite the extension of date for final compliance with the decree until December 31st, the foreign departments of the home offices indicated this week.

All dubbing activities by American companies in Italy also have been brought to a halt. Under the law, film versions intended for distribution in Italy must be recorded in that country.

As a result of the decree (the full text was published in the HERALD, issue of September 24), advertising and publicity activities also are at a standstill.

Self-Sufficiency Move

The current problem of the American motion picture in Italy, preliminary to the monopoly decree, is attributed in the larger aspect to the determination of Italy's government leaders to build a self-sufficient nationalized industry. Specific directions of differences were reflected in reactions toward the awards made at the Venice international exhibit. Reports from American film circles in Rome indicate an impression that Americans will refuse to participate in the future.

A concomitant factor mentioned is censorship action. Roberto Farinacci, editor of the Regime Fascista, has predicted that "Marie Antoinette," unsuccessful candidate for the Mussolini Cup, will be barred in Italy. Of "Marco Polo" the editor of Film wrote, "The Italian public could only legitimately disdain such a film." "Blockade" has been banned, and Film says "The Rising Tide" will not be bought in Italy. Luigi Freddie, head of the film industry, is reported to have inspired a protest in the same publication against the revival of "Farewell to Arms," the writer referring to it as an "ignoble, anti-Italian, anti-Fascist film."

With these antecedents, the first inkling of a general action came with the failure to assign quotas for September and with reports that the American quotas would be reduced from 250 to 150 films a year.

Financial Factor

Reported to have been the most important figure behind the establishment of the monopoly was the ministry of foreign trade and exchange, headed by Felice Guarnieri. When he noted that so much money was going out of the country, so went the report, he ruled that foreign films should come under the same category, and restrictions, as imported merchandise.

Under the decree foreign companies would have to accept the prices offered them by ENIC or get out. They also were obliged to turn their contracts over to ENIC with 10 days (extended to 30 days in a subsequent decree).

Italians say that even if the monopoly fails to function, there are more than 100 foreign films now in Italy under the old quota system besides

FILM EXHIBIT FOR COAST FAIR

Hollywood Boulevard will be reproduced as a highlight of the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition in San Francisco next year.

Contracts for the exhibit have been signed between Harry Joe Brown, film executive-producer, and Harris Connick, general director of the exposition.

Operated as a concession, the exhibit will show every phase of motion picture production, from the time a story is purchased until the completed film is ready for screening. The public will be admitted on a pay basis.

At one end of an improvised street will be a reproduction of a large studio, surrounded by high walls, and with an impressive entrance. Inside will be replicas of location scenes and sets, and huge sound stages.

Mr. Brown is now negotiating for many of the biggest names in the acting world, to appear in the production of films during the fair.

70 produced in local studios, and that these 170 will take care of Italian needs for next season. An Italian executive in one of the Italian-controlled distributing offices of American films was reported to have remarked that the Italian people prefers American pictures and looks coolly upon French, British and German films. However, another Italian connected with an American company pointed to the fact that the public may become accustomed to the domestic product.

"Frozen" Funds

The money belonging to American producers that is "frozen" in Italian banks is reported to total as high as a hundred million lire ($5,260,000). What disposition the Italian government intends to make of it is a question raised in film offices there. Some feel that Americans eventually will be forced to produce in Italy.

The extension of time provided in the second decree has brought varying interpretations overseas. Some are reported to see in it a maneuver to give the impression of yielding the while actually tightening the restrictions, others an avenue for ENIC to pass off some of its business to individual concerns, for example to Italian distributors of American films who produce in Italy. Paramount, MGM, Twentieth-Century-Fox and Warner Bros. have their own distribution houses in Italy but do not produce there. ICI (Universal), Scaleria (Republic), EIA (Columbia), General Cine-Roncoroni (RKO) and Luperini (United Artists) are also producers.

Reasons Ascribed

Discussions of the problem in film circles in Rome have developed the following as the reasons for the monopoly movement: To halt the flow of currency out of Italy; to force foreign countries to accept Italian pictures on an exchange basis; to reduce the amount of imported product as Italian production increases; and finally to further racial and ideological motives, including the non-Aryan problem, on which columns have been published in the Italian press.

There is also talk of nationalization of the motion picture theatres. If this takes place it is expected in Rome that ENIC will be given complete control.

Developments in other countries besides Italy also are engaging the attention of American film executives. The propaganda of European countries is being extended in South America while on the Continent a part of Czechoslovakia now follows Austria into the German fold, further curtailing American revenue. With the Sudetenland annexation approximately one-half of the potential revenue of America companies in Czechoslovakia is taken over by Germany's industry, particularly in the resort centers Karlsbad and Marienbad.

MGM, Paramount and Twenty Century-Fox are continuing operations in the German territories, but Warner Bros., which withdrew from Germany several years ago, is expected to make a similar withdrawal from the annexed areas.

In Japan, despite recent resumption of shipments of film from America, currency has been "frozen" since last July and the embargoed currency is estimated between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000. Under the new arrangement new shipments may be paid for in three-year notes drawing no interest. The currency is turned over by the Japanese account to the Government, which guarantees the notes. The paper is deposited in the San Francisco branch of the Yokohama Specie Bank and is to remain there until maturity. This amounts to a loan, without interest, to the Japanese Government which has been pressed for cash with which to prosecute its Chinese venture. The companies entered into this arrangement as a means of getting out enough money to pay for prints.

The board of directors of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America will meet Saturday and are expected to discuss the foreign situation. Samuel Goldwyn, Joseph H. Schenck and Harry H. Warner were on their way to New York from Hollywood Thursday.

Empire State Union To Reelect Officers

Officers of the Motion Picture Operators' Union will be unopposed for reelection October 18th.

The nominees are Abraham I. Kindler, president; Benjamin S. Greenstein, vice-president; Leon Diamondstein, financial secretary-treasurer; William Santarsiero, recording secretary; Harry Fischman, business agent, and Peter Elarde, Jr., sergeant-at-arms. Nominated for the executive board are Nick Pitta, Charles Palowsky, Jack Millet, Alfred Schnall, Reuben Weissman, William Greenspan, Abraham Silverman, Ignatius Ricca and Michael Finkelstein, present incumbents, and Louis Davis, Fred Rose, James Quinn, Joseph Morasco, Harry Rubin and Edward Levine.

Cowdin Leaves for English Financing

J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of Universal's board, sailed for England last Thursday on the Queen Mary to arrange for additional British financing for the company.

Last summer Mr. Cowdin arranged for financing totaling about $1,500,000, it is understood, through the C. M. Woolf interests, although the exact amount has not been made known.

CONFERENCE TABLES MADE READY

Allied convention in Pittsburgh last May, a call will be issued for our board of directors to meet in New York on Oct. 17 to consider and act on the plan which Mr. Rodgers outlined for us today. If the board approves, a committee will be named to carry on the negotiations.

"In order to avoid the difficulties heretofore encountered when Allied has attempted such negotiations in company with the representatives of affiliated theatres it is proposed that our negotiations be conducted separate and apart from those with any other group.

"Pending action by the Allied board, Mr. Yamins and I can go no farther than to repeat what we have said many times: that Allied has always been willing to explore any conciliation movements looking to the improvement of industry conditions and to join in the same if there is a possibility that they may be productive of good. The only condition to this is that, in the nature of the case, we can not now agree to any proposals that would not be acceptable to the Department of Justice."

Directors of national Allied who are expected in New York for the meeting Monday in addition to Mr. Myers and Mr. Yamins include Sidney Samuelson, H. A. Cole, W. A. Steffes, Max Cohen and Irving Dollinger.

MPTOA representatives who have been asked to attend the executive committee meeting in New York Monday and from whom a negotiating committee will be appointed are: Mr. Kuykendall, L. C. Griffith, Oklahoma City; H. V. Harvey, San Francisco; O. C. Lam, Rome, Ga.; Jack Miller, Chicago; Sam Pinanski, Boston; Lewen Pizor, Philadelphia; M. C. Moore, Jacksonville; Fred Wehrenberg, St. Louis; Arthur Lockwood, Middletown, Conn.; and Edward Levy, New Haven.

ITOA Accepts Invitation

Harry Brandt, president of the Independent Theatre Owners' Association of New York, one of the eight independent groups invited to the meetings, in his answer to Mr. Rodgers' invitation expressed gratitude for the opportunity to help in working out a program of self-regulation and hope that industry problems could be worked out by "common sense business men meeting around a table." He said the organization had many specific proposals which would be submitted at the meeting. Leo Brecher and Laurence Bolognino, New York exhibitors, will represent the ITOA with Mr. Brandt.

Of the eight organizations invited, six including the New York ITOA had accepted the invitation, one, the West Virginia Managers' Association, had designated the MPTOA as its representative, and another, Allied Theatres of Oregon, had not been heard from by Thursday of this week. The Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California requested October 24th as the date for a conference and announced it would be represented by Albert Galston, president, and Robert Poole, general manager. Allied Theatre Owners of Nebraska and Iowa designated Wesley Mansfield and Leo F. Wolcott, president, as its representatives to confer with distributors next Wednesday. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kentucky named Lee Moffitt, Leo Keiler, Richard Martin, Jr., C. O. Brown, Lawrence Davis, Fred Dolle and Sam Switow as its delegates. The Theatre Owners and Managers of the Rocky Mountain Region and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia accepted the invitation, but delegates were not named immediately.

The telegram of invitation read in part:

"Sidney R. Kent, chairman, through the Committee on Trade Practices, extends to your organization a cordial invitation to confer with our committee here for the purpose of attempting to create a method whereby trade differences and disputes can be adjudicated from within the confines of our industry and for the further purpose of endeavoring to establish a better and more thorough understanding between buyer and seller through the establishment of recognized trade practices. We need and require your support and will gladly confer with such committee as you may appoint on any day that you select commencing Oct. 19th."

HEALTH AND LONG FILMS

Alderman Samuel M. Soref has introduced a resolution in the common council in Milwaukee for the appointment of a special committee to study the effect of long motion picture shows on the health and sight of children and adults.

The resolution was based, according to Mr. Soref on recent recommendations by Josephine Maloney of Milwaukee State Teachers' college that no child film programs last longer than two hours, that screen advertisements be kept to a minimum and that films of a higher educational quality be shown.

Abram Myers, general counsel of Allied, declined the invitation of the MPTOA to attend the organization's annual convention. He explained he had conflicting engagements in Pittsburgh and Indianapolis.

Cancellation and Conciliation

Basis of the discussions next week will be the programs which MPTOA and Allied have been pressing for many months. The points which will be taken up first, it is indicated will be an optional cancellation privilege, elimination of score charges and the setting up of conciliation machinery to handle exhibitor-distributor complaints. Other trade practice points such as protection and zoning are more complicated and will entail considerably more study before any satisfactory plan can be worked out. It is expected that still other points which have been the basis for complaints in the past such as playdate fixing, overbuying, cut-rates and non-theatrical competition including the radio problem, may be left for settlement to whatever conciliation machinery is established.

Mr. Rodgers, interviewed in Chicago on his way to address the Michigan Allied States convention this week, said he was hopeful that a great deal could be accomplished at the meetings. "Every phase of the buyers' and sellers' relationship will be discussed," he said.

Harry Warner en route to New York, told reporters in Chicago that Warner Brothers would not join conferences between exhibitors and distributors. He refused to amplify this statement.

Answers Filed In Equity Suit

Notices of appearance were filed by five additional defendants in the Department of Justice equity suit against the industry this week. They were from Ernest V. Richards, Jr., and A. Conger Goodyear, Paramount board members represented by Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett; David Sarnoff, RCA president and member of the RKO board of directors, represented by Donovan, Leisure, Newton & Lombard; William P. Phillips, vice-president and treasurer of United Artists Theatre Circuit, represented by Dwight, Harris, Koegel and Kaskey; and Leo M. Blancke, represented by Schwartz & Frolich.

The deadline for filing of answers in the suit is November 1st and it has been indicated that no extension will be granted beyond that date. It is expected, however, that at least a month will be taken up by legal maneuvering in advance of the trial.

Settlement Studied In Chicago Suit

Preliminary hearings in the anti-trust suit filed against Balaban and Katz and major distributors in Chicago by independent exhibitors were postponed from October 6th to late this week and conferences were held by Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount theatre head, Austin Keough, general counsel for the company, and attorneys for the plaintiffs over the weekend. Mr. Freeman indicated that if settlements negotiations were initiated they would have to be proposed by counsel for the independents.

Over 75 percent of the exhibit space has been contracted for. Gypsum Company and others.

FREE TICKETS ARE PROPOSED FOR CONTESTANTS IN CAMPAIGN 'QUIZ'

Local Theatres Would Reward Patrons for Answering Reasonable Number of Questions; Exhibitors' Contest in Full Swing

With activities spreading into additional fields the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign ended its sixth week on Wednesday and started its seventh.

One of the several developments was a plan put forth by Gilbert Seldes, newspaper writer and radio commentator, whereunder free tickets would be given to contestants in local theatres if they answer a reasonable number of questions. The plan depends upon the reaction of local theatre managers, but it has been favorably received in all quarters where it has been broached, the campaign committee reports.

Mr. Seldes' letter was written to Raymond Moley, journalist, professor of public law at Columbia University and contributing editor of Newsweek Magazine, with the request that it be called to the attention of campaign leaders. The letter in part follows:

"I suggest in brief that the movie contest do this: Arrange with the exhibitors to give two or four free seats to certain contestants in their neighborhood . . . certainly to everyone who sends in a reasonably good set of answers. I would also say four seats instead of two so that the winner could give a small party and take people to the movies.

"The actual prize sent might be an order for seats which the local exhibitor would honor, but which would have to be redeemed for actual tickets some time in advance, giving the exhibitor some leeway so that he would not redeem more than 10 or 20 or 30 tickets for one performance."

Jack Todd, of Radio and Publication Contests, Inc., which is handling the mechanics of the Movie Quiz, has announced that all winners in the contest will be required to sign an affidavit certifying that the answers were their own, as a check against the purchasing of solutions from "solution peddlers," and to protect bonafide entrants.

Entry Blanks for Exhibitors' Contest

Entry blanks are being distributed among exhibitors of all theatres participating in the drive with a view to obtaining their registration for the $2,100 exhibitors' contest, open to individual theatre managers and publicity men, or to local committees.

The entry blanks are to be sent to the Contest Bureau, at campaign headquarters, 1270 Sixth Avenue, New York. Monroe Greenthal is chairman of the Bureau, which comprises also William Ferguson, Alex Moss, Lou Lifton, Maurice Bergman, Arch Reeves, Mitchell Rawson, Lou Pollock and Paul Gulick, campaign coordinator.

A series of 14 cartoons by prominent artists has been prepared at headquarters for planting on editorial pages of newspapers throughout the country. Copies of these cartoons are being sent to publicity heads of promotional committees in more than 150 cities.

A four-page press book, tabloid size, is in preparation for the all-industry short subject, "The World Is Yours," now in final stages of editing in Hollywood.

"The World Is Yours," of which 1,000 prints will be issued, presents every phase of the screen's activity, a sort of cavalcade of motion pictures. Lou Harris and Herman Hoffman authored the original story and screen play. David Snell supplied the musical score. Other credits include effects by Gordon Jennings, montage by Peter Ballnusch and narrations by Truman Bradley.

Telegrams of congratulations from stars, on success of the campaign, are available in reproduction at the campaign headquarters, 1270 Sixth Avenue, New York.

Campaign headquarters have received the first sketches from Hollywood designers for the all-industry fashion show for the final month of the campaign. They include styles for cruise and southern beach wear, and will be presented to manufacturers for display in 100 department stores. The tieup is being arranged through Modern Merchandising.

Eighth Trailer Issued

The eighth of a series of trailers on the campaign has been shipped to exchanges. The trailer features Lew Lehr, through courtesy of Movietone News. The trailer is designed for release during the football season with Lehr cast as a football player.

In a bulletin issued by Harold B. Franklin, business manager of the drive, exhibitors are urged to keep up to date in the matter of quiz trailers. In particular he argues against the constant use of the same trailers.

"Everyone who has studied audience reaction knows that any material that is constantly shown to an audience becomes objectionable in a short time," Mr. Franklin said. "It is therefore important to keep trailers in connection with Motion Pictures' Greatest Year fresh and timely."

Warner Brothers have produced a special trailer to be tied in with the drive. It points up the campaign and at the same time exploits future Warner pictures. They are "Wings of the Navy," "Angels with Dirty Faces," "The Sisters," "Brother Rat," "Devil's Island," "Hard to Get," "Dawn Patrol," "Juarez," "Oklahoma Kid," "Heart of the North" and "Blackwell's Island."

Governor George H. Earle of Pennsylvania has issued a proclamation urging support of the drive, and praising motion pictures for their educational and recreational values and their importance in American economic life.

Through a tieup with the Chicago Herald and Examiner, 'Movie Quiz' fans in that city will receive 53 additional prizes totaling $2,500. These prizes will be awarded to readers of the newspaper who rank highest in the list of the national Movie Quiz winners. First prize will be $1,000; second prize, $500; third prize, $250, and fourth prize, $100. There will be two prizes of $75 each, three prizes of $50 each, four of $25 each, 10 of $10 each and 30 of $5 each.

The web banner which was to have hung across Broadway at 45th Street, carrying the greetings of Broadway to the campaign drive, is now atop of the building at 46th Street and Broadway next to the Globe theatre. The space now occupied by the banner was donated by General Outdoor Advertising Company, which is also painting a special board next to Loew's State Theatre Building as a further good will gesture. The banner reads, "New York Salutes Motion Pictures' Greatest Year. Sponsored by West Side Association of Commerce."

Industry leaders and press representatives will attend the reception given by Motion Pictures' Greatest Year for John H. Harris, prominent Pittsburgh theatre owner, Monday, at the studio atop Radio City Music Hall, New York. Mr. Harris' father, one of the original heads of the United Booking Office, opened the first nickelodeon in Pittsburgh, devoted entirely to the showing of motion pictures.

All street cars in Washington, D. C., are carrying banners for a period of three weeks hailing the campaign. The banner reads: "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year—Ride Street Cars or Buses to Your Favorite Theatre." Ray Bell, of the Washington committee, arranged for the tieup.

A 10-year-old ban on street banners in Los Angeles has been lifted for the drive, with the results that over 100 banners, 3x40 feet, reading "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment" are stretched across every important street intersection in town.

Westchester Parade

Mount Vernon and Bronxville, N. Y., held their Greatest Year drive parade last Saturday. Participating theatres were the Skouras Bronxville, RKO Proctor and Loew's Mount Vernon. More than 200 window cards are on display through cooperation with local merchants. Ten station posters were placed in the Mount Vernon railway station through the courtesy of the New York and Hartford Railroad.

The Seattle Times and Star, evening newspapers, are cooperating with local theatres in the movie quiz campaign every day on their theatre pages.

Almost 100 theatres in the New Haven, Conn., territory are now participating in the Movie Quiz campaign, many of which have reordered booklets from the Universal exchange, headquarters for the booklets.

Booklets Widely Distributed

Of the 750,000 contest booklets received at the Warner Brothers exchange in Kansas City, all but 75,000 have been distributed to exhibitors. A few independents have reordered but Fox Midwest has been the biggest reorderer.

Movie Week in Oshkosh, Wisconsin, which was last week, resulted in lively business in that territory and increased interest in the Movie Quiz contest. H. J. Fitzgerald, chairman of the Wisconsin committee for the drive.

He also announced that Green Bay, Wisconsin, will celebrate Movie Week from October 21 to 28 with cooperation of local authorities and civic leaders.

W. R. Lynch, general manager of the thirteen Paramount theatres in Miami, reported that, as a result of efforts by employees, 72,328 "Quiz" entries had been obtained. Every home and office in Miami has been canvassed.

CONCESSIONS OF PRESS TO THEATRES POINT TO WIDER FILM COOPERATION

Hearst Newspapers Among Los Angeles Publications Agreeing to Increase Space for News of Motion Pictures

by VANCE KING
in Hollywood

What may presage a national movement toward greater cooperation between newspaper publishers and theatremen over treatment of news of the motion picture industry took place this week in Los Angeles when representatives of first-run houses obtained a series of concessions of far reaching import from newspapers.

Most important of the concessions granted were:

An increase of space allotted to film news;

Agreement of the publishers that newspapers would not subsidize events which offer competition to theatres unless for charity purposes, and then only after theatre men have been given an opportunity to proffer an alternative plan using their facilities;

Complete eradication of the pass system under which, it was said, first-run theatres have given hundreds of passes weekly to newspaper employees.

The conference between theatre men and newspaper publishers was the outgrowth of an informal organization of representatives of first-run theatres headed by Rodney Pantages of the Hollywood Pantages Theatre, which operates day and date with the RKO Hillstreet in downtown Los Angeles.

Meet with Publishers

Meeting with E. Manchester Boddy of the Los Angeles Daily News and Evening News, Norman Chandler, business manager of the Los Angeles Times and son of the publisher, Harry Chandler, publisher Frank Barham of the Herald-Express and Richard Carrington of the Examiner, (the two last-named are William Randolph Hearst publications), the theatre men pointed out that sports activities are being given an amount of space far out of proportion to the total weekly attendance. They pointed out that 1,750,000 persons attended motion picture theatres weekly in greater Los Angeles and vicinity and that only 50,000 to 100,000 weekly see sport events. Yet motion picture news is limited to one or two pages daily whereas sports activities are given from six to eight pages of space daily.

They pointed also to the inability to have the proper pictures used on theatre pages, to inconveniences caused by Tuesday deadlines for Sunday editions of the Times and the Examiner, the coolness of city desks to exploitation ideas which, theatre men felt, rated special space outside drama sections, subsidization of sports events such as the recent "Ice Follies," which was competition to theatre grosses, and in general to unfair treatment of a business which paid advertising rates generally three times those of other businesses.

Publishers' Agreement

With Mr. Pantages as spokesman, Ben Walderstein of Warner Theatres, Jack Gross of RKO Theatres, Harry Wallin of the Para-

NEWSPAPER COMMENTS FAVORABLE TO FILMS

According to an analysis made by the Hays office, newspaper reviews and comments in the first nine months of this year have been 95.7 percent favorable, only 2.7 percent adverse, and 1.6 percent neutral.

The analysis includes 18 mimeographed pages of editorial comment and reports of statements made by educators, civic officials, heads of better film groups and other leaders.

mount Theatre and Thornton Sargent of Fox West Coast met last week with the publishers and this week received the publishers' agreement as follows:

To cooperate on deadline matters as far as local makeup and mechanical difficulties will permit.

Whenever possible to delete portions of syndicated columns criticizing pictures being currently advertised;

Increase drama sections to an appreciable degree;

Clean up or eliminate burlesque house advertising, which, it was pointed out, was exceeding all limitations of decency;

Issue a bulletin to employees not to ask for theatre passes.

Other conferences calling for further concessions are scheduled, according to Mr. Pantages.

Sees National Movement

"This may be the beginning of a national move to better relations between theatre men and newspaper publishers," he said. "We have a strong argument for larger theatre sections of newspapers by pointing out that more persons attend theatres than sports events while newspapers give much more space to sports than to theatres. While we have been given promise of larger theatre sections, we intend to seek more. We want as large theatre sections as sports sections. We have obtained promises of cleaning up burlesque advertising, which in Los Angeles has sunk to very low levels, with the use of such words as 'titillating,' 'sway of all flesh.' We want theatre sections to carry art pertinent to the pictures being advertised, and based on news value. We find it hard to plant pictures of male stars, if warranted, when the newspapers insist that all art be of women. We want reportorial consideration of 'B' pictures in reviews of openings. We want preview reviews eliminated from theatre sections. If they must be run they should be run outside of the regular theatre sections. The publishers have promised standardization of the position of theatre pages, as far as possible. We want kinder treatment from city desks, not sneers when exploitation stunts of merit are proposed. Adverse critical opinions of pictures should not be printed in advance or at the time theatres are spending large sums of money to advertise attractions that the critics 'pan' many times in the same issue."

Walt Disney is working on his first commercial cartoon, which is being made for National Biscuit Company. The film will be a one reeler featuring the Disney characters, and will not be available for theatres, but will be shown exclusively at the New York and San Francisco World Fairs.

Flexible Warner Policy Overseas

A flexible sales policy will be followed by Warner Brothers, with respect to the new season's product, in Argentina, Chili, Uruguay and Paraguay, according to Harry Novak, sales manager for those countries, who sails Saturday for Buenos Aires.

Action pictures are very popular in South America, said Mr. Novak, who pointed out that almost 90 per cent of the product of the large Hollywood film companies is imported annually into Argentina, as well as a high percentage of the pictures made by independent companies.

With regard to reports that there is burdensome legislation on distribution of American films in Argentina, Mr. Novak pointed out that the reports have their root in a misunderstanding based on an action of the former Argentine de facto government. The laws, which limited the operations of foreign film distributors in the country, were enacted, but have no bearing on the present situation because they are considered unconstitutional and are not enforced by the present administration, which is most cooperative with American film branches.

Rodgers Presents Plaque To New Orleans Exchange

William F. Rodgers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer distribution executive, presented a plaque to the MGM New Orleans exchange staff this week at a dinner and entertainment at historic Antoine's restaurant in New Orleans. The award was made to J. G. Briant, exchange manager, for winning the MGM national summer sales campaign.

Others who attended were Thomas J. Conners, in charge of sales for MGM in Canada; C. E. Kessnich, southern division sales manager of Atlanta; the three national contest winners for the year, Leroy Bickel, Dallas; J. F. Willington, Memphis and W. D. Zoellner, Oklahoma City, and other southern representatives.

Many to Attend Minneapolis Dinner to Edward A. Golden

Several hundred are expected to attend the Edward A. Golden testimonial dinner to be held Friday in Minneapolis. Jimmy Walker, former mayor of New York, will be one of the principal speakers while Will H. Hays has signified his intention of attending. The following have made reservations: Frank Freeman, William Rodgers, James Scully, Nate Blumberg, George Dembow, Herman Robbins, W. Ray Johnston, Pete Harrison, Austin Kehoe and Charles Pettijohn.

Among Monogram franchise holders who will attend are Henri Elman, Chicago; Charles W. Trampe, Milwaukee; Nate Schultz, Cleveland; Forrest Judd, Des Moines; Charles Weiner, Minneapolis; Steve Broidy and Ben Welansky, Boston.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

9 Start, 10 Finished

Nine pictures started in October's first week and ten were finished. Unexpected delays caused the postponement of three others that were scheduled for shooting.

At Twentieth Century-Fox, work began on three productions. "Bundle of Joy" will be a number in the "Jones Family" series. Leading players already assigned to "The Three Musketeers," comedy, are the Ritz Brothers, Don Ameche, Gloria Stuart, Binnie Barnes, Armand Duff, John Carradine and Joseph Schildkraut. The cast of "Thanks for Everything," comedy romance, is headed by Jack Oakie, Adolphe Menjou, Jack Haley, Arleen Whelan, Binnie Barnes and Tony Martin.

Radio put before the cameras "Love Match," the first Leo McCarey producing-directing feature. It is a romantic story and will feature Irene Dunne, Charles Boyer and David Niven.

Universal's contribution to the new work is "Eagle Scout," a serial and Boy Scout story which will star Jackie Coogan and feature Lucy Gilman and Jason Robards.

Monogram started "Gun Packer," an action adventure romance in which Jack Randall and Louise Stanley are the principals.

"Oklahoma Kid" was started at Warners. James Cagney, Rosemary Lane, Humphrey Bogart and Donald Crisp will be featured.

Columbia began work on "Trail of the Tumbleweeds." The cast will include Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Robert Fiske, Edward Peel and Steve Clark.

Slated for Christmas-time release, MGM began "Christmas Carol," a topical seasonal production in which Reginald Owen, Terry Kilburn, Gene and Kathleen Lockhart, Lynne Carvey and Ann Rutherford will be seen.

Paramount Finishes Three

Paramount is credited with three of the completed films. "St. Louis Blues" will present Dorothy Lamour, Lloyd Nolan, Jessie Ralph, Jerome Cowan, Tito Guizar, Maxine Sullivan, William Frawley, Mary Parker, Victor Kilian and Matty Malneck's orchestra. Anna May Wong and Akim Tamiroff head the cast of "King of Chinatown," which will also present J. Carol Naish, Roscoe Karns, Anthony Quinn, Bernadene Hayes, Philip Ahn, William Law, Ray Mayer, Alex Pollard, Sam Ash, Marie Burton and Sheila Darcy. The cast of "Riders of the Range," a Harry Sherman Hopalong Cassidy picture, will feature William Boyd, George Hayes and Russell Hayden, with Stanley Ridges, Frederick Burton, Ruth Rogers, Jack Rockwell, Roy Barcroft, Ed Cassidy, Sherry Tanzey, Jim Corey and Bruce Mitchell.

Two Completed at Universal

Two pictures were finished at Universal. "The Storm," a melodramatic love story, will feature Charles Bickford, Preston Foster, Barton McLane, Tom Brown, Andy Devine, Samuel Hinds, Joseph Sawyer and Nan Grey. In "Adam's Evening," a comedy, will be seen Charles Ruggles, Maxey Rosenbloom, Marian Martin, Ona Munson, Georgia Kaine, Raymond Parker, Frances Robinson, Richard Lane, Benny Baker, Stepin Fetchit, Stanley Hughes and Regis Toomey.

Republic also marked two productions off

COVERS CENTURY IN HIS ROLES

In little more than a year Joseph Schildkraut has covered more than a century of French history in his screen characterizations.

He was the unfortunate Dreyfus in "The Life of Emile Zola." He appeared as a suitor of Norma Shearer in "Marie Antoinette." "Suez" will see him as a French wizard of finance who lived in the middle of the nineteenth century. He will be the King of France in "The Three Musketeers," in which the Ritz Brothers and company will strive to overwhelm the ghost of Dumas.

its active list. "Storm over Bengal" will present Patric Knowles, Richard Cromwell, Rochelle Hudson, Colin Tapley, Douglas Dumbrille, Halliwell Hobbs, Claude Allister and Clyde Cook. Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Peggy Moran, Pert Kelton and LeRoy Mason are the principals in "Rhythm of the Saddle." MGM finished "Young Doctor Kildare."

It will present Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Lynne Carver, Nat Pendleton, Jo Ann Sayers, Samuel S. Hinds, Emma Dunn, Walter Kingsford, Truman Bradley, Monty Woolsey, Pierre Watkins and Nella Walker.

"Lawless Valley" was finished at RKO-Radio. George O'Brien is starred with Walter Miller, Kay Sutton, Fred Kohler, Sr., Fred Kohler, Jr., George MacQuarrie, Lew Kelly, Earl Hodgins and Dot Farley.

For Paramount distribution, Colonial Pictures completed "Little Orphan Annie." It will present Ann Gillis, Robert Kent, June Travis, Ian MacLaren, Margaret Armstrong, J. M. Kerrigan, James Burke, Charles Wilson, Sarah Padden, Tommy Bupp, Ben Welden, J. Farrell MacDonald, Eddie Gribbon, Dick Rich and Harry Tyler.

Three new features added to the list of those to be made in Technicolor are Shirley Temple's "Little Princess," Twentieth Century-Fox, "Dodge City," Warner Bros., and "Thief of Bagdad," with Alexander Korda producing and United Artists the distributor.

Speed to Burns

A rearrangement of Paramount's filming schedule has set November 7th as the starting date of Bob Burns' next starring production, "I'm from Missouri." Decision to launch the filming of the picture as quickly as possible came about as a result of the favorable reactions to "The Arkansas Traveler."

The move necessitates the withdrawal of Burns from the cast of Cecil B. DeMile's "Union Pacific," in which the actor was to portray a featured role.

Gladys George will be seen as Burns' mate, appearing on the story as a loveable midwestern housewife with social ambitions.

"I'm from Missouri" is based on the Homer Croy novel, "Sixteen Hands." It will be produced by Paul Jones with Theodore Reed as director.

Capacity

Facilities at Twentieth Century-Fox studios were utilized completely this week as ten films were before the cameras.

Of the group three are color specials. "Jesse James" is now on one of the bigger stages with Henry King directing Tyrone Power, Nancy Kelly, Henry Fonda and many others. "Kentucky," a story of the sport of kings which features Loretta Young, Richard Greene and Walter Brennan, is being shot in color as is the latest Shirley Temple picture, "The Little Princess."

"Tail Spin," the company's contribution to the cycle of aviation films, is before the cameras under Roy Del Ruth's direction, with Alice Faye, Constance Bennett, Joan Davis and Nancy Kelly being featured as feminine racing pilots. The Ritz Brothers, with the help of Don Ameche, are busy turning Dumas' "The Three Musketeers" into a farcical film under the direction of Allan Dwan, while the satirical "Thanks for Everything," with Adolphe Menjou, Jack Haley, Jack Oakie, Tony Martin and Arleen Whelan is being handled by director William Seiter.

Under Sol M. Wurtzel's banner, four films are in progress. In the final stages of production are Jane Withers' "The Arizona Wildcat," with Leo Carillo, Henry Wilcoxon and Douglas Fowley, and "Up the River," a recreation of a previously produced story which Alfred Werked is directing with Preston Foster, Arthur Treacher, Tony Martin and Phyllis Brooks.

On the studio's busiest program also are "Bundle of Joy," a "Jones Family" feature, and "Samson and the Ladies," second of the "Big Town Girls" series featuring Lynn Bari and June Gale.

Comeback Trail

Antonio Moreno, one of the biggest stars of his time, has taken up the comeback trail. The Spanish-born idol of the silent days has been assigned a featured role in Paramount's "Ambush."

At one time, Moreno was on Paramount's contract list for more than five consecutive years, drawing one of the biggest salaries then paid any actor. Among some of his best known pictures are "Mare Nostrum," "The Temptress," "Adoration" and "Romance of the Rio Grande."

In his return picture he will play the role of a police inspector.

FORWARD with

This, more than ever before in the history of the motion picture industry, is a time of thanksgiving. Thanksgiving that the world is not whirling into the chaos of war. Thanksgiving that the hearts of our own country are lighter. Thanksgiving that the wheels of industry once more are turning, that the business indices show steadily mounting gains, that our hopes and our faith in America and American enterprise are once more gloriously justified.

More than that, this is a time for us to be proud of our own industry. Proud of the courage and the enterprise which every single motion picture company has shown during recent months, the courage and the enterprise which created, during months of despair, the very pictures now making record showings at the nation's box office. Such pictures as Metro's "Marie Antoinette," R-K-O's "Room Service," 20th Century-Fox's "Alexander's Ragtime Band," United Artists' "Drums," Warner Bros.' "Four Daughters," Columbia's "You Can't Take It With You," Universal's "That Certain Age."

Proud of the spirit of cooperation and good-will which made the great united front of the Motion Picture Industry drive possible. Proud of the fact that the words of criticism hurled at us during those worried months last Spring and Summer have returned to haunt their small-visioned authors . . .

While we write this, crowds of joyous fans are storming the doors of the New York Paramount Theatre to see "If I Were King." Another hit is about to take its place among such new record breakers as "Sing You Sinners" and "Spawn of the North." The critics confirm our belief that "The Arkansas Traveler" is another potential smash. And there need be no guesswork about "Men With Wings." The hope and faith which kept us planning and working and spending during the Spring and Summer are bringing golden returns . . .

So, last but not least of all, we say this, is a time to go forward with even greater courage, with even greater enterprise. And we at Paramount, with grateful hearts for this pleasant present, promise to our exhibitors and to our industry that we shall strive with every energy we have toward an even grander, more glorious future.

PUBLIC IS THE CENSOR, RADIO CRITIC IS TOLD

Hode Cites "What the Picture Did for Me" Reports in Answering Broadcast

The real censors of motion pictures "are the people who make up the theatre-going public," and "the big producers learned long ago that there is no permanent profit in smut," Hal Hode, executive assistant to the vice-president of Columbia Pictures, declared Monday night in a radio address from station WQXR, New York, from 9:45 to 10 o'clock (E. S. T.). The address, one of a series by various speakers on "Exploring the Arts and Sciences," sponsored by the Federal Theatre Radio Division of the Works Progress Administration, was in reply to a critical speech on the motion picture industry several weeks ago by Leslie Bain. That speech marked substantially the first appearance of Mr. Bain's name in the news of the industry.

Always "Open Season"

Mr. Hode first summed up Mr. Bain's charges that "the average picture is cheap," that studio overhead is unnecessarily high, that "stupidity of studio executives" causes retakes, that fear of censor boards prevents production of good pictures, that the so-called star system straitjackets characterization into types, and that block booking is "the devil in the cheese."

"The motion picture industry," Mr. Hode told his radio audience, "is unfortunate in that it is always open season for self-constituted authorities on films to take potshots at the movies. Fortunately the industry's shoulders are broad, and it knows, via box-office receipts, that the great mass of people is on its side."

Mr. Hode challenged the intimation that "small towners, wherever they live, are less intelligent than the people who live in New York," as a reason for making "cheap" pictures. He pointed out that 80 per cent of the theatres are located in rural and industrial communities and that, "far from being of the sophisticates who would have one think that Greenwich Village is the hub of the cultural universe, these small towners still believe in the simple and homely virtues," and "prefer simple and homely stories on the screen."

"These small towners," he said, "are important, and the producers know they are important. We get the evidence of their likes and dislikes in the somewhat pungent comments which small town theatre owners make not only to us, but to each other, via the columns of one of the most important trade publications in the motion picture industry, the MOTION PICTURE HERALD. Take a look at the section of that publication which bears the heading 'What the Picture Did for Me'. What the artistic pictures, which the so-called intelligentsia rave over, do to these small town theatre box offices might well surprise you. Incidentally, we find that big cities, in the main, go for the so-called small town films in a big way, too."

Pictures of all types must be made, he said, because all types of taste must be satisfied.

Mr. Hode said that the critic, "for one who claimed to have spent ten years in Hollywood, betrayed an amazing lack of knowledge of what goes on in Hollywood." He added that studio overhead "consists of a thousand-and-one items, such as salaries paid to the 672 types of workers, in addition to stars, directors and writers," and that the salaries of stars and directors are a relatively small part of the overhead.

Retakes for Better Films

As for "retakes," Mr. Hode pointed to a number of legitimate factors necessitating them, such as "outside noises, not noticeable to the ear at the time of shooting but glaringly apparent on the play-back because the sensitive microphone picked up what the human ear failed to detect; makeup or lighting which looked right to the eyes of experts, but which the camera revealed as being slightly less than perfect. "He commented that the industry will always have retakes and will cheerfully shoulder the extra expense they entail, just so long as they result in better pictures."

Only six states have censor boards, he said, not the 48 indicated by Mr. Bain. The six are New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, Ohio and Kansas. "Censorship is an expense and, at times, a nuisance, but in the main, we have found censor boards fairly cooperative when the members of a specific board have been on the job long enough to learn their duties. Don't ever get the idea that Hollywood trembles with fear lest a censor, hidden behind a secret panel, suddenly pops out and shouts "Boo."

The Star System

The star system remains, Mr. Hode declared, because the patrons demand stars. "As for long-term contracts, view it as an evil or otherwise, the day of the long term contract for big stars is drawing to a close. Stars now prefer to work on a picture-by-picture and freelance basis because they believe they can earn more money that way."

"Typing" of players, he added, comes down to giving players the roles in which they show to best advantage, and the same holds true of directors.

He said that block booking "amounts to a theatre owner buying his pictures wholesale," rarely renting from only one company's pictures but from different film companies "because of his faith in their ability to deliver good pictures." He added that under his contract the exhibitor "has the privilege of rejecting a percentage of pictures."

Mr. Hode, in conclusion, said that talk of a decline in theatre receipts being due to public resentment against the pictures now being shown "reveals nothing more than an abysmal ignorance of the economic conditions which have affected the whole world."

"However," he said, "a heartening thing has occurred during the last couple of months. Box office reports from all parts of this country indicate that people are again turning to their favorite form of entertainment because theatre receipts have increased 25 per cent during that period."

E. J. Barnard, Paramount branch manager in Indianapolis, died unexpectedly last Monday. Born in Chicago, Mr. Barnard had been educated at Calhoun, Chicago, Crane Tech and Chicago University.

Mr. Barnard joined Paramount in 1923 as assistant shipper in the ad sales department of the Chicago exchange, and later became a sales manager in Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Chicago. In March, 1933, he was appointed sales manager in Chicago after having become a salesman there in 1927. In August, 1936, he was assigned to the Indianapolis exchange as manager.

Alperson Made Grand National Vice-President

Edward L. Alperson, general sales manager of Grand National, was elected a vice-president of the company at a meeting of the board last Monday. Mr. Alperson had been president of Grand National Films, Inc., before the company was taken over by Educational interests.

Earle W. Hammons, president of the company, sailed for England on the Normandie Wednesday to arrange for English distribution of the company's product. With him was Samuel Berkowitz, vice-president of Fine Arts Pictures, which releases through Grand National.

Mr. Hammons told the press before sailing that the company is seeking top bracket name talent in order to build an important player roster for next season.

Grand National's second and final series of sales meetings were held last Saturday and Sunday at the Hotel St. Moritz in New York. Addresses were given by Mr. Hammons, Mr. Berkowitz, Mr. Alperson, J. H. Skirball, vice-president in charge of production; T. R. Williams, treasurer; Harold Saxe, assistant treasurer; Bruno Weyers, director and Educational vice-president, and Gordon White, advertising and publicity director. Also present at the meeting were George Blake, secretary of the company; F. X. Carroll, Robert Doidge, L. J. Woodridge, Sam Citron and Philip Leonard of the home office, Sol Edwards, circuit sales manager; Morris Safer, west coast district manager; Ralph Kinsler, middle eastern district manager; Harry Asher, eastern district manager, and Jack Lamont, southern.

In addition, the following branch managers were present: Arthur Newman, Albany; Joe Levy, Buffalo; Israel Levine, New Haven; Merritt Davis, Charlotte; Jules Lapidus, Pittsburgh; Moe Sherman, Philadelphia; Harry Brown, Washington; John Himmlein, Cleveland, and Peter Rosian of New York.

Educational Reports $120,819 Net for Year

Educational Pictures, Inc., and subsidiaries report a $120,819.27 net for the year ended June 25 last as compared with $168,056.26 for 1937. Earnings per share were approximately $1.35 in 1938 as against approximately $1.87 per share in 1937.

In the report sent to stockholders by Earle W. Hammons, president, it is stated that the financial condition of the company has shown "continual improvement," and that during the year a $301,903.99 cut in liabilities was effected. Assets were reduced only $168,066.84, the report pointed out.

Reduced earnings for August and for the first eight months of 1938 were reported this week by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in a statement which covered only the parent company of the Bell System. August net income of the company was $166,886, against $575,396 for August, 1937. Net income for the first eight months of 1938 was $76,048,038 against $88,483,963 for the corresponding period last year.

The Shining Hour

(MGM)
Problem Play

"The Shining Hour," adaptation of the stage play, is a love story, but the amplifying situations are treated from a different angle. The plot is ultra modern in premise. Tired of the glamour and glitter with which she is surrounded in New York, a famous dancer marries. On a Wisconsin farm, the girl finds herself confronted with a situation far more hazardous than the one from which she escaped. It involves not only her future life but that of four others.

In the earlier sequences, the film will return Joan Crawford, who is starred, to the type of role in which she first attained screen fame, that of a modern dancing maiden. It will mark the first time she has danced on the screen since "Dancing Lady." The picture will feature Margaret Sullavan, last in "Three Comrades" and "Shopworn Angel"; Melvyn Douglas, presently in "That Certain Age"; Robert Young, in "Three Comrades" and "Rich Man, Poor Girl," and Fay Bainter, featured in "White Banners" and "Mother Carey's Chickens." Frank Albertson, Allyn Joslyn, Harry Barris and Hattie McDaniel will be seen in support.

"The Shining Hour" is being produced by Joseph L. Mankiewicz, who produced "Three Comrades," "Shopworn Angel" and "Mannequin." Miss Sullavan was starred in the first two, Miss Crawford in the third. It is being directed by Frank Borzage, who turned out "Three Comrades" and "Shopworn Angel."

The story's anticipated top production thrill is a fire which razes the farm home.

Release date: Nov. 25, 1938.

Trailer Romance

(RKO-Radio)
Comedy

The featured players in this comedy romance will be Lucille Ball, James Ellison and Lee Bowman. Miss Ball's two latest pictures are "Annabel Takes a Tour" and "The Affairs of Annabel." Ellison played the romantic lead in "Mother Carey's Chickens." Bowman was teamed with Miss Ball in "Having Wonderful Time." The other important player is Granville Bates, presently in "A Man to Remember."

The story is an original by Thomas Williamson. The screenplay was provided by Dudley Nichols, who demonstrated his ability to supply comedy in "Bringing Up Baby," and John Twist, whose writing credits include "Flight from Glory," "Hitting a New High" and "Annapolis Salute." The director, Garson Kanin, has been credited with but one other picture, the newly made "A Man to Remember."

A great deal of the story's action and the comedy takes place in a trailer, with roadside scenes and auto camp sites as the settings for the incidents between a small New Jersey town and Reno, Nevada.

A "marriage for convenience" that turns out to be a real romance is the basis of the plot. An heiress desires to marry a foreign nobleman, but does not wish to lose a big inheritance if she doesn't marry an American. The heroine evolves the bright idea of marrying the first personable American she meets, who happens to be a W.P.A. worker, divorcing him promptly and using that technical subterfuge as an angle permitting her to marry the foreigner. The plan is fine in theory, but when the bridegroom proves stubborn, in fact makes a prisoner in his trailer of the kissless bride, real love has its innings.

The picture is being produced by Cliff Reid, whose other comedies were "Bringing Up Baby," "Crashing Hollywood" and "This Marriage Business."

Release date: November 4, 1938 (tentative).

Gangster's Boy

(Monogram)
Melodrama

Although the story to be told is melodramatic, it does not come within the gangster formula. While adults play an important part, the plot mainly concerns three juveniles, two boys and a girl. There are no pineapple throwings. Suspense is generated in the experiences of the three youngsters.

The hero is regarded as respectable and fit company for anyone until it is revealed that his father is an ex-gangster. Then the sins of the father are visited on the son. He goes his way manfully. In the climax he assumes responsibility for a near fatal accident, willingly giving up his opportunity to go to West Point, but the other two youngsters come forward with the true story.

Jackie Cooper, most recently in "That Certain Age" and "Boy of the Streets," will be in the leading role. His two principal juvenile supports are Tommy Wonder and Lucy Gilman. Robert Warwick will be seen in the role of the ex-gangster, Selmer Jackson as a judge, father of the two children, who took the lead in trying to run the former gangster out of town. Others are Louise Lorimer, appearing as Cooper's mother, Bobby Stone, Betty Blythe and Bradley Metcalfe.

Karl Brown, who did "Port of Missing Girls" and "Federal Bullets" for Monogram, wrote the original story which Robert D. Andrews, credited recently with "Flight from Glory," adapted. William Nigh, who made "Boy of the Streets," is directing.

Release date: Nov. 2, 1938.

Say It In French

(Paramount)
Comedy-Romance

Paramount is planning "Say It in French" in such ways that it will be funny, frothy and frivolous, a sort of French farce done in American style, in and about today's aristocratic mansions of New York and environs.

The main plot follows an idea often used. Returning from a golfing conquest of Europe, the hero finds that his suddenly-gone-broke father has arranged for him to marry an heiress. But the hero already has a little French bride. Before papa can be informed, the bride is hired as a maid and insists that her husband go through with the marriage to help his family. When a date is set, confessions must be made. The about-to-be bride helps the hero out of his predicament. The real bride, disillusioned, is about to sail. In a mixup at the pier the husband sails and the bride remains with her in-laws.

The picture will be Olympe Bradna's first appearance since "Stolen Heaven." Ray Milland is in "Sing You Sinners." Irene Hervey is the other woman. In the supporting cast are Janet Beecher, Evelyn Keyes, Walter Kingsford, Erik Rhodes, Holmes Herbert, Gertrude Sutton, Forbes Murray and Billy Daniel.

The story is from a play by Jacques Deval, author of "Tovarich" and writer of the screenplay for "Cafe Metropole." It was adapted by Frederick Jackson, a collaborator on the "Stolen Heaven" and "Wells Fargo" screenplays. The director-producer, Andrew Stone, made "Stolen Heaven" and "The Girl Said No."

Release date: December 16, 1938.

Cipher Bureau

(Fine Arts)
Spy Story

"Cipher Bureau" will not be, essentially, a war story, but it does deal with one phase of international conflict—spies.

It is suspected the alien spies are making use of a secret radio broadcasting station near Washington. The head of the U. S. Army Cipher Bureau assigns his younger brother, a naval ensign, to locate it. The boy falls in love with a girl spy, is made her dupe. The ringleaders determine to get rid of both the girl and officer. To the rescue comes the head of the Cipher Bureau for the customary thrill climax.

The story will present Leon Ames, Charlotte Wynters, Don Dillaway, Joan Woodbury and Gustave von Seyffertitz in the leading roles. Supporting players include Jason Robard, Hooper Atchley, Carl Stockdale, Robert Frazer and Sidney Miller.

From an original story by Monroe Shaff, which Arthur Hoerl adapted. Charles Lamont is directing under the supervision of Franklyn Warner.

Release date: To be determined.

Tom Sawyer, Detective

(Paramount)
Comedy-Mystery

Donald O'Connor and Billy Cook, a pair prominent in the current "Sons of the Legion," plays the roles of Huck Finn and Tom Sawyer, Mark Twain's two most famous boy characters, as they go adventuring again in "Tom Sawyer, Detective."

Louis Foster, Robert Yost and Stuart Anthony collaborated on the screen play. Direction was assigned to Louis King, who has done several melodramatic pictures for Paramount recently, including numbers in the "Bulldog Drummond" series, "Prison Farm" and "Tip off Girls."

Although O'Connor and Cook will be the central figures, practically every member of the supporting cast is important in the story development. Associate producer Edward T. Lowe has selected a capable troupe. On the roster are Porter Hall, now in "King of Alcatraz"; Phillip Warren; Janet Waldo, about whom the romantic interest centers; Clara Blandick and Elisabeth Risdon, who will be Aunt Polly and Aunt Sally; Ed Pawley, who was with O'Connor and Cook in "Sons of the Legion," and Hattie McDaniels, Oscar Smith, William Haade, Stanley Price, Harry Worth and Si Jenks.

The production background will have a rural aspect. On a vacation, the two boys become involved in a lot of weird intrigue. Their main duties concern capturing a mysterious diamond thief and exposing a murderer.

Release date, December 23, 1938.

Dramatic School (Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer)

Career Story

Luise Rainer will be the star of "Dramatic School." Alan Marshall, seen with Greta Garbo in "Conquest," will be featured. In support are Paulette Goddard, Chaplin's leading woman in "Modern Times," and soon to be seen in "The Young in Heart," Reginald Owen, Henry Stephenson, Gale Sondergaard, Anthony Allan and many young MGM contract players.

Paris is the locale and the time is the present. The theme concerns the experiences of a factory girl who has ambitions to become an actress. While production detail concerns itself with the life, customs and social affairs of the school, the heroine, as did Deanna Durbin in "Mad About Music" when she created an imaginary father for herself, conjures a secret suitor. Her dreamings create complications, but when the outlook appears most hopeless, she gets her chance to be a stage star. To explain the fate of the one who came into and went out of her life, she weaves another fanciful fairy tale of another phantom sweetheart.

"Dramatic School" is Mervyn LeRoy's first production for MGM. In his long career with Warner Bros., Mr. LeRoy produced such notable successes as "Anthony Adverse," "The King and the Chorus Girl" and "Fools for Scandal." Robert Sinclair, who is directing the film, had MGM's "Woman Against Woman."

Release date: December 9, 1938.

Strange Faces (Universal)

Comedy Melodrama

Playing supporting roles in "Youth Takes a Fling," Frank Jenks, who was also seen in "100 Men and a Girl," and Dorethea Kent scored hits. As a direct result of this picture, Universal decided to co-feature them in "Strange Faces."

In story substance, the production will be a comedy melodrama with many novel twists. To save his own hide, a gangster, with the aid of his mostly "criminal" lawyer, murders a man who is the desperado's "spitten image," and assumes his identity. A reporter who writes a "Looks Alike" column and a rival newspaper woman, with whom he is in love, suspect that there is something not entirely on the level about the new setup. The look-alike gangster endeavors to marry a rural lass who has just inherited a fortune. The rival reporters, to the parallel tune of wild melodrama and hilarious comedy, expose him, save the love-stricken country girl, and wrap up their own romance.

The screenplay was prepared by Charles Grayson, who did "Freshman Year," "Young Fugitives" and "Reckless Living." The picture is being directed by Errol Taggart, maker of "The Women Men Marry" and "Song of the City," under the production supervision of Burt Kelly.

The supporting cast will include Leon Ames

Exposed (Universal) Melodrama

"Exposed" will be a number in Universal's "Candid Camera" series. Basically the story is melodramatic. A girl newspaper photographer comes across a former important prosecutor who lost standing in his profession after sending an innocent man to the chair. Instrumental in effecting his rehabilitation, she becomes involved in a series of situations that force her to palm off another girl as the executed man's daughter, to whom the lawyer seeks to make amends, and with double crossing gangsters who discover the reception. The girl and lawyer sense they are on the trail of a bandit gang. They are successful. The lawyer, even after he discovers the trick played upon him, looks to romance with its perpetrator.

Glenda Farrell, seen recently in the "Torchy Blane" series as well as "The Road to Reno," and Otto Kruger, who has a role similar to that he had in "Counselloir at Law," are featured. Further name values are Herbert Mundin, David Oliver, Charles D. Brown, Lorraine Krueger and Eddie Anderson.

Harold Schuster, who handled "Swing That Cheer," is the director. Max H. Golden, who initiated the "Jones Family" series for Twentieth Century-Fox, is the producer. The story told is based on an idea by Milton Cropper which Charles Kaufman and Franklin Coen developed into screenplay form.

Release date: November 4, 1938.

Richard Day, former head of Samuel Goldwyn's art department, has been signed as art director at Twentieth Century-Fox. Bernard Herzbrun will continue in charge of special art work.

Warner Short Answers "Isms"

Mirroring the statement of Harry M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers, made before 150 American Legion officers and other guests at a luncheon September 19th at the studios in Burbank, that the Hollywood producers "are doing much, all that we can do, in fact, to teach the principles of true democracy to the outside world," the Warner home office last Thursday previewed "The Declaration of Independence," latest in the Warner family of historical short subjects, following a luncheon to the press.

"We sincerely believe this series is an important one, particularly so in these troublous times when the nation is faced with 'isms' of all kinds," Norman H. Moray, short subjects general sales manager, told the press representatives. He pointed to the entertainment value of the series as well as "the good they must do in creating the proper patriotic reaction."

The picture, done in color and running 18 minutes, was directed by Crane Wilbur and depicts the signing of the Declaration. The cast includes John Litel, Rosella Towne, Ted Osborne, Owen King, Gordon Hart, Lionel Belmore and Ferris Taylor.

Others in the series are "The Man Without a Country," 1938 Academy Award winner, and "Give Me Liberty."

Pettijohn to Do Hometown Job in Lehman Campaign

Governor Lehman of New York, candidate for re-election, has named Charles C. Pettijohn on his Citizen's Committee as vice-chairman for Westchester County. Mr. Pettijohn is thereby entrusted with attentions to a region which went some fifty-eight thousand against Mr. Lehman in the prior campaign. They are both residents of the town of Harrison, a community which rejoices in the possession of Lehman Athletic Field and Pettijohn Park, where, incidentally, Mr. Pettijohn is trying to naturalize some paw-paw trees from his native Indiana.

George Lederer, Producer, Dies

George W. Lederer, 76, producer of musical comedies and revues, who introduced vaudeville into the United States, died last Saturday in Jackson Heights, N. Y. He was born in Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Mr. Lederer was the producer of "The Passing Show," the first revue in America in 1893 and "The Belle of New York" and "Madame Sherry," both of which were among the most popular musical comedies ever produced, running for four years.

"The Belle of New York" was the greatest hit in his career, earning him $1,000,000 from the dozen or so companies that played it for four years here and in England. Mr. Lederer is also credited with introducing the famed Florodora sextette. Although the production "Florodora" was done by Fisher and Ryley, Mr. Lederer staged it in his Casino.

After losing all his money in theatrical real estate ventures Mr. Lederer turned to the motion picture field, predicting that in a few years it would overwhelm the theatre. He directed several motion pictures for the Reliance Film Company.

After leaving motion pictures Mr. Lederer produced several other shows, was for a time manager for the Sam H. Harris office, and dabbled in radio programs.

He was married four times. His third wife was the late Reine Davies, sister of Marion Davies. They were divorced in 1919.

He discovered such stars as Ruth St. Denis, Marie Dressler, Louis Mann, Della Fox, David Warfield, Edna May, Eva Tangway, Edna Wallace Hopper, Ina Claire, Elizabeth Murray, Madge Lessing, Dan Daly, Jefferson De Angelis, Cissie Loftus and Augustus Thomas.

Charles Bayer Dies

Charles Frederick Bayer, 68, who built the Palace in Perrysburg, Ohio, 17 years ago, died there last week after a year's illness. His wife, five sons and two daughters survive.

Rosen to Arrange Deal

Al Rosen, general manager of Symphonic Films, Inc., producers of short subjects for Paramount release, plans to visit New York from Hollywood shortly to arrange a possible deal for a full length feature to be based on the opera, "The Barber of Seville." Symphonic will start production soon on its final three short subjects for Paramount.

Four Companies Formed

Court Adjourns Ashcraft Action to October 24th

Further hearing of the Ashcraft Manufacturing Company's suit against the Durkee circuit's Grand theatre and the National Theatre Supply Company in Baltimore, took place Friday and after about an hour court was adjourned to October 24th. The suit is being heard by Judge William C. Coleman in federal district court there.

The Ashcraft company charge that Peerless Magnarc lamps used in the Grand theatre infringe patents which the plaintiffs claim on the mechanism by which direct current is applied to the use of the so-called "suprex" carbons. The lamps employed in projection at the Grand, manufactured by the J. E. McAuley Manufacturing Company of Chicago, are designed for the use of such carbons with direct current.

Fox Allowances Are Granted by Court

Federal Judge Martin T. Manton has granted Basil O'Connor a fourth ad interim allowance of $15,000 as attorney for Milton C. Weisman, receiver for Fox Theatres, in the equity suit brought by the Chicago Title and Trust Company. Judge Manton at the same time awarded Courtland Palmer, as the special master who passed on claims filed against Fox Theatres, a final allowance of $1,000.

Mr. O'Connor, who had previously received three interim allowances totaling $32,500, received the amount he had asked in his petition. The fee covers his services from July 1, 1937, to July 30, 1938. Mr. Palmer, who was appointed by Judge Manton on July 20, 1932, had previously received allowances totaling $12,500.

Coogan Suit Ties Up Funds

Jackie Coogan's mother, Mrs. Lillian Coogan Bernstein, was denied a request for release of $40,000 worth of securities from receivership by a Los Angeles court. The former child star has tied up the family funds by his suit to recover $4,000,000 of his film earnings. Mrs. Bernstein applied for release of the funds claiming she had no means of support and contending that the securities were not purchased with her son's earnings.

Shea Takes Warner Product

Roy Haines, eastern and Canadian sales managers for Warner Brothers, and Dick Kearney, acting for the M. A. Shea circuit, have closed a deal for the playing of the entire Warner 1938-39 list in the Shea houses, it was said this week by Gradwell L. Sears, general sales manager.

Warners Win "Fugitive" Action in Atlanta

Warner Brothers this week emerged victorious in the $100,000 libel action brought against the company and the local exhibitor for the exhibition of the company's production, "I Am a Fugitive from a Chain Gang" in Atlanta.

The suit was brought by Vivian Stanley, a member of the Prison Commission of Georgia against Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., and Vitagraph, Inc. The trial, which lasted three weeks, was held in superior court of Fulton County, Atlanta.

Adorno Suit Against Warners Underway

Salvatore Adorno's suit for $120,000 in superior court in Middletown, Conn., against Warner Brothers Theatres, Inc., was started last week before Judge P. B. O'Sullivan and a superior court jury with Mr. Adorno as the first witness, after the court permitted Judge Israel Poliner to withdraw as counsel in order to become a witness and with the complain amended so that the defendant now is the Connecticut Theatrical Corporation.

The plaintiff contends that Warner Brothers Theatres, Inc., leased the Palace theatre in Middletown for 12 years from June 1, 1930, at a rental of $15,000 annually to be paid in monthly installments and in addition agreed to pay $60,000 for use of the equipment. The defense revealed an intention to show that while the lease was discussed it was not actually consummated. The defense also set up that Mr. Adorno did actually lease the theatre to another corporation in which he had a large interest and made a deal of great profit to himself.

Paramount Claim Is Expunged by Court

The claim of Orvis Mundi Realty Corporation for $57,706 against Paramount Publix Corporation was expunged by Federal Judge Alfred C. Cox in New York this week on application of Paramount Pictures, Inc., successor to Paramount Publix.

The order expunging the claim confirmed a recommendation to that effect made by Special Master John E. Joyce in a report filed October 6th. Paramount Pictures stated that Orvis Mundi, its subsidiary, had assigned a claim to Paramount Pictures Distributing Corporation as security for an indebtedness, and that subsequently the latter had merged with Paramount Pictures.

Joseph D. Basson, as president of Local 306, New York operators' union, has made application in New York supreme court for an order dismissing a suit brought against the union by two operators, James J. Little and Milton Olshin, seeking $5,000 damages and an injunction. The plaintiffs claim they were refused membership in the union.

A plagiarism suit for $200,000 has been filed in superior court in Tauton, Mass., against RKO by William J. O'Rourke of Fall River. He charged that the company's film, "Condemned Women," was taken from the story "Girl's Reformatory," which he claims to have submitted to RKO in 1937.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

This department deals with new product from the point of view of the exhibitor who is to purvey it to his own public

Brother Rat

(Warner Brothers)

Service Comedy

This well screened Service School comedy comes to showmen backed by fresh and favorable stage fame and plentifully equipped with marquee material of the kind to which picture patrons respond.

Although Eddie Albert of the Broadway cast steals the picture with a performance certain to assure him a brilliant future in films, Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane and the other Warner familiars unquestionably rate top billing in behalf of his introductory picture.

William Tracey, from the road company, also turns in a sparkling portrayal and Jane Bryan advances her stock tremendously in short but potent appearances with Albert.

William Keighley directed with telling change of pace the screen play which Richard Macaulay and Jerry Wald made from the original by John Monks, Jr., and Fred F. Finklehoffe, graduates of Virginia Military Institute, scene of the story. Robert Lord, associate producer, dipped deeply into the Warner coffers to provide the utmost in accuracy of setting, procedure and atmosphere. The net result of these gentlemen's efforts is a college picture and a Service comedy that is like no specimen of either that has been offered the public.

Morris plays the most reckless of three roommates, Ronald Regan the sanest but susceptible one, and Albert, the stolid romantic who has married secretly and is about to become a father. Discovery of this fact interferes with his pitching, and in their efforts to offset wagers made on a baseball game, the others get the trio ensnarled in various violations of Academy rules which constantly threaten to bring about expulsion. The commandant's daughter, played by Jane Wyman, and her friend, played by Miss Lane, round out the romantic side of the story. The baseball game, it may be noted, is only a passing episode, not the climax of the picture.

William Tracey is extraordinarily effective, as the underclassman hazed by the principals. Henry O'Neill is his usual competent self as the commandant. Johnny Davis does an excitable senior acceptably, Olin Howland has some good moments as a taxi driver, and Louise Beavers returns to the screen in a well done bit.

Albert is unmistakably a find. His personality is in the early Stuart Erwin vein, with a dash of Will Rogers, although distinctly and most promisingly his own. He and Miss Bryan inject seemingly effortless moments of tense, human emotion abruptly into a swiftly flowing current of comedy, in a manner sure to give audiences that inner glow so often striven for and so seldom achieved. They could be a great team.

Young Dr. Kildare

(MGM)

Human Interest

Putting it bluntly, "Young Dr. Kildare" is a surprise picture. It is sound entertainment, and although seriously premised it is not without a wealth of natural human humor. It tells a doctor story with all the action taking place in a big hospital, but never is it a repetition of anything previously done.

It has nothing to do with society doctors, dangerous operations, a hero falling in love with a beautiful nurse or patient. Never indulging in heroics or hysterics, it merely tells a potent story in a simple, straightforward way. As it is not a routine show, it calls for unusual exploitation, and makes available the material.

Intelligently written, acted and directed, the picture was produced with a constantly evident aim to establish a new standard. For spot showmanship angles it might be noted that the show is based on a story by Max Brand, popular among fiction readers and possessor of several film credits. In the leading roles it presents Lew Ayers as young "Dr. Kildare" in a fine characterization, and Lionel Barrymore in the type of role he handles so expertly, the gruff and irascible but tender hearted "Dr. Gillespie." It introduces Jo Ann Sayers in an auspicious style. Harold S. Bucquet, Academy award winner as a short subject director, making his first attempt to handle a feature, does a job that would be a credit to one his senior in years and experience. That the film will attract much unsolicited favorable newspaper comment as well as word-of-mouth advertising may be assumed. Presented to the public as something different, the utmost in showmanship ingenuity should be exercised to get the irregular as well as regular customers.

The young doctor's decision not to follow in his country-doctor father's footsteps disappoints his parents and sweetheart. As an interne in a metropolitan institution he bears the brunt of the tyrannical old doctor's sarcasm. While saving the life of a girl, would-be suicide, an ambulance case patient in his charge dies, and the youth is in disgrace. The girl, brought to the hospital, is considered insane by the elderly specialists. "Kildare" has the intuition that a mysterious fear is driving her to continued attempts at self-destruction. Turning detective for the moment, he ferrets out the girl's secret and, blasting the theories of a high-powered psychiatrist, convinces her she has nothing to fear. Restoring her to her parents and fiancé, "Kildare" is rewarded by being made "Gillespie's" assistant.

Because of the title there is danger that the public may get the idea that the picture is just another hospital show. While it is set in a hospital, that is entirely secondary to the theme. The story should have appeal to those who like to do a little thinking along with their entertainment, but there is also that heart appeal that common folk are quick to recognize.

Previewed at the Uptown theatre in Los Angeles, the crowd caught the spirit of the story almost immediately and noticeably was surprised when things did not develop along the lines it so often had seen before. The applause at the finish was wholehearted. Then a short trailer announced that this was the beginning of a series in which Ayers and Barrymore would be featured. It was the first time this writer ever heard a trailer applauded.—GUS MCCARTHY.

The Mad Miss Manton

(RKO-Radio)

Humorous Melodrama

There's a lot of things a showman can do by way of selling this rare item of merchandise to the ultimate consumer, but it is unlikely that any of the many promotional methods to be employed will sell as many tickets as the picture itself. The film is in that rare category of entertainment not readily described but profusely talked about by those who see it and go away warmed pleasantly inside, and itching to tell others to go in and get a similar glow. It has the qualities of a gross builder and a run protractor, all of which is another way of saying it's sound box office.

This is not the first comedy in which murder takes place and it is not the first melodrama in which an amateur investigator solves the mystery. But it is the first in which the matter is managed in just this way by just this collection of characters, and this is possibly the best way in which it ever has been done.

Barbara Stanwyck regains here the youth sacrificed to "Stella Dallas" and turns out to have aged not a minute nor slowed a trace. Henry Fonda sheds here the solemn mien he wore through "Blockade" and "Spawn of the North," and becomes a newspaper editor entirely unhandicapped by the usual markings of the role. Sam Levene is a police lieutenant in his matchless "Three Men on a Horse" manner, and all those other folk in that long cast do plenty and well.

Miss Stanwyck plays "Miss Manton," and only in the figurative sense, a frivolous debutante who stumbles upon a murder and calls the police, who refuse to take her seriously because the body has disappeared. Mr. Fonda plays "Peter Ames," a newspaper editor, who spans her editorially and gets a slap on the cheek and a million dollar libel suit in return for his attentions. Mr. Levene plays "Lieut. Brent," a New York police officer who stays on this murder case, and on the secondary cases which develop, until the criminal is apprehended.

The convolutions of the screen play by Philip G. Epstein, based on Wilson Collison's story, are too many, adroit and funny to be pursued by an unfunny synopsis. The things the principals do are amusing and unrestrained and irregular, but not "screwball" in the sense that inept word has been applied in the trade. A small chorus of debutantes follows Miss Stanwyck through her adventures, and there is no silly exploding of flashlight bulbs in the wake of the editorial Mr. Fonda. They fall in love, fight and, of course, get married, but that's pretty much beside the point so far as entertainment purposes of the film are concerned.

P. J. Wolfson is associate producer of the work and Leigh Jason directed it. Both have plenty to be proud of. It's a slick piece of merchandise, clean as a whistle, bright as a dollar, clear as a bell and right as a fox (add your own clichés ad infinitum). The place is New York and the time, even to the building of the subway, is now.

Previewed at the Pantages theatre, Hollywood, where it was heartily endorsed by all present in terms of laughter, applause and outspoken commendation.—W. R. W.

Dark Rapture (Universal)

Jungle Expedition

"Dark Rapture" is the film photographed and produced by Armand Denis and his wife, Leila Roosevelt, on their expedition into the Belgian Congo. It is not necessary to know that the Denises' also produced "Goon-Goon," or that Mr. Denis directed "Wild Cargo" for Frank Buck, in order to realize that they are alive to every possibility inherent in a picture of jungle life. With the help of King Leopold of Belgium, the expedition went into the depths of the Belgian Congo, and the film is a realistic and well-paced account of the life they found there. The tribes shown include the pigmies, whose construction of a bridge enabling them to cross a river is a highpoint in the film; and the Giant Watutsi, pictured in their native dance.

The details of the lives led by the various jungle tribes is clearly brought out, with Mr. Denis explaining the unfamiliar customs shown. One of the most exciting parts of the picture is the recording of a hunt for wild elephants, conducted by a government outpost. The film ends by showing the escape of the hunting party from one of the fires which periodically ravage the jungle, with every beast in the forest fleeing to the river.

Although there have been other jungle films, few have combined fine pictorial detail with sustained thrills as well as this.

Previewed at the Chamin Building theatre, New York, where it was enthusiastically received by a mixed trade audience.—WALTER SELDEN.

Filed and produced by Armand Denis and Leila Roosevelt. Distributed by Universal. Running time: 80 minutes. For general audiences. Release date, Aug. 26, 1938.

Five of a Kind

Yearly Feature

"Five of a Kind" is actually two pictures. One concerns itself entirely with the Dionne Quintuplets. The incidents, photographed entirely in the children's Canadian home under the technical supervision of Dr. Allan R. Dafoe, are appealing entertainment. They present the famous girls, not acting but being natural as four-year-old children are. The episodes devoted to the babies occupy about one-fourth of the film's running time. Every minute of their appearance found the audience on the alert, whether they were looking at a present of a litter of puppies, singing, dancing, pounding five miniature pianos, playing with their toys, teasing Jean Hersholt, or just romping.

The second show is a stock Hollywood effort. It details a feud between a couple of spot news radio broadcasters, "Christine Nelson" and "Duke Lester," which culminates in an "all-is-forgiven" love match. The Quintuplets, to be sure, are made to be concerned in this. Nevertheless, and despite its artificiality, the sustaining theme assumes a sympathetic quality as it approaches its climax. "Christine" has arranged for the Dionnes to appear in New York at a money raising benefit for "Dr. Williams'" orphanage, but "Lester" carries his hazing of his rival to the point where the babies' guardians prohibit the appearance. The sponsoring company makes arrangements whereby those who bought tickets are permitted to see the children by television.

Previewed in the Alexander theatre, Glendale, Cal. The contrasting reactions of the audience indicated wherein it believed the picture's entertainment and commercial values were concentrated. Every time the little girls moved onto the screen, it was attentive and appreciative.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Down on the Farm

Bucolic Comedy

With the popularity of the "Jones Family" series available as the spearhead of showmanship campaigns, exhibitors should find no difficulty in interesting patrons in the fun provided in "Down on the Farm."

Waiving the domestic melodrama that heretofore has been an important ingredient in "Jones Family" members, and omitting all love interest, this picture is straightaway comedy, with three or four hilarious episodes.

With the exception of Shirley Deane, the familiar members of the "Jones Family" cast again are presented. Three newcomers are Louise Fazenda, Eddie Collins and Dorris Bowdon. They contributed much to the show's fun and excitement.

Firemen who must do their duty, though there is no fire, wreck the "Jones" home, and the family decides to accept "Aunt Ida's" invitation to spend its vacation on the ancestral farm. Arriving, "Roger" is made a victim of tomboy "Tessie's" antics. "Aunt Ida" demonstrates her powerful voice. The fun of these sequences is amplified by that in which "Mr. Jones" and "Cy" indulge freely in a jug of corn liquor.

Through a misunderstanding by "Herbert," son-in-law, "Jones" finds himself entered in a corn husking contest and nominated for state senator. A political ring, plotting to discredit "Jones," contrives to have him kidnaped, but he is rescued by "Roger" and "Tessie." Arriving at the husking site just in time, "Jones" husks until he nearly drops, but as family and friends impede his rivals he comes through.

Previewed in the Uptown theatre, Los Angeles. The patrons of this house, who usually are given first opportunity of publicly inspecting the successive "Jones Family" films, were unanimous in voicing the opinion that "Down on the Farm" compared favorably with any of its predecessors, and that the novel departures from formula, together with the introduction of new personalities, were advantageous.—VANCE KING.

Secrets of an Actress

(Warner-First National)

Sophisticated Romance

This is another try at the triangle plot. While the leading player portrays an actress and the title indicates something of the kind, it is not a stage show though the story is of stage folk. Rather, it is a sophisticated treatment in scenario, direction and acting, of an age old theme.

Kay Francis plays the actress and wears smart clothes with frequent changes. The other two parts in the triangle are played by George Brent, who wins out, and in the role of his very good friend, Ian Hunter, who loses, but is happy about it all anyway. Isabel Jeans, roommate of Miss Francis, is in the comedy role and Gloria Dickson portrays the spoiled wife of "Dick Orr" (Brent).

herself wellknown on the road but unable to get a role on Broadway, meets "Peter Snowden," wealthy architect, and he decides to back a production starring her. His partner, "Orr," is against the "scheme" and refuses to help out.

When the show opens and "Fay" is a huge success "Dick" discovers that he is in love with her. "Fay" learns that "Dick" is married, although he and his wife are separated, and promises to marry "Peter." "Peter," realizing that "Fay" loves "Dick," arranges with "Dick's" wife to give her husband a divorce so that he will be free to marry "Fay."

A Royal Divorce

(Imperator-Paramount)
Historical

There is magnificence in Paramount's first major effort under the 1938 Quota Act. A spectacular production, richly dressed and lavishly staged, it wears a "super" quality which brings it directly into the super class. Herbert Wilcox's flair for production has made the film look twice as expensive as it was, and the richness of raiment and setting is in keeping with the subject. Treating of the human side of Napoleon's life, unmasking the man who lived beneath the general's uniform, concerning itself rather with his love for Josephine than that for his country, though both are interwoven, it has no military action or display, but offers spectacular compensation in large scale canvases such as Coronation scenes and regal assemblies. It is, however, essentially the human character with which Jack Raymond is concerned, and it is the human character which Pierre Blanchard brings to life. Such material is essentially emotional and dramatic stuff and is so attacked by the director and his players.

Raymond's film shows a Napoleon who loved passionately, but who was willing to make the supreme sacrifice and divorce Josephine so that he should have issue and perpetuate his name. The picture rises to its heights in the divorce scene itself. It must be added, however, that Raymond does not seem to be able to get under the skin of his characters, who too often have a charade like quality.

Blanchard has personality and his sculptured compelling features seem to express more than they actually say. His is a credible Napoleon, impulsive and commanding. Ruth Chatterton's Josephine, on the other hand, seems rather the creation of histrionic deftness than of psychological drama. The result is sympathy with Napoleon but little belief in either.

The delicate theme, of a childless union shattered for State reasons, is obviously one to stir the curiosity of a wide audience, and the central character of Napoleon and his Josephine are probably box office.

Previewed to the London and provincial press, the film did not seem to stir critical enthusiasms. Blanchard was generally voted the film's best ingredient.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Torchy Gets Her Man

(Warner Brothers)
Comedy-Mystery

There's a lot of entertainment in "Torchy Gets Her Man," one of the "Torchy Blane" series. Also there is much unusual exploitation material. The story's several elements, mystery on a unique premise, comedy, melodramatic suspense and bits of battling romance are well put together. Tricky situations plus the glib dialogue lines of the leading and featured support players cause the film to move swiftly.

Major action centers about a race track, but it is not a race horse story. "Detective MacBride" has been assigned to halt a flow of counterfeit money. Because "Torchy" has shown him up as a third rate detective, "MacBride" is unwilling to give her any information. Meanwhile the detective installs "Gilbert," who actually is the brains behind the funny money passing, as a mutual cashier at the track. Helped by dumb policeman "Gahagan," "Torchy" quickly becomes convinced that "Gilbert" is the crook. A dog is brought in to help the pair run down the counterfeiting gang.

Previewed in the Warner Hollywood Theatre. The Saturday night preview audience seemed to derive considerable enjoyment from the show. While appreciative of the players' work, the crowd appeared to be of the opinion that the animal came close to stealing the show.—G. M.

The Story of a Cheat

(Gallic Films)

Tour de Force

"Le Roman d'un Thicheur," the title the film was presented under in France, is a tour de force for Sacha Guitry. In a previous picture, "Pearls of the Crown," Guitry wrote, directed and acted, and had for his supporting cast French, English and Italian actors who spoke their native tongue. Guitry, while also writing, directing and playing the leading role in "Story of a Cheat," goes still further and delivers the narration. While there is no dialogue, Guitry's commentary takes care of that.

It is an unusual film. One suspects that M. Guitry is having a bit of fun at the expense of his audience, an adult audience, as it is not a picture for children.

When the story opens the "cheat" is young in years. Having committed a theft he is punished by being denied mushrooms at the family dinner. Of the twelve at that dinner table the boy alone remains; the mushrooms were poisonous toadstools.

He eventually becomes a Monte Carlo croupier and card sharp, with quite a fortune. He has divorced the woman he married for money. He steals from his jewel-thief mistress.

Amidst a night of play he recognizes the man who saved him from death in the World War. They form a partnership. He will never cheat again. His fortune vanishes.

The apt English titles are the effort of John Erskine.

Reviewed at the Fifth Avenue Playhouse, New York, a small theatre concentrating on foreign films. An afternoon audience chuckled at the events, the narrative and the Erskine interpretation.—PAUL C. MOONEY, JR.

Rube Goldberg's Travelgag

(Paramount)
Sightseeing in New York

For New York natives with a sense of humor and for the countless millions who look upon that metropolitan spot as the Mecca of the modern age, this excursion on the east side, west side and all around the town under the genial aegis of that goofy cartoonist and humorist, Rube Goldberg, will afford many a hearty and loud laugh. Styled along the Benchleyan pedagogic miniatures, Guide Goldberg presents material that is not so subtle or sophisticated. Showing almost every phase of urban existence outside of how to make a living there, the tour studies the traffic problems, housing difficulties and the general cultural level of the inhabitants of the richest island in the world. The subject should go over with a bang.—Running time, nine minutes.

The Declaration of Independence

(Warner Brothers)
Historical

Crane Wilbur has directed a fast moving motion picture version of the difficulties overcome before the Declaration of Independence was finally signed. The story is based upon the ride of Cesar Rodney, delegate from Delaware, to Philadelphia, made just in time to cast the deciding vote for acceptance of the Declaration. History is stretched a bit to fit the framework but the story gains by it, as it does by the human touch supplied by John Litel as Jefferson and the patriotic music in the background.—Running time, 18 minutes.

Aladdin's Lantern

Our Gang in Show Business

In their yearly presentation of a stage extravaganza, which seems to be coming around as regularly as the more advanced ones, in years at least, the Our Gang troupe of mummies offers a kiddie and kidding version of the Arabian Night fable on the Aladdin's Lamp theme. Of course, in the tradition of the White Way, the show's success is impaired by a demonstration of temperament from the leading lady in the cast and by the unpredictability in work of the backstage scenic apparatus. hit of the show and the highlight of the short, itself, are the insistent renditions of the sentimental ditty "While Strolling Through the Park One Day" in the straw hat and cane style of vocalization by those two roguish men about town, Buckwheat and Porky, and the literally torch song interpretation of Alfalfa's parody on the touching promise of "I'll Take You Home, Kathleen" as the singer is being warmed to his efforts by the flame from Mr. Aladdin's lamp. A "blue" note is the presentation of a youthful hot blues singer chirping a modern chant on "Your Broadway and Mine."—Running time, 10 minutes.

Mildewed Melodramas (Paramount)

A Laugh at the Past

Some ancient film plots and scenes from the long ago have been taken from the vaults and have been dressed up with humorous, streamlined commentary to give the sophisticated audience of today a chance to roar over what grandma and grandpa were wont to thrill and chill over. "Nellie, the Beautiful Typist," "The Eagle's Prey" and "The Power of the Eye" are the titles of the three relics, and the humor is to be found in the archaic phraseology of the pictures' names. The "ham" acting, the stilted plots, the passé costumes of the feminine players and the outrageously faked scenic backdrops, together with the up-to-the-minute "wise cracks," should have the average good natured audience howling at what they considered, not so long ago, as first rate serious entertainment.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Fashion Forecast (Twentieth Century-Fox)

Excellent

Richness in color, clothes, jewelry, setting, the voice of the narrator and the beauty of the girl models all contribute to making this subject a handsome production. It is the first of a series under the direction of Vyvyan Donner, fashion expert for Movietone News. Laces, velvets, silks, furs and wraps and hats, they're all present for the women patrons. The commentator is Ilka Chase, noted stage actress.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Community Sing, No. 11 (Columbia)

Mellow Melodies

Songs from the good old days, when the term "swing" meant a verbal action and not vocal rendition, comprise this latest audience choral from the Community Sing album. Such mellow melodies as "While Strolling Thru the Park One Day," "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree," "Cuddle Up a Little Closer," "Silver Threads Among the Gold," "In My Merry Oldsmobile" and "After the Ball" should cause fond memories to arise for the more mature. As for the younger generation, it will welcome the chance to exercise its chords on some music and lyrics entirely different from the modern mode of a "Flat Foot Floogie" or "A Tisket a Tasket."—Running time, 10 minutes.

Styles and Smiles (RKO Radio)

Good Divertissement

A variety turn program introducing a style show, this Nu-Atlas Musical provides a few well-filled minutes of singing and dancing and has, in addition, a parade of also well-filled fur coats for the women patrons. Charles King, of stage and screen, has one song number as master of ceremonies. Ballroom stepping by the Harrison and Fischer team, outstanding acrobatic dancing by Marion Daniels, and a Scotch song that in performance reflects the radio experience of Virginia Verrill, all combine to provide well worthwhile entertainment.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Racing Pigeons (Paramount)

Grantland Rice Spotlight

As indicated from its title, the subject material for this Grantland Rice Spotlight concerns a particular variety of pigeons. After shots of various fancy breeds, the homing or racing pigeon is presented. Detailed are the routines of registering, marking, shipping and preparing the feathery racers for the flying contest. A race is shown with the pigeons demonstrating for the amusement and amazement of the spectator the mysterious and infallible instinct possessed by the birds in sensing their direction homeward. Although much of the material will appear to be mild stuff in the light of the usually robust style of presentation of the series, there are moments of excitement and pictorial beauty, especially in the filming of the pigeon race.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Sue My Lawyer (Columbia)

Langdon Comedy

Another two-reel comedy featuring a past master of the art of slapstick, Harry Langdon, the story concerns his efforts to become an assistant district attorney. He gets mixed up with a couple of crooks, and in the manner of comedies eventually exposes them and realizes his ambition. The story is of little importance. The main idea is to provide occasion for some old-fashioned slapstick. Ann Doran, Monte Collins, Bud Jamison, Vernon Dent and Cy Schindell are in support.—Running time, 17 minutes.

Party Fever (MGM)

Our Gang

The Our Gang Kids, excepting Spanky McFarland, who isn't in this subject, take cognizance of the primaries, and enter politics. What's more, this sudden interest in things political comes about, not through desire for good, better or indifferent government, but because the winner wins the right to escort Darla Hood to the strawberry festival. The victor is also to be mayor of the town during boys' week. Alfalfa rigs up a balloon and soars into the air to get the votes, while Butch invites the voters to a marshmallow roast. The big day arrives and the youngsters are all gathered around to hear the mayor proclaim the winner. But Waldo's essay has won.—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Frog Pond (Columbia)

Colored Cartoon

"Crime does not pay" even in the animal kingdom, is the moral pictured in this number of the Color Rhapsodies series. When the Bully Frog muscles in on the quiet picnic gathering to become head man or head frog, the underdogs or, to keep the reference correct, the underfrogs, arrange matters according to the custom of the terrible meek, put the "finger" on the brute and finally place him behind the "eight ball" or a window curtained with bars. The animation matches the liveliness of the color to make the fable altogether ready made material for lightweight entertainment.—Running time, 6½ minutes.

Mutiny Ain't Nice (Paramount)

Perfect Popeye

Illustrative of the valuable and at times doubtful point that the greens known as spinach are as nutritively potent to that prime spinach eater of this land, Popeye, either on terra firma or on the bounding main, this newest vindication of the vegetable is rough and tumble cartoon fun of the first rank. When the crew of Popeye's ship mutiny because of the superstition that a woman board, in this case Olive Oyl, is bad luck, Captain Popeye downs a can of the old faithful stuff and with a couple of well placed punches quells the mutineers. The humor and excitement of the subject are injected with salty and breezy business and the audience of Pop-eye patrons may be expected to rock the theatre auditorium with loud and gusty gales of appreciative laughter.—Running time, seven minutes.

How To Read (MGM)

Benchley Comedy

This subject is for those who read in bed, in the subway, in the doctor's office, in clubrooms or aloud at home. It's a post-graduate course with professor Robert Benchley instructing. He gets around. One never knows where he will be from one semester to another. The learned Mr. Benchley is never at a loss for words, except of course when he just doesn't know what to say. And Mr. Benchley isn't really a professor, he's a humorist. And that is praise enough.—Running time, 9 minutes.

The Great Big Cat And the Little Mousie (Universal)

Unnecessary

The Cat pours brandy into the milk, the Mouse becomes drunk, staggers to safety by promising to come back next day to be eaten up, but doesn't, and that is that, or is it? The background commentary with its "teeny, weeny little mousie," has a burlesque ring in the light of the theme of this Oswald Rabbit subject. Running time, 7 minutes.

Community Sing No. 1, Series 3 (Columbia)

College Songs

The advent of a new college year, not to mention a new football season, brings new college screen subjects. This contribution is concerned with the college songs, as many of them as can be sung in one reel. Gene Morgan and the Columbians continue to run the show. The songs are "Red and Blue," Pennsylvania; "Come Join the Band," Stanford; "Far Above Cayuga's Waters," Cornell; "Washington and Lee Swing"; "Notre Dame Victory Song" and a neutral number entitled "Bingo," in which the substitution of any college name is provided for.—Running time, 10½ minutes.

Mexico (Paramount)

Travelogue

Working its way up from the first stop on the travelogue itinerary, which was in Guatemala, the second point of call for the Color Cruise ramblings is in the picturesque country of Mexico. Modern modes of living as exemplified in shots of beautiful Mexico City are cleverly contrasted with the ancient ways of the country's primitive times to be found in the Mayan ruins.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Popular Science, No. 1 (Paramount)

Interesting

A varied combination of interesting and amusing items has been gathered together into this latest number from the Popular Science group to make it one of the best from this always worthwhile classification. Opening footage is a demonstration by a London plastic surgeon of his new discovery of making feminine beauty permanent by a scientific and lasting application. Fred Waring, up to now associated with orchestral inventions, is revealed as the deviser of a new type of mixer guaranteed to whip anything desired in the "Waring Manner."—Running time, 10 minutes.

LOEW STOCKHOLDERS FILE DELAWARE SUIT

Charge Excessive Compensation, Percentage Payments, Stock Options; 23 Named

Three New York stockholders of Loew's, Inc., last week filed a bill of complaint in the court of chancery at Wilmington, Del., against twenty-three executives, including Nicholas M. Schenck, Louis B. Mayer and Arthur M. Loew, and Norma Shearer, charging excessive compensation and an array of complex percentage payments, stock options and arrangements pertaining to production, distribution and exhibition.

The allegations of the bill range from salaries to candy concessions and theatre supplies, including assertions relating to the origin of 20th Century Pictures, Inc., and leading up to the Fox merger, and to such matters as the rise of David O. Selznick and payments to the estate of the late Irving Thalberg.

The complaining stockholders are Edgar F. Stiner, holder of 200 shares of the common capital stock of Loews, Hana W. Goldstein, 150 shares, and Louis Susman, 400 shares.

Injunction Asked

The suit asks an accounting from the defendants, cancellation of contracts, injunction against continued payments and a decree of damages to Loews, Inc.

The suit in Wilmington is kindred to, and somewhat related with, a consolidated action by nine minority stockholders against 11 Loew executives, pending in the supreme court of New York, pertaining to which examinations before trial have been in progress, taking the testimony of various Loew officials.

Two of the complaining stockholders in the new Wilmington suit, Hana W. Goldstein and Louis Susman, are plaintiffs in the New York action. Mr. Stiner, the third of the Wilmington plaintiffs, is not in the New York action. Emil K. Ellis is chief counsel in the New York action. In Wilmington the bill was filed by Clarence A. Sutherland, and William S. Potter of Wilmington, solicitors for the plaintiffs.

Additional Defendants

The list of defendants in the Wilmington suit, considerably more comprehensive than the New York suit, includes, in addition to those named above: David Bernstein, J. Robert Rubin, George N. Armsby, Isidor Frey, Leopold Friedman, John R. Hazel, Alexander Lichtman, Charles C. Moskowitz, William A. Parker, William W. Phillips, David Warfield, Thomas N. Perkins, Bernard H. Hyman, Sam Katz, Edgar J. Mannix, Harry Rapf, Benjamin Thau, L. A. Weingarten, Mervin LeRoy, Hunt Stromberg and Edwin J. Loeb and the Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association, as executors and trustees of the estate of the late Irving Thalberg.

The broad contention of the suit is that the various executives have been paid beyond their values. A set of schedules filed with the suit lists remunerations under profit sharing and stock option contracts. Schedule B presents figures for 1937 including some 13 persons at a total for the year, including stock, of $6,248,819.16.

Particularizing with respect to incidentals of operations, the suit alleges "the majority of exclusive concessions for the display and sale of candies and other sweetmeats to patrons of the theatres . . . have been granted without competitive bidding" and in many instances granted to corporations owned and controlled directly or indirectly by Mr. Schenck, Mr. Bernstein and Mr. Loew. A monopoly of the printing in the operation of Loew's is alleged to have been granted to a company controlled by Arthur M. Loew, his relatives, intimates and associates. Equipment and supplies, at qualities and prices questioned, it is charged were purchased "through the medium of a corporation owned, operated and controlled . . . by the defendant, Charles C. Moskowitz, his relatives, intimates and associates."

Chancellor Josiah O. Wolcott in Wilmington set November 12 as the date of appearance for the defendants.

Tri-National Names Pollock, Lists Films

Leo A. Pollock, at one time with Cosmopolitan Productions, has been appointed publicity manager of Tri-National Films, Inc. Among the French stars who will be seen in films distributed by the company in the United States are Sacha Guitry, Charles Boyer, Raimu, Annabella and Michele Morgan.

In addition to the English "Peg of Old Drury," Tri-National has announced the names of 10 French productions which will be distributed. They are "Orange," "Champs Elysees," "Le Nouveau Testament," "Gri-bouille," "Carrefour," "Sacrifice d'Honneur," "La Porte du Large," "Ignace," "Deuxieme Bureau" and "Le Grand Jeu."

Paramount Awards Prizes In International Drive

Domestic and foreign winners in Paramount's $5,000 advertising and exploitation contest held in connection with the celebration of the company's international sales drive, were announced this week. The winners of the first prize in the different population groups were: Charles B. Taylor, Shea's Buffalo theatre, Buffalo, New York; S. P. Dean, Rialto theatre, Tacoma, Washington; Jerry Greenbaum, Rialto theatre, Clinton, Iowa, and Harold Armistead, Lyric theatre, Easley, South Carolina.

First prize for the best campaign in a neighborhood or subsequent run house was given Samuel A. Coolick, Loew's Triboro theatre, Long Island City, New York.

In the foreign field, first prize was awarded J. Castro Ramos, Cine Plaza, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

Ebele Rejoins 20th Century-Fox

Edward Ebele, formerly production manager at Twentieth Century-Fox, who recently returned to Hollywood from a trip around the world, has rejoined the company and will soon be assigned new duties.

Hicks to Expand Company Program In Great Britain

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Paramount is now taking a "serious interest" in British pictures, the company's production program will be extended and films will be made not merely to fulfill quota obligations, John W. Hicks, Paramount vice-president in charge of foreign affairs who last week assumed charge of the company's activities in England following the resignation of John Cecil Graham, told the press this week. Production will be aimed principally at the British market, he said, but it is also intended to produce films of quality to sell on the world market as full Paramount product. The company will seek to develop its own British stars.

Mr. Hicks said that the quota plans are set for the current year, including the production of a sequel to "This Man Is News."

Patronage Drive Set

Simon Rowson, statistician and leading industry figure in England for many years, said this week that plans have matured for the industry's box office drive and that the campaign will begin next week. Distributors and exhibitors have agreed to cooperate.

The drive will be financed by stamps, probably of one shilling, placed on each distributor invoice to exhibitors, each party to pay half the value of the stamp.

Seating Laws Discussed

The London County Council has agreed to meet with the London and Home Counties branch of the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association to advise on the application of the controversial seating regulations recently imposed. It is understood the move will have no bearing on the announced intention of the CEA to carry its fight on the measure to the courts through a test case.

Independents and circuit representatives in the CEA debated double feature policy at a meeting of the general council in London Wednesday but no solution of the problem was reached. The independents vigorously oppose adoption of dual bills by the circuits. It was officially confirmed that the Kinematograph Renters' Society is unwilling to consider further the CEA proposals on overbuilding. It was agreed to hold the 1939 annual CEA convention at Blackpool.

Scientific Film Group Formed

Scientists in London and its environs have banded together in the London Scientific Film Society, the inaugural meeting of which was held at Conway Hall recently. Associated with the new group are such illuminati as Sir William Bragg, Sir Frederick Gowland Hopkins and Professors Lancelot Hogben and Julian Huxley.

Warner Theatre Opened

The new Warner theatre in Leicester Square, London, opened Wednesday night with a distinguished audience including the Duke and Duchess of Kent attending. Proceeds of the opening night for which "Robin Hood" was the feature will be donated to charity. Representing the company were Jack Warner, Sam Morris, Max Milder and Dave Griffiths. Joseph P. Kennedy, ambassador to the Court of St. James's, was the guest of Mr. Warner at the opening.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Artcinema Associates

SON OF THE SHEIK (Re-issue): Rudolph Valentino, Vilma Banky—It seems that present day picture goers want to see Rudolph Valentino. Of those who have seen him before, some want to see him again, and those who haven't seen him want to see what the great Valentino was like. The picture does not seem outdated and it makes a nice showing aside from the sentimental point of view. We bought this at a moderate price and did above average business.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

Columbia

HOLLYWOOD ROUND-UP: Buck Jones, Helen Twelvetrees—We've yet to find a Jones feature that has failed to please. More luck to you, Buck. Played September 16-17.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

I AM THE LAW: Edward G. Robinson, Wendy Barrie, Barbara O'Neil, John Beal—Words fail me when I try to tell you what a marvelous picture this one really is. Columbia has a picture and one that should be seen by every citizen—man, woman and child—of this nation. When the producers bring a picture to the screen with a punch like this one has, it should not be passed by unnoticed and I have this to say to you exhibitors who have not shown this one: get ready when you do show it to give it the biggest advertising campaign you ever put into the selling of a picture. Use lots of 24-sheet posters. They will sell it. Our business was doubled over previous past weeks. Played Sunday opening, three days.—W. H. Brenner, Cozy Theatre, Winchester, Ind. General patronage.

PENITENTIARY: Walter Connolly, Jean Parker, John Howard—What to say? A picture suitable only for the weekend of a double bill, and don't practice it, so we run it and waste a date. So crude in the heroics. No finish to the production, if you know what I mean. Walkouts plenty.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

WHEN G-MEN STEP IN: Don Terry, Jacqueline Wells—Used this on a double and it was a thriller. Don Terry looks and acts the type required in his starring features. Give us more of Don's features. Played September 14-15.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Grand National

GREAT GUY: James Cagney, Mae Clarke—Very nice little picture bought at fair rental. If you are playing Grand National, be sure and pick up this old one.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

HEADIN' FOR THE RIO GRANDE: Tex Ritter, Eleanor—My first Ritter, and while it was good I was still disappointed in him and his voice. Hope he turns out OK with Monogram.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SHADOW STRIKES, THE: Rod La Rocque, Lynn Anders—Can only class this as fair entertainment. Used this on a double and just about got by. We've seen worse. Played September 16-17.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

First National

ADVENTURES OF ROBIN HOOD, THE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains, Basil Rathbone, Ian Hunter—A beautiful picture well directed and well produced, but not so good at the box office. If these producers would only quit making costume pictures. Running time, 102 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

BACK IN CIRCULATION: Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell—Very good and pleased. Used this as feature Number One on a double bill and it clicked. O'Brien and Blondell are very well liked here. Played September 21-22.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

CRIME SCHOOL: Gale Page, Humphrey Bogart,

"Dead End" Kids: Can say right here that we played to capacity houses. "Crime School" is box office plus. Play it. Played September 26-27.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

CRIME SCHOOL: Gale Page, Humphrey Bogart, "Dead End" Kids—Very fine production. Believe best business on any Warner this year. If this isn't the same story as "San Quentin," I'm badly fooled. Many people said that was all they disliked about it.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

EVER SINCE EVE: Marion Davies, Robert Montgomery—Played this on a double bill and must say it was a corker. Has plenty of what it takes. Played September 14-15.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

GOLD IS WHERE YOU FIND IT: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains, Margaret Lindsay—Very good and well received. Use this on our opening program after remodeling the theatre and could not have found a better picture. Running time, 95 minutes. Played September 9-10.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

SH! THE OCTOPUS: Hugh Herbert, Allen Jenkins, Marcia Ralston—Played this picture with "Mad About Music." This double did nice business for us. But, I also give some of the drawing power to "Sh! The Octopus." The trailer on this brought many extra kids and perhaps some adults also. It is a screwy picture and could only have a dream ending, but it seemed what the thrill lovers wanted. It makes a good second feature to a sensible comedy drama.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

SLIGHT CASE OF MURDER, A: Edward G. Robinson, Jane Bryan, Ruth Donnelly, Allen Jenkins—Very good and well liked. Robinson always pleases and we are looking forward to his next release to follow, "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse." Played September 19-20.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ARSENE LUPIN RETURNS: Melvyn Douglas, Virginia Bruce, Warren William—This is a mystery play but the mystery angle seems to me to be overdone to the extent that one is more confused than entertained by it. Otherwise it would be quite a satisfactory feature. Running time, 81 minutes. Played September 29-30.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

CHASER, THE: Dennis O'Keefe, Ann Morris, Lewis Stone—This picture is just fair. The audience reaction was not unfavorable but it caused no comment either way. One thing: I think that Metro is pushing this O'Keefe too fast. He is not as yet well known enough to head a cast without some well-known names. Of course it had Lewis Stone for one asset. Also this unknown Ann Morris, who, I think, will be heard from later. She is easy on the eyes and quite a lot of pulchritude.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

FAST COMPANY: Melvyn Douglas, Florence Rice, Claire Dodd, Nat Pendleton—This is one of the sort of pictures that one will not remember a single incident of for five days after seeing it. It is neither good enough nor bad enough to leave any lasting impression. Running time, 74 minutes. Played September 24-25.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST, THE: Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy, Walter Pidgeon—A fine production that lacked the gold.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

JUDGE HARDY'S CHILDREN: Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—This one will please nearly 100 per cent of any audience. Decidedly better than most of the B-class pictures. Running time, 77 minutes. Played September 17-18.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

LORD JEFF: Freddie Bartholomew, Mickey Rooney, Charles Coburn, Gale Sondergaard—Possibly not quite up to one or two of the former Bartholomew films, but it will stand up definitely as a Class A picture in any location. Running time, 85 minutes. Played September 10-11.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

LOVE FINDS ANDY HARDY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford—Don't let them tell you this is an extended run like they made me believe. It is just a good picture for usual runs and will please. Running time, 90 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MARIE ANTOINETTE: Norma Shearer, Tyrone Power, John Barrymore—Drew to better business than was anticipated, at an increase in admission prices, and only one show per night. This type picture brings out a class of patrons that seldom come to the ordinary programmer. Running time, 157 minutes. Played September 27-28-29.—Ed Crew, Empress Theatre, Wau-rika, Okla. General patronage.

RICH MAN, POOR GIRL: Robert Young, Lew Ayres, Ruth Hussey, Guy Kibbee—Just a picture. Pleased no one. Very boring. Has no value of any kind. Running time, 70 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

RICH MAN, POOR GIRL: Robert Young, Lew Ayres, Ruth Hussey, Guy Kibbee—I bet Leo let out a loud roar on this one but it would be pain such as the audience suffered through the picture. Just about as poor a picture as I remember Metro producing. It just don't click any place.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SHOPWORN ANGEL: Margaret Sullivan, James Stewart, Walter Pidgeon, Alan Curtis, Hattie McDaniel, Nat Pendleton, Sam Levene, Eleanor Lynn—If you have not already booked this one, book it at once and advertise it to the skies. It is tops. James Stewart as the Texas recruit, Margaret Sullivan as the actress, and Walter Pidgeon as the rich playboy, give us the most pleasing feature I have exhibited for a long time. There is comedy, pathos and patriotism in this story of the World War, and tears and smiles were mingled as the final fadeout was flashed on the screen. Margaret Sullivan is charming, while Hattie McDaniel as the maid, Nat Pendleton, Alan Curtis and Sam Levene as Stewart's wisecracking buddies, deserve much praise. Eleanor Lynn gives an excellent performance in a small part. I am "just a small town exhibitor" but I would certainly vote for this as one of the ten best of the year. Running time, 85 minutes. Played September 23-25.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

THREE LOVES HAS NANCY: Janet Gaynor, Robert Montgomery, Franchot Tone—In the right spot this might be a wow, but here it did not appeal. A very poor draw. Personally, I am not a Gaynor or Tone fan, and according to the box office there are others in the same frame of mind.—Ed Crew, Empress Theatre, Wau-rika, Okla. Running time, 69 minutes. Played September 17-18. General patronage.

ert Montgomery, Franchot Tone—This light farce comedy pleased my patrons. Average business. Played September 25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WOMEN MEN MARRY, THE: George Murphy, Josephine Hutchinson, Claire Dodd—This is the shortest feature we have had from Metro in a long time and we feel that even the small quantity of film was wasted. But it does have some pretty good comedy and is as good as most double feature programs. Running time, 61 minutes. Played September 14-15.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

Monogram

ATLANTIC FLIGHT: Dick Merrill, Paula Stone—A real picture produced equally as good as many of the major releases. Make no mistake in booking this one. A small town natural. Audience ate it up. Give us more of Paula Stone.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BOY OF THE STREETS: Jackie Cooper, Maureen O'Connor—This picture had real drawing power. It gave us the best Sunday business of the season and it followed it up with an extra good Monday. We did not use any extra advertising on this. It drew both extra adults as well as children, so if you haven't dated this go to it and make yourself some money. At least I hope it will do for you as well as it did for us.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

BOY OF THE STREETS: Jackie Cooper, Maureen O'Connor—This one, although a few months old, did very well at the b.o. and it is good entertainment. Ran this as a single feature and would recommend it very highly. Played September 20.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME: Evelyn Venable, Craig Reynolds, Clara Blandick, Hall Johnson Choir—Just a good title covering up a bad picture, the plot of which is no way justifies its title. The only redeeming feature was Clara Blandick's excellent performance and the Hall Johnson choir, and I believe it would have been to the producer's best advantage to have cut the picture into a good short by retaining the shots in which the choir sings. Played September 18-19.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME: Evelyn Venable, Craig Reynolds—This didn't go so well with me. Not so bad but certainly not anything to rave over. Perhaps I was expecting too much. I think Monogram has produced some very good program pictures and, perhaps, the above picture will be well liked by some audiences.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

BULLDOG DRUMMOND'S PERIL: John Barrymore, Louise Campbell, John Howard—This went over fine for me on giveaway night. Of course, just an action programmer.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

HER JUNGLE LOVE: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Lynne Overman, Dorothy Howe—We considered this very fine film fare. Many good comments, also several said "too many alligators." And they were right!—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PRISON FARM: Lloyd Nolan, Shirley Ross—Good action picture of prison life. Recording good.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SIGN OF THE CROSS, THE (Re-issue): Claudette Colbert, Fredric March, Charles Laughton, Elissa Landi—Am sorry I picked this up. Did not play it when first released so I thought I would do doing the thing to play it as a reissue. Picture is marvelous but not a popular theme for my crowd.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

SONS OF THE LEGIONS: Donald O'Connor, Billy Lee, Lynne Overman, Elizabeth Patterson, William Frawley—Entertaining program picture which did fair business. Played October 3-4.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SPAWN OF THE NORTH: George Raft, Dorothy Lamour, Henry Fonda, Louise Platt—This is a well produced picture, good story and a colorful locale. Lots of action. The drama unfolds to a terrific climax. The cast, all of them, are exceptionally good; even the bit players stand out. It played a Sunday date with us due to commitments of a Sunday opening, but it really is a Friday-Saturday picture for a small town, though it did business in our Sunday spot, where we usually cannot get away with this type picture at all. There is a girl, Louise Platt, that runs Miss Lamour a close run for the honors.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

TEXANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Joan Bennett, May Robson, Walter Brennan—Good program picture of the southwest with plenty of action and suspense. Recording good. Running time, 90 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TEXANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Joan Bennett, May Robson, Walter Brennan—Was a little disappointed in this. Scott and Bennett really turn in fine performances, as did the others. This was one of the Movie Quiz pictures but I cannot take part in the contest. Can't possibly play even 30 pictures before the contest is over, and as 30 is minimum, I can't get in even though I really wanted to do so. Seems that the ones responsible for this contest didn't want us small town fellows in it. If they had they would have let it run a month or two longer.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

TEXANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Joan Bennett, May Robson, Walter Brennan—Just another western; average business. Picture allocated too high. Played September 21-22.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TROPIC HOLIDAY: Bob Burns, Dorothy Lamour, Martha Raye, Ray Milland—Good program picture that did pretty good at the box office. This was by no means a special. Recording pretty good. Running time, 75 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

TROPIC HOLIDAY: Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Bob Burns, Martha Raye—A poor picture that held the audience with the wonderful musical score. Martha Raye was very poor in her role with the exception of the bull fight sequence that pulled the house down with laughter. Running time, 75 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Republic

CALL OF THE YUKON: Richard Arlen, Beverly Roberts, Lyle Talbot—This picture is a credit to an independent producer. It has all the earmarks of a major product. A most interesting drama of the far north that holds the interest all the way with several breath-taking thrills. We did fair average business with this.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MAN FROM MUSIC MOUNTAIN: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes, Polly Jenkins and Her Plowboys—I played Gene Autry in "Man from Music Mountain" at our Broadway theatre on September 28th and 29th and I wish to say that I played to two hundred more people on Wednesday than I have ever played to in one day since I have been managing said theatre. Part of the credit goes to Polly Jenkins and Her Plowboys, who appear in the picture and who were making a personal appearance at the Reidsville Fair. The picture held up very good the second day and I am going to book the picture for a return date very soon.—Joseph W. Amos, Sr., Broadway Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. General patronage.

RIDERS OF THE BLACK HILLS: Three Mesquiteers, Ann Evers—Average western; average business. Played September 30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

BORDER CAFE: Harry Carey, John Beal, Armida—A better than average Western. Good cast, well made and drew well. Running time, 65 minutes. Played September 24.—Ed Crew, Empress Theatre, Wau-rika, Okla. General patronage.

BREAKING THE ICE: Bobby Breen, Charles Ruggles, Dolores Costello, Irene Dare—Very nice picture. Little Irene Dare very good. This little girl is a comer if RKO gives her the proper stories and support. Recording good. Running time, 85 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FORTY NAUGHTY GIRLS: James Gleason, Zazu Pitts—This one with all its whiskers did better singly than most of our double feature programs. It surprised me, for I figured on dying gracefully with it. Played September 29.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

FUGITIVES FOR A NIGHT: Frank Albertson, Eleanor Lynn, Adrienne Ames—Just another one of those Hollywood whodunit mysteries. Played September 27-28.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

GO CHASE YOURSELF: Joe Penner, Lucille Ball—Contains a lot of hokum but is quite entertaining, and bits of it are quite clever. Running time, 70 minutes. Played September 21-22.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

HAVING A WONDERFUL TIME: Ginger Rogers, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Lucille Ball—Notwithstanding some reports we have received, this picture was the biggest disappointment we have ever played. To us there was absolutely nothing to the show, and a few more like this and these two stars are finished. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HAVING A WONDERFUL TIME: Ginger Rogers, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Lucille Ball, Peggy Conklin—It just does not seem possible that a director could take two stars and make such a picture as this one. The thinnest kind of a story and the most "hamish"

Manager So Sure of Getting Sound Sells Nite Show

OCONTO FALLS, WIS.—"I was playing 'Snow White' to a very good business on Sunday afternoon, but during the second reel of the second matinee the sound went completely dead," said Irving Vincent, Manager of the Grand Theatre here.

"I checked on everything I could but with no success, so I called our Altec Inspector, W. H. Lewis at 5:30 P.M. at Iron Mountain, Mich., a distance of 85 miles.

"I had visions of losing a good Sunday nite's business, but took a chance on Lewis' getting sound restored, and sold out the house for the evening show before he arrived.

"In less than two hours, Lewis arrived, and cleared the trouble in ten minutes. My Sunday nite show hit the sheet on schedule."

acting that it has been my bad luck to run for a long time. I suppose it comes under the head of screwball comedy. The only ones who will have a wonderful time are those that stay away, and I wish I had been with them. Ginger Rogers has not enough stuff on the ball for star parts. That shows plainly in this picture and to bear out what I contend, in "Stage Door" she had adequate support and got by. In this picture she did not.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

NIGHT SPOT: Allan Lane, Joan Woodbury, Parkyakarkus—Resurrected this one to fill a double program bill and found it to be okay entertainment for that purpose. Played September 18-19.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

PAINTED DESERT: George O'Brien, Ray Whitley—Good ordinary western suitable for Friday-Saturday. Recording good. Running time, 60 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SAINT IN NEW YORK, THE: Louis Hayward, Kay Sutton—I would say this is not good enough to run on a double feature program. The story is difficult to follow. About all I got out of it was that someone was being killed off about every ten minutes for reasons that I failed to fathom. That is what it looked like on its first viewing, but after a second trial I decided that it was quite a creditable performance. Running time, 72 minutes. Played September 14-15.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

SKY GIANT: Richard Dix, Chester Morris, Joan Fontaine—A right good program picture that did fair at the box office. Recording good. Running time, 79 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SKY GIANT: Richard Dix, Chester Morris, Joan Fontaine—A swell aviation picture that just missed being an "epic." The audience ate it up. Morris and Dix were exceptional, but Miss Fontaine was no dice with us. Nice looking but no actress. Played this on Friday and Saturday and did better than average business. Running time, 80 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THIS MARRIAGE BUSINESS: Victor Moore, Vicki Lester, Allan Lane—A satisfactory comedy drama of the program class. Running time, 71 minutes. Played September 29-30.—Dr. G. A. Van Fradenburg, Valley Theatre, Manassa, Col. Farming community patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

HAPPY LANDING: Sonja Henie, Don Ameche, Cesar Romero, Ethel Merman—As everyone knows by now, plenty good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

HAWAIIAN BUCKAROO: Smith Ballew, Evalyn Knapp—A western with a Hawaiian locale that did not click. Western fans could not feature a western in Hawaii. Running time, 61 minutes. Played September 21.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

KEEP SMILING: Jane Withers, Gloria Stuart, Herbert Wilcoxon, Helen Westley—There isn't any need to make any comment on any of Jane's pictures, except to say she will soon be topping Little Curly Top. Running time, 77 minutes. Played September 24-25-26.—Ed Crew, Empress Theatre, Waurika, Okla. General patronage.

LITTLE MISS BROADWAY: Shirley Temple, George Murphy, Phyllis Brooks, Jimmy Durante, Edna Mae Oliver—I'll tell Fox and the whole world that they will have to come better than this one to keep Shirley on top. The scenario is trite and has not a new idea in it. All had been done before, the little orphan, the cruel aunt who breaks down finally under the winsome Shirley. Now I ask you. George Murphy in his supporting role tops. Shirley at the box office is going back while Jane Withers is gaining, and my guess is that Shirley has had too many goody, goody roles. In other words, anyone that knows kids knows that she is too good to be true. Too bad. She has been a wonder but she is growing up. That is apparent.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MY LUCKY STAR: Sonja Henie, Richard Greene, Joan Davis, Buddy Ebsen, Cesar Romero—Good picture; good business. "Alice in Wonderland" sequence in tint is fine. Played September 28-29.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RASCALS: Jane Withers, Rochelle Hudson, Robert Wilcox—Satisfied the Jane Withers fans. A lot of credit should be given to Minevitch's gang, which added materially to the enjoyment. We ran up against bad weather and consequently our business was hit seriously. Running time, 79 minutes. Played September 14-15.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodas, N. Y. Family patronage.

THANK YOU, MR. MOTO: Peter Lorre, Jayne Regan—Very good picture of this series. Not really as good as the Chans.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

United Artists

ADVENTURES OF MARCO POLO, THE: Gary Cooper, Sigrid Gurie, Basil Rathbone, Binnie Barnes—A big, costly, elaborate picture with thrills galore, sex appeal, outstanding adventures, but it did not prove a box office winner for us. Business on this was about average.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MURDER ON DIAMOND ROW: Edmund Lowe, Ann Todd, Sebastian Shaw, Tamara Desni—If it weren't for Mr. Lowe I believe this picture would have failed us at the box office. We, however, did make film rental out of this British picture.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

AIR DEVILS: Dick Purcell, Beryl Wallace—Pretty good program picture. Recording pretty good. Running time, 62 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

COURAGE OF THE WEST: Bob Baker, Lois January—A very pleasing western. This Bob Baker seems to have that something the Western fans like. He seems to be quick on the draw, the farm lads say.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

FRESHMAN YEAR: Dixie Dunbar, Ernest Truex, William Ludigan, Constance Moore—A very good college subject, better than the usual run of the mill, with a corking finale in which Ernest Truex walks away with the show. If this picture had some box office names it could be rightfully classified as a good "A" picture. Played September 27-28.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

MAD ABOUT MUSIC: Deanna Durbin, Herbert Marshall, Gail Patrick—Played this picture with "Sh! the Octopus." This double did nice business for us. "Mad about Music" is fully equal in entertainment values to Deanna Durbin's other pictures, which is praise enough for any picture.—J. E. Stocker, Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Neighborhood patronage.

MAD ABOUT MUSIC: Deanna Durbin, Herbert Marshall, Gail Patrick—Excellent picture; fair business. Picture was too old when I played it. Played October 2.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NURSE FROM BROOKLYN: Sally Eilers, Paul Kelly—Good program picture. I have yet to play a picture with Sally Eilers in it that was poor. All of her pictures that I played were good. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

ROAD BACK, THE: Larry Blake, Richard Cromwell, John King, Louise Fazenda, Slim Summerville, Andy Devine, Barbara Read—When a picture will draw more on its second night than the opening you must have something and that's just what this wonderful production did. "The Road Back" is a sure box office smash. Played September 12-13.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

ROAD TO RENO: Hope Hampton, Randolph Scott, Glenda Farrell, Helen Broderick—Hope Hampton comes back with a voice outshining that of any other screen personality. The story is off the beaten path and the smooth direction which is conspicuous throughout the picture makes this a very entertaining comedy-drama that did better than average business at our box office. Played September 25-26.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

WHEN LOVE IS YOUNG: Kent Taylor, Virginia Bruce—Used on a double and satisfied. Virginia Bruce is sure good to look at and this also goes for Kent Taylor. Played September 21-22.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Warner Brothers

ACCIDENTS WILL HAPPEN: Ronald Reagan, Gloria Blondell, Sheila Bromley—A picture that was better than we thought, considering some of the comments we had read. Reagan is no shakes as an actor but the story was so clever that the lack of ability of the feature players did not detract from the entertainment. Running time, 62 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOLD DIGGERS IN PARIS: Rudy Vallee, Rosemary Lane—Good musical and drew quite well at the box-office. I can't understand why some exhibitors panned this picture. It is better than 75 per cent of them. Running time, 95 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS THOROUGHbred: Ann Sheridan, John Littel, Frank McHugh, Janet Chapman—Nice little program picture that went over pretty good on Friday-Saturday. Recording fair. Running time, 70 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PENROD AND HIS TWIN BROTHER: Billy and Bobby Mauch, Frank Craven, Spring Byington—Used this on a double bill and pleased. These kids sure are well liked here. Played September 9-10.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Sydney, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

MAN BITES LOVE BUG: Broadway Comedies—A very good comedy.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BEAR FACTS: Our Gang—Our Gang is always enjoyed but not as good as the old two-reelers.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

A CRIMINAL IS BORN: Crime Does Not Pay—Tops with a capital T. A lesson that every parent should see. MGM has something exceptionally good in this series. Do not waste it. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FEED 'EM AND WEEP: Our Gang—Very much below the Our Gang standard. They go over better without adults in the cast. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

LIFE IN SOME TOWN, U. S. A.: MGM Miniatures—Very different and interesting, exposing the many statutes on the government books which were never followed.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LIFE IN SOME TOWN, U. S. A.: MGM Miniatures—Very interesting short showing what would happen if all laws were enforced. Running time, 10 minutes.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

MAGICIAN'S DAUGHTER, THE: Musical Comedies—Just a little different. Very nice fare.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Paramount

CRIME FIGHTERS: Paraphrased—Only fair. The public is fed up on this type of picture. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

EASY ON THE ICE: Headliners—Good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

LOST KITTEN: Betty Boop Cartoon—The swellest Boop we have played this season. Very good. Running time, 7 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL, NO. 11: A fair pictorial but cannot see why this company persists in scenic shots which are very draggy. Last one had "Clouds" and this one had "Water." They mean nothing and spoil the entire reel. Running time, 8 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STAR REPORTER: Ted Husing—Fair. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WATER, WATER EVERYWHERE: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Good.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

RKO Radio

DONALD'S NEPHEWS: Walt Disney Cartoons—Very good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

HUNTING TROUBLE: Jed Prouty—With the proximity of the hunting season we played this one and found it to be a swell comedy that had a laugh a minute.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

MAIDS AND MUSIC: Nu-Atlas Productions—Very good one-reel musical. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

SALT SHAKERS: Nu-Atlas Productions—Not so hot. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

WYNKEN, BLYNKEN AND NOD: Disney Cartoon—A beautiful cartoon that is so different that it was refreshing. Exceptional. Play it with a comedy to diversify the program as it is rather heavy as cartoons go. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Universal

BEAUTY SHOPPE: Buck and Bubbles—This one is better than its predecessors, with some great hoofing by Buck and Bubbles, but the producers insisted on letting an alleged comedienne employ the use of exclusively stage gags spoil this otherwise excellent subject.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

CRACKED ICE: Merrie Melodies—Another swell color cartoon, better than most reels of its kind.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

CRACKED ICE: Merrie Melodies—Pretty good. Running time, nine minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

FREDDIE RICH AND ORCHESTRA: Melody Master—A fair band reel but so much like the others that it was a repetition of others we have run this season. Not so hot. Running time, 9 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Ripley Trailer Ready For "Suez" Exploitation

Twentieth Century-Fox is releasing 200 prints of a one-reel trailer starring Robert L. ("Believe It or Not") Ripley to theatres booking "Suez," which is to be released October 28th. The trailer shows the "Believe It or Not" cartoonist in his studio telling the story of Ferdinand de Lesseps and the building of the canal across the Isthmus of Suez. Sequences from the feature in which Tyrone Power and Loretta Young are starred are intercut in the Ripley narration.

The trailers are offered free to theatres booking the picture.

Eastern Production Shows Activity

Production in the east gained further momentum this week when the William K. Howard picture, which is tentatively titled "Home Town," joined the Triple A film "... one-third of a nation ..." on Eastern Service Studios' stages.

Activity at the Astoria, Long Island, plant is not confined to the two feature films. In addition there is the continued production of musical and other short subject films for both theatrical and commercial use, and the regular activities of Audio Productions, Inc., who now have several commercial films in work, including two for the Ford Motor Company which involve three camera crews on location.

All departments of the studio are operating at full capacity. The average number employed, including Audio's basic and permanent technical staff, is nearly 500 persons.

Frank K. Speidell is president of the studio and Charles L. Glett is vice-president.

Both "Home Town" and "... one third of a nation ..." are to be distributed by Paramount. The latter, which has been considerably re-written from the play as it was presented by the Federal Theatre, stars Sylvia Sydney. Lief Erikson plays opposite Miss Sydney. Dudley Murphy is directing. The cast of "Home Town" includes Patricia Ellis, Wallace Ford, Aline MacMahon and the child actors, Anita Magee and Jimmy Lydon. Mr. Howard is directing.

The possibility that two more features will be produced at Eastern Service loomed this week when Raymond Friedgen, producer, and Marion Gering, director, formed a new company and announced that two features were in preparation.

The pictures will be made at Eastern Service or at the Biograph plant in the Bronx, depending on which type of recording equipment is to be used.

Mr. Friedgen said that the pictures had been budgeted at $300,000 each.

The personnel of the new company includes Elliott Fisher, assistant to the producer; John Doran, who for 12 years was with Paramount at the Long Island studio, production manager; Ted Henkel, musical director, and Abner Rubiens, attorney.

Promotions Announced By Ross Federal

The promotion of three men from district managerships to executive supervisors and the enlargement of sales territories have been announced by Ross Federal Service, Inc. The new supervisors are Walter I. Brown of Chicago who will take charge of branch offices in Chicago, Minneapolis, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, Des Moines, Omaha, Kansas City and St. Louis; Q. O. Anderson of Atlanta, who will have under his supervision the offices in Atlanta, Charlotte, Memphis, New Orleans, Oklahoma City and Dallas, and Harold E. Lund of Pittsburgh who will have the offices in Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh.

Loew's, Inc., on Thursday declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1.62½ on the $6.50 accumulative preferred stock payable November 15th to stockholders of record October 28th.

IT'S ONE SOLUTION

In the chit-chat of current wise-cracking, one who identifies something as colossal really means it is just about pretty fair. Sounds like a gag, maybe, but the original blame for it, if there is blame to attach, goes right to the theatre adman who in an earlier day stuck a "no parking" sign over every superlative in the dictionary and fired from both hips. Such being such, today's adman, inclined to less hysteria in his adjectival pronouncements, is often up against it. He may feel highly enthusiastic over a picture but is often stymied in his copy for fear that, even if he speaks the truth, twice-bitten readers will murmur "Oh, yeah" and turn on the radio.

Charley Schlaifer's way of handling the situation sounds like one solution of the problem. The San Francisco United Artists Theatre ad head has created a pen personality named "U.A. Charley", composed mostly of the U and A in the theatre name, as here illustrated. Appearing in all advertising copy, including trailers, he has become the mouthpiece or spokesman for the house, according to the Round Tabler, who explains:

"I wanted to have a medium through which we could make statements that would create reader interest but would not sound too brash. By injecting a personality into it, we could make these statements without them sounding 'braggy.' We are using this personality as our spokesman on the screen, as a leader for the current attraction, for the coming picture, and at the head of the short subjects. We have received an excellent reaction from the general public with the introduction of 'U.A. Charley'..."

* * *

Creation of an advertising personality to identify the virtues of an established product, if new in theatre promotion, has long been a proven device in other lines of industry, since the psychology of praise from a third person avoids the awkwardness of patting one's self on the back. It may be somewhat true, as a member once put it, that the average patron reacts only to words starting with "greatest". Be that as it may, the smart theatreman who, according to the situation, ducks the job of saying so directly will less fear that his carefully selected supply of adjectives will blow up in his face.

COTTONS AND MOUTHWASH

Macy's department store in New York, one of the greatest establishments of its kind, does an annual gross touching, if not topping, the fabulous figure of one hundred millions. Macy's not only sell merchandise. They promote it—with showmanship. They call themselves showmen.

Some weeks back, the store displayed a series of windows featuring animated style mannequins. It jammed the sidewalks. The retailers plugged the bally with this copy:

"We've been in the show business more than 80 years, which is long enough to learn a thing or two about how to attract crowds and give them their money's worth."

Not exactly 80 years, perhaps, but it's quite a stretch of time now that this store and others as promotionally-minded have taken the play away from theatremen content to sit back while merchants appropriate the best methods of show business.

Exploitation does a bang-up job of selling cotton goods and mouth wash. There are many exhibitors who ignore these same proven devices to sell theatre seats—where it all started.

AND THAT'S IMPORTANT, TOO

It's good that there is a Hallowe'en, if for no other reason than to disprove that the youth of today is essentially different from the juvenile of yesterday. When one regards the general outlook of this year's very young person, there is relief in knowing that the same youngsters who doubt the authenticity of Santa Claus' whiskers show as much eagerness for the old-fashioned spirit of Hallowe'en.

Theatremen who contribute to these entertainments on October 31 will do a good boxoffice job, of course. They also are helping to keep youth young.

Designed and built by Elton L. Benson, assistant manager and artist for the World and Empress Theatre, Kearney, Neb., was lobby display shown below for "Little Miss Broadway." Cutout of Shirley was planted atop building with transparent windows through which lights shone at night when illuminated.

Planted by Dave Martin, Fox Bruin, Los Angeles, was lobby institutional card carrying newspaper stories of recovery in all lines of business in California, plus copy relative to the picture business being in the van of the recovery parade. Suggestion was also made to patrons to see all the big hits at the Fox Bruin.

Above gag was used by Les Pollock, Loew's Rochester, Rochester, N. Y., in connection with "You Can't Take It With You." Man on street distributed phoney $50 bills on which was printed title, playdates, cast, etc. Stunt was used by the theatremen three days prior to opening and reported to have attracted plenty of attention.

For the opening of "Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" at the Savoy Theatre, Jamaica, L. I., Manager Irving Dashkin promoted a stiltwalker and dressed him as a surgeon. Lad headed parade in conjunction with his ballyhoo and local campaign on the Movie Quiz. Following the stiltwalker was boys' Junior Naval Militia carrying banners plugging the attraction.

Football coaches have targets for their grid passers to aim at, but H. H. Unteafort, Eckel, Syracuse for "Give Me a Sailor" rigged up novel cutout of Martha Raye and planted it on local school playing field. Players practised tossing pigskin through star's mouth.

Julius Lamm, Uptown, Cleveland, shown above, planted wrecked car in front of his house in connection with March of Time issue, "Man at the Wheel." In addition police department officers cooperated by giving three-minute talks at each performance.

Widespread popularity of Universal's horror show, which includes "Frankenstein" and "Dracula" in one program, is illustrated by the campaign put on at the Rialto in Denver by John Denham, detailed elsewhere in this section and shown above. Front was designed by house artists, Jimmy Hawthorne and Larry Blair.

Contests Build Up "Algiers" for Gamble

Anagram contest planted in local paper launched Ted Gamble's "Algiers" opening at the Broadway Theatre, Portland, Oregon. Scrambled letters of the puzzle spelled the names of the characters portrayed by Charles Boyer, Hedy Lamarr and Sigrid Gurie. Center of puzzle carried cut of the three stars. Another contest was planted in the kiddie section of paper directed to youngsters.

Through tieup with local department store, four costumes used in the production were promoted from the Studios for display in prominent windows, using a full assortment of stills from the picture with proper credit card for the attraction, theatre and playdates.

Electrical transcriptions were placed with KWJJ and KXL which were placed twice daily for six consecutive days prior to opening, in addition to spot announcements. Cards were planted in lobbies of all leading hotels, fashion stills placed in local dailies and through tieup with Max Factor, tieup stills were planted in makeup booths in main department stores with title, cast and playdate copy.

Russell Holds Handicap Race on "Crowd Roars"

With the midget auto races held locally each Thursday night, Bob Russell, Poli's Theatre, New Haven, tied his "Crowd Roars" opening into the event by arranging for a special handicap race to be labeled with picture title, winner being awarded cash prize. Previous to the start, radio stations plugged the race during the day and that night at the field announcer mentioned the theatre handicap between each race. Judges appointed Russell honorary starter and when it was over, pictures were taken of the theatremen presenting check to winner. Stories and photo were run in local dailies together with picture plug.

Effective Campaign Sells "4 Daughters" in Cincy

Highly effective campaign by E. V. Dinerman, advertising manager for Cincinnati RKO Theatres, was instrumental in getting "Four Daughters" off to a big start at the Cincinnati Albee recently.

Dinerman started his campaign by tying up with the Cincinnati Times-Star in a classified ad contest which was good for plenty of free advertising space. In the Sunday Enquirer, he received a half-page spread telling the story of "Four Daughters" in pictures. This was accompanied by an eight-column streamer head mentioning the theatre. The Times-Star also gave the picture an eight-column art layout plugging John Garfield, featured in the film, in addition to a five-column fashion spread featuring Priscilla Lane.

The theatre blew up the spread in Life Magazine on the picture, and used it as a lobby display. In addition, cards and heralds were distributed about town.

Special cooperation was received on the feature through women's clubs, who urged their members to support the picture. In addition, local clubs and organizations were contacted with highly successful results.

Leand Writes Column For Local Paper

Dubbing his column "Flicker Flashes," Harold Leand, Revere Theatre, Revere, Mass., is writing material weekly for his local paper. Instead of clipping out the run-of-the-mill material contained in press sheets, Harold gets in a plug for his week's coming attractions in a manner more pertinent to local angles. Column is further localized with dope about town personalities and town goings-on. Another stunt the theatremen is doing is to give away a number of passes each week to names drawn at random from the city directory, and he reports that this guarantees weekly attention on the part of the readers and keeps them looking for their names.

Paramount's tieup with the University of Arkansas football team known as "The Arkansas Travelers," in connection with their forthcoming trip to San Francisco for the Santa Clara game on October 22, will result in huge celebrations for the new Bob Burns vehicle in many cities visited by the team en route to the coast, according to Robert Gillham, Paramount advertising and publicity director.

The Razorback Special, consisting of 15 cars will be greeted in Dallas by Jimmy Cherry, of the Majestic Theatre; Fort Worth by Frank Weatherford, of the Interstate Theatres; in Abilene by Wally Akin, of the Paramount Theatre; El Paso by John Paxton, of the Plaza Theatre, and in Tucson, Arizona, by Harry Nace of the Orpheum.

In each city, both the team and 60 piece band will parade to the theatre where "The Arkansas Traveler" will be playing. Press and radio interviews are planned as well as a special Razorback luncheon for the team at the studios with Bob Burns host.

Playgrounds Cooperate On "White Banners"

An extensive tieup with the Cleveland recreation division of playground officials was arranged by manager Ed Miller and publicist Manny Pearlstein at Warner's Hippodrome in connection with "White Banners." Theatremen were permitted to post jumbo size cards with due credits in each of the city's 65 playground centers during the engagement.

Cooperation of the Cleveland public libraries netted good advertising starting a week ahead and remaining current with attraction dates. 35 branches of the local system exhibited displays they made from 200 stills and attraction strips. Book tieups were effected with leading stores for counter and window card displays and special screening was held for critics, club leaders, church and educational officials.

For "Having Wonderful Time," Pearlstein promoted two all expense lake cruises which were sponsored by the Cleveland Press. Contest started five days ahead of opening with front page break in addition to three columns of art on succeeding days. Men's haberdasher aided with window display containing hat filled with pennies, to those coming closest to guessing correct number of coins, hats and guest tickets were awarded. A reported first time was break accorded by News fashion editor who devoted quarter page to fashion layout.

"Time" Goes to a Fire

Reported as one of the most extensive publicity tieups ever effected by the March of Time has just been completed on one of its current episodes, "U. S. Fire Fighters." Plans have been made with the National Fire Protective Association, whereby every fire chief in every community in the United States is to receive a letter from the N. F. P. A. informing him of this new story, its importance to his work and the advisability of his urging every person in his community to see the film.

HALLOWE'EN SAFETY DRIVES SHARE SPOT WITH STUNTS AND CONTESTS

Cooperation of Civic Officials Stressed With Honor Parties and Pledge Cards to Guard Against Damage to Property

The growing sentiment among theatremen to keep juvenile patrons "in line" on Hallowe'en is more noticeable this year. Of course, the amusement angle is not being neglected. All the proven devices for entertainment in Hallowe'en shows will be called upon, but in addition, the safe-and-sane slant will be stressed without neglecting the usual fun. For instance, the "Honor Party" as suggested by Ted Emerson, Nebraska district advertising director for Tri-States.

This takes the form of a tie-in with local police chief and principals of schools, each principal obtaining pledges from all students in his charge to refrain from the usual wilful destruction or damage to property on Hallowe'en. Pledge is obtained with the understanding that each student standing by the agreement will be a guest of the cooperating theatre. Up in Nelson, B. C., on a previous occasion, Charley Doctor not only obtained the cooperation of the local authorities to this effect, but even promoted newspaper advertising from the city addressed to parents, plugging the theatre show at a special price to children. In other situations, police cooperation has gone so far as having officers visiting the various schools speaking on the safe-and-sane angle and publicising the special theatre performance.

Good example of pledge card copy used on another occasion by Stanley Kriner, Fox, Pomona, Cal., was as follows:

"I hereby pledge that I will keep the true spirit of Hallowe'en; that I will not be a party to defacing, destroying, removing or damaging in any way anyone's property on Hallowe'en night; that I will not cause injury to anyone by causing the sidewalks or streets to be blocked in any way. I understand that, by keeping this pledge, I am being a good citizen and as a reward for keeping the pledge this card will be the only admittance necessary to attend a special matinee at the Fox Theatre.

Space was also provided for name and address of signer followed by signature of police chief appointing signer as junior officer to assist police in protecting property on Hallowe'en.

In situations where the Midnight Spook Party is to be a part of the celebration, the program put on last year by Les Pollock (who is set for another as atmospheric this year) is typical. Pollock started two weeks ahead with a trailer of black cats, goblins, ghosts, etc., decorated his lobby in keeping with all the seasonal accessories. Among the stunts used in the Show was a dancing spook act, faces cutout of cardboard and painted, bodies of two thicknesses of cheese-cloth covering boys who supported the faces and flittered and swayed to spooky organ music. In another act, a string of cutout cats was slowly drawn across the stage on a pulley in a green light. Above them was a dangling skeleton at end of a long pole swinging out over the audience. Les also had a magician in devil costume for another number.

Ted Emerson follows through on the spook show by suggesting special lighting and decorations for house and lobby. He finds that inexpensive cardboard, jointed skeletons, bats, witches, etc., can be obtained at the average dime store.

Worth a repeat, is Bill Exton's idea of having the ushers at the Kenosha, Kenosha, Wis., stage a contest for money prize for best costume. Exton had the gang on the stage, allowed the audience to judge and reports it as a sure-fire gag for amusement and interest.

Gag Contest Found Popular

No party of course is complete without the tried-and-true contests of various kinds, put on with the assistance, if possible, of a Master of Ceremonies, to keep things lively, where the manager himself does not take over. Among the most popular, listed in these columns previously, are:

Balloons: About 10 children, all ages, lined up with hands behind backs. Balloon placed in each contestant's mouth and one bursting the balloon first by blowing it up, declared winner.

Apple Ducking: Large tub filled with water, several large, hard stemless apples placed in water. About five children, ages 12 to 15, complete, hands tied behind backs, on knees, behind tub, facing audience. Contestants must remove apples from water with teeth, without aid of hands.

Cracker Eating: Ten boys, 10 to 14, each given a small unopened box of crackers. First one to open and eat the crackers, then whistle "Turkey In the Straw," is winner. Boxes of crackers must be small.

Pie Eating: Ten boys, 12 to 15, in straight line behind long table facing audience on which is placed, one for each contestant, special juicy berry pies, about half size of regular pies. Contestants eat pies, without aid of hands.

Milk Bottle: For boys, 10 to 15, one nursing milk bottle with regulation nipple for each contestant, prize to one drinking milk quickest. Make sure each one starts at the same time.

Fancy Costumes: For children and adults, individual contests for each classification. Entrants come up from audience to stage when called, parade to music and line up facing audience. Audience applause determines winners.

Shoe Contest: Two classes, for boys and girls. Line up contestants who take off shoes which are placed in barrel and thoroughly mixed, then dumped in one pile on stage. All contestants run to pile at one time. One having right shoe on and properly laced, is winner.

It is suggested that lobby be colorfully decorated with the proper accessories and all the stunts posted on lobby board in advance. So as to avoid any fire hazards, cornstalks, dried leaves and other inflammables should not be used.

Denham's Advance On 'Horror Show' Stirs Up Denver

There's a heap of chills and sicklike in the so-called Horror Show originated by Universal wherein both "Dracula" and "Frankenstein" are shown on one bill. According to various theatremen who have played the Show, audiences are eating it up, and John O. Denham, Rialto, Denver, reports his patrons going for a double portion with an attendance of 18,000 people the first week in his 876-seat house.

Since little posting has been done in Denver during the past year, Denham decided to blanket the town and started five days ahead with two-color half sheets, one's, three's, window cards, announcements in restaurants and hotels. All copy carried the lines: "The Double Horror Show of the Century," "Can You Take It," "We Dare You to See Them Together," the same selling appeal used in newspaper ads, lobby displays and on the front. House artists Jimmy Hawthorne and Larry Blair were responsible for the effective front, for which Blair made up giant enlargements of both Karloff and Lugos, the photos said by Denham to create more excitement than anything he has used in a long time.

Ushers were dressed in interne jackets and cashiers as nurses. Week ahead, all the staff wore black masks imprinted with the titles. Publicity was carried in all country newspapers within a 50-mile radius, in addition to extra stories and increased local advertising. Radio was used ahead and during the date, announcements made daily.

Blue Mouse Front Draws

For the Horror Show date at the Blue Mouse, Seattle, Wash., Manager Eddie River used red, yellow, purple and green for his front and lobby decoration, main banner, 50 feet long by four feet deep, carrying the "dare" copy and feature names. At each end of the banner were placed 14 foot cutouts of Dracula and the Frankenstein monster. Easels for lobby stills had flittered spider web backgrounds and panels for the stills were shaped as lightning bolts. Glass doors, panels, etc., were all painted with the spiderweb effects.

Special presentation put on just before break of first picture had house entirely in darkness, even the exit lights. While auditorium was absolutely coal-black, sound reel was turned on, emitting scary, piercing sounds. Effect was reported as very telling and one of the ace comment-causers of the entire campaign. Tie-in made with gum company for distribution of single pieces, was another aid. Each slice of gum held a small card with the theatre credits, copy suggesting that gum would help keep nerves quiet during the show. Jet black board out front carried "warning" copy advising those with weak hearts not to come alone.

Questionnaire to Patrons Solves Advertising Problem

Results of 12,000 Answers Decide Newspaper Policy for Boston Foreign Pictures Theatre

by GEORGE KRASKA

Fine Arts Theatre, Boston, Mass.

From time to time I try to find out through my patrons how to operate my theatre more efficiently, if possible. There is one thing that has always bothered me and that was my advertising budget. Somehow I could never keep within its limits. Recently I prepared a questionnaire which was distributed to our patrons for over a period of six months, taking in French, German, Yiddish, Russian and English films, which by nature of the languages attracted a diversified element, thus obtaining the reactions of our discriminating clientele. Fifty thousand of these were handed out to patrons as they left the theatre. Twelve thousand were answered (sent through the mail or left at the theatre).

There were six questions, divided as follows:

1. Is this the first foreign language film you have ever seen?

To this question we found that 8.7 per cent were newcomers and that 91.3 have seen foreign language films before. Some of the patrons were rather indignant at being asked such a question; and with pride they under-scored the fact that they have always patronized foreign films, with such answers as "decidedly no!"—under-scoring "decidedly."

2. Do you think foreign films are superior to Hollywood films? If so, why?

55.9 per cent said "yes," 34.8 per cent said "no," 9.3 per cent were undecided. Here we found some very interesting and sometimes humorous comments. One Harvard professor answered that in his estimation foreign films are "tremendously superior because of their lack of undue sentimentality, deeper content, historical accuracy." Another, "more courage and imagination, better taste, restraint of presentation, under-statement." One patron wrote, "very few of the Hollywood films bring out the better and deeper things of life. Too much happens in one picture (thus making everything too fast). Hollywood often makes an ideal of circumstances and facts that are often not ideal; yes, even absolutely wrong." One enthusiast wrote that foreign films are superior because they are "more true and simple, not so artificial, theatrical, and spectacular; but American photography is superior." Another one answers, "yes, and no! Hollywood technique, I think, is far ahead of the foreign technique but in some of the photographic effects and some of the acting, I think the foreign films excel."

Of course, some of the Harvard boys had to be clever. One of them replied to this question, "Yes, they are superior." His reason for it was merely that it gave him "a chance to be snobbish with his friends."

One Beacon Hill blue-blood considered foreign films superior in some ways because "on the whole, foreign films give a more realistic impression without all the veneer and gaudiness of Hollywood pictures." One patron from Wellesley Hills didn't consider foreign films superior to Hollywood ones; "the production," he said, "is generally not so good. Characters are not natural enough. Some of the characters are too real and gruesome."

A member of the Republican branch of our country's national executive family considered foreign films superior—"especially the French and German—they are generally handled much more subtly; points are not driven in." A minister, answering the questionnaire, said that foreign films are superior to Hollywood films as a rule. "Perhaps it is because we see only the best in foreign films. I agree there are good American films as well." The things that mainly please him in the films are "maturity, candor, power and freedom from triviality." A patron from a nearby girls' college town said that foreign films are usually not superior to Hollywood films for "the foreign countries have not progressed as far in sound and general technique of movie-making as we have."

"The actors are much more natural and not all Apollos and Venuses in foreign films"—so a fair patron votes them superior to Hollywood films. Another one makes the observation that "the best of the Hollywood productions compare favorably with the best of foreign."

3. From which newspapers do you learn of our attractions?

This was truly a most important question from my point of view. Here the nine Boston daily and Sunday newspapers were listed, and the results were illuminating. One paper received 49.1 per cent; the next in line was 20.2; two others ran "neck and neck" with 9.7; another one 6.4; and one of the leading morning newspapers only received 4.9 with three other popular papers receiving less than one per cent.

After tabulating the above results, I proceeded to alter my policy as far as advertising copy was concerned, and instead of giving every one of the nine Boston papers equal copy and hardly getting a showing, owing to my limited budget, I completely eliminated the three less than one per cent papers, gave the paper that received 49.1 per cent the major portion of my lineage, and divided the balance among the other five papers. In this way I have been able to make quite a showing in the paper that reaches most of our customers and still have some showing in the other papers and remain within my budget.

Naturally, this survey on newspapers cannot be used for other houses, for we happen to attract a highly discriminating element, by the very nature of our films. I believe every theatremen must find out for himself according to his own particular following. I can truthfully say that since my change in policy I have found my operation very successful (although I will admit that the attraction has something to do with it) since I am now in the eighteenth week of Paderewski's "Moonlight Sonata" and it's still going strong. I have now broken every available long run record in Boston, and by the looks of things this film will hang up a record.

The above question also furnished another very interesting bit of information, and that is the combination of papers that people read. Approximately 60 per cent read a morning and afternoon paper; 20 per cent read one paper a day; and the balance was divided between various combinations from three to four to five papers a day. This gives me further material to realize that I am covered fairly well between the morning and evening papers so that at times I can even remain out of an evening paper and concentrate on a morning paper, and still be covered.

3a. Please indicate in which section of the newspaper you learn of our attractions: Reviews, Ads, Movie Time Clock or Stories.

Reviews, received 67 per cent; ads were next with 15.5; the movie time clock was 9.8; press agent stories 1.8 while 5.9 were undecided. This plainly shows that after the reviews are out, the only other and best method to attract attention is through advertising, that the press agent blurbs are not taken too seriously by our type of patron. Here again one must take into consideration the type of our audience—a more mature kind that won't fall for the usual superlatives.

4. Which foreign language do you prefer in films?

French predominated with 41 per cent; German with 24.2; English with 7.9; Russian 6.9; Yiddish 3.9; Spanish 2.4; Italian 1.8; satisfied with our choice, 9.9; miscellaneous, two per cent.

5. Please check film or films you would like to see again.

Here a list of 20 outstanding hits of past seasons were printed with the following results: The Life and Loves of Beethoven, 13.5 per cent; Mayerling, 13.2; Zwei Herzen, 8.1; Masquerade in Vienna, 6.2; Ski Chase, 5.2; Słalom, 4.9; Un Carnet De Bal, 4.7; The Guardsman, 4.7; Maedchen in Uniform, 4.6; Carnival in Flanders, 4.6; and so forth down the line.

6. Are you interested in receiving our announcements of forthcoming attractions by mail?

To this question, it is revealing to note that 98 per cent answered in the affirmative.

THE RELEASE CHART

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parentheses after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1938-39 season.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 129

Conducted by

F. H. RICHARDSON

Question No. 129 was: (A) What qualities must projection carbons possess? (B) Must carbons be free from moisture when used. If so, why? (C) What is the luminosity of carbon at the point of volatilization? Does conductivity of carbon increase as temperature is increased? (D) Which has the higher conductivity, the carbon core or its surrounding shell?

The following made acceptable answer: C. Rau and S. Evans; G. E. Doe; J. R. Prater; H. Edwards; L. Cimikoski; L. H. Kelley; M. and J. Devoy; R. Feasel; J. A. Zachritz; G. Burdis; L. Johnson; W. (A) J. R. Prater says: "To give maximum, dependable results projection carbons must possess the following qualities: (1) STRAIGHTNESS. To obtain the best illumination, carbon tips must be maintained in exactly the correct relation to each other and to the optical system of the lamp. The arc is often several inches from the carbon holders, newer crooked carbons would require frequent readjustment as they burn shorter. In lamps where carbons are supported at both ends, crooked carbons might bind or break. (2) UNIFORMITY. Any change in the texture or density of a carbon would cause erratic burning and unstable light. Cores, although made of a different

(A) What is a "musroom" tip? What causes it?

(B) Do properly stored carbons suffer any harm because of length of storage?

(C) Name proper SRA carbon combinations and proper amperage for each.

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answers to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

material than the outer shell, must likewise be uniform in composition and density. (3) PURITY. Any unintended foreign material in the carbons or cores not only will disturb the burning of the arc, but also will change the quality of the light produced. (4) ACCURACY OF SIZE. Any given diameter of carbon will give satisfactory results only when burned within a very few amperes of its rated capacity. At the same d.c. amperage the negative carbon must have considerably less diameter than the positive for best results, but if too small it will spindle. Each amperage rating requires an exact size of both positive and negative carbons and these sizes must be maintained within very narrow limits."

(B) L. Cimikoski says: "To produce best results carbons must be absolutely free from moisture when in use for projection. Among the ill effects produced by moisture is sputtering and hissing of the arc."

L. H. Kelley says: "It is essential to best results that carbons be free from moisture when used for projection. The carbon is very dense, hence moisture cannot escape rapidly. It will be converted into steam under the intense heat, thus setting up high internal pressures that, since they cannot be expelled with sufficient rapidity, are, or some of them may be and usually are retained until the floor of the crater approaches whereupon a minute particle of the floor thereof is blown off. This results in flickering light, which of course is highly objectionable. It is termed "sputtering of the arc." It is much more objectionable when the moisture is contained in the positive carbon, though moisture in the negative will produce undesirable results in lesser degree."

M. B. Stout (Alaska) injects a new thought concerning which I would not care to pass judgment. What do some of you think about it? He says: "Carbons used for projection should be wholly free from moisture, since otherwise the applied heat will form steam, with result that the light will flicker. Steam and carbon have widely different conductivity, hence as particles of steam are encountered in many minute "pockets," conductivity of the carbon is caused to be variable instead of uniform. This, in the nature of things, produces flickering light. All carbons should be subjected to high temperature for a considerable space of time before use. Storage on top of or inside the lamphouse serves this purpose very well."

Note: I have almost wholly changed the wording of friend Stout's answer, but, I believe, have not in any degree altered his meaning.

(C) G. E. Doe says: "This question might be interpreted as meaning either of two or three things, Dad. I think, however, it must refer to the luminosity per unit area at point of volatilization, which is understood to lie between 3650 and 3700 degrees centigrade. At this temperature, it is around 175 to 200 candle power to the square millimeter. This does not include the high intensity arc, in which gaseous temperature within the crater is raised much above the carbon volatilization point. Another way of considering the question that would, I think, be wrong, would be to take it as meaning the luminosity as refers to light delivered to the collecting-diverging element of the lamp's optical system. This, I believe, would mean the light source considered as a whole, and the direction taken by the same considered as a beam."

(D) Almost all answers concede the somewhat higher conductivity of carbon cores as compared with the shell. C. Umphrey puts the matter thus: "This question has me 'stuck.' Neither the Bluebook nor anything else I have been able to consult, including the book 'National Projector Carbons' seems to answer the question directly. All authorities say the core is softer and tends to stabilize the arc."

Motiograph Sued By J. E. Robin

J. E. Robin, Inc., theatre equipment manufacturer and distributor, has filed suit in the New York supreme court against Motiograph, Inc., and Victor V. Coster, and asked the court to restrain Motiograph from breach of contract.

The complaint stated that Motiograph had made an agreement on March 21, 1938, with the plaintiff, giving the plaintiff an exclusive three year agency to distribute Motiograph products, including its projectors, in Central and South America. The complaint said that Motiograph had refused to carry out the contract and had employed Coster.

How Much Light

ARE YOU PUTTING ON THE SCREEN?

SCREEN BRIGHTNESS MAY MEAN
THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN PROFIT AND LOSS IN THE OPERATION OF YOUR THEATER

30 foot lamberts* is considered the ideal screen brightness. 7 to 14 foot lamberts is recommended as the minimum range of brightness for satisfactory vision. Yet some theaters have a screen brightness of only

2 to 4 foot lamberts.

Our eyes adjust themselves to a brightness as high as 10,000 foot lamberts in summer sunlight. So the brightest screen is not too brilliant for comfort if the level of surrounding illumination is sufficient to avoid disturbing contrast with the screen. But there is a lower limit beyond which the average person cannot see with clearness and comfort.

Keep your screen brightness safely above this limit. Provide light enough for the poorest and slowest eyes in your audience. Simplified High Intensity projection will do it. Ask your dealer to show you the profit possibilities and the surprisingly low cost of this new projection light.

* The foot lambert is the standard unit of brightness.

BRINGING NEWS BY SCREEN AND TICKER

Entrance. Note directional soffit lighting.

The auditorium, seating 514, with rows spaced 36 inches. Below, the lobby.

Detail of film and reel pattern in aisle and standee carpeting.

■ The second newsreel theatre to open in New York in September, the 72nd Street Newsreel theatre, takes the topical cinema to uptown Broadway. It gives a second New York house to Newsreel Theatres, Inc., which began with the Embassy Newsreel theatre on Times Square and now also operates a similar theatre in Newark, N. J. Designed by Peter Copeland, the new house has a simple modern scheme throughout. Dominated by a cantilevered marquee of stainless steel (by Continental Sign Company, with Adler silhouette attraction boards), the entrance area has a side box office and turnstile. Marquee soffit lighting is definitely directional toward the entrance, and this directional effect is picked up by vestibule ceiling "ribs" of light. The lobby has walnut flexwood walls, blue-painted plaster ceiling lighted by cornice coves. Treatment of the auditorium consists principally in curved forms painted on hard plaster walls and acoustic plaster ceiling. The rear wall is covered in fabric over rock wool. The auditorium seats 514, with 36-inch row spacing. Chairs, by Irwin, have blue mohair padded backs, tan leather-covered, spring-edge seats. Below rear of the auditorium is a lounge with walls of flexwood and rose-painted plaster, pink-tinted plaster ceiling, and gray and blue twist wool carpet. This room is equipped with a news ticker. The theatre is completely air-conditioned, with distribution from the ceiling through Anemostat outlets. Projection equipment includes two Simplex projectors with Peerless Magnarc lamps supplied by Hertner motor-generator. Sound system is RCA, image 16 feet wide.

At right: The lounge in sublevel, equipped with a news ticker.

REVERSAL OF REEL WINDING IS REVIVED AS A LIVELY ISSUE

WHETHER FILM should be wound on reels in reverse, or with "tail out," is being argued in projection and exchange circles. Discussion of the method, which has been tried in a small way and has also received some attention from distributors in years past, has begun again as the result of the proposal of W. Lee Beckley, a Minneapolis projectionist, that it be adopted generally, in order to assure proper inspection in the theatre and the use of the theatre's own reels in actual projection. Mr. Beckley's suggestion was published by F. H. Richardson in his "Comment" in the July 23d issue of BETTER THEATRES.

Brought to the attention of a number of local unions, the proposal has been endorsed by most of those which have already responded. Among others who have expressed themselves in favor of the change are Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, past-president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers; Harry Rubin, chairman of the Projection Practice Committee of the SMPE and supervisor of projection for Paramount; and Charles F. Horstman, supervisor of projection for RKO Theatres

Pointing out that the SMPE Exchange Practice Committee made a survey two years ago to get data on which the feasibility of the "tails out" winding by exchanges might be judged, A. W. Schwalberg of Warner Brothers has stated that opinion among representatives of leading distributors has been that they would be willing to send out films wound in reverse if the theatres would return the reels wound "heads out."

[Having grown beyond the bounds of F. H. Richardson's Comment, opinion and action developed from this proposal are discussed at some length in an article leading off the Modern Projection department, page 53.—THE EDITOR.]

TELEVISION FUTURE STILL OBSCURE; SEE THEATRE AN OUTLET

WHEN WILL television come? What will it be like? Will it operate in the theatre? How? What provisions in the plan of a theatre should be made for it? Or will it be confined to the home, and be close enough to theatre performances to be competitive?

Such questions represent what most theatre people want to know, as evidenced in inquiries to BETTER THEATRES. Conflicting prophecies have appeared in print, for opinions naturally differ; furthermore, in any industry there are obviously many "axes to grind."

It is noteworthy, however, that the larger radio companies, who have carried almost the entire investment made in television research, are highly conservative in their statements. More liberal forecasts (some of them quite "wild") arise in other circles. The picture is further complicated by securities which the patent situation makes necessary, and the complete truth is exceedingly hard to find.

Present Enlarged Image

Ordinary television results at the present time consist in a picture normally a little less than half the size of this page, fairly sharp at that size, and moderately bright. Ordinary optical enlargement—that is, projecting the picture just described on a screen of greater dimensions—is practicable, and occasionally used. There are other methods of enlargement; the optical procedure is cheapest up to certain limits, and about as effective as any. Enlargement does not improve detail—at equal viewing distance the "grain" becomes that much more conspicuous, but just as in theatre projection, it enables more people, located farther from the screen, to see the picture. Enlargement by optical means involves sacrifice of brightness, which is not regarded as good even at best.

Disturbances such as those caused in the theatre by dirty film are encountered now and then, traceable chiefly to man-made static. Flicker and travel ghost are not excessively troublesome. The results are judged by many to be about equal to poorly screened home movies in image quality.

The possibilities of home television at the present moment seem superficially more promising to many observers, but closer inspection of the practical commercial side reveals some formidable obstacles. The difficulties involved in any method of transmission that must reach millions of homes have been mentioned. Cost is another factor. The least expensive television receiver, it is believed in the trade, will certainly cost several hundred dollars.

Theatre Advantages Cited

The opinion that television, when it does arrive commercially, will come via the theatre, rather than the home, is therefore expressed in both television and theatre circles. Theatre use involves only the difficulties of picture detail and illumination, it is pointed out, and these have already been found fairly satisfactory on a screen 8 feet by 10 feet, though, of course, not comparable to the motion picture image obtainable today. Home use poses only slightly less exacting requirements on those two points, while enormously increasing the difficulty of transmission, whether by wire or radio, and it involves a twelve-fold increase in program costs. Further, the apparatus for a thousand homes will cost more.

Today, however, the most serious restriction on home television is considered to be the program cost, which, as some observers point out, suggests that eventual development may see television used in the home for news events but confined to the theatre for the more expensive classes of television entertainment.

The cost of apparatus and replacements in theatre use, combined with a performance that is relatively imperfect (as, for example, in the absence of color), would mean that there would be no advantage in changing over from the present method of producing entertainment by means of films. Opinion is, theatres would be likely to retain their established projection apparatus, adding television equipment only for the reproduction of exceptionally important news events and various novelties.

Very little data of value are available concerning the structural changes that might be required to accommodate television equipment in the theatre. The final form the apparatus will take, particularly the receiving scanner, is a matter of vague conjecture only among engineers dealing with television. Should the scanner prove to be a piece of apparatus embodying the screen within itself—something in the nature of a glorified cathode ray tube—which is at present impossible, no doubt a good deal of space will be needed behind the proscenium. If on the other hand the scanner provides a small source of very intense light which can be projected in optical enlargement (the method used at present), then the only change needed will be one of adding the necessary ports to the projection room and making space therein for a few, not very bulky, pieces of apparatus.

DRIVE-IN'S HIT BY HURRICANE INCLUDE ODD DUAL THEATRE

ALTHOUGH THERE is little enough to a drive-in theatre structurally, the outdoor car-parking film-exhibiting establishments in New England, where they flourish as nowhere else, were generally damaged, some put out of business, by the West Indies hurricane that cut through this area. The newest, that of George Swartz and Joseph Cifre called the Merrimack Park Auto theatre and located at Methuen, Mass., was one of those severely hit. The ponderous screen housing, a structure characteristic of drive-in theatres, was flattened into a heap of kindling, critically injuring three employees.

The Weymouth theatre, forerunner of the New England drive-in places, suffered the least. Shingles were stripped from sections of the screen house, while the surrounding fence was flattened in places. The theatre reopened the next night, however.

The Weymouth house is operated by a corporation in which Thomas DiMaura and James Guarino are principals, which is at present engaged in litigations over the ownership of the theatres under its direction, and questioning the validity of its claims to a New England franchise from the Park-In Theatres Corporation of Camden, N. J., which controls patents on ramp construction for outdoor theatres of this type.

An outdoor theatre of yet quainter character was that being constructed in Shrewsbury, Mass., since it was planned to combine outdoor and indoor operation, and the wind glutted itself on its structures also. Here the screen housing was to form one end of an 800-seat theatre to be used after the summer season closed, which arrangement was calculated to give the operators not only a twelve-month income, but to circumvent the difficulty of drive-in theatres to get suitable product by the booking of pictures the year around. The indoor theatre building had not been completed when the storm struck, but what there was of it, as well as the screen housing, soon became a mass of broken timber and scrambled cinder blocks.

The Shrewsbury innovation was also a DiMaura and Guarino enterprise.

E. M. Loew's drive-in theatre at Providence, R. I., which is also involved in the franchise suit, was shut down by the interruption in electrical service from which all Providence theatres suffered. The Loew drive-in at Lynn, Mass., however, was severely damaged by the wind, while rising marsh waters ruined the turf.

PROTECTIVE DEVICES SEEN AMPLE TO END AIR DUCT HAZARDS

TRYING TO SAVE a relatively small amount of money by using inflammable duct construction and unsafe air filters may mean the difference "between long usefulness and a ventilating system that will soon need revamping," the International Association of Fire Chiefs, in convention in New Orleans the latter part of September, was told by L. Logan Lewis, vice-president of the Carrier Corporation, manufacturers of air-conditioning equipment.

"The safety of a duct system," he said, "may be assured by the use of protective devices."

Among the fire control measures that he suggested were (1) uniform safety requirements throughout the country, (2) unit equipment or central systems in the larger buildings used by the public and in theatres, (3) elimination of non-combustible materials throughout the air supply system, (4) periodic cleaning of ventilation ducts, (5) automatic stopping of the fans when fire breaks out, and (6) filters of non-combustible materials.

THEATRE CONSTRUCTION COSTS TODAY

THE COST OF theatre construction today is discussed in the material presented here in the only practical way that this important subject can be discussed—by letting the figures speak more or less for themselves. Costs are highly variable. There is no good answer to the question, "What will a 1,000-seat theatre cost?" One must know where it is to be built, very precisely; what the competitive conditions are, what the geological conditions of the site present, and just what kind of a theatre is wanted. Every project must be analyzed for itself, and by itself.

It is possible, however, for one to be greatly helped in such calculations by a background of knowledge concerning general construction factors obtaining. It is for that purpose that the experience of three leading theatre architects has been called upon in this discussion.

By John Eberson

IN DISCUSSING theatre costs, it is well to understand what the purpose is of the theatre we are talking about. Is it to be a theatre for a man in the motion picture exhibition business in all sincerity, making it his life work, so that he wants a structure which will have some permanence, as little wear and tear as possible, and designed to meet the average tastes of the public? Or is it to be a theatre built for speculative purposes, to make a big showing for a year or two, then "unload"? The distinction is a fundamental one, importantly affecting costs.

I have learned by experience, covering more than 38 years, a good many of them in designing motion picture theatres, that every project must be individually analyzed as to location, conditions of local labor, the building material market, the taste of the public, the pocket book of the exhibitor, and the prospect of arousing undeveloped patronage.

I want to point out here, that it is just as easy to over-build and over-estimate as it is to do the contrary. There is no theatre architect of standing who does not know how to figure costs very accurately. If his estimates miscarry, it is usually less the fault of the architect than of the exhibitor who hasn't given the architect a proper voice in the decisions that had to be made.

Every motion picture theatre operator, in every community, must face serious com-

Offered on this and the following two pages is the testimony of three prominent architects specializing in the designing and construction of motion picture theatres, on what it costs to build representative theatres today. John Eberson, who has offices in New York, has designed many of the leading theatres in the United States, as well as abroad, and is the architect of many of those more recently constructed in the East. Robert Boller, who also has specialized in theatre design for many years, has offices in Kansas City and is represented by theatres of all types throughout the Middle West. S. Charles Lee, of Los Angeles, is prominent on the Pacific Coast.

mercial obligations for which he is accountable—it is well for the architect to remember that also in the planning of a theatre. The exhibitor must have the support of the architect and the artisans whom he calls upon to create for him the theatre structure and its environment. Successful theatre operation means successful service to a community, and this depends, first, upon the supply of product, and second, on the overhead expense of operation. One of the first factors in determining this "nut" is the cost of the building and of the equipment. After the theatre is opened this matter is more or less a closed issue.

The cost figures which I present are complete, nothing left out. They were not arrived at by estimate on any basis. And here I should like to say that the theatre operator should not discuss costs with anyone on a basis of cubical contents. There simply is no such basis for an estimate of theatre costs. The figures presented here are based on the costs of actual theatres. They should cover the field of practical inquiry as to theatre construction costs today quite thoroughly.

First, let us dispose of the big, ostentatious downtown theatres in large cities. They are of a rare species today, and are

'way out of line with what is now considered sound exhibition costs. At best they are on the fringe of the business. We can just forget them.

TYPE A.—Metropolitan neighborhood or suburban theatre, seating 1,000.

WITH RESPECT to the larger city we can confine ourselves to the neighborhood and suburban theatre, of the popular type in a good "middle class" community, seating 1,000. We aim to make a fully functional job of it, answering the needs of a real investment with low upkeep. The workmanship and materials such a theatre would call for may be listed as follows:

Reinforced concrete foundations, steel skeleton, tile and brick curtain walls, reinforced concrete main floor, tile partitions, gypsum roof, tile floors in vestibules and toilets, tile wainscoting in toilets, countersunk aisles, plaster ceiling, galvanized iron and lath hangers, Keene cement wainscot and standee rail, Rockwool and fabric, side walls, brick or terra cotta fronts, copper sheet metal, hardwood display frames, marble box offices, rubber mats and floors (for lobbies and men's room), colored toilet fixtures, drinking fountain with cooler, special designed lighting fixtures, complete air-conditioning with positive refrigeration and automatic controls, complete stage set with remote controlled curtain, complete set of house drapes, spring edge seats (34-inch to 36-inch spacing), decorative furniture, theatre quality carpet on ¾-inch lining, aisles countersunk, standard emergency lighting system, Formica front doors, candy booth, adequate help and storage rooms, oil burning or stoker-fed coal heating system, courts paved, marquee with silhouette letters and all metal ceilings, with ample flasher animation; special theatre hardware, including best type panic bolts, floor hinges, door checks, kick plates, all master keyed and outside hinges in bronze; wall safe, vacuum cleaners, portable electric equipment, automatic ticket choppers, lockers, hard-of-hearing installation, intercommunicating house phones, special booth signal system, one footlight, one border light.

Figures on the cost of basic building materials and building labor in cities throughout the country appear on page 20.

But before presenting a cost break-up on a theatre of this style and classification, I would like to present another list, not so much of what is included as of what is sometimes left out. I refer to a type of theatre that, while of metropolitan neighborhood and suburban classification, is built on a speculative basis, flashy but shoddy, built without the slightest concern for what may happen to it a few years later. For example:

Plain concrete foundations, steel skeleton, concrete block or cinder block stucco curtain walls, plain concrete floor on dirt, cinder block partitions, steel deck roof, terrazzo floors in vestibule and toilets, Keene cement wainscoting in toilets, aisles not countersunk, no carpet strips, plaster ceiling black iron lath and hangers, plain plaster wainscoting, acoustic plaster walls, sheet iron or brick fronts, galvanized iron sheet metal work, pine or Kalamein metal moulding and cardboard display frames, wood or pressed fibre board box office, no rubber mats, white toilet fixtures, no drinking fountain cooler, no air-conditioning, no automatic controls, hand-operated stage curtain, box spring seats with 30-inch and 32-inch spacing, retiring rooms sparingly furnished, cheap carpet on skimpy lining, projection underpowered and no emergency service or equipment, wood doors throughout, except where Kalamein demanded by law, no acoustical treatment in booth, no special candy booth, no adequate help or storage space, no automatic control or firing of heating installation, courts cinder only, dead canopy with tin letters, stock undersize hardware, buzzer system only, no lighting on stage or attic spaces, etc., etc.

Now to return to the soundly constructed and substantially appointed theatre that the first specifications referred to. In giving probable costs on such a metropolitan neighborhood or suburban theatre of 1,000 seats, I have seen fit to divide the figures into two groups, one (designated "100%") referring to a more pretentious theatre, using the best materials; the other (designated "60%"), a theatre of more "standard" character, using good materials, but with an eye to pretty strict economy.

As to the equipment costs, I would say that, according to my data on actual theatres of recent erection, the basic or major equipment and furnishings of such a theatre would run to about $31,000 for the "100%" type, and about $21,000 for the "60%" type. For the former these costs may be itemized as follows:

Opera chairs .....	$7,500

It is to be pointed out that all of the figures given represent actual theatres having the characteristics indicated in these particular items. However, were these not specified, there would be others of similar cost significance in their place. It should further be noted that these figures represent average composite costs experienced during the last 24 months, covering 27 theatres in the area east of Chicago.

TYPE B.—Provincial theatre (small city business section or comparable location), seating 700.

The general specifications are similar to those of Type A, with, however, differences that are indicated in the cost itemization. Moreover, from the "60%" grade in the provincial type many of the features of that designated "100%" are eliminated. The general specifications for these cost figures are as follows:

Concrete foundations, steel skeleton, cinder or concrete block and brick sidewalls, front of porcelain-enamel or other modern material comparable in cost, with brick and copper cornices; steel beam roof, wood balcony; concrete main floor, partition of wood, millwork pine for paint, ceilings Compo boards or plaster, wainscotings plywood, box office and standee rail, wood and Tarso, combination blast heating system with extra capacity summer ventilating fans, well-water cooling, terrazzo or asphalt tile toilet room floors, rockwool and fabric for sidewalls (or compo patent boards), stock lighting fixtures, standard plumbing fixtures, BX electric wiring installation where permitted, no special stage lighting, "trick" decorative scheme, wood base throughout, stock millwork, stock display frames, steel frame wood joist construction, marquee with stock galvanized iron metal finish, buzzer system only, steel or transite projection room construction, rubber runners only, no draperies except single stage set and for box office, no drinking fountain.

The basic equipment and furnishings cost for the "100%" type would run to about $22,000, and to about $18,000 for the other.

In using these figures for general calculation, a variation of about 10%, up or down, should be taken into consideration to account for local and special building codes, and labor and material cost conditions.

Theatre seating 1,100 in a Middle Western city of 20,000 population.

By Robert Boller

I HAVE selected a theatre in a Middle Western city of 20,000 that I believe represents typical costs in that area. There are three theatres in this city, including the one under discussion, which was built this year.

The dimensions of the site are 48x125 feet. The building, which has a total cubic content of 240,000 cubic feet, includes two shops having a total area of 264 square feet.

The owners wished to obtain a capacity of 1,100 on a lot of a size and form imposing limitations, and later desired the addition of store area.

The plan is of typical central entrance type. Balcony is larger than usual owing to two-price policy and necessity of space for colored patrons; balcony accordingly is of easy access, with separate stairway for colored patrons. There is a mezzanine lounge 17x45 feet with toilet rooms adjacent. Another lounge, 13x30 feet, is provided for colored patrons. Basement contains air-conditioning and heating plant, and storage space. Lobby is shallow, 8 feet deep, and 23 feet wide; foyer is 14x36 feet, stage 15x36 feet.

The architecture is classic-moderne, with decorations carried out in blue, silver and gold, painted on plaster throughout the interior. Tile trim is used in lobby and lounges.

Construction: Foundations of reinforced concrete. Building has steel frame throughout. Retaining walls are brick cement-plastered on inside. Flooring is reinforced concrete on bar joists. Roof is of twenty-year built-up type on insulated steel decking; 4-inch rock wool insulation above ceiling. All lathing is metal. Partitions are of tile and gypsum block; Kalamein and tin-clad doors.

THE THEATRE for which the construction costs are itemized below, was designed for a California community of 10,000 population. The site measures 62 x 150. (See drawing for plan data.)

The theatre seats 850 on a single floor. The building contains 221,000 cubic feet, including two stores at the sides of the lobby amounting to 576 square feet. The

• With a population of only 2,700 and very ordinary economic resources, Barbourville, Ky., now has a theatre of original and impressive design, built by a father for his son

FROM THE ruins of a plain little theatre that had served the citizens and neighboring farmers of tiny Barbourville, Ky., for sixteen years, has risen another as different as original, sometimes curious, use of modern architectural devices could make it. Fire destroyed most of the first structure, built by Charles R. Mitchell in 1922. Called the National, it was the only theatre in Barbourville, which even now has a population scarcely more than 2,500, and was operated by Mr. Mitchell with the close assistance of his wife and, when the lad reached the ripe age of twelve, his son.

After the fire Mr. Mitchell began immediately on the construction of a new theatre, one that would be a Barbourville showplace in both meanings of the word. To the theatre in which he has sought to achieve that intention, he has given his family name, which is deep-rooted in the history of this Cumberland River region.

"Maybe this theatre won't pay as it should," Mr. Mitchell comments, "but I wanted to build a nice theatre and turn it over to my son Paul. It is written off the books."

The Mitchell theatre was constructed and decorated at a cost declared to be $25,000. It had been possible to salvage three brick walls, most of the stage end of the burned structure, boiler and steam pipes, and roof steel, as well as some of the equipment. Wages of both skilled and unskilled labor are low in Barbourville, and all the dimension lumber was supplied by local sawmills. Architects were B. F. Churchill & Son of Iola, Kans.

Construction and Facade

The building, which is 161 feet long and 40 feet wide, fronts on the principal business street, adjoining a store and apartment building, now under construction and also owned by Mr. Mitchell, all of this property occupying an entire block. The side of the block opposite that along which the theatre extends, it having a corner location, is on the town's Public Square, and here is also a developed entrance, with a V-shaped marquee and vertical sign with the word Theatre, leading into an arcade giving access to the vestibule at the theatre front (see drawing of plan scheme, and vestibule photograph, which shows arcade opening temporarily sealed pending completion of the passage.)

Construction is of brick and steel with exterior finish in white stucco throughout. Even the marquee, which does not extend to the sidewalk edge, is of stucco, which is laid on wooden framework suspended on steel rods concealed in rounded sections forming motifs of the design. The general architectural effect of the facade is attained by apparently overlaid planes above the marquee, which contributes its own forms to the scheme, by a vertical sign receding over the roof, and by the use of glass block "windows," in a projecting horizontal panel acting as an extension of the marquee, and in a vertical slightly recessed panel above the latter. Formed by Insulux structural glass, the lower panel, immediately above the front of small store area, supplies some light to the manager's office above the store space, but is also illuminated from behind by red and blue neon; the upper panel is chiefly decorative.

Insulux glass blocks are also used to form a box office at the right of the entrance area, extending from the vestibule into the lobby, with a ticket window in both. The lobby ticket window is for patrons coming through the arcade (see lobby photograph).

The vertical sign, of metal construction, is painted in four blending shades, from dark red at the bottom to orange at the top. Stamped metal letters spelling the name on either side are placed in front of red neon "stripes." The front fascia is decoratively lighted in blue neon. The marquee, carrying no attraction boards, is only decoratively lighted, red and blue neon being used.

Vestibule and Lobby

The soffit of the marquee is continuous with the vestibule ceiling, and vestibule walls are in the same white stucco finish. The only soffit-ceiling lighting consists in nine parallel neon tubes centrally extending toward the entrance doors, alternately white and gold. The doors are of cyprus

■ Barbourville, in the foothills of the Cumberland Mountains about 35 miles from the junction of the states of Kentucky, Virginia and Tennessee, was laid out in 1800. Following the trail blazed by Daniel Boone, settlers from the seaboard had come into this valley of the Cumberland River long before that. The Boone Trace itself ran hard by what was to be Barbourville, passing right by where Martha Lewis's gasoline filling station stands now. It ultimately brought James Barbour, after whom the town is named. Later came Robert Tyner Mitchell, Jr., an ancestor of the Charles R. Mitchell whose new theatre in Barbourville is here described.

Since 1800 the seat of Knox County, Kentucky, Barbourville, with a population now of only about 2,700, is supported principally by the trade of farmers, whose produce consists chiefly in swine, corn, potatoes and hay. A little trade is derived from the coal fields farther west, while a few wood products factories are located in the town. Barbourville tradesmen also benefit by the presence of Union College, which has about 400 men and women students; however, they are for the most part from families of very moderate means.

The nearest larger town is Corbin, located seventeen miles west of Barbourville. With a population of about 8,500, Corbin has two theatres, locally owned. Most Barbourville people, however, as well as the neighboring farmers, own automobiles.

Charles R. Mitchell was born in Barbourville, attending the public schools there and Union College. Learning the telegrapher's trade, he became the Barbourville station agent for the Louisville & Nashville railroad, and by 1932, when he retired, he had been in its service 22 years.

But it was ten years before that, in 1922, that he became a motion picture exhibitor. He built the National theatre, operating it with the help of Mrs. Mitchell. There was also a younger showman in the making, an only son, Paul, who finally became "assistant manager" when still just a lad. Graduated this year, at the age of eighteen, from a military school, he is attending business college in preparation to assume full charge of the new theatre. "He's been buying and booking pictures since he was twelve," relates his dad, "and I find he is also a good publicity man."

Charles Mitchell has other interests as well. One is a hotel, the Faulkner. He also operates several dwelling and commercial buildings in Barbourville, a coal company, and a dairy farm.

painted black and trimmed in chrome. Display frames, which are not illuminated, are also of black-painted, chrome-trimmed wood. The vestibule floor, which is continuous with the lobby floor, is laid in rust-colored tile.

Lobby walls and ceiling are in light and dark tones of brown, of plaster finish, the walls being divided into horizontal panels by chrome mouldings, the ceiling being given a "coffered" effect by use of stepped cornice. From the ceiling is suspended a panel from the center of which hangs a pendant fixture consisting in an opaque glass embraced by decorative forms made up of red neon tubing. Doors to the foyer are of pine, painted black, with chrome trim plates on the lobby side, chrome quarter-rounds on the foyer side.

The Foyer

The foyer, which is shallow but relatively high, is also finished in plaster, painted in light tones of brown, which at the walls form faintly distinguished bands following the general curvature of staircase balustrades. The staircases are dominant architectural features, there being one at the inner wall, crossing above the right aisle entrance and turning twice over the men's lounge to reach the right side of the balcony; and another at the outer wall similarly giving access to the left side of the balcony. The balustrades are of wood painted black and trimmed with chrome mouldings, nailed on.

The foyer is illuminated by a central pendant fixture consisting of a shallow metal, chrome-finished bowl above which is a vertical cluster of yellow neon tubes in a decorative pattern. Carpeting here, on stairs and in aisles, has light brown and red line and curve figures, forming an abstract modern pattern, against a dark brown ground.

Small lounges, with adjoining toilet rooms, open off the foyer. They are plastered and painted buff. Flooring is rust tile. Illumination is by small chrome and glass ceiling fixtures. Furnishings consist in metal chairs with leather upholstery, and circular mirrors.

The Auditorium

The auditorium, which seats approximately 500 on the main floor, and 300 in a balcony, is finished entirely in U. S. G. Weatherwood (a gypsum composition material, the characteristics of which include some capacity of absorbing sound). This is glued to the plaster walls in a horizontal panel formation, each panel being further divided into painted strips in differentiating shades of blue. Interrupting these panels, to form relatively square sections, are Weatherwood-finished blue-painted pilasters, which are H-posts supporting the steel roof trusses. Flanking the proscenium arch, the Weatherwood is laid in a series of narrow vertical planes ("silo" construction) to form projecting rounded cornices, painted blue, in which are grilled openings, one of which is a true air outlet, the other a false one effecting decorative balance. The proscenium arch is plastered and painted white, with chrome moulding along the inner edge. A series of steps lead up to the stage, which is fully equipped for stage shows.

It is the ceiling, however, which contributes the novel decorative scheme of this auditorium. Beginning at a point on either side midway between the projection room and the balcony parapet, and extending to within 15 feet of the proscenium wall, the ceiling is stepped in a horseshoe formation. There are three overlapping steppings, which embrace, at the proscenium, three concentric disc-like structures, of similarly stepped formation (different diameters). All of these structures, which are painted blue, are edged with strips in the same Weatherwood material, these strips, however, being painted aluminum and trimmed with 4-inch strips of Weatherwood, glued on and painted black. These edge pieces, rising above the "floor" of the steppings, conceal neon tubing, three to each stepping, and each line of tubing on a different color circuit—red, green and blue. There is still another such stepping, immediately ahead of the proscenium, which brings the total of these triple lines of concealed neon tubing to seven, and since the three colors available in each stepping can be combined variously to make seven different single tones of light, color effects possible throughout the ceiling reach a prodigious number.

The remainder of the ceiling, inside the steppings, likewise finished in Weatherwood, is painted blue. The balcony parapet fascia, in the same material, is also blue, with a wood railing along the top of it, painted black.

Balcony seating was salvaged from the National theatre fire, but the main floor has been newly seated by the American Seating Company with modern chairs having black veneer backs edged with aluminum, and spring-edge seats covered with blue leather. Row spacing is 32 inches.

Projection and Air Supply

The projection room (projection and sound equipment is that used in the National) is 14x40 feet. The floor is concrete painted brick red; walls are plaster painted buff. The screen image is 16 feet wide, projection angle 20°, distance from the screen to the first row 15 feet, to the last row approximately 80 feet.

The heating plant for the Mitchell is located in the basement of the adjoining apartment building, which was not damaged by the fire. This supplies steam to a large blast coil located in a room off one side of the stage. This supplies heated air to fan equipment connected with one of the grilles noted above, for heating the auditorium only. The lobby and foyer are heated by a gas-fired unit heater. An air washer is employed for summer cooling.

MARQUEE: Medium of Attraction

No Longer a canopy

● It was in the canopy—protection from the rain—that the marquee had its origin. Thus it harks back to the horse and buggy days, when the carriage drove up bringing milady to the theatre. A far cry from that era is the "canopy" of today, which has been developed by the theatre of this new era—the cinema. On this and the following page the function of the theatre marquee today, and how it serves it, is pictorially demonstrated by installations.

An example (at right) of the adaptation of the marquee form to an entrance that leads between the theatre building and another. An Artkraft installation, it is essentially an attraction medium, with green, red and blue neon illumination and silhouette attraction lettering. The theatre is the Governor in Somerset, Pa., operated by Blatt Brothers.

With the attraction function predominating over that of a mere "roof," the marquee has become more flexible, adapting itself without loss of effectiveness to such narrow entrances as in this Artkraft installation on the Ohio theatre in Norwood, Ohio, operated by the Willis Vance Circuit.

Demonstrating the old and new conception of the principal function of a marquee today: Comparative pictures at the right, showing in the inset the Parkdale theatre in suburban Toronto as its front originally was treated, and in the larger picture as remodeled by Kaplan & Sprachman, Toronto architects. The original entrance was a one-story box-like projection at the corner, the structure being 12 feet back from the street line. This set-back afforded the architects good conditions for developing advertising facilities, which take the form of attraction boards in two sets, both with Adler silhouette letters, a vertical sign, an illuminated clock, and decorative as well as functional lighting, in neon and lamps. The upper attraction boards are associated with the latter by neon ornamentation in four tones of red. Colored neon is also used for decoration where the upper attraction boards converge.

LIGHTING THE MARQUEE SOFFIT

● New developments in reflector devices and reflective metallic forms encourage departure from the arrangements which have become commonplace—merely rows of lamps screwed into sockets in a monotonous formation. Illustrated below are some of the new schemes suitable to soffit lighting. They were developed by the Nela Park engineering department of the General Electric Co.

Combination of exposed lamps and flush-mounted reflector units.

Curved corrugated polished metal soffit with lumiline lamps.

Large translucent panels bordered with exposed incandescent lamps.

Recessed trough cavity with V-shaped translucent elements.

Departing radically from conventional forms, this marquee tends to reduce the effectiveness of the attraction boards and makes little use of the resources of modern illumination. This, however, was somewhat advised by the nature of the residential community of Tulsa, Okla., in which the theatre, the Delman, is located. The theatre front is finished entirely in Carrara structural glass, in black, ivory and jade, with laminated insignia on the face of the box office. Porcelain enamel is used for the marquee, including the soffit, the extensions of which have flush-set lamps. The soffit behind the attraction board structure, sparingly lamped, is continuous with the vestibule ceiling. Attraction boards are of Wagner silhouette type, with metal surfaces in the colors used in the Carrara glass.

An example of the marquee that is essentially an attraction board, with brilliantly lighted opaque glass forming the background for black Adler cast aluminum letters, with attachment provisions for letters in three sizes. This installation is at the Hamid's Million Dollar Pier in Atlantic City.

Alternate row of regular lamps and lumiline lamps.

Flat corrugated polished metal backgrounds for exposed lamps.

Classes of Product and Their Manufacturers

ACOUSTICAL PRODUCTS AND ENGINEERING

ACOUSTICAL treatment for the motion picture theatre auditorium is often necessary, in some degree, and is properly to be taken into consideration in determining the decorative forms and materials. It is also possible to design the auditorium so as to provide suitable acoustical conditions without use of sound-absorption materials; however, to do this, acoustical engineering must participate in the planning of the auditorium both structurally and decoratively.

Acoustic materials are available not only to suit every acoustic defect, but to fit into most any decorative scheme, and to meet requirements as to labor costs under varying circumstances. Materials most frequently used are sound absorbent tiles, acoustic plaster, rock wool and similar products, while some wood and synthetic veneers possess certain sound-absorptive characteristics. Which to use partly depends on the natural acoustic characteristics of the auditorium (size, relative dimensions, and forms) and the decorative scheme desired.

Most manufacturers of acoustic materials can supply an acoustical analysis of an auditorium.

AIR-CONDITIONING and VENTILATING EQUIPMENT

METHODS of supplying air to the theatre may be divided into two general classifications—simple ventilation and air-conditioning.

Ventilation, as commonly referred to in the theatre, involves merely the supplying and exhausting of air. A ventilating system may therefore consist only in provisions for drawing fresh air into the building and, by means of fans, propelling it into the auditorium, and expelling it from the theatre by means of fans, with other parts of the theatre receiving air from the auditorium or directly from outdoors. To such a system, however, may be added a humidifier for winter use, or cooling apparatus such as a cold-water spray chamber for extra cooling in warm weather. In no case does a ventilation system mean air-conditioning.

Air-conditioning requires a positive method of distribution, usually ducts, and mechanical apparatus providing complete, automatic control of fresh air and return air mixtures with respect to temperature, motion and relative humidity. At least some measure of mechanical refrigeration is necessary, and for cold season air-conditioning, heating facilities are an integral part of the system.

Cooling of air in simple ventilation may be achieved in several ways. There are a few theatres in which a slight cooling effect has been attained by fans capable of introducing fresh air (with proper distribution arrangements) at extremely high velocity. Any kind of controlled positive cooling demands that air come in contact directly with a cooling agent, which may be either chemically refrigerated coils or water. Mechanical refrigeration is frequently used for cooling water and then the air brought in contact with the cold water. Where well water is available at a temperature not higher than 55°, this water may be used without mechanical refrigeration. How mechanical refrigeration may be applied depends upon local and State regulations, and its effectiveness depends upon the ability of the designing or application engineer.

Air Filters, consisting in a dust-collecting material such as paper, steel wool, or glass wool, or other type of fabric or mesh on rollers or fixed in a metal frame, are designed to filter dirt out of the air before the air is introduced into the theatre through the ventilating system. They are not only advised for the complete air-conditioning system, but are effective in connection with a simple ventilating system, except that the quantity of air handled in a simple ventilating system is usually so much greater than in an air-conditioning system that, because of space or cost limitations, the filtering of air becomes expensive. Dirty air of course represents a maintenance problem. Air filters, properly installed, minimize this problem.

Ventilating grilles, which are located at the wall openings of air ducts through which the air is introduced into or removed from the interior of the theatre, are to varying degrees ornamental and thus prevent these openings from being unsightly. A scientifically designed grille gives direction to the air flow, diffuses the air stream and regulates the quantity of air passing through. There is a type of air distributor designed for downward distribution which is particularly well adapted to incorporation with light sources.

AIR PURIFICATION: OZONE

OZONE is a specific, unstable form of oxygen which rapidly breaks down into the ordinary form, but in so doing produces oxidation (cold burning) of impurities in the air, especially those which are characterized by unpleasant odors, which for the most part are readily dispelled with oxidation. Ozone is also deadly to many forms of microbe life, and its use as a purifier therefore does not cover a disagreeable smell with a (theoretically) agreeable one, but chemically removes the impurities and causes of odor by converting them into different and innocuous chemical substances.

Ozone is produced by chemical action, ultra-violet rays, electric discharge, and a number of other means. Generators are available in various sizes, suited to lounges, toilet rooms or an entire theatre. Small units are inexpensive. Larger and more costly ones have blower and filter apparatus, while still others are designed for use in connection with central air-conditioning systems.

A minute percentage of ozone in the air produces a sense of physical exhilaration and well-being, since it is oxygen in a form very readily utilized.

AMPLIFYING TUBES

THESE ARE electronic relays in the amplifier of a sound reproducing system by means of which the weak electric currents created by a photocell, phonopickup or microphone, operate to control a stronger current, moulding it to an exact, but more powerful duplicate of the original. This process is continued through a train of tubes until a duplicate of the original sound current is obtained, which is strong enough to operate the loudspeakers.

ANEMOSTAT HIGH VELOCITY AIR DIFFUSER

The ultimate in theatre design is achieved when architect and engineer appreciate their respective problems and combine to attain functional beauty. The two most recent Trans-Lux Theatres in New York City are excellent examples of such collaboration.

Anemostats were specified in both theatres to provide draftless distribution of conditioned air and equalization of temperature.

The spun aluminum cones, strikingly modern in appearance, harmonize with the modern decorative treatment of the interiors.

The Anemostat illustrated here is set in a circular plaster plaque which is suspended from the center of a cove. This plaque conceals light members and reflectors which throw the light into the cove, resulting in a fine and unusual indirect lighting effect.

The ANEMOSTAT is an accepted scientific achievement. It has solved major problems of the Air Conditioning Industry by reducing the speed of air flow to such an extent that it is no longer perceptible as a draft and by mixing room air with conditioned air within the device. Its use, therefore, permits greater temperature differentials, smaller ducts, smaller plants, lower installation and operating costs. The ANEMOSTAT can be applied to existing systems as well as to new installations.

CARBONS, PROJECTION

MOTION PICTURE projection carbons are required for projection in most motion picture theatres (all except those using incandescent projection lamps).
The type and size of carbons required depends upon the type of arc, and in this connection the reader is referred to the several articles in The Buyers' Index on projection lamps.

CARBON SAVERS

THESE DEVICES, which permit use of carbons down to a very short stub, consist in a metal rod that is clamped into the carbon jaws of the lamp house, one end of the rod being provided with means for holding a stub of carbon that is too short for use in the normal way. There are several methods of attaching the stub to the carbon saver, some of them permitting use of the carbon down to one inch.

CARPETS

CARPETS for theatres are according to these qualifications:

1. Appearance, which should be in harmony with the general decorative scheme.
2. Durability. It has been found that because of the extreme wear to which theatre carpets are subjected, real economy is seldom effected by buying the cheaper grades.
3. Acoustic considerations—installation of carpet (or of heavier carpet) may aid in overcoming certain acoustical defects in an auditorium.

The standard weaves, in order of cost from the most to the least expensive are Chenille, Saxony, American Oriental, Wilton, Axminster, Velvet and Tapestry.

Velvet is the weave most widely used in motion picture theatres, since it combines good wearing qualities and attractiveness with relatively low initial cost. Wilton, which in its good grades is more definite in pattern and more durable than Velvet, is next in extent of usage, but it is somewhat higher-priced.

Padding under the carpet provides a softer and more comfortable footing; increases carpet life very materially by reducing friction and keeping the carpet out of direct contact with the floor; and improves sound absorbing properties, providing increased sound absorption per unit area.

CHAIR FASTENING CEMENT

THE METAL pieces to which theatre chairs are bolted are firmly fastened to the floor by special cement made for that purpose, which hardens in approximately ten minutes. In reseating a theatre, the old chair bolts are removed from the floor, and new ones inserted and re-cemented. (See Anchors for Chairs.)

CHAIR REFINISHING MATERIALS

AUDITORIUM chair seats and backs may be refinished without removing them from the chair frame. Materials may of course be any of those used for upholstery coverings.

Chair pads for veneer seats are obtainable, as are special chair materials which may help to correct poor acoustics in the atres having veneer chairs.

CHAIRS, THEATRE

CHAIRS AND general seating arrangements are chosen to provide the optimum compromise between six requirements; maximum seating, maximum comfort, facility of entrance and exit, proper sightlines, local building regulations, and acoustics.

Upon the last point, the ideal chair is one that has precisely the same sound absorption as the human body; in a theatre thus seated it is not necessary to adjust sound volume continually to variations in the size of the audience. Veneer chairs should never be used.

The importance of well designed chairs to the comfort of the theatre patron—and all possible comfort must be provided—advises careful selection of chairs in the first place, expertly supervised installation, constant maintenance and periodical reseating.
Much scientific research with respect to posture and materials has gone into the designing and production of modern theatre chairs, and a similar, painstaking attitude toward seating is indicated on the part of the theatre owner. It is to be noted that the average width of chair being used is greater than formerly. A width of 20 inches may be regarded as a minimum consistent with the present standards of comfort.

Chairs may be procured with full spring construction, or spring-edge seats, and with padded backs. Row end standards may be obtained in special designs to suit a particular decorative scheme. Coverings, of course, are always selected according to the interior treatment of the auditorium (see also articles in The Buyers' Index on *Chair
Refinishing Materials and Upholstering Materials*).

CHANGE MAKERS

OCCUPYING little space in the box office, modern change making machines prevent annoying errors in offering change to a patron and loss to the theatre through mistakes. The correct change is automatically determined upon manipulation of the proper keys, and is delivered into a metal cup, from which it is easily scooped. Not only greater accuracy, but greater speed in handling a line of patrons make change-makers more or less a box office requisite.

CHANGEOVERS

THESE electro-mechanical devices for switching in one projector, and its corresponding sound mechanism, while switching out the other, are obtainable in a number of models. All perform their synchronized operation at the touch of a button.

A changeover time indicator is available to supply a warning (bell) at any desirable time prior to changeover, without any connection with film or equipment, the device being essentially a clock with dial provisions for presetting the alarm according to cue.

FS Condensers are ground and highly polished to precision accuracy in curvature and focus. They will not discolor.

Available in extra-heat-resisting Pyrex Brand glass and also in regular glass.

FS Reflectors are accurately made for correct focus, individually tested before shipment, and protected by a heat-resisting refractory backing that is non-peeling. All FS quality optical goods are, of course, guaranteed to give satisfactory performance.

tenance of carpeting (proper maintenance of carpeting in theatres calls for vacuum-cleaning daily), while the vacuum method is also the most convenient as well as the most effective one for cleaning upholstery, drapes and other fabrics.

When carpeting loses its luster and resilience, shampooing will do much to restore these qualities. It is not necessary to remove the carpeting, for there are services which shampoo the carpet on the floor, employing special machines.

For vacuum-cleaning, heavy-duty machines are those most generally employed in theatres. Central vacuum systems, with pipes leading to various locations, are indicated only for very large theatres. Both types are frequently supplemented by small vacuum cleaners of the domestic type for use where other equipment cannot be conveniently applied.

CLOCKS, SHOW-TIME

A DEVICE greatly appreciated by patrons, particularly in shopping districts, consists in two clocks mounted for placement where they can be seen prior to purchase of tickets, with one clock giving the correct time, the other indicating what the time will be when the patron will have seen an entire performance.

For placement at the front of the box office, the clocks are mounted in a metal panel of attractive finish (a variety of colors are obtainable) that is weather-proof. The panel is also equipped with a placard for indication of the admission prices.

Such dual clock arrangements are also available for mounting on a portable rack for the display of stills or other advertising matter.

CONDENSERS (LENSES)

THE PROJECTION condenser is located between the lamp house and the projector, and serves to focus the light on the aperture. It serves a similar purpose in spotlight projection. The condenser is a single glass lens, unmounted, made in various shapes—moon shape, plano-convex, bi-convex and meniscus. The diameters of projection condensers range from 2¼ to 7¼ inches; of spotlight condensers, from 5 to 8 inches. Focal lengths for theatre work runs from 6½ to 9½ inches.

(These lenses should not be confused with electrical condensers, which are used in amplifiers and other portions of the sound equipment, and are not lenses, but pairs of conductors spaced by insulation and mounted in a suitable case.)

CURTAIN CONTROL MACHINES

SMOOTH AND silent opening and closing of curtains are effected, either from backstage or from the projection room, by automatic machines that operate at the touch of a button. The curtain may be stopped at any point along the stage, or its motion reversed as desired.

The equipment consists of a motor, a track and a cable, as well as snaps to which the curtain is fastened. The motor may be placed in the grids, which makes it possible to fly the entire mechanism, curtain and all. Special models for small theatres are available at relatively low cost.

EXPLOITATION cutouts for lobby and marquee displays are easily made by tracing the desired pattern on wall board and then guiding a cutout machine along the pattern. ## DIMMERS

THESE electro-mechanical devices for controlling stage and auditorium illumination permit fading out of any desired set of lights and fading in of others. They are necessary to the gradual changing of color tones in auditorium lighting, and to the production of stage lighting effects commonly desired; in addition, they are highly desirable for raising or lowering house lighting before and after performances.

Dimmers are available in a wide range of capacities and types, from small portable spotlight dimmers to multiple banks controlling a large number of circuits, interlocking and fitted with master controls.

DISPLAY FRAMES, POSTER

FRAMES for posters and stills, either for mounting on or recessing in the wall, are available in stock models and also may be (and commonly are today) obtained in special designs. They are most frequently of wood ornamentally tooled and painted, but chromium-plated and porcelain-enameled metal, certain synthetic materials available in colors, and stainless steel are also effectively used.

DRAIN PIPE CLEANERS

ONE OF THE problems of proper toilet room maintenance is readily solved by the use of conveniently applied drain pipe cleaners equal to the extreme conditions which may be met with in toilets and lavatories used by the public. Air pressure equipment is available especially designed for the cleaning of stopped-up drain pipes, the air being pumped into the cylinder of the device to a pressure of from 25 to 125 pounds, then released into the pipe through a nozzle, upon manipulation of a trigger.

EFFECT MACHINES

PATTERNS AND scenic effects with or without animation (such as moving clouds, flames, etc.) are ingeniously obtainable with these special light projection machines, essentially stereopticons, employing various types of effect slides and gelatines.

Backgrounds for stage shows, in color, can be projected and changed at pleasure, or the opening of a feature picture be framed in color or given a superimposed, changing pattern.

ELECTRICAL MEASURING INSTRUMENTS

THE DEPENDENCE of the modern theatre upon electricity, and the immensely varied and intricate apparatus used in the projection room, backstage and throughout the house, frequently advise having in the theatre measuring and testing equipment to assist the projectionist, stage electrician and maintenance engineer.

Voltmeters and ohmmeters are essential to finding most electrical troubles if the work is to be done with any reasonable speed. Ammeters, wattmeters, illuminometers, decibel meters and oscilloscopes are valuable adjuncts that pay for themselves in reducing current consumption, avoiding equipment breakdown, making possible faster repairs, and minimizing maintenance costs.

Combinations of most of these instruments are available; thus, a single instrument with suitable auxiliaries mounted on the same panel may serve as voltmeter, ammeter, ohmmeter and decibel meter. Such combinations may, in the latest equipment, be further combined with an oscilloscope.

EXPLOITATION MECHANISMS

VARIOUS DEVICES are available for the presentation of scenes from a current attraction or special advertising stills or motion pictures in the vestibule or lobby of the theatre, or in stores and other locations for which suitable arrangements can be made. The simplest type provides for the automatic display of a series of stills or advertising cards.

More impressive is the showing of motion pictures by means of an automatic projector mounted for the rear projection of 35-mm. trailers or other advertising films on a small screen. Such equipment may be obtained either with or without sound reproduction facilities.

FILM CABINETS

METAL FILM storage equipment is available in models ranging from cabinets on pedestals with fusible-link sprinkler protection and vent pipes, to single-reel holders which may be attached to each other as new holders are added, forming a unit. Available types also include cases of holders, making up units of from five to twelve single-reel compartments, each with its own door and variously designed to give convenient access to the reel wanted, and a high degree of protection from fire.

Separate stands are obtainable for film storage cabinets, designed to hold from one to several cabinets.

FIRE EXTINGUISHERS

THERE ARE several types of fire extinguishers suitable to theatres—the carbon tetrachloride extinguisher, the soda-and-acid mechanism, the foam type and the portable carbon dioxide hand type. They should be distributed throughout the theatre in accordance with the directions of fire department officials, care being taken that any extinguisher likely to be used in the presence of electrical apparatus is safe for that purpose, and not capable of electrocuting the man who uses it.

FIRE PREVENTION DEVICES, PROJECTOR

FIRE SHUTTERS, PROJECTION ROOM

FIREPROOF shutters for projection room ports isolate the projection room in an emergency (by melting of fusible links in case of fire), operating either automatically or manually. They minimize the chance of panic and lower insurance rates, and are practically always required in theatres by fire regulations.

A special switch is available for tripping the port shutters by electro-mechanical action, instead of by means of fusible links, and at the same time actuating an exhaust fan to draw the fumes into the projection room ventilation duct.

FLASHERS

THESE AUTOMATIC "switch" devices for interrupting intermittently the flow of current to light sources, supply attention-arresting animation to electrical displays that is commonly desirable for marquee decorative schemes and exterior signs, and especially so when the theatre front has to compete with electrical displays immediately surrounding it.

There are three principal types of flashers: drum type (which has been generally superseded by the following later types), mercury contact type (which was found to be especially effective for marquee and sign travelling borders), and the induction disc type, which is regarded as readily adaptable to any type of display.

COMPOSITION flooring materials based on cork or rubber, in association with suitable gums, are well adapted to vestibules, lobbies and toilet rooms, being available today in types and patterns taking them out of the class of ordinary linoleum. Composition surfacing, preferably in a solid "battleship gray," is specifically recommended for the projection room.

FOUNTAINS

ORNAMENTAL fountains are sold as units for installation in lobby, foyer or lounge, alone or in conjunction with statuary. Drinking fountains are offered in plain and decorative types, recessed or pedestal.

Two types of automatic drinking fountains are available; one operating by means of a photocell (the head of the person stooping to drink interrupts a beam of light, which interruption actuates the water valve); the other operates upon the principle of electrical capacitance, the approach of a human head upsetting the balance of a critical electrical circuit, and thus actuating the water valve.

FURNITURE, LOBBY AND LOUNGE

CHAIRS, SOFAS and tables of durable materials, suitable to the hard use of the theatre lounge, lobby and foyer, can be had to match any decorative background.

Metal furniture that is entirely comfortable, yet easily and inexpensively maintained, is especially indicated where a modern interior design suggests its use. Coverings may be obtained in many fabrics, designs and colors, and in imitation leather.

Chairs and sofas of wood construction and the simple lines of modern styles are regarded as sufficiently durable for most theatres when fully upholstered with tough coverings, such as ribbed and heringbone fabrics, mohair pile, friezé and (chiefly in men's lounges and lobbies) imitation leather of good grades.

HEARING AIDS

THESE RECEIVING instruments (phones) either of air conduction or bone conduction type, to assist patrons whose hearing is impaired, may be regarded as standard equipment for motion picture theatres today, with from five to ten outlets (two seats served by one outlet) usually considered sufficient. The receivers are plugged into suitable outlet boxes permanently mounted and wired in selected seating locations. Individual volume controls which the patrons can adjust at will, may be provided either on the outlet boxes or on the cord leading to the receiver.

Sound may be taken from the main theatre system, either directly or through an auxiliary amplifier, or may be picked up via microphone from the screen speakers and passed through a low-power amplifier that is part of the hearing aid system. Because of the relatively large number of people who do not hear well, and their varied influence on theatre attendance, group hearing aids are to be regarded as regular equipment for the motion picture theatre.

HEATING SYSTEMS AND ACCESSORIES

HEATING SYSTEMS used in the theatre present different requirements from those of other public buildings because of the concentration of occupants in the auditorium, and the wide variation in the number that may be present at any given time.

Heat distributing systems are of two general kinds, those using standard steam radiators and those circulating masses of warmed air through a ventilating system. The latter may of course be part of a complete air conditioning system, and must be so operated for cold season air-conditioning (See Air-Conditioning).

Oil and gas are preferable as the fuel where automatic control is provided in the system. With coal, automatic stokers reduce labor and insure efficient use of fuel.

HORN LIFTS AND HORN TOWERS

SOUND HORNS or speaker combinations may be struck to make room for stage performances by a number of means, of which one is the horn lift. When the stage is in use, the horns are concealed beneath it. When the screen is in use, an elevator working on hydraulic, drum and cable, or screw principle, lifts a portion of the stage with whatever setup may be on it toward the grid; the horns or speakers follow, rising until they are in correct position behind the screen.

Horn towers are steel structures on

INTERIOR DECORATION

THEATRE DECORATION has evolved into a specialized branch of interior decoration. For at least the finer work, designers and artisans should have had considerable understanding of the functional peculiarities of all divisions of the theatre, and be experienced in the decorating methods advised by illumination factors, acoustics, advertising, projection optics, etc.

LAMPS, HIGH-INTENSITY

PROJECTION ARCS of high-intensity characteristics for operation on direct current are of two general classes—condenser and reflector types. The high-intensity reflector types in turn are divided into two classes—the type generally known as Hi-lo, and the so-called low-voltage high-intensity arc. The Hi-lo type may be regarded technologically today as having been superseded (except for existing installations) by the low-voltage high-intensity arc, which employs a relatively new type of copper-coated carbon of small diameter and with a core of rare-earth elements, and is further distinguished by the horizontal position of both carbons and non-rotation of the positive.

Development of the low-voltage high-intensity projection arc has brought to the small as well as the medium-sized theatre, as a result of its moderate operating cost, screen illumination of a quality equal to that of the larger theatre using condenser type high-intensity equipment operated at 120-130 amperes and 65-70 volts.

Low-voltage high-intensity arc are operated at currents ranging from 35 to 65 amperes, and 31 to 40 volts at the arc. Carbon combinations are 6 mm. positive, 5 mm. negative for from 35 to 40 amperes; 7 mm. positive, 6 mm. negative for from 42 to 50 amperes; and 8 mm. positive, 6.5 or 7 mm. negative for from 56 to 65 amperes.

LAMPS, INCANDESCENT FOR PROJECTION

INCANDESCENT lamps for theatre motion picture projection are characterized by a high degree of source concentration and relatively high wattage. The most effective lamp for this purpose—namely, the 2,100-watt, 60-volt T-24 bulb lamp—is designed for lower voltage to secure additional source concentration. Hence a transformer with voltage-regulating characteristics is required. This lamp provides relatively acceptable illumination on screens up to 16 feet wide and throws not to exceed 100 feet.

There are also available 1,000-watt pre-focus base, and 1,500-watt bipost base, 100-120 volt, T-20 bulb lamps employing the biplane filament construction. This construction makes possible relatively high source concentration for lamps operating at ordinary circuit voltages and thus saves the cost of auxiliary apparatus.

The 1,000- and 1,500-watt lamps are frequently employed in projectors of the semi-portable type.

For portable 35-mm. motion picture projectors there are the 500-watt monoplane-filament, and the 750-watt and 1,000-watt biplane filament lamps in T-20 bulbs with medium-prefocus bases. The 750-watt and 1,000-watt lamps require forced ventilation.

A newer type of 1,000-watt projection lamp is designed to burn base down and as a result of a new method of internal construction and of burning the filaments at higher temperature the lamp increases by 50% the light available from incandescent sources of this wattage. Because it maintains screen illumination at so high a percentage of the original intensity, this lamp does not require the inclusion of anti-blackening electric grids in the internal construction.

For stereopticon projectors there are the 500-watt short T-20, medium-prefocus base projection lamp, and the 1,000-watt long T-20 bulb, mogul-prefocus base lamp. Both are of the 100-120-volt type and employ monoplane filaments.

LAMPS, INCANDESCENT FOR THEATRE LIGHTING

GENERAL SERVICE lamps—available in sizes from 15 to 1,500 watts—serve the majority of lighting applications in and around theatres. Except for the tubular bulb bipost lamps, all are designed for burning in any position; all are available with inside-frosted finish to diffuse the light, to eliminate filament striations, and to produce a smoother lighting effect. The frosting absorbs little light—in fact, inside-frosted and clear lamps (clear lamps are regularly available in sizes above 100 watts) have the same rating in light output.

Inside-colored lamps for sign and decorative service: The general service lamps mentioned above are suitable for enclosed lamp signs and luminous displays where protected from rain and snow. For outdoor exposed applications, a line of vacuum lamps from 6 to 50 watts is available in frosted and inside-colored types, which are intended principally for use where the lamps themselves are visible and form the pattern of the display. Natural-colored lamps, available in four sizes and four standard colors, are more expensive than coated lamps, but produce colored light at a higher efficiency.

Outside-colored lamps: Several sizes of outside-colored lamps are also listed in round and flame-shaped bulbs adapted to many decorative and ornamental fixtures. They are not recommended for outdoor use.

Lumiline lamps: Available in colors and in 30 and 60 watts (length 17¾ inches) and 40 watts (length 11¾ inches), these tubular lamps have, by their physical shape, introduced new concepts of decorative lighting design. They may be used exposed or in narrow reflecting and shielding equipment. The outside-coated lamps are not recommended for exposed outdoor use. The standard colors are delicate pastel shades in white, straw, orange, moonlight blue, emerald and surprise pink.

Fluorescent lumiline lamps: These are much more efficient than the filament-type lumiline lamps, and are particularly recommended for color lighting, since the color is not created by the glass of the bulb, but in the light itself. The lamp is of the electric discharge type, using mercury vapor as the medium for sustaining the arc. Ultra-violet radiation is produced in the tube, which acts upon certain chemicals (the nature of which varies according to the color or tone of white light desired) with which the interior of the bulb has been treated. The reaction of the chemical to the electronic bombardment produces visible light. These lamps are available in three lengths—18, 24 and 36 inches, and in two diameters. Being arc lamps, they require a special control unit. Nominal wattages in which the lamps are available are 15, 20, and 30.

Reflector incandescent lamps: These are of a special type adapted to display lighting, having a pressed glass reflector and light-redirec-ting cover lens as part of a funnel-shaped bulb. It is available with two types of cover lenses, one for wide beam, the other for narrow. It fits the conventional socket.

LAMPS, LOW-INTENSITY

LOW-INTENSITY projection lamps are reflector type projection light sources operated at from 15 to 42 amperes. The low-intensity arc is relatively inexpensive in both carbon and operating cost and produces illumination which has been regarded as sufficient in intensity for small theatres, but crater burning characteristics are such that the light has a yellow tint, instead of being the snow-white light produced by high-intensity type arcs. In fact, a high-intensity arc may be regarded as necessary to the satisfactory projection of color films in theatres.

LENSES, PROJECTION

THERE ARE two general classes—the condenser lens, which focuses the projection light on the aperture (See Condensers); and the objectives. The latter are commonly referred to as the projection lenses; they focus the light upon the screen. They are made in four standard diameters, with focal length as determined by the size of the screen image desired, and its distance from the projector.

Knowing these factors, the supply dealer or the lens manufacturer readily determines the focal length required. In ordering projection lenses, one should also name the type of light source, projection angle and the make and model of the projector.

Stock focal lengths are usually in quarter sizes from 3 to 7 inches, 7½ and 8 inches.

LETTERS, ATTRACTION BOARD

CHANGEABLE sign letters permit rapid change of marquee advertising. Such letters have been made of various metals and compositions as well as glass. Usually, however, they are either of cast metal or glass. Glass letters are commonly in panel form, with the letter translucent (opal glass) and the surrounding panel area opaque.

The so-called silhouette marquee letter has generally supplanted other types in attraction boards. It reverses the visual character of the glass translucent letter, being itself opaque, while the surrounding area is illuminated. The silhouette letter is of cast metal and is attached readily to rods or wires in front of translucent glass panels, which latter cover a metal lamp box. The lamp box fits into the structure of the marquee so as to be integral with it.

LIGHTS, SPOT AND FLOOD

ARC AND incandescent lamps are available for use on the stage, in the projection room, in coves, and in banks of incandescents that flood the stage from the wings. Arc lamps will burn from 25 to 140 amperes, and incandescents up to 2,000 watts. Most spotlights can be used for full flood as well. Spot and floodlights of incandescent type are designed for wattages of from about 75 to 2,000.

MACHINES, TICKET

AUTOMATICALLY registering ticket dispensers facilitate the handling of box office peaks, and impart the impression of efficiency, cleanliness and business-like methods; they eliminate all excuses for errors on the part of the cashier (some type of dispensers make the usual errors impossible); and they may be regarded as necessary to any real assurance that box office losses are not occurring through cashier-doorman collusion. They are obtainable in motor-driven and manually operated types.

Also available is a ticket dispenser which automatically prints the ticket as it is issued. This mechanism is loaded only with blank rolls of paper tape, and the printed ticket bears both the number of the ticket and the date.

Automatic ticket dispensers are obtainable with from two to five ticket channels, each issuing mechanism being a unit so that

IN the United States of America last year more than 90,000,000 people attended motion picture theatres weekly. You can imagine how long it would have taken to dispense 90,000,000 tickets weekly at the box offices if the nation's leading theatres were not provided with ticket issuing machines.

Theatres equipped with General Register ticket issuing machines not only control their cash but also handle efficiently hundreds of patrons lined up at the box offices.

If you want to operate your theatre in the same efficient manner and protect your interest, write to us for further information or get in touch with our authorized dealer in your territory.

TODAY'S AUDIENCES ARE MORE CRITICAL

The present extent of amateur photography has contributed toward making theatre audiences more critical of projection quality. Flatness of field, aberration, color fringe, etc., are terms that are familiar to a growing percentage of your audiences.

Their opinions are passed on to others. That is one reason among many why so many theatre owners are installing B. & L. Super-Cinephor Projection Lenses.

MARQUEES

A MARQUEE is to be regarded as essential to the motion picture theatre. There are exceptions, due to location and form of building, but not many. Its function as a means of protection for patrons from rain and snow has become of less importance than its function as an advertising medium. It advertises the theatre and the program, by distinguishing the building from other commercial establishments on the street, by the theatricalism of its lighting, by announcing the features of the performance.

Marquees today have become more closely associated with the general architectural form of the theatre front than they originally were. They are frequently constructed according to specifications supplied by the architect, who has designed the marquee itself, along with other display and sign elements of the front, as a part of the facade.

Another later development is unit construction of marquees, providing prefabricated marquees to fit most any theatre entrance, complete with all attraction board equipment, and also with theatre name sign (vertical or otherwise), if desired.

Most marquees have been rectangular in shape, but because the greatest amount of announcement space on such marquees cannot be read up and down the street, particularly on the side on which the theatre is located, other shapes have come into vogue, notably one combining rectangular with triangular forms.

Marquees are generally of sheet metal construction, with soffits of metal or glass illuminated by incandescent lamps or lighting troughs. There are, of course, many variations in pattern and illumination; however, the design should provide for attraction boards as integral parts of the structure.

MICROPHONES

THE THEATRE has many uses for microphones, from ballyhoo work on a sound truck, or in connection with the front display, to reinforcement of stage performances, announcements of election returns and sporting events, or emergency talks to pacify an audience in time of trouble. Microphones can be used with separate amplifying and loudspeaker equipment, or can in most cases be operated through the existing sound installation.

The early type of carbon granule microphone has been almost completely replaced by later and superior instruments, the crystal and magnetic microphones. The condenser microphone used in early sound recording, while less favored today, is still decidedly advantageous to meet certain conditions of stage pickup. The crystal microphone, and the various types of magnetic microphone (velocity dynamic) have come into general application to theatre uses.

MOTOR-GENERATORS

MOTOR-GENERATORS for converting alternating current line power to direct current are available in a variety of types suited to the requirements of any type of motion picture projection arc alone, or also to spotlights and effect projectors.

They are used in some instances for sound power supply, and where more than one source line is wired to a theatre, for emergency power conversion in the event one line should fail.

PHOTOELECTRIC CELLS

ALTHOUGH IT has a number of applications in many fields, in the theatre the photoelectric cell functions principally as a vital "organ" of the sound reproduction system, transforming the light of the exciter lamp, after it has passed through the sound track of the film, into the electrical energy which, amplified, actuates the loudspeakers.

Some few equipments require photoelectric cells of a certain type differing from the type generally used, and in ordering it is well to specify the make and model of the soundhead.

PROJECTOR PARTS

THE WEAR to which projectors are subjected requires close observation of all parts and prompt replacement or repair before any that have become defective injure others that must work with them. It is also to be borne in mind that mechanical faults in the projector are usually "picked up" by the sound system.

PROJECTORS, STANDARD THEATRE

PROJECTORS HERE referred to are the standard non-portable 35-millimeter projectors designed for permanent installation in theatres. In addition to the regular large types, smaller, more compact and somewhat simplified projectors are also adapted to permanent installation in some classes of small theatres not requiring heavy-duty service, are also available (See Portable Projectors).

Pedestals, which are sold separately from the projector mechanism, are adapted to installation of any standard type of lamp-house.

PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEMS

PUBLIC ADDRESS and sound-re-enforcement systems may provide any one or all of various services. They can be designed for amplifying stage sound, for managers' announcements, for ballyhoo.

In the theatre the public address system may consist of microphones suitably connected to the standard sound installation, or an entirely separate system, with its own amplification, wiring and also speakers, may be employed. Hearing aids may be used in association with any type of theatre public address reproduction.

RECTIFIER TUBES

GAS-FILLED tubes used to convert alternating current to direct current are made in many ratings. The smaller sizes are commonly thought of as being in the category of radio or amplifier tubes. But while there is no distinction in principle of operation, the larger sizes, having current capacities of from 2½ to 30 amperes, are by custom classified separately.

They are often described by their best-known trade name as "Tungar" tubes. In the theatre such tubes are used to provide rectified direct current to arc lamps and to sound exciter lamps. Where storage batteries are used, they function in the battery charger.

RECTIFIERS AND POWER UNITS

RECTIFIERS are devices that employ rectifying tubes or copper compound rectifying assemblies (dry type) for the purpose of converting alternating current to direct current. The larger sizes are fan-cooled, and supply direct current to the projection arc.

The smaller sizes are of somewhat different design electrically, incorporating electrical filters to insure smooth d.c. output, and to supply power to exciter lamps, speaker fields, tube filaments and other parts of the sound system.

REELS

REELS NECESSARY for takeup magazines of projectors and also otherwise constantly utilized in the projection room, are available in a number of sizes and types of construction. The standard reel in the United States (since September 1, 1936) has a diameter of 14½ inches, and a 4½-inch hub for the accommodation of the film lengths up to 2,000 feet. Reels are also available in the former American standard size (diameter 10 inches, hub 2 inches) while another available size adapted to the standard American film length of 2,000 feet has a diameter of 15 inches. (See Takeup, Film.)

Some reels have embossed sides, some wire welded or die cast sides, and while a particularly flexible reel (resisting so-called "dishing") has tempered band spokes and rims and is available for both 35-mm. and 16-mm. film in the 15-inch size.

REFLECTORS FOR INCANDESCENT LAMPS

METAL RECEPTACLES for incandescent lamps, having a reflecting inside finish and with a curvature calculated to make most efficient use of available light, are obtainable in several types adapted particularly to marquee trim and soffit lighting, to sign letter lamping, sign borders and similar uses.

There are several types and sizes of reflectors designed for low-wattage lamps, equipped with a glass roundel, or cover, which not only protects the lamp and reflector, but provides color if desired without use of colored lamps.

Other types of reflectors have swivel mounting, readily permitting reflection of the light in any direction.

REFLECTORS, PROJECTION ARC

THESE ARE made in numerous sizes, and with different curvatures, spherical and parabolic, for mazda projectors, reflecting arc projectors and spotlight projectors.

In addition to reflectors made of optical glass, a metal type of reflector is now available.

REFLECTOR SHIELDS

GLASS SHIELDS, or guards, are obtainable for the protection of reflector arc mirrors against pitting (which is produced to a relatively pronounced degree by the low-voltage high-intensity arc). The shields themselves are pitted in the course of operation, but since they are much less expensive than reflectors, their use reduces maintenance costs.

REWINDERS, FILM

FILM REWINDERS are available in two general types, open and fireproof enclosed. The open type is offered in a number of different models, either as a single unit or as two separate units that are clamped to the work bench, or bolted in place. The enclosed type is a single unit.

Both open and enclosed types may be hand-driven or motor-driven, may have sleeve bearings or ball bearings, may accommodate either 1,000- or 2,000-foot reels, or both, and may have either one or several driving speeds.

Some of the motor-driven types incorporate accessories by means of which the same motor can be used for general machine work, such as grinding and polishing.

RHEOSTATS

THESE ARE devices that introduce an electrical resistance into any circuit, the value of the resistance being variable at will. There are several methods of varying resistance, one being to move a contact lever over a series of switch points, one being to move a slider over the coil of the resistance wire itself, and one being to compress carbon or graphite discs or powder.

Rheostats may be very large in size, suited to operation in the projection arc circuit, or extremely small for use in certain sound circuits. They are rated according to the range of resistances available, and the current or wattage with which they can safely be used.

SCREENS

THEATRE SCREENS of the types generally regarded as suitable for theatres are classified according to construction, surface and reflective characteristics. Four general types are available—solid, porous, perforated (consistently perforated to all edges), variably perforated (perforated only at speaker area), and translucent (the latter for rear projection).

Surfaces (except for the translucent screen) may be diffusive or specular. The latter is specified for narrow, relatively deep auditoriums since the light is concentrated upon seats directly in front of the screen. Wider theatres must use a semi-diffusive or highly diffusive type. In surface treatment screens are white, silver ("metallic") or beaded (glass). Specular screens have either of the latter two types of surface.

SCREEN RESURFACING

PAINT FOR resurfacing motion picture screens is available in flat white and metallic types, adapted to fabric screens of diffusive type. Although no resurfacing material can restore the original reflective capacity of a screen, paint of proper mix and pigmentation can effect some improvement if applied with sufficient expertness to insure uniformity of surface.

In resurfacing perforated screens, care must be taken to prevent reduction of the diameter of sound transmission perforations, and also appreciable increase in the thickness of the screen.

SIGNS (ELECTRIC) FOR THEATRE NAME

ELECTRIC SIGNS (metal framework with illumination provisions) are available in a wide variety of designs more or less closely associated with the architecture of the theatre front. While they are commonly especially designed by the architect or sign construction company, there are also stock designs adaptable to the theatre front. Gas tube (neon) and incandescent lamp illumination has been found effective for these signs in combination as well as alone, and either type of lighting can be flashed.

Horizontal name signs have normally been more closely associated with the marquee than the vertical sign has, but often the vertical sign can be effectively related to the marquee and entrance by continuing the sign illumination scheme down to the marquee and even across its soffit. It is to be noted that a prefabricated type of marquee is available complete with theatre name signs either vertical or horizontal and all electrical facilities.

DIRECTIONAL SIGNS, including exit signs, those designating men's and women's rooms, lounges, balcony stairs, etc., are now available in a wide range of stock designs, while they may be made up in special designs at relatively low cost. Instead of being more or less confined to plain metal lamp boxes, such as were particularly employed at one time for exit signs, stock types now are obtainable with decorative shapes, fluted chromium finish, etched glass, etc., in colors and also with appropriate figures.

SLIDES, PROJECTION

SLIDES FOR the projection of song lyrics, advertising and effects are made either of glass or other material suitably transparent. The more elaborate slides, carrying pictorial matter or designs, are usually of glass, while a flexible transparent material permits the ready preparation of an announcement slide on a type-writer, the blank material being kept on hand and, when written upon, inserted into a frame.

SOUND EQUIPMENT, COMPLETE

SOUND SYSTEMS have followed a steady evolution toward simplicity and compactness since their first introduction. Only the larger theatres now use sound power supplies dissociated from the sound amplifier; in smaller equipment the two commonly constitute a single unit, or at most two units in a single compact cabinet. The majority of modern systems consist of a single amplifier-power supply unit, two sound heads, and suitable loudspeaker assembly.

More elaborate apparatus may include an amplifier rack mounting decibel meter and other accessories, and an emergency amplifier.

SPEAKERS AND HORNS

TO CONVERT the electrical product of amplification into audible sound, speaker "units" are available in considerable variety. The practice now is to use several types of speakers to reproduce selected bands of sound frequencies.

Speakers are available in a.c. types, in a great variety of d.c. types, and in the new permanent magnet types that need no field excitation.

Baffles are required with every speaker. The simplest is flat board, behind which the speaker is mounted, large enough to provide baffling for the lowest frequency to be reproduced. In many auditoriums, however, proper distribution of sound cannot be secured without directional baffles, or trumpets, to point the sound toward locations otherwise "dead" and away from locations where it is not desired, particularly reflecting surfaces likely to cause echo or excessive reverberation. Directional trumpets or baffles are now also used for high-frequency speakers or tweeters, clusters of small trumpets operated by a single tweeter being favored. These arrangements secure better distribution of the high frequencies, which have a normal tendency to travel in straight lines, over-supplying some seats and missing many others entirely. Clusters of directional baffles applied to the tweeters correct this tendency.

UPHOLSTERING MATERIALS

MANUFACTURERS of auditorium seating, and furniture for lobbies, foyers and lounges can supply upholstery coverings in a great variety of materials, patterns and colors, but the hard usage such furnishings normally get in the theatre makes durability a prime consideration.

Among the better fabrics suited to auditorium chairs are mohair (which is obtainable in the low-pile type used in automobiles, as well as in luxurious deep piles) and velour. Imitation leather (which, as produced today, is indistinguishable from real leather to most people) is also well adapted to auditorium chairs. It is also suited to other theatre furniture, particularly that in men's lounges, although in white or gay colors it has been effectively employed for women's lounges as well.

Wool weaves in colorful patterns, rayon and damask are among upholstery coverings well suited to lobby, foyer and lounge furniture.

The Advantages of All-Year Air-Conditioning in Theatres

● Patron comfort in winter is more than a matter of heating—and there are depreciation and fuel cost factors also advising winter air-conditioning

By CARL F. BOESTER

MANY THEATRE owners look upon air-conditioning simply as a means for cooling their theatres in summer, too few realizing that the term air-conditioning is applicable to year-round patron comfort and embraces winter heating as well as summer cooling. An ideal theatre air-conditioning system performs the following functions:

In summer the air is filtered, cooled, dehumidified and circulated; in winter the air is filtered, heated, humidified and circulated. Unless each of these functions is performed at the appropriate season of the year, the system does not provide true air-conditioning at all times.

Effect on Fuel Cost

The advantages which result from the installation of this type of real air-conditioning are numerous. In the first place, theatre owners should appreciate the fact that by considering their winter heating problem in connection with air-conditioning, they will lower their fuel costs substantially. Properly designed, the equipment should effect as much as a 30% saving in fuel cost as compared with ordinary heating methods. This percentage holds true regardless of the type of fuel burned, whether coal, oil or gas, because of the many improvements developed in the types of equipment specifically designed for burning particular fuels.

Therefore, it is a mistake to consider the purchase of summer equipment alone simply because the theatre has been reasonably heated in the past. In many cases the difference in fuel burning efficiency of present day equipment, as compared with that installed a few years ago, is sound justification for "junking" an existing heating system. An additional consideration is the fact that engineering installation practice is so much better today than it was at the time many existing plants were installed, that considerable saving is possible by careful attention to the application engineering of the new installation.

Elimination of Wasted Heat

A well designed system offers further economy in heating by preventing a loss of heat in spaces where it is not needed, such as the domes of theatres having high ceilings, unused areas backstage, etc. An engineer in designing an air-conditioning system for summer comfort is very careful to make sure that refrigerated air is not delivered in spaces where it is unnecessary, such as just described. Therefore, since the heated air is delivered through the same air distributing system, heating economy is thus made possible.

Other Winter Ventilation Factors

Modern automatic controls are also heat savers by preventing overheating, yet at the same time eliminating customer complaints about underheating.

Proper filtering of the air circulated in the conditioned areas is decidedly desirable, both to the patron and the owner. To the patron it means that the air he breathes is easy on his nose and throat; to the owner it means that cleaning, painting and re-decorating costs are greatly reduced.

Adequate ventilation is also a desirable feature, and in many states required by law. There is no question but that it is possible to increase theatre patronage by paying particular attention to keeping the theatre free from odors. An astonishing number of people purposely stay away from certain theatres because of the disagreeable odors, the continued breathing of which is conducive to severe headaches.

Importance of Humidity Control in Winter

THE MATTER of humidification in the winter time is of great importance. Since the air at this time of the year contains very little moisture, it is necessary to add water to the air in the conditioned area. This prevents a drying out of the nose and throat passages of patrons. When an individual has a dry nose and throat, he is quite conscious of the condition of the air and does not feel comfortable. Furthermore, the nose and throat passages, when dry, are subject to irritation from cold and other disease germs. By adding a small amount of moisture to the air, this difficulty is easily overcome.

But of particular importance to the theatre operator in the humidification of the air in the winter time, is the fact that it is possible to carry a much lower temperature in the theatre and thus contribute materially to the saving in fuel required to heat the conditioned area. Humidity and air temperature are of equal importance in the resulting degree of comfort experienced by people in the conditioned area. As we have just pointed out, by carrying a high humidity in the winter time, a much lower temperature can be maintained. On the other hand, if the air is quite dry, the air temperature will have to be from 4° to 6° higher to provide comparable warmth.

For example, an individual does not feel any warmer with a temperature of 72° and a relative humidity of 20% than he does with a temperature of 66° with a relative humidity of 80%. However, it is not recommended that as high a relative humidity as 80% be maintained in winter, primarily for the reason that the walls and other parts of the building, whose temperature may be affected by outside temperature conditions, would be such as to cause sweating.

In other words, if the outside temperature were very cold and the air inside very moist, there would be a tendency to condense a certain amount of moisture from the inside air on the walls. This, of course, is not good for paint, draperies, etc. If the walls of the theatre were well insulated, or of approximately the same temperature as the air in the room, or if the theatre is located where outside temperature conditions do not become severe, then an 80% relative humidity would be permissible. For the average theatre an inside relative humidity in the winter time of 40% to 60%, with a temperature of from 72° to 76°, is very comfortable and is recommended. But even this is recommended only for theatres. It would not be practical in stores or houses because it would cause moisture to condense on cold, uninsulated windows.

Types and Costs Of Winter Systems

IN GIVING serious consideration to the purchase and installation of a complete year-round air-conditioning system, it is of utmost importance to consider the type of equipment that will permit the circulation of water through fin coils, over which the conditioned air is circulated. Any of the following methods utilize this principle.

If the summer cooling system employs well water, this water is, of course, circulated through the coils. Another method is to purchase ice, reducing this to ice water and circulating it through the coils. A third method would be to have the water chilled by a direct expansion shell and tube cooler. A fourth method is to withdraw chilled water from an ice storage unit in which ice is accumulated on coils submerged in an insulated tank of water. A fifth source of chilled water would be from the flash chamber of a steam jet cooling unit.

By having any of these types of summer cooling apparatus, winter heating and complete air-conditioning is made quite easy, for it then becomes only a matter of installing a hot water boiler, and of cross-connecting the water circulating pump between the boiler and the source of supply of chilled water. For a typical 800-seat house, the expense in addition to the summer cooling system for, say, an oil burning boiler, is about $600. This includes the boiler, oil burner, oil tank and installation. Hence, not much increase in business is needed to amortize the investment in such a complete conditioning system, and the marked increase in patron comfort should bring it.

Humidification Equipment

For winter humidification, one or two humidifying nozzles, depending upon the size of the installation, should be placed in the path of the air stream. These humidifying nozzles are connected to the city water line, in which line is installed a magnetic valve controlled by a humidistat in the conditioned space. The cost of this equipment is trivial in comparison with the results obtained. The humidifying apparatus, installed, should not exceed $50 to $75. The same fans, air distributing ducts, fin coils and air filters which are used in the summer cooling cycle are used to provide the additional winter comfort.

Differential Control Apparatus

To further improve the year-round air-conditioning system it is now possible to control the temperature inside according to outside temperature conditions, for several devices are now on the market which will maintain a definite differential between inside and outside temperature conditions. In summer, patrons often complain about the theatre being entirely too cold in relation to the outside temperature. Likewise, in the winter time, many people have felt that the inside temperature was entirely too warm, and in some cases that it was entirely too cold, for the outside temperature condition. The control operates in this way:

In summer, if the theatre manager wishes to maintain a certain difference—for example, 15°—between inside and outside temperature, this control will see to it that the 15° difference is maintained; in winter, the control maintains a constant temperature regardless of falling or rising outside temperatures. It is impossible, with this control, to overheat the building and thus waste fuel.

Every theatre owner considering the purchase of summer equipment alone, or already having summer equipment of the types mentioned, owes it to himself and his patrons to consider seriously the installation of the simple, inexpensive heating equipment outlined. What he saves on winter operation by such an installation will help offset summer cooling cost.

Reporting New Developments in Equipment and Its Use

Improved Mazda Projection Lamps

A NEW incandescent projection lamp rated at 1,000 watts, designed to increase by 50% the light available from a projection lamp of such wattage, has been developed by the Nela Park engineering department of the General Electric Company. According to the designing engineers, the light from this lamp is also considerably whiter than that from former types.

The improvement in both quantity and quality of light is due, it is explained, to radical changes in the internal construction of the lamp, and also to the burning of the filament at higher temperatures.

It is stated that screen illumination is maintained at so high a percentage of the initial value that there is no need for the inclusion of anti-blackening collector grids in the lamp's internal construction. The construction is designed to obtain a high degree of concentration of tungsten deposit at the top of the bulb. The lamp is burned base down. The filament is no larger than the filament of the present 750-watt incandescent projection lamp.

Changeable Letter With Neon Insert

A TYPE OF changeable sign letter which is handled like a block letter, but which employs a novel use of neon lighting, with colored background for the letter itself, has been developed by Lust-ron Lights, Inc., of New York. In using neon, the method of supplying current to these letters dispenses with electrodes.

Physically, each letter consists in a Catalin (phenolic) base, on which the letter is mounted, with the base, in the larger sizes adapted to marquees, designed to slip into a frame in the manner of opal glass block letters. The letter, which is made of porcelain enameled metal, is centrally grooved, with the groove following the lines of the letter, and in these grooves is placed neon tubing. The tubing thus forms the letter itself, but is confined to the middle area of the metal letter. The tubing is readily affixed to the metal letter by several wires and therefore may be quickly changed according to the color desired for any particular display.

The blocks of letters placed together to spell the message of the sign, make contact with an electrically energized panel at the contact points of the neon tubing. This panel is energized from a power pack consisting in a radio-frequency oscillator built into a compact housing. Available in various sizes according to requirements, the packs may be plugged into any 110-volt a. c. outlet.

Letters are available in the usual marquee sizes, and the Catalin bases may be had in a variety of colors. Similarly, the tube illumination may be had in any of the colors available in luminous gases.

Coin Changer in Simplified Models

COIN CHANGERS in simplified models have been marketed by the Universal Stamping and Manufacturing Company of Chicago in several types of mechanisms and keyboards designed to meet the requirements of specific businesses. One type is for theatres and similar installations where no pennies are used. The keyboard is in multiples of five, with red keys for making change when 50c is tendered, black eyes when $1 is tendered, and blue keys for making change when either a quarter or 75c is tendered.

All models are equipped for cup and spout delivery on either side of the machine. Finish is in black baked lacquer metal with nickel trim.

Base With Special Side Adjustment

A NEW five-point projector pedestal has been brought out by the Sam Kaplan Manufacturing and Supply Company of New York with a one-piece carriage arm designed to accommodate all modern lamphouses, while front plate will take soundhead and projector supports for all standard equipment.

A lifting screw and rod connect the rear end of the carriage with the base, and when locked, make the pedestal one rigid unit. The lifting screw rests on ball bearings to make tilting easy from 5° up, to 30° down.

The design includes a lateral adjusting device with knobs accessible at either front or rear. By loosening two knobs and the center column bolt, quick, smooth side adjustment can be obtained, permitting the picture to be exactly centered with the screen without moving the entire equipment. A wrench is furnished with the pedestal to be kept on the center column bolt to facilitate quick side adjustment.

Heavy cast iron or light switch boxes are optional, as well as 60- or 100-ampere switches.

Decorative Fountain In a Stock Design

A DRINKING fountain in a modern decorative pattern highly suitable to theatre foyers and lounges has been made available in stock models by the Voigt Company of Philadelphia.

The fountain is of jet type with mouth guard and automatic regulation of the stream height. All exposed plumbing parts are finished in chromium, while the bowl is finished in polished black porcelain (other colors are available on special order).

Above the bowl, associated with it by decorative chromium fittings, is a mirror 26 inches in diameter, on either side of which is a chromium-plated metal bracket fixture designed to accommodate a 12-inch lumiline lamp for indirect illumination.

A FOLDER on new models in auditorium seating has been issued by the Heywood-Wakefield Company, Gardner, Mass. Three modern end standard designs, one with a "double" aisle light treatment, which permits adjustment of the beam to be confined to the edge of the aisle on the orchestra floor, and in the balcony to cover the steps and fascias of the risers, are described.

Deciding Which Would Be the Cheaper Heating Fuel: Coal or Oil

AS THE YEARS roll along and conditions and prices change, the old question for theatre operators once more bobs up, "Shall we burn oil in place of coal, or shall we burn coal in place of oil?" Accompanying this discussion of that issue is a simple chart that shows at a glance which costs less as regards heat values—oil or coal.

During the early days of the oil industry in this country, practically all crude oil was handled in wooden casks or barrels. The demand was so great that manufacturers furnished barrels ranging in capacity from 40 to 55 gallons. This led to a lot of confusion, and in 1866 the standard of 42 gallons was generally adopted. This came about because the 40-gallon barrel had become most popular, but it was usual practice to add about 5%, or 2 gallons, for tare, or the amount of oil estimated to be lost during handling.

How to Use Chart

Let us suppose that oil in your vicinity costs $1 per barrel. Find $1 per barrel in Column A and glance across to Column B, which shows that the equivalent is $3.50 per ton of coal. In other words if oil costs $1 per barrel, and coal $3.50 per ton, it would very likely be uneconomical to switch from one to the other. But if coal costs more than $3.50 per ton, and you are now burning coal, it might pay to make a change. At least the cost of making the change and the advantages of oil over coal, and vice versa, should be well worth investigating.

On the other hand, if you are now burning oil at $1 per barrel and you can buy coal at $2 per ton, or even $3 per ton, the cost of making a change and the difference in cost of operation should be worth investigating. The greater the difference in first cost the greater the money saving possibilities.

Equipment Costs

Before making a change it is always wise to consider the other factors that are involved, in addition to the first cost of fuel. Thus, what will the oil burning equipment cost? Storage tanks? Piping? You can obtain such costs from the manufacturers of the equipment. Also, is it likely that oil and coal prices will continue at present levels? What is the approximate life of the equipment used for burning oil? In other words, depreciation, and interest on the investment, should be considered.

By W. F. SCHAPHORST

Advantages and Disadvantages

Oil burning has several advantages over use of coal, among which are: Less time is required to start the fire. Oil fire can be shut off instantly. Oil fires need not be pulled, nor need they be banked; there are no ashes to remove or handle, no investment in ash handling equipment. Oil is fired mechanically, reducing the cost of labor considerably. Oil pumps are simpler and smaller in volume than stokers, ash handling machinery, etc. Oil burning boilers are more efficient than coal burning boilers, and oil, properly burned, is smokeless.

More or less counterbalancing the advantages of oil burning we have unreasonable laws and stringent ordinances governing the storage and burning of oil in some of our cities; it costs less to store coal; coal does not leak and can, therefore, be dumped upon the ground and stored without special facilities. Coal can be hauled in almost any vehicle. Coal does not evaporate and need not be preheated before being pumped and burned. Coal purchasing contracts can usually be extended over a longer period of time. Finally, there is less danger of explosion with coal burning.

All of the above points should be given careful study before deciding upon making a change from coal to oil, or from oil to coal. As is generally true of anything that must be purchased, first cost is less important than ultimate cost. The vital question is: Which will be more economical in the end? The question cannot be answered by rule of thumb, but as an indicator of first cost, the accompanying chart can be of practical assistance to the theatre operator.

UTICA, N. Y.—“At 3:30 P. M., during a matinee recently, I lost sound completely,” said W. T. MacNeilly, manager of the Uptown Theatre here.

“I at once put in a call for Jack Sanford, the Altec man. He was in Rome, 16 miles away. He got me on the phone in less than five minutes and correctly diagnosed the trouble over the phone. Driving the 16 miles from Rome, Sanford himself arrived in the theatre 20 minutes later.

“He connected up his emergency amplifiers, cleared two separate troubles, and in a few minutes the show went on as usual—all told, less than an hour from the time the sound went dead.”

BOOK REVIEW

Air Conditioning, by Charles A. Fuller, M. E., in collaboration with David Snow. New York: The Norman W. Henley Publishing Company. 6x9. 567 pp. Index and psychrometric charts. Cloth, price, $4.00.

AVOWEDLY WRITTEN for persons without formal training in technologies involved in air-conditioning, and therefore essentially for laymen, this book definitely provides what is needed in every theatre having complete or partial air-conditioning—that is to say, a book for both study and reference by the theatre manager and those of his staff charged with the operation and maintenance of the air-conditioning and ventilating facilities.

Although this volume, which has just been published, will prove very enlightening to many an air-conditioning engineer, it primarily supplies a foundation of knowledge which every theatre manager, assistant manager, any employee who hopes to become a theatre manager, as well as every theatre engineer, requires these days.

Mr. Fuller is a consulting engineer on air-conditioning, heating, ventilating, electromechanics and sanitation, while Mr. Snow is an air-conditioning engineer. In addition to their technological qualifications, they possess the happy faculty of clear, readable expression in the discussion of physical phenomena and mechanical processes. So successful have they been in their efforts to reduce the “mysteries” of this new art to the sensible facts of mechanical procedure, that any person intelligent enough to deal ably with the affairs of the modern cinema can, by diligent study of this book four or five hours a week, improve his knowledge of air-conditioning to the point where he is able to lend material assistance in buying such equipment, in revising existing systems, and in getting the most out of air-conditioning and ventilating facilities in his charge.

In view of Mr. Fuller's purpose, his treatment of the subject may be considered comprehensive. Beginning with a discussion of air and its properties, he deals in logical sequence with plant load calculation, ducts and air distribution, grilles, heating and dehumidification, fans, cooling coils and air washers, mechanical refrigeration processes and machinery, well drilling and well water cooling, ice cooling, storage refrigeration, evaporative condensers and water saving devices and methods generally, unit coolers, control apparatus, and air cleansing. He has thoughtfully included a chapter on codes and ordinances affecting duct and equipment installations.

Additionally, a slot attached to the inside of the back cover contains substantially printed reproductions of the American Society of Refrigeration Engineers' Freon chart, and the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers' chart based on the Carrier psychrometric formula. Their application is clearly explained.—G. S.

Detects “Scratch” When Big Truck Shakes Theatre

GAINESVILLE, FLA.—“Right after completing a routine inspection, my Altec man, W. M. Shubert, noticed a trace of scratchiness in the sound, just when a heavy truck rumbled by the theatre,” said W. E. Roberts, manager of the Lyric Theatre here.

“Shubert was immediately suspicious and went back to the booth. He found that a wire to the amplifier, covered by insulation, was broken. The only reason the amplifier wasn't completely dead was because by accident the lead sheathing of another wire was touching the frame of the amplifier, making a shaky contact.

“All we would have needed, to lose a Saturday night's full house business was to have another big truck go by in the middle of the show. It's a good thing that Shubert has such a sensitive hearing—and such a suspicious nature.”

Should Films Be Shipped Wound For Transfer to Theatre Reels?

● Heads or tails out? That has become a lively question since first it arose in this department. Reported here is eminent opinion from both industry organizations, unions included, and individuals

W. LEE BECKLEY, projectionist at the Pioneer Theatre Corporation's Spencer theatre in Minneapolis, certainly "started something" when he proposed to F. H. Richardson that films be wound on reels in reverse. His suggestion was published in Mr. Richardson's Comment in this department in the July 23rd issue, and subsequently discussed by Mr. Richardson and others in those columns. It is now a genuine issue, not unlike that of the 2,000-foot reel.

Hundreds of comments have been received upon his idea that films be sent to the projection room wound "in reverse," or "with tails out," as others call it. Some favor, some oppose. Incidentally, Mr. Beckley's idea is not wholly new, having been tried and abandoned in Akron, Ohio, where the fact that it was not standard procedure added weight to the complaints of its opponents.

Q The Arguments

Summed up, the arguments offered in favor of Mr. Beckley's plan revolve about the conviction that theatre projectionists must always rewind reels as received from the exchanges, for two distinct reasons. One is that not all exchange inspections and repairs can be trusted, and that safety requires that each theatre check up on the work supposedly done by the exchange. Second, that exchange reels, which are designed merely for shipping film and which receive rough handling in the process, are said to be unsuited to use in actual projection, often damaging the film. Since the film must be rewound on the theatre's own reels before it is shown, inspection and repair can be made simultaneously if the film is received "tail up," as proposed, one rewinding taking care of both requirements. Received "head up," as at present, the film will be "tail up" after inspection and repair are completed, and must be rewound a second time before it can be used. This extra rewinding of a dozen or so reels of film can be saved, it is argued, by Mr. Beckley's suggestion.

Opponents of the proposal base their attitude on a number of practical considerations. It is pointed out that the exchange at present gets its film "tail up" from those theatres which either do not have reels of their own or else take up the last run once in the exchange, on the exchange's reel to save rewinding after the show. Returned reels from such theatres are now rewound once and sent out again "heads up," whereas under the proposed procedure two rewinds would be needed at the exchange.

Further, some smaller theatres, using exchange reels throughout, run their films exactly as received; those houses would in the future have to re-wind before showing (a point which proponents of Mr. Beckley's idea claim as an advantage for their side). A strong stand against Mr. Beckley's idea is taken by some who point out that the film, especially in the case of important features, is sometimes received at the theatre only a few minutes before opening time, and that preliminary rewinding in the theatre would cause delay.

Still others assert that they always run their show exactly as received, and in years of experience with their own exchange have not experienced any kind of trouble. From such sources comes the suggestion that the new method would merely transfer the burden of proper inspection and maintenance from the exchange to the theatre. Others remark in reply to this that in their case that transfer was made years ago, that their exchanges send out film in abominable condition, and that Mr. Beckley's plan would certainly facilitate the projection room work which in their locations has always been necessary.

In general, those who receive good service from their exchanges find that only the desirability of transferring the film to theatre reels justifies Mr. Beckley's idea; those whose exchanges apparently give poor service champion the proposed innovation.

Q Exchange Viewpoint

A survey made by the SMPE Exchange Practice Committee indicated that 88% of films received back by the exchanges were received "tails out"—that is, were not re-wound after the final showing. The theatres involved either did not have projection reels of their own, or caught the last run on the exchange reels to avoid an after-show transfer. Comment on the attitude of the Exchange Practice Committee, as prepared by its chairman, A. W. Schwalberg of Warner Brothers, indicates that the committee will favor the new practice only if theatres return film "head out"—that is, themselves performing an extra re-wind operation after the final showing, instead of making the exchange do this. Mr. Schwalberg comments:

"About two years ago the Exchange Practice Committee of the SMPE made an extensive study of the subject. At that time the committee was primarily interested in determining the best method of splicing. Experts from the Eastman Kodak Company and the DuPont Film Manufacturing Corporation showed to the committee, by detailed drawings and specific data, that the most satisfactory patch was made when the film was being wound in the 'head-to-tail' direction, i.e., leaving the tail out.

"A survey indicated that almost 88% of the films received back by the exchanges was wound with the tails out. This meant one of two things: Either the majority of the theaters of the country were not equipped with special reels, or they could not spare the additional time required for rewinding in order to return the film to the exchanges 'heads-up'.

"The representatives of the various companies who were on the committee felt that some expense might be involved if it were decided to adopt the 'tails-out' system, which involved additional rewinding. However, they were willing to go to this expense if, as the study disclosed, the quality of the film delivered to the theatres and the resulting projection were to prove much better. However, in view of the overwhelming figures, which indicated that projection was definitely on a 'tails-out-return-to-branch' basis, the project was abandoned, and since that time it has not been brought before the committee again.

"At a meeting the other day, attended by Mr. A. S. Dickinson of the MPPDA; Mr. H. C. Kaufman, Columbia Pictures; Mr. Jack Sichelmen, Twentieth Century-Fox; Mr. William J. McShea, RKO Radio; Mr. G. Knox Haddow, Paramount; Mr. Sylvan Harris of the SMPE, and myself, this matter was gone into again. I found these various gentlemen, most of whom are supervisors of exchange operations for their respective companies, to be very courteous and only desirous, apparently (I say this after an hour of discussion), of doing what appears to be best for all concerned.

"The discussion disclosed the universal opinion that if this matter be carried forward properly by both the Exchange and the Theatre, the effect will be highly beneficial, although there are, as in most things, some points that are objectionable. In my opinion, these points are not of any considerable importance. Without going further into this matter, at this time, I can say the general opinion was that the exchanges would be willing to adopt the proposition provided only that theatres returned the reels wound 'heads-up'—in other words, rewound after the last show."

Q Projection Leaders' Views

Opinions concerning the proposed practice has come from many prominent in the projection field, including supervisors of projection of leading circuits, while Herbert Griffin, vice-president of the International Projector Corporation, responded at some length to an inquiry concerning his views.

"At least from an idealistic point of view," he said, "the proposal seems entirely sound and would give the projectionist an opportunity to rewind and inspect his film before he puts it in the projector the first time. Maybe he does that now, I don't know. However, I can foresee considerable objection to the proposal inasmuch as I believe it would involve expense to exchanges, which I do not believe they would be willing to bear."

Mr. Schwalberg, as we have just seen, has given some indication of what the attitude of the film distributors might be.

Harry Rubin, supervisor of projection for Paramount, and also chairman of the SMPE Projection Practice Committee, declares, "I am one hundred per cent in favor of shipment of prints to theatres tails up. It is much the better procedure."

Charles F. Horstman, supervisor of projection for RKO Theatres, puts his own endorsement even more strongly: "I am for the tails-up shipment one hundred per cent. In fact, I would be for it more than one hundred per cent if that were possible. It makes for lowered fire hazard and generally improved results, because the pre-projection rewinding required makes highly probable at least some pre-projection inspection. Orders have already been issued that no exchange reel be used in any projector in RKO theatres at any time."

William Glodfelter, president of projectionists' local union No. 411, wires to F. H. Richardson: "Local 411 endorses plan for film being shipped to theatres tails out."

Local union No. 306, New York City, has also voted full endorsement of the Beckley suggestion.

Q Former SMPE Head—

Dr. Alfred Goldsmith, past president of the SMPE, contributes:

"The following are my views on the 'tails up' matter: If we assume that the reels upon which the films arrive at the theatre are not satisfactory for use in projection, it then is necessary that the projectionist rewind them upon his own reels before starting the first show. Viewed upon this basis the films should arrive from the exchange 'tails up'.

"It may be further assumed that during the last showing of each subject the projectionist will use his own reel in the lower magazine of the projector, afterward rewinding the print upon the exchange reel, under which procedure it would be returned to the exchange 'heads up.' Upon inspection at the exchange the film would be rewound once and thus end 'tails up' on the reel, ready for shipment to the next theatre.

"The plan as described has the advantage that it enables the projectionist to inspect the films when rewinding from the exchange reels to the theatre reels. It has the further advantage that theatre reels are used throughout the show, thus avoiding possible trouble and damage to the films occasioned by the use of flimsy, bent reels, with possible damage to or interruption of the performance. It has the further, important advantage that the projectionist is enabled to give the prints rapid inspection when finally rewinding them for shipment to the exchange. This latter is important because he will know whether or not later possible complaints of damage to the film, made by the exchanges, are justified.

"The plan also has a few disadvantages. It involves some small amount of extra work for the projectionist, particularly at the end of the shows. If he uses the exchange reel in the lower magazine for the last showing of the print before shipment to the exchange (which is the natural temptation), and the reels happen to be in bad shape, as mostly they are, he will risk damage or breaking as before; also, he will complicate the exchange procedure by requiring an extra rewinding after inspection.

"All in all the advantages this plan presents appear to outweigh its disadvantages and if it appeals to the projectionists and their unions, and if no other disadvantages appear in connection with it, it might well be adopted into general practice."

A. S. Goodwin, Kennett Sims, Stanley Stegman and H. L. Burright, all projectionists working for Barron Theatres in Pratt, Kans., write to F. H. Richardson:

"We feel that reels should be returned to the exchange with the leader on the outside. This would leave each reel 'tails up' when exchange inspection is completed, and if shipped to us that way would reduce time in setting up our shows. We have yet to find an exchange reel that will compare favorably with the projection room reels of today."

Q This Projectionist Votes No

But Morris Finkel, of Freeland, Pa., also a projectionist, tells Mr. Richardson, "I am not in favor of reels reaching theatres 'tails up.' In my opinion it would encourage exchanges to become more lax in their inspection, or even fail to inspect at all, in the belief that the film will in any event be inspected by the projectionist, who will make any necessary repairs. This might finally result in forcing projectionists to do all the repair work."

On the other hand Local 364 of Akron, Ohio, where the plan was tried for some months, and where some traces of it still remain in effect (inasmuch as films occasionally even now are received from the exchanges "tails up") wires approval through its business representative, J. A. Shuff, saying the method proposed would make for "better and safer projection, reduced use of damaged exchange reels."

COMMENT ON PROJECTION AFFAIRS

and answers to inquiries . . . By F. H. RICHARDSON

EACH THEATRE SHOULD USE ITS OWN REELS IN PROJECTION

FOR YEARS I have recommended that every theatre purchase a set of high grade reels, keeping them exclusively for use on its own projectors. I now go further and recommend that some reel manufacturer offer a high grade reel enameled in some highly distinctive color, such as scarlet, or even white. This latter recommendation is made as a means to preclude the possibility of the reels being shipped to the exchange through error, that possibility having been the chief objection voiced to the purchase of special reels in the past.

But I go beyond that, recommending further that each projectionist be prohibited, by positive order, to use any other than a projection room reel on his projectors. That such an order is fully justified is quite evident when we consider the wretched condition of a large percentage of the reels used by exchanges for shipment. Nor are the exchanges to be too much censured. I have myself watched an express handler toss a shipping case filled with film a distance of four or five feet, onto wood or concrete. Under such treatment the reels are bound to be bent and otherwise damaged, and film cannot be wound upon them, or unwound from them, without sustaining at least some damage at each operation.

It follows that each theatre that must thereafter use those prints must feel some effects of the damage, to say nothing of the possible damage to the show.

Inspection a Projectionist's Duty

Exchange reels should not be used for projection. They should not be placed in any projector magazine at any time, except it be in a genuine case of emergency. Upon arrival, the prints should be slowly rewound upon the projection room reels before projection, with inspection during the process. This may require some extra work, but what of it? It is an important duty of the projectionist, just as much so as any other projection room operation.

Reels of film cost money, the production cost a huge sum of money, millions of theatre patrons will be dependent upon their condition for a well presented performance for which they have paid their money at the box office. No individual or group has the right to oppose anything that tends to reduce damage to them. The use of damaged reels for projection tends directly to damage the prints, particularly in the rapid rewinding prevalent in a very large percentage of our projection rooms.

Here is an extract from a letter from a projectionist in Alabama, received just the other day: "We are serviced by the Atlanta exchanges, and most of the reels received are unfit to use, even in the take-up magazine. They either bind the film itself or rub the sides of the magazine. In some cases they are bent so badly that they do both."

When it is so easy to rectify conditions of this kind, there can be no reason for delaying to do it.

D. C. GENERATOR BRUSH CONNECTIONS

FROM A DETROIT projectionist who requests that his name be not divulged, come these inquiries: "I have seen d.c. generators having four sets of brushes contacting the commutator. Will you please explain how this can possibly produce a single direct current for line use?"

"We are told that voltage is produced by a conductor cutting lines of magnetic force. In a recent argument it was asserted that if a conductor cut exactly the same number of such lines per unit of time, no such action would occur. Will you advise as to this?"

In answering these questions I have had the collaboration of John Hertner, president of the Hertner Electric Company. I shall present my own reply regarding some points, and his regarding both those and others.

Concerning production of a "single direct current": In the generator you viewed you may have noticed that the four sets of brushes contacted the commutator at quarters. That is to say, each set made contact at opposite diameters and each of the sets were equidistant from all other sets. As a matter of fact, either of the opposite-diameter sets might have been disconnected and the machine still would function, though with reduced power. The two opposite contacts from positive poles and each of the sets are, in usual practice at least, so connected that insofar as concerns the distributing system, they form one positive and one negative, the amperage output of each being added to the output of the other. Mr. Hertner explains the matter further, thus: "In the simplest machine usually shown in diagrams when explaining dynamo or motor action, there are two poles—a north and a south—and two sets of brushes spaced diametrically opposite, positive and negative. In practice, instead of such bipolar construction, four, six, eight or more poles are used and generally the machine is so wound as to require a corresponding number of brushes. The machine then operates as if each pair of poles and brushes were a separate machine and all contributing current to a common pair of leads, all in parallel.

Effect of Brush Variation

"For instance, if a six-pole machine were delivering 10 amperes in each circuit, and the voltage between neighboring brushes were 100, the total output could be figured as 100 volts, and 3 times 10 to 30 amperes. All but two brushes could be removed, but the current capacity would then be not much more than 10 amperes and there would be a tendency to spark. The same unit could be wound and connected within the armature so as to produce 300 volts and 10 amperes, in which case all the current could be drawn off one set of brushes."

As to the other question, Mr. Hertner replies: "The inquiry is not quite clear. Probably the assertion was 'if the conductor cuts exactly the same number of lines in opposite direction in any given time.' If one part of a conductor is under a positive pole cutting lines in a given direction, and another part of this conductor is under a negative pole cutting in the same direction, or under a positive pole and cutting in the opposite direction, then the two will neutralize and nothing happens. If a single wire is passed before a pole and the circuit closed through a galvanometer, a deflection will be observed. If a loop of wire is passed before this pole so that both sides of the loop are under the pole at the same time, nothing happens.

Magnetic Fields and Current

"To explain a little differently. Suppose a long wire is carried from a galvanometer terminal back to the other terminals. This constitutes a circuit. Now just as soon as the number of lines of force passing through the circuit is altered, a current will flow and will be indicated by the galvanometer. If, say, the north pole of a magnet is held so that its lines of force pass through this loop, nothing happens as long as it is stationary; as soon as withdrawn, current will be generated. If another north pole is entered while the first is withdrawn and the two are equal and equally moved, nothing will happen. If a south pole is entered while the north pole is withdrawn, the deflection will be greater than when the north pole only is used.

"The circuit is a closed loop and every magnetic line of force is a closed loop. When the linkage of magnetic and electric circuits varies, a voltage is induced, and if the electric circuit is closed, a current will flow through it."

WARPED FILM OR WORN APERTURE TRACKS

FROM Van Robertson, projectionist of the Colonial theatre in Winston-Samel, N. C., comes this letter:

"Just a few lines from a friend who has benefited by your writings and books. Have a bit of trouble I want your advice about. When using old films the outer edges of the screen image seem hazy when the center is sharp, or vice versa. When we first installed our new Brenkert lamps, we got a clear picture all over. Since then we have moved the screen back 2 feet and had it painted. I don't believe in painting a screen—may be wrong, though—just an idea of mine. Would appreciate any information you can supply. Heard your lecture here some years ago and sure enjoyed it. Thanks for the information you have supplied in the past."

Moving the screen or painting it would not cause the trouble you have described. Such trouble can be due to warped film, worn aperture plate tracks, or aperture plate tracks the base of which was dirty when the plates were installed, and in such way that the plates were sprung out of line when the holding screws were tightened down.

Since from your description the trouble occurs on both projectors, the latter is unlikely. Next time it occurs, slip a bit of paper into the takeup reel and in rewinding examine the film carefully for warpage at that point. If the film seems perfectly flat, then test the aperture plate tracks with a steel rule to see if they are worn. The former is the more probable cause, since worn tracks should have the same effect on both old and new film, although I can conceive of old, dry, rather stiff film being affected differently by slight wear, so far as visibility of the fault on the screen is concerned.

TESTING TWO-WIRE BX CIRCUIT FOR LEAKAGE

J. L. MATTHEWS of St. Louis, writes "In a rather long run of two-wire BX that has been in use about 12 years, some slight leakage is suspected. By that is meant that we think the insulation of the wires has perhaps been so damaged by time that it is no longer able to wholly withstand the voltage, which is 110, and a certain small leakage occurs. Will you advise, first, does age tend to weaken the insulation of wires inclosed in BX? Second, If so, how fast does such weakening take place? Third, is it possible to make a conclusive test as to the perfection of such installation? If it is possible, how may it be done?"

Yes, time affects BX wire as well as most things made by man—and Man himself. However, in the case of BX wire insulation, provided the temperature of the wires has never been increased above 75° Fahrenheit by overload or otherwise, and provided the cable has not been in an atmosphere of a temperature abnormally high, the rate of deterioration should be very slow. How long it might hold up neither myself nor any electrician that I have ever consulted, can say. Heat above normal tends to vulcanize the rubber in which each wire is enclosed, as well as to work injury to the fibre in which the rubber is incased. The rapidity of injury will of course depend upon the amount of excess heat, and the length of time it is applied. Even in a room of high temperature, while the action may not really effect vulcanizing, the action, though slow, has a similar result.

However, even though there is hardening or partial vulcanizing, still the insulation may withstand 110 volts if the cable remains undisturbed, but if an old BX, in which the condition described is present, be bent, it is likely both the fibre and the rubber will crack, resulting in imperfect insulation.

As to testing, while such a test could be made, it is hardly practicable for theatre men. It should be made by a laboratory, where proper instruments are available. True, the cable might be wholly disconnected, the wires well separated at one end, and a high tension magneto (available in almost any electrical shop) applied to the other end. Such a test would disclose a leak, but not the point where it occurred; also, it might not be wholly conclusive, since under actual operating conditions there would be a difference.

My advice is that if you suspect leakage in a cable twelve years old, don't bother having it tested. Two-wire BX is not expensive. Discard the old cable, install a new circuit, BX or otherwise as conditions warrant or laws dictate.

APPRECIATION, A PROMISE AND ACKNOWLEDGMENT

JOE T. MORROW, projectionist of the Booth theatre in Wolfe City, Tex., writes, "Your reply to my letter regarding trouble with our sound system was appreciated and your summary correct. I delayed expressing appreciation until I was able to determine how things worked out after we made the change you suggested. The answer is, it improved things much.

"Since publication of my letter, accompanied by your comment, in BETTER THEATRES, I have been literally swamped with letters. Sixty-two of them asked for detailed information with regard to the necessary changes; a lot more offered advice. Doubtless many of them think I just ignored their communications, but to answer them all would require several dollars in postage and take more time than I have to spare from my work. Please tell them that in your next issue, won't you?"

"I am preparing an article to send you, going into detail concerning various changes I have made, both before and after writing you. Very possibly some of the theories expounded therein may be all wet, but the results are what counted—and they are not even damp. They are as they should be. I am sure there are lots of fellows in the same boat who would like to secure first-hand information from a chap who has been there."

Style in Theatre Carpeting

Two distinctive patterns, one obviously modern, the other more in tradition, yet both interrelating circular and squared figures. Having large figures, both are well adapted to foyer areas. And, despite the difference in "feeling", both patterns are suited to modern interiors, that on the left to the more ornamental, vividly colored, "cut-up" design, the other to simpler, neutrally colored interiors. The right-hand style well exposes the now recognized fallacy that the beauty of traditional forms cannot be utilized for treatments in the modern spirit.

Below are illustrated two scroll patterns which, thus contrasted, demonstrate the trend of modern design in later years. Of the same basic theme, they are distinctive in "feeling", the left-hand pattern being definitely modern, the other clearly classic. The former is an abstraction of the forms traditionally employed in the other. Both are well adapted to modern theatre interiors, with somewhat the same difference in application noted for the patterns above. The sense of "sweep" of the scrolls makes each suited to spacious foyers.

- Examining the significance of sheer pattern in the part that carpet plays in the creation of the "feeling" you want your patrons to have

WHAT IS style in carpeting, and how much of a factor should it be in the selection of carpeting for a theatre? There are other important considerations, such as durability, cost, color scheme of the interior surfaces, the architectural design, and so on. Style, obviously, has a definite relationship to the general color scheme and interior design. But does a selected carpeting contribute all it can to the atmosphere of a theatre interior merely through harmony with those two elements?

Their relationship, which is the style factor usually pointed out, is of course real enough, but carpeting has more to offer the decorative character of a theatre than harmony with the other elements of the interior treatment. The carpeting is a prominent environmental factor in itself. One of the interior elements which most immediately impresses itself upon the patron's consciousness, it is an emotional stimulant in its own right, not only because of the emotional effect of color, but as a result of the more subtle influence of pattern.

We are dealing here with some psychological matters which, however obscure they may be, we all are aware of. All the arts use pattern in one way or another. Certain figures have come down through the ages because of something about them that has continued to fascinate us. Carpeting has been telling stories to Oriental peoples for centuries—and though we today like our story-telling straight, few of us are above specific responses to the symbols that have come down to us, and none of us incapable of getting "a certain feeling" from the interplay of line and curve in a pattern. The colors of carpeting are the means of effecting this pattern; then in doing so, they contribute their own peculiar influence to the "kick" we get out of it.

The pattern, delineated in colors, form the style of the carpet, and in selecting a style we are determining, to an important

Contrasting early modern, later modern, and Renaissance. Despite the period classification of the right-hand pattern, above, it is a modernized version of English Adam, placing it in a class of modified traditional carpetings that can give a sense of old-world leisure and elegance that the severer modern interior often needs. These patterns run to combinations of red and gold. Immediately below, the "primitive modern" is illustrated, which are to be contrasted with the modern carpets shown on the opposite page, as well as with very different style of modern at left, above, and at the bottom of the page. These latter two are damasks in an interlocking wave design which are effective in two or more tones of the same color. With the exception of the left-hand early modern, all of these patterns are directional, capable of giving the patron the sense (if laid for this purpose) of being "drawn" along the traffic lane between lobby and auditorium.

extent, the feeling we are going to give our patrons when they come into our theatre.

In a general way, carpet styles may be classified as Classic and Modern. Classic is here used in a broad sense to include not only those devices which have come to us from the cultures which ultimately became European, but from the Oriental as well—in brief, the traditional configurations. Modern patterns, especially today, are frequently modifications of traditional devices, inclined to be abstractions of them. The early modern carpet styles (which some have called "primitive modern") tend to be glorifications of geometry—they're the ones people recognize as "modernistic."

Representative patterns in these styles are here illustrated and are more specifically dealt with in the accompanying captions.

When fire destroyed E. E. Webber's Colonial theatre in a Kansas City neighborhood he decided to rebuild for city-wide patronage. This scheme is the result

LAST WINTER fire attacked E. E. Webber's Colonial theatre in Kansas City only a few weeks after he had acquired it. The flames left little of the structure, and the new Colonial, recently opened, is an entirely new building, of steel and concrete fireproof construction throughout, whereas the former theatre had been merely semi-fireproof. Designed by Clarence Kivett, Kansas City architect, the new Colonial is of simple modern pattern in both architectural forms and decorative treatment.

E. E. Webber, who began to exhibit motion pictures in 1904, operates one other Kansas City theatre, the Mary Lue, managed by his son, E. E. Webber, Jr. Like the Mary Lue, the Colonial is located in a neighborhood shopping district. The drawing area is populated largely by small tradesmen and low-salaried white collar workers of the type appreciative of a fine theatre but unable to pay admission prices and to attend often enough to provide what Mr. Webber regards as sufficient support, and in the new Colonial he has sought to realize a theatre that would attract patrons from other sections of the city. (Mr. Webber's own comment on matters pertinent to this appears in adjoining columns.) There are several competing theatres located from ten to twenty blocks from the Colonial.

The new Colonial, which represents a construction cost reported as $100,000, is of steel frame construction with steel roof trusses, steel floor and ceiling joists and steel roof deck. Floors are concrete, walls of solid brick masonry, partitions of hollow tile. Walls and ceilings are plastered throughout, with plastering inside exterior walls furred out on steel channels and metal lath. The plan provides a single auditorium floor seating 882, foyer area across rear of auditorium, and lounges on a second level (see accompanying floor plans.)

THE FRONT

The facade is in buff face brick with Silverdale stone coping, glass block and metal trim, and architectural glass facing at entrance. The general architectural scheme above the marquee (see accompanying photograph) consists in vertical brick panels divided by narrow strips of Pittsburgh-Corning glass blocks surmounted by curved sheet-metal projections, turned and painted maroon. The glass blocks here provide some daytime illumination for central second level areas, but it is planned to illuminate them from the rear with neon tubing, in metal housing, installed behind them. Corner sections of glass blocks form toilet room windows (see plan).

Sign and Marquee

A full length vertical sign and a V-shaped marquee, designed integrally, have unusual lighting arrangements. With construction entirely of porcelain enameled metal, both have lettering lighted by gas tubing concealed (coved) by the framework. Vertical sign letters, of metal hollow block construction, have black-painted faces and orange sides. They are pegged to a white ground with space behind, and this ground is lighted by neon from behind the frame edges in sequences of red, green and amber at two-second intervals. Sign framing is painted turquoise blue, except for red at forward facing of front decorative "buttresses," and has a cap lighted in red neon. The marquee has edge stripes in turquoise and dark blue, and an apex piece with an orange band and lighted in red neon.

Silhouette attraction boards are formed by slotting the marquee fascias in front of white porcelain enamel plates set back 5 inches, and placing black aluminum changeable letters on steel wires just behind the openings, against a ground of green light from luminous gas tubing concealed by the edges of the framework.

ENTRANCE AREA

The marquee soffit, which is painted white and lighted by exposed incandescent lamps, forms the ceiling of an extremely shallow vestibule in which an island box office projects to the sidewalk line. Wooden double doors, painted maroon and each bearing half of a circle of plate glass, are bordered by black Carrara glass. The box office has a base of naturally lustrous stainless steel, and a cap of stainless steel painted maroon and carrying decorative recessed striping painted blue. Store areas are drawn into the central facade design by a simple device consisting in structures over the windows giving the effect of extensions of the marquee. Display frames, mounted, are of chromium.

Lobby and Foyer

The lobby, finished in plaster, has rounded corners and stepped ceiling. The color scheme, carried out in wall and ceiling panels, doors and baseboards, consists in buff, maroon and blue. A chrome display frame is placed between the doors to the foyer, and another extends across the wall opposite that having a window opening into concession (popcorn and candy) space (see plan). The lobby is lighted by two ceiling luminaires of modern design.

The foyer, or promenade forming a rear section of the auditorium and treated integrally with it (see accompanying photograph), is entered through two sets of doors painted in one of the maroon shades used throughout the wainscoting. The floor is carpeted in a leaf-and-scroll pattern

AUDITORIUM

The auditorium is finished entirely in hard plaster, except for the rear wall, which is of acoustic plaster in a light blue tint;

AN EXHIBITOR'S VIEW OF STYLE TRENDS AND AIMS

E. E. WEBBER, owner and operator of the Colonial theatre in Kansas City, entered the motion picture business almost before it had become one—in 1904, when he bought a little "picture show" in Belleville, Ill. It made money and he sold out at a good profit. His main interests were in other fields, but in 1912 he got back into showbusiness, purchasing two adjoining stores in Marshall, Mo., and uniting them to form a film and vaudeville theatre. This was a success also, but again he sold—at a profit.

It was not until 1921 that he returned to the theatre field never to leave it. He began with a motion picture theatre then called the Broad-mour, in Kansas City. He has continued to operate theatres ever since in Kansas City, where he now has the Mary Lue in addition to the Colonial.

In planning a new theatre to take the place of the Colonial that was destroyed by fire, Mr. Webber looked beyond the neighborhood which the former theatre served.

"The trend," he told the writer, "toward construction of more permanent and beautiful theatres in outlying areas of large cities and in small towns, has, as I see it, two principal causes. First, just as patrons have grown more critical of motion pictures themselves, thereby making better films a necessity, so as they have become more experienced theatregoers they have demanded more comfort and greater attractiveness in their surroundings. Second, with first-run and second-run theatres in the higher admission brackets, giving patrons these things, there has been set up what we can call competitive pressure, which is brought to bear on the less attractive theatre down the admission scale.

"Pictures reach subsequent-runs after successively longer periods of time from first-run. In much the same manner, but in terms of years rather than days, the elements of fine theatrical design are reaching neighborhood houses. The exhibitor who plays at ten cents and waits a good while for his pictures also is waiting longest to accumulate capital sufficient to build an attractive and enduring theatre.

"Gradually the store-type theatre is disappearing from the suburban and small town field and, instead, theatres are being built with larger outlays of capital.

"I think a theatre today should be as simple as good taste and comfort allow. The 'movie' is a continuous performance with only enough light to make coming in and leaving convenient and safe. It need not have the decorativeness of the legitimate theatre. On the other hand, it should not appear barren, but give a general impression of warmth and refinement.

"The effect that the theatre itself can have on patronage is shown in the fact that already we are attracting patronage from many sections of Kansas City, although the Colonial is the last 20c run in town."—Kenneth Force.

beginning at the rear, the side walls and the ceiling are also light blue, but the blue gradually deepens as the proscenium arch is approached. Stage curtains and drapes are maroon and gold.

Illumination

The ceiling is divided into a series of lateral steppings with 6-inch fascias, off each end of which are light boxes set into the side wall. Each has an opening 14x18 inches covered with opal glass, and contains two lamps, one 60-watt white lamp for emergency lighting, and one colored lamp, either red or blue, each stepping having an alternate color.

General and running illumination is further supplied by lumiline lamps in troughs set in the wainscoting, which is furred out 8 inches on metal lath, plastered and painted dark red along a top panel, and still darker red (deep maroon) below, the divisions being marked by buff striping. The mean height of the wainscoting is 7 feet, with the height of each of the four sections on either side sufficient at all points to place the light troughs well above eye level. Each trough has alternating amber and green lumiline lamps.

Seating

Seating is on a radial plan with a twelve-chair center bank, and two ten-chair side banks. Row spacing is 32 inches. Chairs (except for first three rows, where they are entirely veneer) have white leather spring-edge seats, blue leather padded backs, and mahogany rear panels.

AIR SUPPLY

The ventilating system provides cooled and heated air through a grille, with ornamental treatment in chrome, at either side of the stage opening. Above the stage floor in each duct is a 6-foot fan for forcing cooled air into the auditorium; below the stage floor in each duct is a 3-foot fan for forcing heated air from the furnace into the auditorium. Air is washed with ice water spray, the ice water coming from a 3-ton ice tank on the north side of the theatre at the rear. (This is a temporary arrangement for cooling, to be replaced next summer with regular air-conditioning equipment.)

There are two means of draught exhaust. One provides for the recirculation of heated air, the air being drawn off through grilles in the base of the standee rail into a concrete duct extending under the promenade floor, and connecting with a central duct under the auditorium floor, for return to the heating plant under the stage. The other means consists in metal ducts extending from a point the height of the wainscoting, inside a curving false wall forming the rear wall of the promenade, to the roof. The vent openings occupy space formed by the greater curvature of the wall above the wainscoting. There is such a duct at each corner of the promenade. Other areas of the theatre are heated by radiators and ventilated by direct contact with outdoors. At the base of the stage front, next to the floor, are two 5-foot by 18-inch grilles to take air off the auditorium floor not exhausted through the grilles in the standee rail.

At either side of the doors leading into the promenade ornamental, carpeted, circular stairways lead to a men's and women's lounge, to the projection room, storage space and a manager's office. The lounges and adjoining toilet rooms have asphalt tile floors and plaster walls and ceilings painted gray-green. Lighting is by ceiling fixtures.

The projection room provides the space for power supply as well as projection equipment and accessories. (See plan of second floor.)

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Martin theatre in Opelika, Ala., is the sixty-sixth theatre in the circuit operated by Martin Theatres in the states of Georgia, Alabama and Florida. Headed by R. E. Martin, this group of theatres has been expanding rapidly in the Southeast, particularly among the smaller cities. Opelika, which has a population of about 6,500, is located in the east-central part of Alabama; its people get their living, either directly or indirectly, principally from farming (cotton, corn and garden truck), and from local forest products and cotton goods factories. We asked Mr. Milton Kress, district manager of the circuit, some questions about this new Martin theatre, and he has answered them in his own way, not only comprehensively, but very readably, and we take advantage of the opportunity to describe a new theatre as the one who operates it sees it. Mr. Kress—

Opelika, Ala., is the really proud possessor of a new, modern Martin theatre. The arcade through which entrance to the auditorium is gained extends the whole length of the old Opelika theatre.

On the left of the arcade are three shops with plate glass fronts. The first is a drug store with two openings, one into the arcade, the other into the street.

In raising the floor of the old theatre it was discovered that there was ample space in the basement for a modern basement restaurant which could be so constructed that it would have a street entrance. This entrance is next to that of the drug store.

The box office is located on the left of the arcade and is of solid red porcelain—enamelled metal trimmed with chrome. It is provided with two cashier windows, one to catch the overflow from the regular window during the rush hours.

The front and marquee were constructed by the Neon Lights Advertising Company of Birmingham. The construction consists of porcelain enamel on steel, the second of this type to be used in the South. A white porcelain ceiling, illuminated by semi-indirect silver bowl lamps, makes the sidewalk a very luminous place.

The lighting effects around the marquee consist of a neon outline in ruby red with red and green neon extending vertically

The new front, finished in porcelain enamel.

Walls and ceiling are finished in fibre board, the proscenium arch in plaster with painted figures.

The balcony, seating 650, is in two sections, for white and for colored patrons.

The foyer, which is also finished in fibre board, with chrome trim.

and horizontally. The name Martin is in modernistic design, lighted by twinkle-lights which give the effect of myriad stars twinkling. With the twinkle lights off, the name is silhouetted by the use of red neon underneath the raised letters. The predominating color is red with light green and cream to furnish a contrast. The attraction board, with changeable silhouette letters is located in a V-shape underneath the marquee. On the front of the theatre are one-sheet frames with color combinations of red, silver and black. These were furnished by The National Theatre Supply Company.

Recessed in the wall on the right of the arcade are six coming-attraction boards built for the use of 40x60-inch displays. These boards are bordered with glass block, which are lighted from the rear by red neon. In the ceiling of the arcade six semi-indirect lighting troughs with red, green and blue neon create an unusual effect. There are three chandeliers using lumiline lamps for decorative purposes, with semi-indirect mazda lamps for illumination. These fixtures were furnished by the Neon Lights Advertising Company. The ultra-modern wall decorations, with red predominating, is done on a base of smooth plastering. The floor is covered with Armstrong linoleum tile, which gives the effect of marble.

Vestibule and Foyer

The main entrance doors to the theatre are operated by "magic eyes." There are four doors to the entrance. As one enters the first set of doors, he comes into the theatre vestibule where, on the left, is the manager's office and also a passageway leading to the stairs to the art department on the second and third floors above the manager's office.

The inside set of doors open into the foyer, which is ultra-modernistic in its appointments. Celotex is used on both the walls and the ceiling. Chrome moulding is used throughout. In the foyer is a Westinghouse automatic water cooler operated by a "magic eye." To the left are three aisles leading to the orchestra section of the auditorium. On the right as one enters the foyer there are stairs leading to the mezzanine, where are located the men's smoker and the ladies' lounge. The balcony is reached by stairs leading up from the mezzanine.

The Auditorium

The total seating capacity is 1,650, with 650 in the balcony, and 1,000 on the main floor. Streamline seats with box-spring bottoms and orange mohair backs are from the Irwin Seating Company. The elevation in the seating arrangement gives each patron full view of the stage and screen. The walls and ceiling of the auditorium are finished with Celotex in various designs and colors. The width of the auditorium is approximately 65 feet, and the length over all, including stage and foyer, is 140 feet.

The proscenium treatment consists of modernistic decorations on smooth plaster, with exits at each side. Over each exit a large M for Martin is worked into the decorative scheme. As in other parts of the theatre, red predominates. Around the proscenium indirect neon lighting of red, blue and green tubing is used for decorative purposes. The front drops, valance and legs are made of red velvet velour with a fringe of silver and gold. The grand curtain is of gold velour.

The screen curtain is controlled by an automatic motorized unit furnished by the National Theatre Supply Company. All stage lighting is operated by two remote-control panels, one located in the projection room, the other on the stage itself. All desired lighting effects are arranged on the main stage, then operated remotely from the projection room. The entire stage floor is of hard wood. Ample facilities are provided for road shows, the dressing rooms being located on the second floor of the wings. All drop scenery is arranged to fly in the loft.

In the balcony a partition down the middle separates the "white" and "colored" sections. The colored patrons' entrance is entirely separate from the regular part of the theatre, with the exception of the emergency cross-over doors. Duplicate rest room facilities are maintained for the colored patronage.

Lighting fixtures by Voigt are used throughout lobbies, foyer, mezzanine, and the auditorium. Each one has several circuits, arranged so that full-up white lighting, or color combinations, may be achieved. All carpet used in the entire building was furnished by the Alexander Smith Carpet Company through the National Theatre Supply Company.

The projection room is a complete fire-proof construction of steel and re-enforced concrete. Mirrophonic sound is used with switching arranged for microphone use from the manager's office and the stage. In addition to using a monitor speaker in the projection room, there is one located in the manager's office also. Super-Simplex projectors and bases are part of the equipment. Lamps, Peerless high-intensity type, using a Hertner motor-generator set for d.c. supply. A General Electric copper oxide rectifier unit is a stand-by in case of generator failure.

The construction of the entire building is of steel framework, re-enforced concrete, and brick, making it practically 100% fire-proof. The entire building is equipped with a sprinkler system.

Each unit in the construction is arranged so that the roof, balcony, and the projection room are individually supported from the ground, no part being dependent upon the other for its stability.

The Martin theatre is semi-air-conditioned, using a double bank air washer, having a 360-foot deep rock well, which supplies the washer with 200 gallons of cold water per minute. The same ventilating system is used for heating and cooling, using a large tubular boiler, which is automatically gas-fired.

John Mauk, our sound and service engineer, and also chief purchasing agent, deserves a great deal of credit for the comfort, luxury and modernistic touches of this operation.

R. N. McEachren was our contractor and designer. James S. Biggers, who has served with the Martin Theatres for the past six years and has been manager of our operation in Opelika for the last four years, is the manager of the new house.

The LION'S ROAR

Some people are allergic to charts. They get dizzy just from watching.

We're very fond of charts, especially those with the zig-zag lines going UP!

Right now, what with car loadings, bigger button-holes, second helpings and all those other business indices it looks like prosperity is coming out from around that corner.

As we go to press, newspaper dispatches published nationally tell of a sharp business upturn, a gain in momentum that is bringing about the greatest second half expansion in ten years!

M-G-M prepared for it months ago, is ready for it this Fall and Winter as never before in its history!

Stars and stories and manpower and resources! Big productions!

Our release schedule from August to New Year's is geared in anticipation of what is happening in America!

Geared for "A" times with "A" pictures!

Your future is very rosy, Mr. Exhibitor.

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

ROLLING ALONG!

"Boys Town" continues big everywhere. "Thanks for telling us to hold it extra days," writes R. L. Kehr, Nebraska exhibitor, and that's typical of hundreds of accounts. "Too Hot To Handle" hold-overs are mounting too. It's a smart policy to keep your playing time ready for M-G-M hold-overs. "Stablemates" is another soul-satisfying hit!

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

"DR. KILDARE's" TONIC!

Flash! As we go to press. Good medicine is "Young Dr. Kildare" in Norfolk, Reading, Memphis. M-G-M's new series (with Dr. Lew Ayres) is off to a healthy start.

A NEW NOTE IN FAN MAGAZINE ADVERTISING!

The column reproduced to the right will be read by your patrons.

Leo, who has been telling you about his M-G-M affairs these many years through the trade press, now appears also in all fan magazine ads with a personal column addressed to the fans. Leo's happy to talk to this nationwide audience and he believes he's going to help you sell additional tickets. Something new all the time from that frisky Lion!

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

"White-haired boy"

LEW AYRES GOING UP!

The mailman at the studio is as good a barometer of public interest as anything we can name. He's carrying a lot of letters to handsome young Lew Ayres these days. Lew did a sincere job in "Holiday," followed with an engaging performance in "Rich Man—Poor Girl." Then the ticket-buyers started a Lew Ayres boom! M-G-M likes to build stars for the public that worships them, so Lew Ayres is going up. When you see "Young Dr. Kildare" you'll know he is UP!

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

WEALTH OF TALENT!

The announcement of "A New York Cinderella" with Spencer Tracy and Hedy Lamarr in the leading roles is evoking plenty of trade interest. No personality within recent years has sky-rocketed to such fame in so short a time. The magazines cry for her photos. Interviewers besiege her. "Screen find of the year" said Motion Picture Daily. And Hollywood Reporter states: "She is destined to reach great heights. She has more sex, more rare beauty than the screen has seen for many days, and with it definite artistry. Hedy Lamarr will be a sensation." Add another bright name, gentlemen, to your list of M-G-M's golden stars!

"CITADEL" TRADE SHOWS!

Until you see it with your own eyes you won't really know. And when you do see it you'll never stop talking about it. Nationwide screenings this week at strategic points of M-G-M's magnificent drama "The Citadel". We'll publish your comments on this page if you'll write us what you thought.

The LION'S ROAR

With everybody writing a column, I don't see why I should not take a crack at it myself.

My idea is to tell you about some of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer pictures and personalities. And folks, I've got the inside dope on everything that goes on in the world's greatest studio.

The late Will Rogers said all he knew was "what he read in the papers." All I know is what I see on the screen (and what my spies at the studio report to me).

You've read all about "The Citadel" in our advertisement this month. It's made of the sterner stuff, Merrier, gayer, is "Sweethearts", which, with appropriate fanfare, brings us once again that thrush-throated pair, Jeanette McDonald and Nelson Eddy.

"Sweethearts" is their first modern musical. Modern as the dialogue by Dorothy Parker (the "glad girl") and Alan Campbell.

Hunt Stromberg, who produced "Naughty Marietta", "Rose Marie" and "Maytime", and Director W. S. Van Dyke II, are the sweethearts who give us "Sweethearts"—and it's all in beautiful Technicolor.

And if you want to hear more about pictures, write for my little book, "The Screen Forecast," M-G-M Studios, Culver City, Cal. It's free!

Just call me Leo

★ ★ ★ ★ ★

We acknowledge with gratitude and appreciation receipt this week of Box-Office Magazine's Blue Ribbon of merit.

"Boys Town" won the award for the best family film.

Produced by the company with the best film family.

You guessed it, the Hardys!

THAT ANNIVERSARY

WHEN the motion picture industry gets around next year to its projected Golden Jubilee, in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of its birth in the autumn of 1889, it can supplement and accent the event by including the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the art of photography with the Daguerreotype in 1839.

It was September of 1889 when George Eastman began the commercial manufacture of film which was to empower the demonstration of Thomas Edison's waiting Kinetograph and Kinetoscope in October. And it was just fifty years before, also in September, when aboard the British Queen came tidings to New York of the pictorial process evolved by Louis Jacques Mandé Daguerre in France. Before the month was out America was making Daguerreotypes, too.

Interestingly, the new art was promoted by Samuel F. B. Morse, inventor of the telegraph. He was not to foresee that with the coming of motion records the picture was destined to be an instrument of communication, too.

IT'S A BUSINESS

THERE'S a shaft of sunshine into this grey day in Rockefeller Center. The scene has been a deal beset by the mullygrubs, the doldrums and the pip, including such matters as government suits, trade practise rows, rising costs, rising taxes, shrinking markets abroad and certain box office apathies. Then along comes a set of bankers to put $2,500,000 into Universal Pictures at five percent. That sounds exactly like a commercial transaction at a commercial rate of interest. It may also be understood as a banking bet of two and a half million dollars that the motion picture is still a business, going somewhere.

TAX STRICTURE

"STARS now prefer to work on a picture by picture basis," observed Mr. Hal Hode of Columbia Pictures Corporation on the air the other day, "because they believe that they can make more money that way." May be so, but some of the top rank players want to reduce their output to escape the more ravenously confiscatory income tax brackets. The consequence is a constriction of the flow of the better box office material and damage to the whole of the business down to, and including, the consumer.

IT'S NOT THE CANAL

SOME of the more profound cognoscenti among the metropolitan reviewers got their art and their history mixed up and complained about Mr. Tyrone Power in the role of de Lesseps in "Suez." The run at the Roxy is demonstrating the high acceptability of both Mr. Power and the picture to some profitable thousands who obviously do not know or care about the difference between the "Suez" and the alimentary canals. Once again—the sole responsibility of the motion picture on the theatre screen is entertainment. Real history is grimy, full of bad odors and no entertainment until made up and back lighted.

YOU CAN TELL 'EM

THERE is no flattery for our art and industry in the reported opinion of a California judge that it is as hard to libel an actor as a politician. The subject came up in Miss Constance Bennett's suit against Mr. Jimmy Fidler in which the court held, says the Associated Press, "that certain remarks against a public character are privileged, even though false, if made without malice." There should be, however, a great relief in the knowledge that it is entirely legal to tell 'em off if only it is done in a nice way. Also one may deduce that since radio commentators are public characters, it will be appropriate for Miss Bennett to file some additional remarks about Mr. Fidler.

MORE BOOTSTRAPS

BUSINESS under stresses becomes marvelously, intricately ingenious, and sometimes painfully naive. In the daily press the other day Colonel Ralph K. Strassman, officer of an advertising agency, came forth with a statement that advertisers should inspect their own pantries to find out if their "home purchasing agents" were supporting advertised products, urging, too, that advertisers' employees be required to buy advertised products. It would seem to one reader that possibly the Colonel is not expressing encouraging confidence in the persuasive qualities of the advertising.

CONSTRUCTIVE

THE indignant visitor sat by the editor's desk looking across the Radio City canyon at the giant waffle facade of the Center's tallest building.

"How many windows are there over there?" he demanded.

"Exactly 12,551," we answered with our customary statistical and editorial infallibility.

The caller fixed us with his cold blue eyes.

"Then," he said, "there should be nothing the matter with American business, with all of those facilities for throwing executives out of the window."

THE red and gold and bronze of the pageantry of autumn have come again to the valley of the Silvermine in Connecticut. The blue haze of Indian summer tints the distances in the foothills of the Berkshires. Everything that is wrong with the world is penned up on desks in office cubicles in cities. The problems of this troublous period of drives, campaigns and lawsuits are all self-made, hand-made, man-made, also incompetent, irrelevant and immaterial.

This Week

Conferences

Long awaited and long discussed, the round table conferences on trade practice regulation proposed by distributors last summer opened in New York on Wednesday. Conferring separately with members of the distributors' committee were representatives of Allied States Association of Motion Picture Exhibitors and the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America. Leaders of both organizations held preliminary discussions on Monday and Tuesday to decide on strategy and formulate their programs for presentation. The MPTO negotiating committee met Sidney R. Kent and Ned E. Depinet in the Union League Club, scene of the first of the 5-5 conferences nine years ago. Gradwell Sears, who joined the distributors' committee this week, and William F. Rodgers opened the discussions with Allied's representatives in the Columbia Club, Abe Montague, fifth member of the distributors' committee alternated between the two meetings.

The story of the opening of the conferences and the long disputes and unrest which led up to them starts on page 14.

Second Trust Meeting

The second meeting of representatives of the major film companies, defendants in the Government's anti-trust suit in equity, and officials of the Department of Justice was held in Washington on Wednesday. Results of the conference were not made known but questions of procedure and discussions of conduct of the suit were on the agenda, it was said. Thurman Arnold, Wendell Berge and Paul Williams represented the Department of Justice. Colonel William J. Donovan, Austin Keough of Paramount, Robert W. Perkins of Warner Brothers, J. Robert Rubin of Loew's, William Mallard of RKO, B. F. Shipman of Mudge, Stern, Williams and Tucker, and Ralph S. Harris and Richard P. Dwight of Dwight, Harris, Koegel and Caskey represented the defendants. The first conference was held in Washington September 28th.

New Divorcement Law

A bill to divest distribution interests of theatre holdings in Minnesota will be sponsored in the state legislature next January regardless of any action the supreme court may take on the validity of the North Dakota divorcement statute now before it on appeal, W. A. Steffes, president of the organization, said in New York this week. Mr. Steffes represented Allied of the Northwest at the trade practice conferences. He added that the plan for the Minnesota action was definite in spite of reports that other Allied units would await the supreme court ruling before taking action on similar legislation in their states.

Anti-Trust Suit

Chicago independent theatremen won the first victory in their suit against Balaban and Katz and distributors on Wednesday when Federal Judge Wilkerson overruled the motion of the defendants to strike out certain parts of the complaint entered by the independents. Attorneys for the independents continued their plea for a temporary injunction, showing graphs illustrating the present release system and describing the result thereof.

The hearing on the injunction plea was concluded Wednesday afternoon and Judge Wilkerson said he would give his decision on Thursday.

Technology

Members of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers will hear papers, see demonstrations and discuss the results of advances and improvements in the technology of the film industry at their three-day semi-annual convention which convenes in Detroit October 31st. A special feature of the convention program will be the presentation of the Society's Progress Medal and Journal Award.

Schaefer Moves In

Over the week-end George Schaefer was due to make his much discussed official entry into command as executive head of RKO. Meetings of the four boards of the four corporations of the group were scheduled for Thursday to take official action on the election of Mr. Schaefer as president. This was then to be announced by the trustee, who was at the same time to announce that Mr. Schaefer would also be the president of the reorganized company on its emergence from "77-B." That will make a total of five elections of Mr. Schaefer, somewhat confirming the report he was to be president of RKO.

The Rooney

The phenomenal rise of Mickey Rooney, born Joe Yule, Jr., to star ranking in the past year reads like a page out of a Horatio Alger novel. Mickey, a former vaudevillian and an actor as far back as he is able to remember, has always been a good trouser but his ascendancy dates from his "Andy Hardy" in the "Judge Hardy's Family" pictures out of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio. Two recent films "Boys Town" and "Stablemates" in which he co-stars with Spencer Tracy in the former and Wallace Beery in the latter, are on the way to audiences throughout the country, adding to the Rooney popularity. William R. Weaver, Hollywood editor, in a story on page 23, tells Mickey's story.

Trade Pact

Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain hopes to make simultaneous announcement of an Anglo-American trade pact and a Mediterranean agreement with Premier Mussolini of Italy soon after Parliament reassembles on November 1st, according to a United Press dispatch from London. Regarding the actual agreement little is known but it is expected that Great Britain will grant the United States access to the British market in much the same manner that Australia and Canada have access under the Ottawa Agreements.

U.S. Intervenes

The Department of Justice intervened on Wednesday in the patent infringement case involving General Talking Pictures Corporation, Western Electric and Electrical Research Products, Inc., as the hearing opened before the United States supreme court.

The supreme court earlier in the week had rejected a petition by William S. Hart for a review of a circuit court of appeals decision in favor of United Artists in the case involving a six-year contract for distribution of his pictures.

GB-Odeon

Settlement of the court action brought by John Maxwell of Associated British against the Ostrer brothers in connection with his purchase of shares in Gaumont British does not clear the way fully for the anticipated merger of GB and the strong Odeon circuit, headed by Oscar Deutsch. United Artists holds a substantial interest in Odeon and both 20th Century-Fox and MGM, part owners in GB, must be consulted before any deal is closed. Judgment was given the Ostrer brothers with costs this week by Lord Justice Goddard when it was declared in court the plaintiff was not proceeding with the case. Valentine Holmes, acting for Mr. Maxwell said the case had been abandoned. It is believed that the out of court settlement was assisted materially by unofficial intervention by Board of Trade officials.

J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board of directors of Universal, is in England for conferences relating to the possible disposal by C. M. Woolf-Lord Portal-Arthur Rank (General Theatres) of distribution and theatre interests to Odeon for approximately $10,000,000. This is part of the projected four-cornered $40,000,000 British theatre merger among Odeon, Bernstein Theatres, Ltd., General and the Gaumont British circuit.

Campaign Notes

Sixty-seven new pledges from independent exhibitors, with theatres seating from 150 to 1,500, were received in the past week at the New York headquarters of Motion Pictures' Greatest Year, bringing the total of independent theatres enrolled in the drive to 7,000. Programs have been prepared by composers, orchestra leaders and music publishers for Music Week, beginning October 31st. The title of the all-industry short subject, "The World Is Yours," has been changed to "The World Is Ours."

British Impasse

While trade practices and self-regulation were before the leaders of the industry in America for the long sought solution, British exhibitors returned from the uncertainties of the international situation to the vexed problem of the challenge on the competitive field of the circuits to the independents, primarily in matters of overseating, protection and zoning, and double featuring. The negotiating committee of the general council reported that the "overplus program" problem was insoluble, but the issue will be threshed over again at the November meeting.

United Artists Plans

Plans of Samuel Goldwyn to leave for Hollywood on Thursday eliminated the possibility that the annual meeting of United Artists stockholders, at which the company president is expected to be named, would be advanced from November 9th to accommodate three of the five company owners who were in New York. Douglas Fairbanks is en route to the Coast after two weeks in New York. Mary Pickford is remaining in the east. Charles Chaplin and Alexander Korda would have been able to participate through their eastern representatives. The bylaws, it is understood, require a unanimous vote of stockholders to elect anyone other than Maurice Silverstone, who is general manager.

Unions

Dr. Towne Nylander, regional director on the coast for the National Labor Relations Board, declined this week to recommend to the NLRB in Washington that a formal complaint be issued charging the producers with violating the Wagner Act. The Screen Writers' Guild had filed charges accusing the producers of violations by refusing to bargain with the guild as exclusive bargaining agent. A proposition affecting the motion picture industry in California will be voted on in that state November 8th.

Tax Receipts Up

Federal admission tax collections in September reached the highest figure for any month since last March, totaling $1,668,827, it was reported this week by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The month's receipts, however, while $243,000 above those of August, were $53,000 under the $1,722,468 collected in September, 1937, it was announced. The September collections for the sixth consecutive month, were under those of the corresponding period last year, the result being that revenue for the first three quarters of 1938 was $415,000 under the same period in 1937, totaling $14,059,465 against $14,474,812.

The Bureau reported that business in the metropolitan centers was improved, collections from the third New York (Broadway) district after dropping severely from July to August, increasing from $282,513 in the latter month to $377,360 last month. All of the improvement was in box office collections, which increased from $243,909 to $337,366, the latter figure, however, being $70,000 under the September, 1937, box office receipts of $407,698. Total collections in the district were $65,000 under the $442,546 reported for September of last year, it was shown.

Argentine Monopoly

A bill put before the Argentine Senate by Senator Sanchez Sorondo would result in a government monopoly under a board of "classification and control," to examine and judge all films, and with authority to prohibit an American company from operating if its films were considered detrimental to Argentinian interests.

A complete account of the bill will be found on page 26.

Radio Superpower

A three-man subcommittee of the Federal Communications Commission on Monday released its report on the Crosley Radio Corporation's application to continue operating the only superpower commercial broadcasting station in the country, WLW. The subcommittee recommended refusal to renew the license on three principal grounds. The recommendation must be passed upon by the full seven members of the FCC.

Trouble Again

The motion picture industry in Mexico again is beset by labor trouble. The Workers' Federation has demanded the employment of more of its members in the studios, a demand opposed by both the producers and studio workers' organization. Only recently all Mexican production had been suspended because of a jurisdictional fight between film unions.

Not until some entrepreneur sells an advertisement to be placed on Grover Whalen's World's Fair pylon will RKO's feat of placing its initials on the Eiffel Tower be equalled. It inaugurated a sales drive.

Mr. Prendergast is one of the leaders in the movement for an independent group. He is prominent in British Independent Exhibitors, Ltd., distributors, and operates the Rialto theatre in York.

Does your city want to adopt a son? Alan Mowbray, shown above arriving in New York, is available and willing. The United Artists publicity department says the British born actor who is featured in "There Goes My Heart" advertised to 1,400 cities that he wanted to be adopted by America so that he would have a home town in which his pictures could be premiered. He already is a son of Demopolis, Ala.; Quincy, Cal.; Joplin, Mo., and Boone, Iowa, those communities having taken whatever steps are necessary.

The first three as sergeants of the Queen's Own Miners and Sappers are Kipling's "Soldiers Three," whose uproarious careers are interwoven with the same author's ballad of "Gunga Din" in the film of that name now in expensive production at RKO. Jaffe has the title role as the regimental water carrier. Directed by George Stevens and adapted by Ben Hecht, Charles McArthur, Joel Sayre and Fred Guiol, the picture is rated RKO's costliest venture since "Cimarron."

and THE MPTOA

IN New York this week at the invitation of the distributors committee for the formulation of a trade practice program for voluntary regulation, leaders of Allied and the MPTOA met separately as pictured on this and the opposite page and appointed committees to confer with distributors. Details of the conferences are in the story starting on page 14.

ALL REPORT PROGRESS AT JOINT CONFERENCE ON SELF-REGULATION

Round table conferences at which distributors' representatives met delegates of national exhibitor organizations to discuss the formulation of a comprehensive and effective program of voluntary trade practice regulations became an accomplished fact this week after years of earnest attempts and months of intensive activity for regulation, either voluntary or by government and litigation.

Statements issued after the opening joint discussions on Wednesday reported that progress had been made toward the announced goal. Meetings with the national exhibitor organizations, Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and Allied States Association, were held separately at the insistence of Allied, and the distributors' committee divided into two groups so that simultaneous negotiations might be conducted.

Meet Separately

Meeting in the dignified, almost somber, surroundings of the Union League Club on New York's Park Avenue, scene of the first and several subsequent 5-5-5 conferences nearly nine years ago, Edward Kuykendall, president of MPTOA and chairman of its committee; Lewen Pizor, Arthur Lockwood, Oscar Lam, H. V. Harvey, Charles E. Williams and Edward Levy sat with Sidney R. Kent and Ned E. Depinet for the distributors.

A statement from Mr. Kuykendall's office early Wednesday evening reported:

"An all-day comprehensive discussion was entered into and definite progress made towards the solution of outstanding industry problems."

Meanwhile in the academic surroundings of the Columbia University Club in Forty-third Street, just off Fifth Avenue, Nathan Yamins, president of Allied; W. Al Steffes, Col. H. A. Cole, Sidney Samuelson, Ray Branch and Herman Bloom discussed block booking, allocation changes, designated playdates, and clearance and zoning, with William F. Rodgers, Abe Montague and Gradwell Sears for the distributors. The ensuing statement at the end of the day said:

"While no decision was reached on the subjects discussed . . . all present felt that progress was made."

The Wednesday meetings opened a series of negotiations which, leaders of both distribution and exhibition expected, would last until well into next week. Because of the meeting at Atlantic City, of the National Allied States board of directors, scheduled for Thursday in conjunction with the convention of Allied of New Jersey, in progress in that seaside city, the distributor-Allied

What Allied Asks

Addressing the convention of the Independent Theatre Owners of Ohio in December, 1937, Abram F. Myers, Allied chairman, outlined a list of "trade problems needing correction." Since then the points covered have been accepted as Allied's minimum demands for any trade practice program. They are:

1. Compulsory block booking.
2. Unreasonable protection.
3. Undue theatre expansion.
4. The "right to buy".
5. Contract revision.
6. Designated playdates.
7. Unfair allocations.
8. Non-delivery of pictures.
10. Radio competition.

The first three points are the subjects of Allied-sponsored legislation in the states and in Congress.

meetings adjourned Wednesday night until Friday. The MPTOA meetings with the distributors continued through Thursday and Friday. Mr. Kuykendall announced that a full report of the discussions and any proposals arising therefrom would be submitted in detail to the MPTOA board of directors and the national convention in Oklahoma City October 30th.

L. C. Griffith and Samuel Pinanski, both members of the MPTOA executive committee, were unable to be present at the Wednesday session, and Mack Jackson and M. C. Moore attended as observers.

The conferences with distributors were preceded by individual meetings of the leaders of both national exhibitor organizations, the Allied board of directors convening in the Warwick Hotel Monday, and the MPTOA executive committee gathering in the association's New York office at 1600 Broadway. Representatives of all units in both groups attended. In all day sessions on Monday and Tuesday plans and strategy were drafted for the distributor conferences and negotiating committees appointed.

The Allied group consisted of Col. H. A. Cole, chairman; W. A. Steffes, Ray Branch, Sidney Samuelson and Nathan Yamins. Abram F. Myers as general counsel was included in the negotiating committee and M. A. Rosenberg and Herman Blum were named as alternates. Acting as negotiators for the MPTOA were Edward Kuykendall, O. C. Lam, M. C. Moore, Mack Jackson, Edward Levy, Arthur Lockwood, Charles E. Williams, H. V. Harvey, Lewen Pizor and Samuel Pinanski.

When the actual conferences got under way on Wednesday the distributors' committee was divided in order to make possible concurrent meetings with the two exhibitor groups. Sidney R. Kent and Ned E. Depinet met with the MPTOA committee and Gradwell L. Sears, Warner Brothers sales manager who was named to the committee this week, and William F. Rodgers talked with the Allied group. Abe Montague alternated between the two meetings.

Mr. Rodgers on Tuesday said he expected the negotiations to extend well into next week. On Monday the distributors will start discussions with six unaffiliated exhibitor organizations not represented by the major committees. It was expected that these groups would be asked to name a joint committee to facilitate procedure.

Approximately 45 exhibitor groups were represented in the negotiations. Allied and the MPTOA each claim about 20 affiliated units. The MPTOA also represented the West Virginia Managers' Association, an unaffiliated organization. The six regional units with representatives of whom the distributors will conduct separate negotiations are the Independent Theatre Owners of New York, the Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kentucky, Theatre Owners and Managers of the Rocky Mountain Region, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Virginia and Allied of Iowa.

Conciliation Boards Planned

As the negotiations opened it was expected that the foundation of any long range program formulated would be the setting up of conciliation boards in exchange centers to settle disputes which sometimes grow by accretion to major anti-trust suits. It was reported this summer when the distributors' committee was formed that such boards would be the heart of any proposed program. It was made clear that they would be just what their name implies, intended for the conciliation of disputes between distributor and exhibitor and between exhibitors themselves. They would not have the power to render a formal decision or effect any order as did the old Arbitration Boards and the NRA code boards. Also they would differ from these forms in that they would be completely voluntary. Compulsory submission of disputes and effective enforcement of any arbitrary decisions are not legally possible or contemplated.

The committees were reported also to be prepared to discuss the problem of liberalization of the cancellation clauses in exhibition contracts. This has been a primary demand of exhibitor groups in all agitation for trade practice reform and it has been pointed out that concessions along these lines would have the effect of nullifying most of the complaints on which support for the Neely anti-block booking bill has been based.

UNIT MEETINGS CLEAR THE WAY

Neither of the exhibitor organization groups gave any intimation of the points on which they would base their discussions with distributors but it was understood there would be little change from the basic points which each association has advocated consistently. An Allied draft of "trade problems needing correction," was enunciated at an ITO of Ohio meeting in December, 1937. It included compulsory block booking, undue theatre expansion, the "right to buy," unfair allocations, non-delivery of pictures, unreasonable protection, contract revision, designated play dates and radio and other non-theatrical competition.

Programs Overlap

The last four points are included in the MPTOA program which also lists demands for local conciliation boards, mediation of overbuying and of unfair competition between theatres, elimination of score charges and elimination of forced short subject sales. The MPTOA list also contains a demand for more liberal cancellation with the right to cancel unconditionally and many exhibitors and distributors are said to feel that a satisfactory cancellation agreement would lessen if not obviate entirely exhibitor and legislative objections to the block booking system.

Allied acceptance of the invitation to confer with distributors was based on the stipulation that the conferences would not be limited to the program of any particular group but would be allowed to become "as broad as the problems involved in the sale and distribution of film," including those summarized at the Ohio meeting.

Long Debated Problem

Fair trade practices, debated question of the industry virtually from the beginnings of distribution, in recent years had become the object of concerted attention when the recurrent disputes resulted in the first of the 5-5-5 conferences in December, 1929, at which representatives of the distributors and affiliated circuits, the MPTOA and Allied began a long drawn out discussion of a standard exhibition contract form. Subsequent conferences and related correspondence were carried on until the advent of the NRA code, which was adopted for the industry in November, 1933.

The meetings this week were the culmination of more than two years of concerted agitation for the evolution of a definite trade practice code, preferably one arrived at by joint conferences of exhibitors and distributors, a phase of the problem which began with the invalidation of the NRA early in 1936. Since then both the MPTOA and Allied have devoted intensive efforts to the attainment of trade practice regulation through various methods, including the anti-theatrical ones of self-regulation and regulation by legislation.

In April, 1936, the MPTOA announced its ten-point program to which it has adhered ever since and which forms the basis of the organization's present talks with distributors. The program was submitted to

What MPTOA Asks

The MPTOA ten point trade practice program was announced in April, 1936, when it was submitted to distributors. The program and the answers prepared by the companies have been the subject of the organization's complete attention ever since. Briefly, it calls for:

1. Twenty per cent cancellation.
2. Local conciliation boards.
3. Score charge elimination.
4. Elimination of short subject forcing.
5. Relief on designated play dates.
6. Relief on overbuying.
7. Mediation of clearance and zoning.
8. Short form of contract.
9. Relief from cut-rate competition.
10. Relief from non-theatrical competition.

the eight major producer-distributing companies for consideration with a request for a definite reply on each of the points presented. Not until November of that year, however, was the first reply received and it was not until February, 1937, that answers were made by seven of the companies. Warner Brothers refused from the start to consider the negotiations.

The replies of the companies for the most part were favorable. All indicated a desire to cooperate with exhibitors in working out a program. On unconditional cancellation up to ten per cent, Columbia, MGM, Paramount, RKO, 20th Century-Fox and Universal were favorable and United Artists refused. MGM, RKO, 20th Century-Fox and Universal insisted that all features offered be licensed and Columbia required that cancellations be on lower priced features. On the establishment of local conciliation boards Columbia, MGM, Paramount, RKO, and Universal were favorable and 20th-Fox and United Artists gave qualified approval. On clearance adjustment Columbia, MGM, RKO and Universal were favorable, Paramount gave a qualified answer and 20th-Fox and United Artists left the question open for discussion. On mediation of overbuying and of unfair competition between theatres all responses were favorable except Paramount, which refused to enter any controversy on overbuying and 20th-Fox, whose answer left the questions open for discussion.

On adjustment of non-theatrical competition the answers were unanimously favorable. On the introduction of a short form of contract MGM and RKO were favorable and Columbia, Paramount, 20th-Fox, United Artists and Universal refused. On score charge elimination Columbia, United Artists and Universal were favorable and MGM, Paramount, RKO and 20th-Fox refused. On adjustment of preferred playing time Columbia, United Artists and Universal were favorable, MGM and Paramount refused and RKO and 20th-Fox remained open on the subject. On the elimination of forced short subject sales Columbia, RKO, 20th-Fox, United Artists and Universal were favorable, MGM was noncommittal and Paramount gave a qualified answer.

Program Stalled

Long delays marked by continued correspondence between Mr. Kuykendall as president of the MPTOA and the various sales executives followed publication of the companies' replies but little was accomplished even toward establishment of local conciliation boards, a step which all the companies agreed would be a satisfactory answer to many trade practice problems. Four distributors, MGM, Columbia, United Artists and Universal, who agreed to discontinue the levying of a separate score charge fulfilled their promise at the opening of the 1937-38 selling season but other than this no steps were taken toward carrying out the provisions of the program.

All through 1937 the program remained bogged down in discussion while the problem with which it was concerned became more and more acute. Court actions based on charges of anti-trust violation in connection with various trade practices were numerous and widespread. Allied States Association having embarked on a program of active lobbying for legislation to restrict distribution practices intensified its efforts for new federal and state laws directed to that end.

In particular Allied prepared a model bill which it announced would be pressed in 44 state legislatures and which would prohibit participation in exhibition by producer-distributor interests. Fines and jail sentences were provided for violations. The 1937 session of the North Dakota legislature passed a similar divorce law, a test case of which is now being appealed to the supreme court by Paramount. Identical bills were introduced in several other state legislatures where they are still under consideration.

Block Booking Bill Supported

Allied also devoted considerable attention to urging support for the block booking bill which was introduced in Congress for three successive sessions and which at last winter's session was passed by the Senate. Nor was Federal attention to the trade practice problems of the motion picture industry confined to possible Congressional action.

Late in 1936 when the companies were drawing up their first answers to the MPTOA ten point program it was reported in Washington that the then newly formed National Council for Industrial Progress, headed by Major George L. Berry, would invite industry heads to the capital to discuss a possible revival of the principles and operation of the NRA. Later this plan was abandoned and Major Berry announced for the Council that its activities would be confined to study of the anti-trust laws and future anti-trust legislation.

Concurrently with scrutiny of the industry by Government agencies, with agitation by Allied and other groups within the industry for control by legislation, and with sporadic attention by the companies to the MPTOA program, anti-trust suits claiming specific damages were filed in almost every section of the country by independent exhibitors and by the Department of Justice. Outstanding in this classification was the action begun in Dallas by the Department in December, 1936, against the Texas Interstate Circuit and the eight major distributors charging violation of the anti-trust laws in that exhibition contracts contained clauses prohibiting the double billing of pictures and fixing minimum admission prices. This case, decided against the distributors, is now before the United States supreme court on appeal together with a similar suit, the Perelman case in Philadelphia. Other suits, notable for their scope or for the amount of damages asked, were filed by individuals in New Orleans, Oklahoma City, Denver, Gary and Los Angeles, all concerned with charges of restriction of trade or unfair competition under the anti-trust laws.

Congressional Probe Proposed

Congressional attention to the industry included in addition to consideration of the block booking bill a proposal introduced in May, 1937, by Martin Dies, Democratic representative from Texas and a member of the House of Representatives rules committee, for a sweeping investigation of every conceivable phase of the motion picture industry, the bill providing for a survey to determine "whether the present methods of the producer-distributor constitute a stabilizing or disorganizing influence upon the industry as a whole." The proposal was pigeonholed.

During 1937 abortive attempts were made by Allied, by the MPTOA and by independent groups to call joint conferences with distributors for discussion of trade practice problems.

Early in the fall of 1937 a second and more comprehensive proposal for intra-industry conferences was put forward by the Independent Theatre Owners Association of New York in an open letter from its president, Harry Brandt, to Nathan Yamins, president of Allied, and Edward Kuykendall, president of the MPTOA. Both organizations agreed to the proposal, Mr. Yamins qualifying Allied's acceptance with the provision that "Allied will lend its support to any plan to secure benefits for the independent exhibitors so long as it is not called upon to abandon its program for securing redress by other methods in case such a plan fails."

Project Abandoned

After successive dates for the conference had been set and postponed the project was finally abandoned when the Allied board of directors, meeting in Washington in January, 1938, invoked the qualification inserted in Mr. Yamins' acceptance and voted not to participate in a meeting with the other exhibitor groups "until plans for seeking relief in Congress are carried to a successful conclusion." Following this action Mr. Kuykendall said it would be pointless for his organization to meet alone with the ITOA in New York.

HAYS AND ARNOLD ON SAME PLATFORM

Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and Thurman Arnold, assistant attorney general, whose department is now prosecuting the major motion picture companies in an anti-trust suit, will be co-speakers at forum conducted by the New York Herald-Tribune. The first session will be held on October 25th at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, with the topic, "Keeping the Mind of the Nation Young." Mr. Hays will discuss the part films play in that effort.

Reports that the Department of Justice intended a comprehensive anti-trust drive in the motion picture industry were intensified following the collapse of the conference plan.

Furnishing the background accompaniment to the loud trade practice complaints of the two national exhibitor organizations were the voices of numerous independent groups which by letter and resolution demanded action on trade practice reform. Their most threatening effort was active co-operation with national Allied in a "buyers' strike" organized against Paramount following charges that the company failed to deliver six pictures listed in the 1936-37 contracts and included the same films in the 1937-38 programs. Although the "strike," actively sponsored by Allied, received support in several sections it was centered in Philadelphia where it was supported by the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners, an unaffiliated organization. The strike reached the courts when Paramount appealed for temporary injunctions against participants in Philadelphia and Minneapolis but the matter was settled after four months.

Collusion Feared

The constant objection of distribution companies to cooperation with each other and exhibitor organizations for the purpose of formulating a trade practice program during the period was the expressed belief that such cooperation might be construed by Government agencies as acting in concert in violation of the anti-trust laws. In March of this year Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, said, "There is a feeling among some companies that if they act concertedly to set up conciliation or arbitration machinery, it would be considered collusion in violation of the anti-trust laws. That is not our feeling. We are ready to join with other companies in establishing a system of conciliating exhibitor grievances."

Early in May it was reported exclusively in MOTION PICTURE HERALD that distributors were ready to concede the necessity and the possibility of self-regulation of trade practices and were preparing a program envisioning conferences with exhibitor groups and the drawing up of a voluntary trade practice code. At the Allied convention which followed later in the month William F. Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, presented a plan under which the organization immediately would authorize a committee to meet with distributors. The sense of the convention, however, was that Allied would not commit itself until distributors invited the organization to discuss "a solution of all major as well as minor problems of the industry" and assurances of participation by every one of the eight major distributors were given. In the meantime it was resolved to continue the campaign for regulation by legislation and in particular to continue support of the Neely anti-block booking bill which at that time was before Congress.

On June 28th a formal statement was issued by distributors announcing that Mr. Kent had agreed to act as chairman of a committee "charged with developing a program for the solution of such trade problems in the industry as are still matters of contention." The full membership of the committee as it is now constituted was announced at that time including Nicholas M. Schenck and Leo Spitz as alternate chairmen and Mr. Rodgers, Ned E. Depinet and Abe Montague as negotiators. The committee, it was announced, would at first confine itself to the preparation of a definite program and no negotiations would be conducted with exhibitor groups until that program was completed. The announcement by the distributors came three days after Mr. Kent and Mr. Schenck, accompanied by Will H. Hays and the presidents of six other distributing companies had discussed trade problems at the White House.

On July 16th it was announced that invitations to exhibitor organizations for general conferences were being prepared by the committee but before these were issued the Department of Justice filed its suit in equity against virtually the entire motion picture industry. No action was taken for several weeks until Mr. Kent announced that new problems engendered by the suit would force a delay in the trade practice conferences until after Labor Day. The matter remained in abeyance until last week's invitations were issued and this week's conferences began.

Relations between distributors and exhibitors were discussed Saturday at the adjourned meeting of the board of directors of the Picture Producers and Distributors of America. Attending were N. J. Blumberg, Harry Cohn, Jack Cohn, Samuel Goldwyn, Will H. Hays, Sidney Kent, Joseph Schenck, Nicholas Schenck, Maurice Silverstone, Leo Spitz, Albert Warner and Harry Warner.

SELF-REGULATION MOVE SUPPORTED AT NEW JERSEY ALLIED CONVENTION

Myers Sees Anti-Trust Suit Adjusted If Industry Settles Own Problems; Max Cohen Protests Tying In Shorts

With exhibitors' interest centered on the trade practice conferences in New York, Allied of New Jersey opened its annual convention in Atlantic City this week. In connection with the meeting, gatherings of the National Allied board of directors and Allied of New York also were scheduled.

At the opening session Wednesday Max A. Cohen, president of Allied of New York, charged that independent theatre owners were being "forced to accept short subjects they don't want in order to get features they want." He told of placing complaints before William F. Rodgers, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer sales head, and being promised that that company would not follow such a policy.

Mr. Cohen said that the "Movie Quiz" contest in Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign is unsuccessful because of lack of public interest.

Eastern Regional Conference

The Allied National Board met in Atlantic City on Thursday to hear a report on Allied's progress in the trade practice negotiations.

Representatives also were present at the convention for an annual eastern regional conference of independent exhibitors, including delegates from Massachusetts, Connecticut, Maryland, eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, District of Columbia and other points.

A product survey of eastern seaboard exhibitors, indicating terms and other contractual data, was to be a highlight.

An open forum on industry problems and issues, such as the Government's anti-trust suit, the Neely bill, and "divorcement" legislation was also on the program.

The New York group, headed by Max A. Cohen, led a discussion of ways and means to combat radio competition.

The incumbent New Jersey officers were Irving Dollinger, Linden, president; Jacob Unger, Hillside, secretary; David Snaper, New Brunswick, treasurer, and Maurice Miller, Passaic, assistant treasurer. Directors are Mark Block, George Gold, Newark; Frank P. Gravatt, Atlantic City; Harry K. Hecht, Passaic; Helen B. Hildinger, Trenton; William C. Hunt, Wildwood; Lee W. Newbury, Belmar; I. A. Roth, Summit, and Sidney E. Samuelson, Newton.

Local theatres and amusement piers admitted, without charge, registered delegates wearing their convention badges.

Sees Amicable Adjustment

Proper self-regulation will lead to an amicable adjustment of the Government's anti-trust suit, Mr. Myers told the exhibitors in his annual message in the New Jersey Allied year book, issued in conjunction with the convention.

"The problem now is further complicated by the pendency of the Government suit," he said. "Nevertheless, if there's a will, a

UNIFIED EXHIBITOR ORGANIZING URGED

Ray Branch, president of Allied of Michigan, spoke of the need of a unified exhibitors organization at the convention held in Grand Rapids, October 10th to 12th.

Before introducing William F. Rodgers, M-G-M general sales manager, Mr. Branch said, "I cannot help but feel that the time is close at hand when an organization of all exhibitors into one unit shall come to pass, and should come to pass. I feel that the problems of the industry today insofar as the exhibitor is concerned, are alike and could be solved much easier."

way can be found. If the Big Eight are sufficiently impressed with the situation they can still seek, in cooperation with the bona fide representatives of the independent exhibitors, a solution of industry problems for submission to the Department of Justice as a compliance with the demands of the Government."

Harry G. Kosch, attorney for New York Allied, commenting on Mr. Myers' opinion on self-regulation, said the New York unit also favored the settlement of industry disputes by amicable methods.

Mr. Myers, in his statement, traced Allied's progress in trying to obtain concessions from the major companies and outlined his organization's objectives, as follows:

1. Full security to independent exhibitors.
2. Place distributor-exhibitor relations on a basis of mutual confidence and understanding and provide for adjustment of future disputes.
3. Bring the industry and every branch of it into conformity with the law.
4. Meet the reasonable demands of the religious, welfare and educational groups on community preferences and standards.

The convention program was:

WEDNESDAY, October 19.—Registration of delegates, 10 A. M.; eastern regional directors' meeting, 10 A. M.; luncheon for eastern regional directors; first general session, 3 P. M. to 5 P. M.; for the women, a tour through model American homes, 3 P. M.; get-together party, Club Nomad, 10 P. M.

THURSDAY, October 20.—Committee meetings, 10 A. M.; trade show, inspection of exhibits, 11 A. M.; second general session, 2 P. M. to 5 P. M.; product survey, New Jersey election of officers, New York Allied meeting and election of officers, gold room, third floor; ladies' bridge and tea, Paln Court, 2:30 P. M.; cocktail party, convention foyer, 7:15 P. M.; annual banquet, main dining room, 7:45 P. M.

FRIDAY, October 21.—Committee meetings; third general session; product survey results; committee reports; adjournment.

Ad Film Firms Form Association

Eight companies producing and distributing advertising films have been pooled in the formation of the Association of Advertising Film Companies. The arrangement will make theatres available for manufacturer-sponsored cooperative film campaigns, affording maximum coverage regardless of which of the associated companies first arranged the campaign.

The companies included are Tad Screen Advertising, Alexander Film Company, United Film Ad Service, Motion Picture Advertising Service, Inc., Ray-Bell Films, Al M. Smith Film Service, and A. V. Cauer Service, Inc.

Muzak Company Forms Advertising Division

Muzak, Warner Brothers controlled company which sends recorded music over telephone lines to home, restaurant and bar and grill clients, has formed a new commercial division to sell advertising. It is called Muzak Sponsored Program Service.

Advertising will be sold only to companies making products that can be purchased in dining and drinking establishments, and the copy will be broadcast only over a special wire serving Muzak clients of that nature. Muzak itself will not be commercialized, according to the company, which states that there will be no sponsorship of the musical portion of the entertainment.

Transradio News Service has been signed by Muzak to provide it with news service. The contract is for three five minute news periods a day, a sports news program at six p.m. and news flashes provided throughout the day as the news occurs. The service will be rendered from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 the following mornings.

Academy Announces New Test Reels

The Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has announced that they have available both variable area and variable density Standard Multi-Frequency Test Reels for use in checking sound reproducing equipment.

The reels are made in two types; Primary Standard, containing a complete set of frequencies, and Secondary Standard, containing a lesser number of frequencies.

MGM Winners Sail

Nine members of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer domestic sales staff are booked to sail Saturday on the Conte di Savoia for a month's holiday in Paris, London and other points. Winners in an international billings contest, the men are Charles E. Kessnich, John J. Maloney, Burtus Bishop, Jr., William B. Zoellner, Walter E. Banford, J. Frank Willingham, Maurice Saffle, William H. Workman, and Leroy H. Bickel.

No show in many, many months has created so much talk as RKO Radio's "A Man To Remember"..Hollywood's preview critics discovered it. Bookers, circuit heads and managers, convinced it is a 'sleeper' are arranging booking and laying plans to give it the works. Columnists and syndicate writers have taken up the chorus of praise, and seem determined to make everybody in America see it. Some of the big magazines are throwing out other layouts and remaking their pages to include pictures and news of this simple picture that is all heart and carries a heavyweight wallop to the chin.

U. S. INTERVENES IN PATENT CASE AS SUPREME COURT HEARINGS OPEN

Department of Justice Files Brief in Action Involving General Talking Pictures Corporation and Western Electric

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

The United States Government on Wednesday entered the bitterly contested patent infringement suit of General Talking Pictures Corporation versus Western Electric, Electrical Research Products, et al, on which hearings were begun before the supreme court. The brief was submitted by the Department of Justice as a "friend of the court."

"Although in form this is merely a suit between private parties," it was explained by the Department of Justice, "it involves a question of great public importance and the Department is therefore filing a brief on behalf of the United States, asking that restrictions such as this be declared illegal, and not authorized by the patent law, and inconsistent with the policy of the federal anti-trust laws."

The General Talking Pictures case involves the extent to which a patent owner can control the use to be made of his patented article after it passes into the hands of a purchaser. In this instance, amplifiers, restricted to radio reception use, were used by General Talking Pictures in the assembly of sound apparatus for theatres.

The United States supreme court on Monday brought to a conclusion the controversy between William S. Hart and United Artists over a six-year distribution contract, refusing a petition to review a decision of the circuit court of appeals in favor of United Artists.

The contract called for a division of the gross receipts from his pictures on a percentage basis, and Mr. Hart charged that before the first picture was put into production United Artists arranged for its distribution on such a price basis that his share would be less than the cost of production.

Mr. Hart brought suit to recover the sum retained by United Artists out of the proceeds of distribution, as its compensation, but the district court dismissed the complaint on the ground that it failed to state a cause of action, holding that the contract did not create a fiduciary relationship between the parties. The decision was affirmed by the circuit court, whose action was, in effect, given approval by the supreme court's rejection of an appeal by Mr. Hart.

An additional film case was scheduled by the supreme court for argument later this week, concerning the appeal of Texas Consolidated Theatres from a circuit court decision awarding damages to S. H. Pittman.

The Texas Consolidated case involves the right of a court to render a decision after a compromise agreement has been reached in a damage suit. Mr. Pittman recovered a judgment against the company, which appealed to the circuit court. Before any decision was reached, a compromise was made and a stipulation filed, asking that the case

UNIVERSAL HAS EIGHT PLAYING BROADWAY

During the month of October, eight Universal pictures are showing on Broadway. "The Road to Reno" opened at the Globe on October 1st, and "Personal Secretary" opened at the Rialto on October 4th, while on October 8th "Dark Rapture" followed "The Road to Reno" at the Globe, and the Rialto, on October 14th, began a double-billing of "Dracula" and "Frankenstein."

On October 15th, "Youth Takes a Fling" entered the Rivoli, followed by "Service De Luxe." The month will close with "That Certain Age," which will be at the Roxy October 28th.

be reversed and remanded to the trial court.

Thereafter an opinion was written affirming the judgment of the trial court, and a motion for a rehearing was overruled, the court holding that as the case was under advisement when the compromise was made, it was not bound to render a judgment dictated by the parties.

Franco Shuts Out Argentine Stars

Leading Argentine motion picture stars, writers and composers have been banned from Spanish Insurgent theatres under a recent decree of the Burgos Government.

This decision, which will affect the Argentine industry since Spain is one of the richest Spanish-language motion picture markets, is blamed to Loyalist activities.

Those affected by General Franco's decree are the following:

150 Join in Dinner Tribute to Golden

More than 150 men allied with the theatrical business sat down to a "friendship dinner" for Edward A. Golden, vice-president of Monogram in Minneapolis at the Nicollet Hotel Friday night before the Minnesota-Michigan football game, and the program was marked by speeches expressing the hope that much of the friction between warring factions of the industry would be shortly composed.

The dinner was an elaborate affair, tickets being set at $10. W. Al Steffes, President of Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, was in charge. The dinner was in the main ballroom of the hotel and music during the evening was provided by members of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra.

In the toastmaster's chair was William Elson, operator of the Seventh Street theatre in Minneapolis. Prominent among the guests were United States Senator Ernest Lundeen of Minnesota, Governor William Langer of North Dakota; Congressman Dewey Johnson and Henry Teigen of Minnesota; Mayor William Fallon of St. Paul, acting mayor Henry Bank of Minneapolis; John P. Devaney, formerly chief justice of the supreme court of Minnesota; P. S. Harrison of Harrison's Reports; William Rodgers and Jack Flynn, representing Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; George Dembow, John Friedl, Theo. L. Hays, M. Van Praag and H. M. Richey.

Congressman Dewey made a speech in which he discussed "monopoly," inferentially going on record in favor of legislation opposed to the chain operators in congress. Other speakers, particularly Mr. Rodgers and Mr. Devaney, expressed the hope that dissension within the industry would be stopped as the result of coming conferences. Mr. Steffes made the speech that introduced the guest of the night to his audience and presented him with a humidor in behalf of those attending the dinner. Mr. Golden was so impressed and overcome by the honors bestowed upon him that he could find only a few words to express his appreciation. An eloquent tribute to the guest of the occasion was delivered by Theo. Hays.

Most of those attending the dinner stayed over to see Minnesota defeat Michigan.

Casey to Confer With Musicians

Pat Casey, producers' labor representative, arrived in New York last Monday from the coast. He is sitting in at the conferences beginning Thursday between the American Federation of Musicians and the five companies with theatre affiliates, Loew's, Paramount, Warners', RKO and Twentieth Century-Fox.

The Musicians group, headed by Joseph N. Weber, is reported to have several plans for increasing employment opportunities in theatres for members of their group.

The Rise of the Rooney: A Veteran in His Teens

Started at Fifteen Months When He Crept Onto Vaudeville Stage

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

In a year when the Young Idea in Hollywood has been kicking up clouds of stardust comes the rise of a lad who has wooed Fame with showmanship beyond his teen years.

Somewhere below 100th ranking among the Money Making Stars of 1937 in MOTION PICTURE HERALD's annual round up of exhibitors' verdicts as to who make the ticket rolls go 'round, a preliminary examination of the showmen's ballots in the beginnings of the compilation of the 1938 poll indicates that the name Rooney has climbed many rungs of the ladder and may even advance into that select group of 10 at the top of them all.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has five more Hardy Family pictures down on paper and five more years to go on its contract with the youthful star. He'll get no top billing in these, but he'll be co-starred or better in an undetermined number of pictures outside the series, as in "Boys Town" and "Stablemates."

Soft Ball and Publicity

Mickey Rooney would be in there swinging if they stepped his schedule up to a picture a week, or split-week, because Mickey can take it or dish it out, thrives on either and has been doing both all his life. There'd be no hardship in such a schedule for Mickey, either, because he'll be acting anyway—always is—right around the clock, including Sundays.

Last week a couple of girls' softball teams up Sacramento way got an idea it would be cute to play a match on horseback. Then somebody remembered Mickey was working on "The Hardy Family Out West" and out of this attenuated coincidence popped the idea that it would be even cuter to have Mickey come up and umpire the game. He worked out the Saturday afternoon shift, caught the train for the California capital, obliged the young ladies of the softball league—a type of service Mickey never shies away from—and caught the night train back so as to be on hand when shooting started again Monday morning.

Of course, the newspapers found out about that, and some of the newsreels, too, and of course Mickey sort of thought they would. Mickey's been thinking of things like that for years, and never missing a bet. Only Leo Carrillo, who leads all official parades paraded in parade-conscious California, gets in more benefit performances per month than Mickey, and Mickey's young yet. Like Leo, he loves it, and, like Leo again, he knows that benefit is a two-way word. Leo got so popular, leading parades, that the citizens wanted him to run for Governor, but he said no. They'd better not ask Mickey.

Master Rooney—and when you call him that, smile—is no moppet, probably doesn't know what is meant by this lily-like word dug up by the columnists in a year chock full of juvenile wonders. (Maybe they don't, either.) Mickey is a rough, tough, fresh, cocky kid, happy about the breaks he's been getting, but not in the least overcome by it all. He's been too long in show business to go giddy under adulation and he takes his bows in stride. No veteran actor on the vast MGM preserve is so sure of himself as Mickey and none knows better how he got that way. For that matter, mighty few of the veterans are as veteran as this brash, bold and secretly sage young showman whose years in the business can be calculated directly from the birth date entered in the Brooklyn Hall of Records.

Mickey started his professional career in an exhibitionistic moment when he crept on to a vaudeville stage at 15 months and stole the show from Gold and LaTour (remember them?) by posing himself on one ear with his swaddled posterior aimed straight at the paying public, a stance he still uses effectively on occasion. It wouldn't quite do to call a rugged young box office champion like Mickey an exhibitionist, at his present age, but you couldn't call him less than an extrovert, off screen as on, and stay inside the facts. If there's an inhibition in him the publicity experts who look after him haven't been able to detect it.

All the syndicated columnists and radio magpies have been out to interview Mickey this summer and the magazine correspondents have covered him like Kaltenborn covered the Chamberlain conquest of Munich. He's told them everything and they've told everybody most of it, so there's not much use in repeating it all here. He was Joe Yule, Jr., in vaudeville from the time of his above mentioned debut until he got to be five years old and school loomed up. He was Mickey Maguire in 78 pictures he made for Larry Darmour while establishing required contact with the three R's, and he isn't the thoughtful kind of kid who would be given to wondering what Larry Darmour thinks about when he scans the gross charts on pictures like "Love Finds Andy Hardy." He took the Rooney name when the Maguire series ran out and it fits him better than his own. There are no copyright strings on this one, either, and he'll wear it from here in.

Full Size Star

The road ahead looks smoother than it does for most boy stars halfway through their teens. Mickey never had to be cute or beautiful or sweet or cuddly, so he has none of that to live down in the gangling years. And there aren't going to be any gangling years, probably because both parents are about his height and the only growing he's been doing lately is the horizontal kind. Freddy Bartholomew grew an inch while working in "Listen, Darling," but Mickey contemplates no growth more important, cinema-wise, than the hirsute.

In spite of the extra billing he gets in other pictures, Mickey has hitched his chariot to the Hardy Family series, where he's just among those present. When he strode into a room full of executives and bishops the other week, hot off the "Stablemates" set and sweating like a swipe, the cleric who stopped in the middle of his after dinner remarks to acknowledge an introduction to him called him Andy Hardy. A kid doesn't spend his life on the up and down hills of Hollywood without learning what a thing like that means, nor without noticing the studio suffering that goes on when one of the child prodigies without benefit of series needs a story.

Veteran of Comebacks

Mickey makes nice money, although a lot less than a lot of stars who make less for their employers and their employers' clients. Most of his money goes into a trust fund and the escalator clauses in his contract are rigged so that another five years will run the total up to a tidy sum. The statistics on his pictures aren't left strewn around loosely for studio snoops to check up on, but it's a fair guess that "Love Finds Andy Hardy" will gross about $1,500,000 in the domestic market and cost slightly more than a third of that. What his pictures are making for exhibitors is, of course, their own business.

Mickey Rooney realizes as well as any-

GOVERNMENT CONTROL OF ARGENTINE FILM INDUSTRY ASKED BY SENATOR

Would Authorize Shutting Out Foreign Distributor Whose Product Is Considered Detrimental to Domestic Interests

Government control of the motion picture industry is being considered in Argentina, under a National Institute or Classification and Control Bureau of eight members, only one of them, and he designated as an "honorary" member, to be connected with the producers.

The proposal, which would authorize the shutting out of any distributor whose operations were considered "detrimental," was made in a bill introduced by Senator Matias Sanchez Sorondo. In the 82 articles on control and regulation of the motion picture, described as an art and a social factor, Senator Sorondo traced the development of production in Argentina, previous legislation, and the status of the industry in Italy, Germany, France and Great Britain.

The bill was analyzed this week in New York by John B. Nathan, Paramount's general manager in Argentina, Paraguay and Uruguay, and formerly assistant manager in Panama and Cuba, manager in Guatemala, assistant to John Day, Paramount's general manager in South America, and general manager of Central American countries.

The primary objective of the measure, said Mr. Nathan, is to advance the nationalized Argentine film industry, which made 31 of the 551 features released in 1937. In that year, American production accounted for 391 features in Argentina, which is considered the most important film-importing South American country. Typically, the American films, save those made especially for the Spanish market, use superimposed titles rather than dubbing.

Company Tax Would Maintain Bureau

The board of "classification and control" would examine, classify and qualify all imported and national pictures. The board would be maintained by a tax, probably levied upon the distributing companies, and would have the authority to prohibit any company from operating if it distributed any picture adjudged detrimental to Argentina's interests.

Import quotas were opposed as a threat to the quality of local product because of the challenge in the high standard of foreign pictures. At that time, recommendation was made to lift the duty on raw stock, cameras and other equipment as a benefit to Argentine production.

Protests from many sources followed, and official discussion of the bill was postponed until May, 1939. The Argentine Society of Authors joined local players and national producers in objecting to the proposals, feeling that restrictions, once started, easily could extend to them. American distributors also formulated protests.

Would Limit Exhibition

Senator Sorondo was quoted in "La Nacion," one of Buenos Aires' two largest newspapers, which published the text in full.

While objecting to an import quota, the Senator declared that a restriction on program time should be made in order to "allow the incorporation of domestic films in the bookings

HAS SUNDAY SHOWS FOR FIRST TIME

Residents of Jones County, Mississippi, including Laurel, enjoyed motion pictures last Sunday for the first time in several years and indications point to continuation of the Sabbath programs, theatre operators report.

In the fall months of 1930, an attempt was made by operators to run shows on Sundays but after all were arrested and charged with violating untested Blue Sunday laws, no further attempts were made to give patrons Sunday shows until last weekend.

which are at present controlled by foreign producers."

"The public demands it," he said. "Holidays especially should be Argentine days. Even now in 1938, a Greta Garbo picture produces four times less than that of an Argentine star."

The Argentine Motion Picture Institute, or Bureau of Classification and Control, would bar foreign films if the Institute thought them inimical to the national prestige, "provided the official Argentine representatives abroad call the attention of the Institute to this circumstance." The Institute is also to create scholarships, establish authors' royalties, and grant credits for the promotion of domestic films through a State Bank. In addition to authorizing free importation of raw film intended for domestic production, the Institute would establish and regulate the annual percentage of bookings, and the exports of Argentine subjects.

No Tax on Argentine Films

The Classification and Control Bureau would consist of eight members, seven of them salaried and not connected with the producers, and the eighth, an "honorary member," representing the motion picture industry. All the members must be native Argentine citizens. The Bureau would classify and qualify all pictures exhibited in the country, as well as the advertising material for each film, these classifications to be prominently displayed at the box-office and on programs, cards and newspaper advertisements. No person under 15 years of age would be allowed, whether accompanied or alone, to attend theatres showing pictures judged "improper."

The foreign motion picture companies would have to pay special taxes specified under the tax law, but there would be no tax on Argentine pictures or on those foreign productions of a scientific, cultural or educational nature, or on cartoons.

Protests Widespread

An example of the opposition aroused by the bill was a statement signed by the Association of Argentine Motion Picture Producers, comprising nearly all the local independent producers, which said:

"The contents and basic foundations on which the legislator has based his bill are against the tenets of the Argentine Constitution, whereby the liberty of trade, production and the expression of ideas are established. Under the Sorondo bill the industry would be subject to the judgment and will of persons who so far have produced nothing for the domestic industry, and who with shocking self-sufficiency pretend to secure for themselves the right of censorship of production, trade and ideas, which is entirely in violation of the democratic principles established under the Constitution within the national territory."

"The national motion picture producers association will reserve to itself the right to call the attention of the Argentine legislators, in due time, to the very serious consequences that the bill would have for the industry in general, inasmuch as considerable capital has been invested in it, thus giving employment to thousands of people, which effort would come to nothing. If the bill is approved, foreign production will benefit thereby, because foreign producers will be under no limitations."

Dr. R. F. De Olivera, Argentine newspaperman and radio lecturer, pointed out that the fifteen men who signed the protest on behalf of the Association were distributors as well as producers, six of them Italian, two French, two Spanish, one American, one South American and two Argentinian.

Despite the infiltration of central European political ideologies into the Argentine, Mr. Nathan said that "so far neither German or Italian pictures have given any cause of worry from the point of view of competition to American product."

Mickey Rooney Sets Precedents

body does that the bottom can fall out of his presently raging popularity. It's happened to him before. He probably doesn't realize that, whether it does or not, he's run up a record of two "firsts" in screen history. He's the first juvenile star to go up, come down with a bang, and then go up again, a precedent unquestionably comforting to certain others of his generation and perhaps beneficially instructive to executives who have to do with their hiring.

His other "first" is a curiously unsentimental story complete in itself. This seasoned young trouser is the only son of another seasoned trouser, Joe Yule, Sr., who's been ranking comedian at a Los Angeles burlesque theatre for long and long. There's been some seasoned showmanship displayed by this burlesque theatre lately in advertising copy making blunt and beaming mention of the father-son relationship, and some of the less seasoned commentators on things theatrical have had things to say about this. To Mickey and Joe, practical troupers grounded in the tradition that Fame is where you find it, all that was a "front-of-the-house" matter and no concern of theirs. So they did nothing about it, but the tradition did. Joe is going to break into the movies as the hoofer in "Idiot's Delight." If you can't find a "first" in that one there isn't a story in Mickey Rooney.

This week Tuesday Mickey set his feet down in the figuratively imperishable cement of the Grauman's Chinese forecourt in Hollywood while flashlight bulbs exploded the signal of cinema immortality.

SHOWMEN'S REVIEWS

Suez

(20th Century-Fox)

Historical Spectacle

The actual building of the Suez Canal cost more money than Gene Markey's pictorial representation of the operation, although not so much more at that, relatively, but Mr. Markey's engineering is of a more interesting, melodramatic and widely observable kind.

Mr. Markey's production is far and away the best he has turned out, as well as the best of the Hollywood week and well up among the leaders in the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year to date. It is big, factual, solid, powerful in the broad, deep way that "Cavalcade" was and, like that film, strong with the strength of empire.

Most discussed among the picture's many facets on the morning after its somewhat ceremonious preview was the desert storm scene and the comments on this were more smart-Aleck than pertinent. It is a very big scene and a superbly executed demonstration of production technique, but it is also, as the syndicated columnists and radioists seem at pains to ignore, a vital factor in a vital story about a canal which was one of the most vital factors in the extremely vital situation Europe and the remainder of the world found both hands full of a scant and memorable fortnight back.

Mr. Ed Sullivan, who hasn't had any good news to report from the Twentieth Century-Fox lot lately for reasons everybody but his readers know, Mr. George Fisher, whose Saturday night broadcast just floated in from the next room, and certain other commentators on the Hollywood scene have chosen to confine their comments on "Suez" quite strictly to a comparison of the big wind in the picture to the big wind in Samuel Goldwyn's "Hurricane," the earthquake in MGM's "San Francisco," the snowslide in Paramount's "Spawn of the North," and other effectively filmed natural disorders, to the embarrassment of "Suez." This reporter pretends to no sublime ability to decide that a simoon is greater than an earthquake, snowslide or hurricane, or that an automobile is better than a motorboat or vice versa, but the course of the showman confronted with whatever problem may accrue from all this voluntary technological experting is quite clear. Now that comparison has been thrust upon him, the cue is obviously for counter-comparison, and what way lies a hatful of ad lines in the "greater than —" category. They ought to sell a lot of tickets.

Mr. Markey's picture is by no means a mere technological triumph. It is primarily a careful, well written, authentic account of Ferdinand de Lesseps' ultimately successful efforts to get the Suez canal built. It includes his unsuccessful competition with Louis Napoleon for the hand of the lady who became the Empress Eugenie, his betrayal by the then President Napoleon which led to establishment of the second empire, his success in enlisting the cooperation of Prince Said of Egypt and, finally, that of England's Disraeli and, through him, her Victoria. In a story of that magnitude a desert blow is a small thing, albeit an easy thing for commentators and, more importantly, paying patrons to talk about.

Mr. Markey's cast is as terrific, to use the accepted word, as his sandstorm. Tyrone Power plays the resolute de Lesseps without being too resolute for conviction. Loretta Young works as hard at getting herself disliked as Eugenie as most women of the screen work at getting themselves beloved. Annabella turns in a fine performance as the army-reared Toni who dies in an attempt to rescue her hero, J. Edward Bromberg is completely effective as Prince Said of Egypt, and Leon Ames is a more credible Louis Napoleon than the screen has had up to now. The exhibitor can cull out of the talent roster appended hereto any collection of personalities that squares with the customer's expressed predilections and go as far as one cares to in the use of strong adjectives.

Allan Dwan gave Mr. Markey the best he had in him, directorially, and it's pretty well known that the Dwan best is pretty good. Philip Dunne and Julien Josephson wrote the screen play from a story by Sam Duncan, and it contains no superfluous word or meaningless gesture. The narrative is clean, a good deal cleaner than some of the history books tell it, and clear as a bell. Like "Cavalcade," with which it has more in common than any other picture in ready memory, it is timely with the timeless timeliness of vital history and of permanent, world-wide interest.

Prison Train

(Equity Pictures)

Melodrama

For its inaugural effort the newly formed Equity Pictures chose a melodramatic story into which grim humor has been injected. After the introductory sequences, which show "Frankie Ferris" Fred Keating, convicted for the murder of "Joe Robins," son of "Manny Robins," because he has attempted to become too friendly with the racketeer's sister "Louise" (Linda Winter), all action takes place aboard a train transporting prisoners to Alcatraz. Plotting a terrible revenge, planning a life for a life, the mobsters commandeer the train. As "Louise" endeavors to get a message to her brother that he is in the mobster's power, thereby coming into romantic association with the officer in charge of the train (Val Stanton), "Ferris," dreaming, visions killing the mobster and making an escape. The tables are turned, however, and though the mobster is slain, "Ferris" also dies.

While the story sticks to its main plot, it is interesting in a melodramatic way and the rough dialogue and gag comedy have amusement value, but the repeating shots of the speeding train, obviously inserted, increase the footage and become meaningless. Lacking outstanding cast names, though the featured personnel perform capably, the picture was designed to serve as a companion piece for other more important attractions.

their reaction to the picture in preview both audibly and emphatically. The downstairs crowd is more adult. The balcony was noisy in approval of "Listen, Darling," a film that might have been composed for the special benefit of this undergraduate turnout, and the main floor was quiet.

This would be because the picture presents Judy Garland and Freddie Bartholomew as a pair of somewhat seriously minded adolescent romantics who take extreme and ultimately effective measures to keep Mary Astor, playing the girl's widowed and underfinanced mother, from marrying the small town banker for purse purposes. The youthful gallery was vastly amused by the complications encountered when the youngsters on the screen locked the widow in a trailer and set off across the country to find her a better match, who turned out to be Walter Pidgeon.

Most of the action in the picture comes on the trailer-trip and some of it is quite funny. Master Bartholomew has somewhat the better of the dialogue breaks and Miss Garland sings three songs, two of fresh vintage and the well-known "Zing Went the Strings of My Heart." Master Scotty Beckett, 9, mightily amused the younger clients, including the 11-year-old on your reporter's left, in a sequence wherein he learned the difference between a striped beaver and a skunk.

The working out of the serious side of the story, which is by Katherine Brush, and was made into a screen plan by Elaine Ryan and Annie Morrison Chapin, is accomplished in a few brief scenes of strictly narrative tenor. The film is in the general wavelength of the currently popular domestic dramas, although lighter than most, with appeal primarily to the rising generation.

Sunset Trail

(Paramount-Sherman)

Melodrama

Many pictures have established the entertainment values of the Hopalong Cassidy series. "Sunset Trail" is the best to date. While preserving the full spirit of Bar 20 adventure yarns based on the Clarence E. Mulford stories, this picture permits William Boyd to appear in an attractively different Hopalong characterization. Dressed in store clothes and adopting the mannerisms of a tenderfoot, he tracks down a murdering thief.

Never deviating from the basic plot, the picture has many qualities which hold unique exploitation significance. Not the least of these are the picturesque scenic backgrounds, artistically photographed by Russell Harlan. One musical number is introduced and there is more comedy than usual. Boyd, George Hayes, Kathryn Sheldon and Maurice Cass are in the cast. Sufficient romance has been incorporated into the theme, but the film essentially is an outdoor adventure production.

Direct dialogue and direct action are the interpreting mediums and a well devised line of suspense holds the episodes together until the riding, shooting, fighting climax is reached.

Ranking high as audience material are Abigail

Snodgrass' romantic pursuit of Windy and the tensely melodramatic poker game Hopalong plays with his quarry, "Monte Keller." The idea of having Hopalong appear as a totally different character endows the picture with definite value. In locales where these Sherman productions are popular it may be anticipated that "Sunset Trail," inadequately titled yet thus setting its locale and general character, which only needs mention Boyd, Hayes and Hayden, will receive a warm welcome. Strangers to outdoor pictures may be invited to this to see how expertly good westerns are made.

Inside Story

Crime Melodrama

While a release date is yet to be set, "Inside Story," third of 20th Century-Fox's "Roving Reporter" series, probably will be released around Christmas time to give exhibitors opportunity to base an exploitation campaign on the timeliness of the story. "Barney Callahan," the principal figure in the series, this time is a columnist who when on a spree writes a column offering a Christmas holiday on a farm to "the loneliest girl in New York."

The girl is found but in addition to being lonely she is the object of a hunt by gangsters who want to kill her because she witnessed a slaying. "Callahan" unsuspectingly takes her to the farm, from which she is kidnaped, but the newspaper man solves the murder mystery.

Michael Whalen again plays the principal role, aided by his photographer, "Snapper Doolan," again in Chick Chandler's hands. The feminine lead is Jean Rogers, and the supporting cast is composed of Douglas Fowley, John King, Jane Darwell, June Gale, Spencer Charters, Theodore von Eltz, Cliff Clark, Charles D. Brown, Charles Lane, Jan Duggan, Louise Carter and Bert Roach.

This fast moving, suspenseful story marks the directorial debut of Ricardo Cortez. Jerry Cady, former Los Angeles newspaperman, wrote the screenplay, based on a story by Ben Ames Williams. Howard J. Green was associate producer.

Cipher Bureau

(Fine Arts—GN)

Melodrama

Based primarily on exploitation possibilities arising from a hypothetically incipient conflict of the United States Government with a foreign nation, the third of Fine Arts' pictures for Grand National release is an adequate portrayal of the activities of the Bureau in Washington used during the World War to decode messages between anti-Allied spies intercepted by the United States Army and Navy intelligence officers.

Strictly melodramatic in flavor, "Cipher Bureau" presents unique exploitation possibilities, depending almost entirely upon newspaper headlines of today. The current spy trial in New York may form an excellent premise upon which to base campaigns. Like its predecessors on the Fine Arts schedule for Grand National, "Frontier Scout" and "Shadows Over Shanghai," notably the last-named, this picture apparently is pointed toward houses whose managers are adroit showmen.

Despite performances above par, the picture indubitably will have to depend upon an exploitation campaign derived almost entirely from the plot and today's headlines.

I Stand Accused

Melodrama

There are those who believe that "lawyer" pictures are passe. "I Stand Accused" is one that should do much to negate that opinion. Thematically, the story is straightaway personal melodrama. It provides thrills, suspense, action, love interest, tension easing comedy. As it develops its topical theme to a potent climax, it adapts a fresh screen treatment of one of America's most discussed and feared modern menaces, the unethical lawyer. The soundly prepared story is expertly presented by intelligent directing and convincing acting. Shrewd showmanship which, despite the absence of exceptional name values, takes advantage of all the available exploitations, should bring results.

Two law school graduates form a partnership. "Fred" visions quick riches and a measure of fame. "Paul" dedicates his career to maintaining the finest traditions of the bar. "Fred," after marrying "Alison," becomes the "kid mouthpiece" for a slot machine combine headed by "Mitchell" and "Eastman." The partners split. "Paul" allies himself with the district attorney. "Fred" becomes more deeply involved in the murderous business of his clients. In a clean-up move "Eastman" kills "Mitchell" and is arrested. Threatened by "Eastman," deserted by his wife and mother, "Fred" realizes he is on the wrong road. He sends evidence to the assistant district attorney but, lest that evidence implicate his erstwhile partner, "Fred" destroys it. Then "Fred" personally takes the stand. He is reunited with his wife, mother and partner.

The topical nature of the theme may be readily adapted. It often has been demonstrated that the one who stands accused is the public, fearing to testify and patronizing "fixer" lawyers.

Keep Smiling

Trouping Comedy

This, the second Twentieth Century-Fox has made with the British topliner Gracie Fields, does not seem to be aimed at the wide international market of its predecessor. Not only are its subject matter and treatment in the style of the local unsophisticated comedy, but it boasts no banner names beyond that of its star. Tuned as it is for local laughter, it is not so likely to enhance the world appeal of Miss Fields as one might have expected.

Gracie herself is in fact all the film, despite the zealous trouping of her fellows in the cast. Clowning her way through the narrative in the familiar manner beloved of her innumerable British fans, she appears as a concert party comedienne who leads her gang to victory against long odds, and is given a final thrust to prosperity by the highminded gesture of a young piano virtuoso who gives a classical recital on the opening night. It is a somewhat free and easy yarn, handled in a free and easy manner, lapsing for the most part into a tenuous record of the adventures of the troupe up and down the country, with a spot of villainy and a confectioned vein of romance thrown in as makeweight.

The Fields fans will find their favorite clowning in khaki, complete with falling trousers, rescuing her boy friend in a Crazy House at the fairground, singing a sextette of songs in the course of the film—some grave, others gay and at least one religious—putting every ounce of her vivid and mercurial personality into passages which would be meaningless without her. The bounds of good taste may appear to some to have collapsed in a cow milking episode, and there seems neither narrative nor artistic value in the church scene in which she sings "The Holy City."

The rest of the cast work hard, with Roger Livesey a rather slow but muscular foil for Gracie, Peter Coke as the chivalrous and frail pianist, Edward Rigby as Gracie's aged and tetchy uncle—and so forth. There is also "Skippy," the dog.

Monty Banks directed—unequally, it would seem—and Val Valentine wrote the scenario from Bill Conselman's screen play and with dialogue aid from Rodney Ackland. Probably this gifted team did not aim at any but those already converted to the gospel of Fields. Probably they will not hit a wider target.

Previewed in Twentieth Century-Fox's private theatre to a trade audience, the film was awaited with considerable interest. Reaction seemed to be that being a Gracie Fields subject it would sell anywhere in England anyway. Production personnel present were more confident.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Annabel Takes a Tour

Comedy

Farce comedy of the nonsense variety is the entertainment essence, and points the type of exploitation. Jack Oakie, Lucille Ball, Bradley Page and Ruth Donnelly again are seen in the roles they created in "The Affairs of Annabel." Ralph Forbes, Frances Mercer, Pepito, Alice White, Donald MacBride, Claire Vereda, Jean Rouveral, Chester Clute and Edward Gargan are their able assistants in making "Annabel Takes a Tour" fully as funny.

The story moves fast and most of the time furiously. Continuing the experiences and exploits of the dizzy film star and her equally dizzy press agent, one funny episode succeeds another, with unanticipated twists and gags.

Fun is the keynote of everything from the moment "Annabel" starts on a personal appearance tour after securing "Lanny's" reinstatement as press agent. Everything that "Lanny" does backfires. Whether "Annabel" falls off a horse, is dropped through a trap door, gets mixed up in a riot at a jitterbug contest or sees her romance (conceived for publicity purposes) with author "River-Clyde" blow up when his wife and family appear, the action, characterizations and dialogue provoke laughter and provision is made for a continuance of the series.

Rothchild

(Regal)

Comedy Drama

This French importation from the novel by Paul Lafitte was produced previous to the English version from the same novel. The English film starred George Arliss and was released under the title, "The Guv'nor," in England, and "Mister Hobo" in this country, in 1935. The Lafitte story recounts the adventures of a hobo who bears the charmed name of Rothchild, spelled without the "s".

The picture has some very amusing moments and some dull ones. It is more or less a vehicle for the French character actor Harry Baur. He has appeared in quite a few of the French pictures released in this country, including "The Golem" and "Un Carnet de Bal," both of more than moderate success. The story is easily followed and the English subtitles are adequate enough.

"Rothchild" and a fellow hobo, "Flip," meet in a cheap lodging house. "Flip" talks "Rothchild" into a scheme to better himself and through a series of events "Rothchild" becomes the head of an insolvent bank. The bank quickly prospers through the magic name. When "Rothchild" discovers he is to be "used" in a swindle he disappears in a pretended suicide. "Rothchild" makes his reappearance at the moment the directors are frantically attempting to rid themselves of the bank stock. He denounces them.

7,000 INDEPENDENT THEATRES NOW ENROLLED IN GREATEST YEAR DRIVE

Composers' Society Prepares Series of Programs for Music Week Starting October 31; More Independents Join Daily

More than 7,000 independent theatres are now enrolled in the Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign. Additional pledges from independent exhibitors are being received daily, the campaign committee reported. This week 67 pledges from theatres seating 150 to 1,500 were recorded. The drive started its eighth week on Thursday.

With the endorsement of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, a committee of leading music publishers, dealers, orchestra leaders and composers has prepared a series of programs for Music Week of Motion Pictures' Greatest Year, indicating the growing importance of the motion picture industry in the musical world, and made up of song hits from, or inspired by, past and current films.

The series, presented by ASCAP and dedicated to the motion picture industry drive, will be known as "A Cavalcade of Motion Picture Music," and is designed to be featured on radio programs, in hotels, night clubs and theatres, the week beginning October 31st.

Typical Program

A typical program offered to orchestra leaders includes these numbers: "The Perfect Song," from "Birth of a Nation"; "Mickey," from the Mabel Normand picture of the same name; "The Sheik of Araby," inspired by the Rudolph Valentino picture; "Charmaine," from "What Price Glory"; "Sonny Boy," from the early Al Jolson talkie, "The Singing Fool"; "Happy Days Are Here Again," from "Chasing Rainbows"; "Singing in the Rain," from "The Hollywood Revue of 1929"; "Forty-Second Street," from the film revue of that name; "Carioca," from Fred Astaire's first picture, "Flying Down to Rio"; "One Night of Love," from the Grace Moore picture of that title; "Whistle While You Work," from "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," and "Alexander's Ragtime Band."

The committee promoting Music Week for the industry includes Irving Berlin, Ben Bernie, Louis Bernstein, J. J. Bregman, Gene Buck, Henry Busse, Irving Caesar, George M. Cohan, Bob Crosby, Meyer Davis, Lou Diamond, Max Dreyfus, Duke Ellington, Leo Ferberstein, Ferde Grofe, Horace Heidt, Richard Himber, Andre Kostelanetz, Gene Krupa, Kay Kyser, Eddie Le Baron, Ted Lewis, Abe Lyman, Edward B. Marks, Jack Mills, Edwin H. Morris, Boris Morros, J. J. O'Connor, George Olsen, Will Osborne, Leo Reisman, Jack Robbins, Sigmund Romberg, Gustave Schirmer, A. Schwartz, Louis Silvers, Phil Spitalny, Deems Taylor, Rudy Vallee, Fred Waring, Paul Whiteman and Victor Young.

Several hundred motion picture executives, newspaper representatives and civic leaders attended the reception at Radio City Music Hall, New York, Monday, in honor of John H. Harris, prominent Pittsburgh exhibitor, and son of the late Senator John Harris, who opened the first nickelodeon in the United States. The reception was held under the auspices of the campaign committee.

FIRST PROGRAM FOR MUSIC WEEK

First of the radio musical directors to draw up a program of movie theme songs in connection with Music Week of Motion Pictures' Greatest Year, is Don Albert of WHN, who will devote a half hour program October 31st to musical hits from past and present film musicals.

Sam Taylor, WHN film commentator, whose program is on at 12 noon daily, will use in the near future a series of three separate broadcasts along the same line.

ject, formerly "The World Is Yours," has been changed to "The World Is Ours." The subject represents the joint efforts of all studios. More than 1,000 prints of "The World Is Ours" will be issued for release in 17,000 theatres throughout the United States and Canada. The theme deals with the film-going adventures of a typical American family.

Cleveland subsequent-run theatre operators are opposed to an extension of the Movie Quiz contest beyond December 31st, campaign headquarters of the drive was advised this week by M. B. Horwitz, Cleveland regional chairman of the drive. Campaign managers have been weighing a proposal to extend the contest period to March 1st. The decision is expected to be made at a meeting in New York next Tuesday.

Mr. Horwitz said the original four months' period for the contest is regarded in his territory as the fairest division of playing time on contest pictures between first and subsequent-runs which can be devised.

Loew's Theatres organization has issued a bulletin to all managers calling attention to the $2,100 Exhibitors Contest for the best campaigns on the drive. It urges Loew's managers to enter competition as individuals or with the groups comprising local promotion committees.

Almost half of a recent "Speaking of New York" program of Bryce Oliver, radio news commentator, over WHN, was devoted to a discussion of Motion Pictures' Greatest Year drive, on the theme: "Trade Follows the Movies."

Exhibitors' Contest

Alvin Sloan, Washington, N. J., exhibitor, representing the Washington and St. Cloud theatres, was the first to send in his entry blank, signifying his participation in the $2,500 Exhibitors' Contest for the best campaign in connection with the drive. Mr. Sloan's entry was sent in the day after the blanks were distributed from campaign headquarters.

Trailer number nine, which is available in all National Screen Service offices at low costs, according to Harold B. Franklin, business manager of the drive, contains a warning against "tipsters" and movie magazines offering alleged correct answers to the contest questions. The trailer reads:

"The public is warned against all tipsters. . . . Certain movie magazines and 'dopesters' claim to give the right answers to contest questions. . . . One magazine has already given three wrong answers. . . . You must rely on your own ingenuity if you are to win one of the cash prizes in the . . . $250,000.00 Movie Quiz Contest . . ."

Southern California has gone "over the top" in the campaign and Movie Quiz contest, reports from both circuit and independent theatre executives indicated.

The district, home of production, has made a concerted and continued drive, through street banners, special newspaper ads, theatre decorations, trailers, exploitation stunts and tieups with merchants, chain and drug stores to keep the campaign and the contest alive in the minds of the public.

The response, both in the populated centers and in the smaller cities and towns, has been highly gratifying, according to the regional committee, headed by Charles P. Skouras, of Fox West Coast Theatres.

Through the activities of employee committees, Loew's theatre in New Orleans has secured signatures of 20,950 potential Movie Quiz contest participants in that city, R. D. Touns, manager of the theatre, reported.

Cincinnati 24-Sheets

As part of Cincinnati's campaign in connection with the drive, the local committee has placed 50 24-sheets in prominent locations about the city calling attention to the high class pictures being shown, and urging participation in the contest.

Further stimulus to the Movie Quiz contest has been given in the New Haven territory by the new type of national advertising. Many film theatres in that territory have reordered booklets. Universal Film Exchange, headquarters for pamphlet distribution there, reports approximately 325,000 used already, in more than 90 theatres.

Nat Wolf, Ohio zone manager for Warner Brothers Theatres, conducted a survey in Mansfield, Ohio, this week on the percentage of participation that can be expected from the public in the contest.

Local Contest Added

William Exton, Kenosha, Wis., manager for Standard Theatres' houses, is tying-in a local movie quiz contest in connection with the national promotion. Each week the Kenosha and Gateway theatres are offering $50 in cash to the individuals answering correctly 10 Quiz questions. First prize is $25, second $15 and third $10.

Mayor Fred Holtsberg of Fort Pierce, Fla., designated last week as "Go to the Theatre Week." The Fort Pierce press has been extremely cooperative, according to campaign headquarters. Rupert N. Koblegard, Jr., manager of the Sunrise theatre there, tied-in the drive with the 10th anniversary of his own theatre.

Twelve floats, several bands and an auto procession have been arranged for the Toronto Motion Picture parade Saturday. A police escort, participation of civic groups, and parade of ushers will extend the procession, and it is estimated, it will take approximately a half hour to pass a given point. The length of the route is estimated at 20 miles, through the major thoroughfares.

City streets, autos on parade, shop windows and public buildings will be decorated in the black and orange motif of the campaign. Special 24 sheets will be put up in at least 30 prominent locations throughout the city.

Twenty thousand persons daily attended the "Progress of Motion Pictures," the exhibition in Winnipeg, Man., in connection with the drive. The exhibition was held last week in the annex of the T. Eaton Company, in Winnipeg, with all companies participating.

Paramount wanted to make the greatest air picture ever filmed, Paramount wanted to make that picture even greater by filming it in Technicolor. So William A. Wellman was, naturally, selected for the thrilling job of producing and directing "Men With Wings." Why "naturally?" The answer is easy. In the first place, ever since he collected the Croix de Guerre with four palms for his heroic work with the Lafayette Esquadrille in the World War, Bill Wellman has known his stuff about flying. In the second place, Bill Wellman's first big aviation picture, "Wings," still stands a marker on the broad highroad of motion picture progress. And, last but not least, it was Bill Wellman who turned in two big box office hits in the brand new medium of Technicolor during the season just past, namely, "A Star Is Born" and "Nothing Sacred." Now, as critics, preview audiences, exhibitors view the results of Bill Wellman's work on "Men With Wings," they unanimously congratulate Paramount on our choice of Producer-Director and on our having succeeded in adding to our long succession of Paramount outdoor adventure triumphs the best air epic ever to flame across the screen.

Busy

Hollywood experienced one of the year's busiest production weeks as October neared the mid-month mark. Thirteen pictures, four or five of which might be termed important prospects, were started. Accommodations for this unusual number were provided by the completion of fifteen productions.

MGM started four. All of them, from the standpoints of story quality, names and production, promises to be in that class which gives Leo the Lion cause to roar. On the way is the spectacular and picturesque "Ice Follies," which Reinhold Schnuzel is directing and which will feature Joan Crawford, James Stewart, Lew Ayres and the sensational Ice Ballet. Work was started on "Stand Up and Fight" in which Robert Taylor, Wallace Beery, Florence Rice, Helen Broderick and Charley Grapewin will be featured. "Katherine the Last" started, with Franciska Gaal, Franchot Tone, Walter Connolly, Reginald Gardiner, Franklyn Pangborn and Rita Johnson listed as principals. Mervyn LeRoy put the fantasy, "The Wizard of Oz," into work. It will present Judy Garland, Frank Morgan, Buddy Ebsen, Ray Bolger, Bert Lahr, Billie Burke and Margaret Hamilton, in the fairy tale characters.

Republic Starts Three

Three pictures were started at Republic. Robert Livingston, Tommy Ryan, Harry Davenport and Ralph Morgan will be seen in "Strongheart." The cast of "Texas Rangers" includes Mary Hart, Raymond Hatton, J. Farrell MacDonald, Purnell Pratt, Lane Chandler and Lee Powell. John Wayne, Ray Corrigan and Max Terhune will be featured in "Santa Fe Stampede."

"Dark Victory" went before the cameras at Warners. Bette Davis, George Brent, Humphrey Bogart, Geraldine Fitzgerald and Ronald Reagan are the principals.

For Columbia release Larry Darmour started "Wreckage." It will present Jack Holt, Dolores Costello, Pert Kelton, Addison Richards, Donald Briggs and Joseph Crehan.

RKO-Radio's newest activity, "Saints without Wings," will have William Pawley, Leona Roberts, Fred Kohler, Sr., Adrian Morris and Paul Guilfoyle.

Preston Foster, Frank Jenks, Frances Robinson, Kay Kinaker, Joyce Compton and E. E. Clive will be featured in Universal's "The Dead Don't Care."

"Gang Bullets," Monogram, will have Anne Nagel and Robert Kent as its principals. The stars of Paramount's "Cafe Society" are Madeleine Carroll and Fred MacMurray.

Completed Product

Four studios accounted for the majority of the completed pictures with three of them completing three each. Columbia completed two features and a serial. The cast of "Adventure in Sahara" includes Paul Kelly, C. Henry Gordon, Robert Fiske, Lorna Gray, Dick Curtis, Marc Lawrence, Stanley Brown and Dwight Frye. Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms, Danny Mummert, Dorothy Moore, Ann Doran, Gordon Oliver, Gene and Kathleen Lockhart will be seen in "Blondie." "The Spider," a serial, will present Warren Hull, Iris Meredith, Richard Riske, Gloria Blondell,

GLENDA FARRELL NEW N. HOLLYWOOD MAYOR

Despite a trip to New York at the end of the campaign, Glenda Farrell was elected Mayor of North Hollywood last Sunday.

Miss Farrell had 2,550 votes to 902 for Bing Crosby and 738 for Lewis Stone.

Ann Doran, Marc Lawrence, Johnny Turrell and Beatrice Curtis.

Three productions came off the line at Warners. Pat O'Brien, Joan Blondell, Alan Baxter, Joe Cunningham, Douglas Dumbrille, Armand Kaliz and Edward Deering are the principals in "Unfit to Print." "Nancy Drew, Detective," a new series picture, will present Bonita Granville, John Litel, Frankie Thomas, James Stephenson, Dick Purcell, Frank Orth, Brandon Tynan, Lottie Williams, Helena Phillips, Charles Trowbridge, Mae Busch and Tommy Bupp. Leading players in "Women in the Wind" are Kay Francis, William Gargan and Victor Jory. Others included are Maxie Rosenbloom, Harvey Stephens, Sheila Bromley, Eddie Foy, Jr., Eve Arden, Rosella Towne, Irene Rhodes and Mary Lou Smith.

RKO-Radio Finishes Three

RKO Radio also finished three pictures. The most important of the group "Gunga Din," will feature Cary Grant, Victor McLaglen, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Joan Fontaine, Sam Jaffe, Eduardo Cianelli, Montague Love, Lumsden Hare, Robert Coote, Abner Biberman and Cecil Kellaway. Harry Carey, Jean Rouveral, Tim Holt, Monte Montagu, Paul Guilfoyle, Allan Lane, Evelyn Brent, Esther Muir, Bradley Page, Spencer Charters and George Irving will be seen in "The Law West of Tombstone." The principals in "Trailer Romance" are Lucille Ball, James Ellison, Lee Bowman, Granville Bates and Manton Moreland.

Two productions were completed at Twentieth Century-Fox. "The Arizona Wildcat" is a Jane Withers show in which will be seen Leo Carrillo, Pauline Moore, Douglas Fowley, Henry Wilcoxon, William Henry, Etienne Girardot, Harry Woods and Rosita Harlan. Preston Foster, Phyllis Brooks, Tony Martin, Arthur Treacher, Slim Summerville, Alan Dinehart, Eddie Collins, Bill Robinson, Jane Darwell, Sidney Toler and Edward Gargan are members of the "Up the River" troupe.

Two UA Films

Wanger Productions finished "Trade Winds." Directed by Tay Garnett, it will feature Fredric March, Joan Bennett, Ralph Bellamy, Ann Sothern and Sidney Blackner, with Robert Elliott, Robert E. O'Connor, Harry Paine, Hooper Atchley, Joyce Compton and Walter Byron important among the score or more who have speaking parts.

Also for United Artists release, Selznick-International checked in with "Made for Each Other." Carole Lombard and James Stewart are starred, supported by Charles Coburn, Lucille Watson, Mickey Rentschler, Donald Briggs, Ruth Weston, Harlan Briggs, Arthur Hoyt, Esther Dale and Nella Walker.

Republic completed the serial "Hawk of the Wilderness." It will present Herman Brix, Jill Martin, Monte Blue, Mala, Noble Johnson, George Eldredge, Snowflake and William Royle.

Standard Pictures finished its first production, "The Headley's at Home." Featured are Evelyn Venable, Grant Mitchell, Betty Roadman, Robert Whitney, Vince Barnett, Benny Rubin, Alicia Adams, Louise Beavers and Kenneth Harlan.

Silver Jubilee

"It is becoming increasingly harder to make good pictures." That is the conclusion of John M. Stahl, who this year is observing his twenty-fifth anniversary as a director.

"Today everything we do is hardly more than a repetition of something that has been done before. The reason is obvious. All pictures are dramatic, whether their literary basis is developed along romantic, comic or melodramatic lines. The number of possible plots is limited; almost without exception each has a boy meets girl premise.

"Other causes contribute to the reasonableness of my contention. During the years moving pictures have been an entertainment institution they have educated their patrons to such a plane that today it is almost impossible to surprise them.

"Still the story is the thing. Stories have made innumerable stars. Only seldom has the personality or talent of an individual risen above the quality of the story. A few have, notably Will Rogers and Shirley Temple.

"In my own case, I always analyze story merits before considering whom I would like to have play in the picture versions. Since completing "Letter of Introduction" I have examined hundred of stories. I have found a few that I thought would make good pictures. Yet even though there are scores of capable actors and actresses in Hollywood, my biggest problem has been trying to decide just which players available at the time of production could faithfully assume the characters as visioned by the author, and properly interpret the themes.

"As everyone who has seen any of my pictures—say since 'Seed'—knows, I point my films to play upon the more sentimental emotions. I aim them directly at women.

"But as there are story troubles, there are also countless other troubles. Miscasting is a dangerous subject to discuss. Too many pictures are being made.

"The limitations which foreign governments, various domestic racial groups and politically constituted censorship bodies have placed upon us have further narrowed the range of making good pictures. Nobody wants to earn the enmity of any state or group.

"Still I believe there is a solution. The moral quality of many pictures had ebbed to a low standard. The industry was threatened with a boycott. But the problem was solved simply, sensible and effectively. The Production Code Authority was established. Things that couldn't possibly be done were done. The most confirmed skeptics, in and out of the industry, were dumbfounded. The quality of picture attained a standard never before reached. The industry found a new prosperity. Nowadays trouble arises only when somebody tries to circumvent the Code Authority and its liberal standards."

BRITISH EXHIBITORS RETURN TO CIRCUIT VS. INDEPENDENTS ISSUE

Revolt Seethes Anew Despite Negotiating Committee's Report That Problem of Double Feature Program Is Insoluble

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

British exhibitors once again have returned to the vicissitudes and concerns of their own trade battle, and the standards of commercial independence are floating petulantly, if a little wistfully, in the breeze. As on the wider field of international politics the campaigners are finding that it wants something more than a pledge to implement a peace, that generalship on the field of trade politics is no less full of trepidations and pitfalls than statesmanship vis a vis with dictators.

Most vexed of current exhibitor problems, the challenge on the competitive field of the circuits to the independents, manifest paramountly in the matters of redundancy, of barring, and of overlong programs, has been brought to a head by the uncompromising pugnacity of the independent rebel camp, and forced to the forefront of discussion.

Despite the pleas of urgency and alarm, it remains precisely where it is. Indeed, it is thought by some of the more sensitive souls to have received a marked setback in the inherent suggestion of the committee that the overplus program problem, called an irregularity for which the circuits alone are guilty, is insoluble.

Report Rejected

The cauldron of revolt seethed to a frothy head at the last October meeting of the General Council, when, as a result of pressure by the London representative and independent, Cecil Mathies, and following very determined leads from the storm centers of Leeds, and elsewhere, the question of two long films in one program was laid down for consideration and report. The negotiating committee's studied report was presented, and pro tem rejected, after spirited consideration. Mr. Mathies would have referred it back, but on the intervention of the more conservative spirits Theo. Fligelstone, Major Arthur Gale, O.B.E., J.P., and former president Charles Metcalfe, one-time standard bearer of exhibitor solidarity against the Quota Act's more difficult clauses, was accepted. On the suggestion of Ralph Bromhead, representative of the County Circuit but an independent in point of view, further consideration was averted so that the delegates could go further into the matter before the November Council.

What Type of Film?

The very mixed bag of representations which make up the negotiating committee, containing independents and circuit spokesmen, was markedly evident in the report.

What constitutes the precise type of film to which reference is intended is itself a problem, and until agreement exists on what constitutes a "super film," it will be difficult to devise a formula. "Recognized international supers" was the formula suggested by the committee.

Seeking a practicable way out of the dilemma, the dissonant entities in the committee have now envisaged a registration scheme under which a committee of the Cinematograph Exhibitors

QUEEN MARY VIEWS "SIXTY GLORIOUS YEARS"

Queen Mary and party on Friday night saw the royal family history re-told on the screen of the Odeon theatre at a charity preview of "Sixty Glorious Years", Herbert Wilcox production which had its first showing the day before. The production was acclaimed a magnificent production infusing vivid historical chronicle poignantly and humanely. Tracing the picturesque staging were the actual royal palace backgrounds, in color.

Highlights of story and action were the personal, political and military aspects of Victoria's reign and the emotional unity in the love of Victoria and Albert. Balaklava, Crimea and Khartoum were rousing re-created. Anna Neagle gave a sympathetic performance, notably superlative in depicting the Queen in her old age. The patriotic note was sounded in story and music.

—A. F.

Committee would grade films into two classes, no member by agreement exhibiting two in the "super" category in one program.

The readers of the circuit oracle immediately present probable difficulties. There would, they suggest, possibly be rationing of films by the renters; release dates would be so arranged that there would be "three" supers a week for the circuits, and the odd remainder for the independents; an increase of rentals would follow.

Disconsolate was their reaction at the committee's statement that it was unlikely that the General Council would take the responsibility for such a scheme.

It is not likely that the matter of independent conflict with the circuits will be left lying where it is, so spirited is the movement of revolt. In London alone, notoriously a centre of conflicting interests, unanimity has been achieved, and a marked feeling exists, as voiced by Cecil Mathies, that it is time the circuits implemented the promises made at the time of the grading dispute. In Yorkshire and in Lancashire the independent storm is rising, and exhibitors are fast coming to the viewpoint of J. X. Prendergast that it has been a mistake to attribute omnipotence to the Kinematograph Renters Society.

Older hands of the caliber of Major Gale and Richard Dooner favor the process of arbitration, but this is not regarded with cordiality by the younger brigade. The complete and final manner in which the K.R.S. have offhanded any hoped-of agreement on redundancy, the unofficial but significant indications that even in the matter of barring, a solution must be worked out by those who impose the bars, are forces playing into the hands of that exhibitor section which considers that Arbitration spells Capitulation, and that they who pay the piper have a right to select the tune. It may look as if the regional statesmen have gone back from the Panton Street Berchtesgarden for another re-examination of policies. . . . But the essential fact is that there are Churchills and Edens among the Chamberlains.

The Board of Trade figures on exposed positive film for September included: exports, 2,005,532 feet, an increase over 1937 of 3,600 feet, with a value of £15,478 ($77,390), an increase of £3,538. Imports were 1,534,599 feet, a decrease of 284,697 feet. The value was £11,969 ($19,845), a decrease of £545.

IN THE BRITISH STUDIOS

by AUBREY FLANAGAN

Production Lull

Despite the optimistic aura which has been placed around British production by some of its more enthusiastic friends, a record of pictures on the floor at the moment of writing indicates that anything but a condition of boom currently exists. Out of greater London's total of over seventy sound stages but seven are at present occupied. Four of the films are being made for release by three American distributing organizations, namely "So This Is London" and "Inspector Hornleigh" for Twentieth Century-Fox at Pinewood, "Q Planes" the first Irving Asher production for release by Columbia, on the floor at Denham, and "A Gentleman's Gentleman" still shooting at the Warner Bros. First National studios, Teddington.

For Elstree "The Outsider" and "Murder in Soho" are currently under the eye of the cameras. At Ealing another Michael Balcon production is supplanting "The Ware Case"—which has just finished—and is a new Betty Driver and Jimmy O'Dea comedy directed by Walter Forde.

Among other films already produced and awaiting trade show are "Stolen Life," the Elisabeth Bergner production for release by Paramount, the Jessie Matthews comedy, "Climbing High," for M-G-M release, General Film Distributor's "The Mikado"—all from Pinewood—and "The First and the Last," made at Denham for Columbia release. From Denham also are yet to come M-G-M's "The Citadel" and possibly "Four Dark Hours," "Conquest of the Air" and "Over the Moon" (awaiting retakes). Another batch is being made ready by Elstree, and we have yet to see Gainsborough's "Old Bones of the River" from Islington. Numerous other smaller pictures of the calibre of Butcher's "Anything to Declare," made at the Walton-on-Thames studios and Argyle's "My Irish Molly," from Welwyn, are also due.

Director at 26

Promoted by Michael Balcon to the responsibility of full direction is 26-year-old F. P. Tennyson, who has graduated via assistant directorship. Tennyson is to direct the screen version of the James Curtis boxing tale "There Ain't No Justice," which goes into production shortly at Ealing under the banner of Ealing Studios, Ltd. (Formerly Associated Talking Pictures.)

For some years Tennyson has been associated with Alfred Hitchcock, Victor Saville and Maurice Elvey and was assistant to Jack Conway on the production of "A Yank at Oxford" and to King Vidor on "The Citadel."

Production on "The Ware Case," in which Clive Brook, Jane Baxter and Barry

Michael Redgrave and Elizabeth Bergner, new romantic team, who are co-starring in the Orion production of "Stolen Life" at the Pinewood studios, Iver Heath, Bucks.

K. Barnes are playing, is nearing completion and in its fourth week. Last week's shooting was devoted entirely to scenes in the No. 1 Criminal Court at the Old Bailey.

The Old Bailey set is said to be a faithful replica of the original, including even the public gallery with its minor details of decoration and adornment. Balcon even called in a firm of solicitors and a fully qualified barrister to advise the legal luminaries of the screen of the exact details of correct court procedure.

Robert Stevenson is directing.

Action

Work is now in full swing at Denham on the first Irving Asher production "Q Planes," made for release in Britain by Columbia. Tim Whelan is directing the film which has, apart from its narrative drama, a strong action flavor. Laurence Olivier, Valerie Hobson and Ralph Richardson are stars of the picture, whilst a cast of twenty-one supporting characters include noted players like John Longden, Reginald Purdell, Gus McNaughton, George Merritt, Hay Petrie, David Tree and George Curzon.

Valerie Hobson has the role of a newspaper reporter, whilst Messrs. Olivier, Purdell and Longden are pilots. Ralph Richardson's role in the picture is that of a secret service agent whose character is not quite as simple as it appears on the surface.

Detective Thriller

A detective thriller, "Murder in Soho," is currently on the floor at the Elstree studios of Associated British under the direction of Norman Lee, who has only recently concluded work on another Associated British spy drama, "Luck of the Navy."

In his first British film is Jack LaRue, who is supported by Sandra Storm—British actress of "Artists and Models" fame—who appears as a cabaret singer; opposite her is Bernard Lee. Others in the cast include Googie Withers, Francis Lister and Martin Walker. Claud Friese Green is in charge of the cameras.

Going Swiss

For scenes in the Eric Blore comedy "A Gentleman's Gentleman," the Teddington studios of Warner-First National have for the last week or so gone Swiss. Recreations of ski-runs, bob-sleigh tracks and other locations of winter sports have been built up at the Teddington lot. During the last few days shooting has been in progress with crowds of men and women dressed in winter sports costumes.

A new "Bob-Ski" contraption, a combination of the bob-sleigh and ski principle, has been built by a Swiss winter sports expert.

The film is being directed jointly by Austin Melford and Graham Cutts, under the production aegis of Jerome Jackson.

WLW RENEWAL REFUSED; FRANCE CENSORS RADIO

FCC Cites Increase of 8.7% in Chain Broadcasting's Share of Advertising Outlay

The Crosley Radio Corporation's application to continue operating the only super-power commercial broadcasting station in the country was rejected in Washington Monday by three of the seven members of the Federal Communications Commission. The commission's subcommittee, Norman S. Case, T. A. M. Craven and George Henry Payne, made public their report to the full commission, recommending refusal to renew the license of the Crosley station, WLW, Cincinnati.

Meanwhile, in France, Premier Daladier's Government established virtual censorship over news broadcasts from 11 of the country's largest privately owned radio stations. An order published in the official journal without explanation brought not only news broadcasts of political affairs but those on economic and financial matters under the Government broadcasting service.

The measure applies to four large stations and seven key regional stations. Radio in France is a combination of private and state ownership, with the Government Communications Ministry operating a network in competition with private stations. Under the new setup stations affected are required to submit to the Government daily the "full text" of "anything concerning news broadcasts or presenting a political, economic or financial character."

Findings on Three Counts

The Crosley Corporation has been operating with superpower on experimental license arrangements since 1934. It asked the FCC for authority to continue to use 500 kilowatts power, compared to 50 kilowatts for the next most powerful commercial stations, because it said it wanted to experiment with an antenna structure of wide flexibility.

The subcommittee's recommendation must be passed upon by the full seven-member commission. Other commissioners are: Frank R. McNinch, chairman; Eugene O. Sykes, Thad H. Brown and Paul A. Walker.

Prefacing its rejection with a statement commending the technical contributions made by the Crosley Corporation during the period of its experimental work with 500 kilowatts power, the committee ruled against the applicant on three principal grounds.

It held that the corporation did not need such great power to continue its antenna experiments, that it subjected Station WOR to "objectionable interference," and that stations within the area served by WLW "experienced difficulty in obtaining commercial support, particularly of the type commonly called 'national spot advertising'."

"In substance, the applicant's plan of future experimentation," the report said, "is to determine upon and install an antenna structure of wide flexibility, permitting control of the location of the rapid fading area and the placement of the primary and secondary service areas where most needed."

"These problems rise in their entirety in connection with night time operation. During daytime the problem would simply be to obtain as wide coverage as possible from the ground wave. However, power of 500 kilowatts is not essential to the program of experimentation.

"Although it was contended that under the present conditions of propagation, due largely to the extreme sun-spot activity, there is not sufficient sky wave signal from a lower powered transmitter in the order of 50 kilowatts, the extension of the authority here sought will result in the continuance of such restriction. Station WOR, being a clear channel station, should normally serve a larger area and population.

"Instances are shown in this record where stations within the area served by WLW have experienced difficulty in obtaining commercial support, particularly of the type commonly called 'national spot advertising'.

"Although reasonable competition is to be desired, it ceases to be reasonable and becomes undesirable when the effect thereof is to render impossible the operation of stations as media of local self expression. This important factor of public interest must be given careful consideration in distribution facilities to the communities of the nation as a whole."

The report noted that in soliciting business from prospective advertisers representatives of WLW "stressed the point of the tremendous amount of power and the consequent very wide coverage thereby obtained."

"As an indication of the success of such representations," the committee said, "one need only consider the fact that for the year ended December 31, 1937, the net income after deduction of income taxes amounted to $702,954.61 and for the year prior thereto $706,589.89.

"These figures indicate a net return in one year of nearly 70 per cent of the original cost of all applicant's property devoted to broadcast service, as of December 31, 1937."

Cites Radio Advertising

The committee's review of the economic factors involved in the case cited data showing the rapid growth of radio advertising, such as the following:

"In 1930 out of the total sum of $510,500,000, magazines received 39.6 per cent, newspapers 45 per cent, chain broadcasting 5.3 per cent and outdoor advertising and car cards 10.1 per cent. Of the sum of $427,561,000 in 1936, magazines had 33.6 per cent, newspapers 44 per cent, chain broadcasting 14 per cent, and car cards and outdoor advertising 8.4 per cent.

"During the first two months of 1938, magazine advertising declined 5.5 per cent from the same period in 1937, newspaper advertising declined 11.6 per cent, and chain broadcasting increased 14.9 per cent."

About a year ago the Crosley company retained as an adviser on public relations Charles Michelson, publicity director of the Democratic National Committee. Mr. Michelson declared this week that he had had nothing to do with the communications commission nor the controversial license. He pointed out that his contract with the company specifically provided that he was not to contact any governmental agencies.

Du World Sued

Du World Pictures, Inc., is being sued in New York Supreme Court by Societe Agatos of South America. Plaintiff claims that the defendant breached a contract made in 1935, whereby the defendant agreed to sell and distribute a film, "Sans Famille," and remit 65 per cent of the gross to the plaintiff. The plaintiff claims that $3,000 under the contract is due to it.

Lawless Valley

(RKO-Radio)

Action Adventure

Where most of the riding, fighting, shooting pictures deal with the Old West of fifty or sixty years ago, "Lawless Valley" will tell an action and romance story of the Arizona cattle country of the present. A young westerner's effort to clear his dead father's name, as well as his own, and to marry the girl he loves, is the basis of the plot. Handicapped by the stigma of a sentence for a crime of which he was innocent, the man carries on his battle in the face of heavy odds.

"Lawless Valley" is based on "No Law in Shadow Valley," which appeared in Argosy magazine some months ago. The author, W. C. Tuttle, has hundreds of western stories to his credit. The screenplay was completed by Oliver Drake, who has done the adaptations for the last seven or eight George O'Brien pictures. It will mark the eighteenth time that David Howard has served as O'Brien's director.

The picture will be George O'Brien's ninth for RKO-Radio. The sole woman role will be played by Kay Sutton, who has a leading part in "The Saint in New York." The supporting cast will present Walter Miller, who has been in scores of films since the Biograph days, Fred Kohler, Sr., and Jr., who play father and son roles, Lew Kelley and Earl Hodgins.

Release date: To be determined.

Crime is a Racket

(Warner)

Melodrama

Stark melodrama is the principal character of the story to be told in "Crime is a Racket." Except for the cause-establishing episodes, practically all the action takes place inside Sing Sing prison. The story has its origin in one written by the prison's warden, Lewis E. Lawes, crime commentator in newspapers, magazines and radio broadcasts. The screen play was developed by Don Ryan and Kenneth Gamet, long experienced in film preparation of melodramatic stories such as "Missing Witness" and "Fly Away Baby," and Robert Buckner, who was a contributor to "Jezebel" and "Gold Is Where You Find It." Separately Ryan did "Racket Busters" and Gamet "Devil's Island" and "Nancy Drew, Detective." The director, Lewis Seiler, most recently was associated, in the melodramatic field, with "Crime School," in which two of the principal players in this picture, Humphrey Bogart and Billy Halop, were featured.

As Bogart and Halop will be the focal points of almost all the melodramatic action, some of that quality and all the theme's romantic contrast will be shared by Harvey Stephens and Gale Page. The supporting cast will be made up of John Littel, Henry Travers, Henry O'Neill, Harold Huber, Joseph Sawyer, Joseph Downing, William Haade, George E. Stone and Ed-die Anderson.

An ace criminal, played by Bogart, makes a young criminal of a hero-worshiper (Halop). Eventually they are sent to Sing Sing as is a policeman (Stephens), sweetheart of the youth's sister, played by Miss Page, whom circumstantial evidence has convicted for a murder which

Nancy Drew, Detective

(Warner)

New Series Picture

This will be the first of a prospective series based on the popular Nancy Drew stories written by Carolyn Keene and to star Bonita Granville. The screen play was prepared by Kenneth Gamet, a collaborator on the as yet unreleased "Devil's Island" and with earlier writing credits on "Three Girls on Broadway," "Missing Witness" and "Fly Away Baby." Direction was assigned to William Clemens, who has handled many pictures which the producer of this, Bryan Foy, has made.

The first story will concern the experiences and exploits of an amateur girl detective. Resourceful and sometimes in great peril, she tracks down an unethical doctor and his gang.

Acknowledged as an accomplished juvenile actress, Miss Granville will be given an opportunity in "Nancy Drew, Detective," to display her talents. Usually presented as a mean little girl, as was the case in most of her pictures from "These Three" to "The Beloved Brat," she here will be given a sympathetic role.

While a great many players will be seen in the supporting cast, most of the action concerns Miss Granville, Frankie Thomas, who was in "Boys Town," John Littel and Charles Trowbridge. Other personalities are James Stephenson, Dick Purcell, Frank Orth, Reine Riano, Brandon Spires, Lottie Williams, Helena Phillips, Ed Keane, Mae Busch, Tommy Bupp and Buddy Bangs.

Release date: To be determined.

Up the River

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Comedy

The "Up the River" of a few years ago was fun in jail and on the baseball diamond. Later there was a picture, "Rackety-Rax," which also was fun in jail but on the football gridiron. Today Twentieth Century-Fox appears to have combined the best comedy elements of the two, but the 1938 "Up the River," with both jail and football settings. A bit of love interest is being worked in, but story concerns itself mainly with a pair of confidence men who are returned to their "alma mater" following their latest escapade. There's a burlesque prison break and a burlesque prison show, but the big burlesque is that of a football game which the two convicts are instrumental in winning from the hated rivals of another penitentiary. All but the romantic content is being treated in a satirical manner.

Being produced by the Sol M. Wurtzel unit, with Alfred Werker serving as director, as he did in the case of "Rackety Rax," the story is based on Maurine Watkins' story, which also was the basis of the first "Up the River." The screen play was prepared by Lou Breslow and John Patrick. Music and lyrics were contributed by Sidney Claire and Harry Akst, and the dance numbers were arranged by Nicholas Castle and Geneva Sawyer.

None of the original cast of "Up the River" will be seen in the present version. Preston Foster and Arthur Treacher will be the football playing jailbirds while the romantic interest will center upon Tony Martin and Phyllis Brooks, jailed, of course, as result of a mistake, and caged in separate prisons. Alan Dinehart will be the warden who is full of the good old jail spirit, and Slim Summerville will be seen as the coach. Others participating are Eddie Collins, Jane Darwell, Sidney Toler, Bill Robinson, Edward Gargan, Robert Allen, Dorothy Dearing and Charles D. Brown.

Release date: November 14, 1938 (tentative).

racket and made the butt of rival gunmen, and aimed maybe at American appeal by introducing to the cast Edgar Kennedy, David Burns and one or two other transatlantics. It was a bright idea to set the fumbling Dr. Benjamin Twist in such a ruthless world, and probably British audiences of the type to whom Hay appeals will swallow the Chicago panorama, which is not necessarily to say that American audiences will.

Hay's bespectacled old muddler, chivvied into a trip across the Atlantic, bullied into rail riding and tossed into jail, for all its comedy conception is overshadowed at times by the seasoned work of Kennedy. Most of the humor is, however, of unabashed slapstick. There is an amusing encounter between Hay and a commercial radio announcer, and an escape from the stockyards in the skin of a theatrical cow. Kennedy and Hay do make a worthy comedy team, worthy of stronger material. For England, of course, Hay is the drawing card, but even so many of his fans will probably agree that Kennedy often steals the picture.

The American scene is filled in with probably more zeal than accuracy against a background of railroad and jailhouse, gangster hideouts and "Washington Park." David Burns, Fred Duprez and Eddie Marco contribute the requisite touches of vocal realism. Burns is in fact quite effective as Tony Ricardo and Tommy Bupp challengingly swaggers his way through the film.

Reviewed to an all-trade audience, the film provoked a reasonable amount of laughter, with patches of repose, and though voted an adequate comedy, effort seemed to be considered less effective than some of its predecessors.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Busse Rhythm (Paramount)

A Musical Moment

Conductor Henry Busse demonstrates in this musical moment agreeable samples of Mr. B's art with the sizzling trumpet that may entertain his faithful fan following. Playing second fiddle to the spotlighted position of the Maestro and his instrumental hijinks, the orchestra finds time to render such twentieth century tunes as "Blue Hawaii" and "Hold Your Hats." The climax of Henry's recital is the point at which the artist gives his all in the rendition of "Hot Lips." Don Huston sings "Figaro" as a parody on the number from the operatic "Barber of Seville."—Running time, 10 minutes.

Nostradamus (MGM)

Perfect Historical Mystery

The material offered in this newest number from the Historical Mysteries group studies a subject that should hold a greater audience response than the customary high degree of attention given these intriguing short queries. It offers the strange success of a certain psychic individual, Michael de Nostradamus, whose name has been coined into the word "nostrum," to foretell coming events. A learned medico of the middle ages, Nostradamus wrote a tome called "Prophetic Centuries" in which are contained forecasts of happenings such as the London fire of 1666, the tragic fate of Louis XVI and royal consort, Marie Antoinette, and the military career of the little Corsican Corporal. The riddling of the future is done in historical and entertaining accuracy.—Running time, 11 minutes.

The Glass Slipper (Twentieth Century-Fox)

Color Cartoon

Here is a comedy treatment of the Cinderella story in cartoon form. It is a Terrytoon in color. Cinderella is telling a girl friend over the telephone of her adventure. The scene flashes back to the night of the ball and the appearance of Cinderella's fairy godmother, who, it turns out, is Mae West. Cinderella goes to the ball and meets the prince, in the guise of Harpo Marx. The prince chooses the fairy godmother. Running time, seven minutes.

Cairo, City of Contrast (MGM)

FitzPatrick Trek

As stated in this newest excursion around the world, the locale and stopping off place is the city of Cairo. To carry out the title's claim, various comparative aspects of the old and the new in the life of the metropolitan upon the Nile are offered for the inspection of the movie tourist. Changes in architecture, travel and modes of living and dressing are graphically presented. The Kipling truism "East is East and West is West and never the twain shall meet" seems to have been happily contradicted by the picturesque juxtaposition of Oriental and Occidental civilizations in this Egyptian and cosmopolitan town. Color, commentary and musical score compliment the visual excellence of the material to manufacture a travelogue that is interesting as well as educational footage to scan.—Running time, nine minutes.

Merle Kendricks and His Orchestra (Warner Brothers)

Very Good

A very melodious musical subject features Merle Kendricks and his orchestra. They play several popular numbers with vocal interpolations by Miriam Grahame. Marion Wilkins and Jack Walters dance a specialty number. Directed by Joseph Henabery. Running time, 10 minutes.

Sally Swing (Paramount)

Swing in Cartoon Time

The Cinderella theme about the poor young thing being turned into a dazzling beauty to marry the Prince Charming is jazzed up into a jitterbug success story about girl not meeting the boy but a swing orchestra and making good in a big, loud and lively way. Under the expert tutelage of Miss Betty Boop, who graciously steps aside from the limelight of this latest Max Fleischer picture plot, Sally Swing is introduced to step from the rags of being a scrub woman—or should one say scrub lady in speaking of such a cute cartoon cutup as Miss Swing—into the rich realm of being the queen of a not very regal jam session. Whether Sally's charm is widespread enough to flow out from her cartoon audience to reach her motion picture spectators is a matter of taste and youthfulness of that gathering.—Running time, seven minutes.

Little Pancho Vanilla (Warner Brothers)

Color Cartoon

Here is another color cartoon subject up to the standard of the series known as "Merrie Melodies" and produced by Leon Schlesinger. This one features Little Pancho, who yearns to become a bull-fighter. Although warned by his mother, Pancho, jealous of the attention three small girls give to a bull-fighter, enters an amateur contest. Pancho thus runs into all kinds of trouble but wins the contest and returns home to a rousing welcome. Running time, seven minutes.

The Immortal Brush (Warner Brothers)

Paintings on the Screen

A number of world-famed paintings are projected in full color, and their backgrounds sketched in, with Dwight Weist doing the narrating. Among the masterpieces shown are Sir Joshua Reynolds' "Blue Boy," Gainsborough's "Mrs. Siddons" and Franz Hals' "The Laughing Cavalier." Interest sustained by the method of presentation should remove any misgivings that the contents are highbrow. Running time, 9 minutes.

What Every Girl Should Know (Twentieth Century-Fox)

Lehr's Nonsense

Lew Lehr, now appearing in short subjects, conducts a "kindergarten" class of girly-girlies in bathing suits. They are more or less background, however, as most of the action centers around Lew and his grimaces. Running time, 10 minutes.

Toyland Casino (Warner Brothers)

Child Performers

A sizeable group of children have been gathered by director Joseph Henabery, and the hopeful stars sing, dance and put on a musical revue for two reels. The subject is entertaining and diversified, and should appeal to all who enjoy kid revues. Running time, 22 minutes.

Unusual Occupations, No. 2 (Paramount)

Extra! Birth of a Stoooge

The piece de resistance of this novelty collection of strange positions—as undoubtedly Mr. (or is it Master) "Charles McCarthy" would more than describe it in his special style of vocalization—is the revealing footage devoted to monumental birth period of that first stoooge of the land, the said "Charlie McCarthy." Running time, 11 minutes.

Eight Briefs Filed on RKO Reorganization Plan

Eight briefs, five opposing and three favoring the RKO reorganization plan, were submitted by stockholders to Federal Judge William Bondy in New York by Tuesday, the deadline for filing. It was expected that study of the briefs would delay Judge Bondy's final decision on the plan.

Yuletide Lobby Device Announced

A new theatre lobby novelty introduced this week by Yermi Stern Commercial Attractions and named Kute Kris Kringle is set in a miniature house measuring 3½ by 2½ feet, surrounded by a landscaped setting. Through the house's window can be glimpsed a figure of Santa Claus, three inches tall, and a minute living room done in Yuletide decorations. By means of a telephone placed outside the display, the spectator may communicate with Santa, who answers the call over his midget phone. A trailer for the patented device has been prepared by the sponsors, Michael Todd and Yermi Stern, and Edward J. Pesky, general manager. Company headquarters are at 1270 Sixth Avenue, New York City.

WRITERS GUILD LOSES PLEA TO LABOR BOARD

California, on November 8th,
Will Vote on Measure to Reduce Disturbances by Strikes

The Screen Writers Guild's year and a half campaign for recognition as screen writers' exclusive bargaining agent received a setback this week when Dr. Towne Nylander, regional director on the coast for the National Labor Relations Board, declined, at this time, to recommend to the NLRB in Washington that a formal complaint be issued charging the producers with violating the Wagner Act.

Meanwhile, California voters, on November 8th, face the necessity of voting yes or no on Proposition No. 1, an initiative measure proponents of which say will promote labor-capital peace and opponents of which say would strangle labor entirely and effectively. Every industry, including motion picture production and exhibition, will be primarily affected by the measure, but the film industry also will feel the secondary influence of the proposition, if carried.

Dr. Nylander's action was taken at the informal conference held by coast NLRB officials with the legal representatives of SWG and the producers concerning the recently filed charge by the guild accusing the producers of Wagner Act violation by refusing to bargain with the guild as exclusive bargaining agents.

Dr. Nylander said he had not made a final decision concerning the complaint but the probability of his urging a formal NLRB complaint is negligible.

Four International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees' studio locals will soon file NLRB petitions asking to be certified as collective bargaining agencies for crafts already covered in the basic agreement negotiated with producers in 1935, according to Harold V. Smith, International official.

The locals are Sound Technicians, 695; Cameramen's, 659; Laboratory Workers, 683, and Technicians, 37. About 12,000 workers are affected. Local 659 sought to file its petition last week but Dr. Nylander refused acceptance due to technical errors.

The move is believed to be the IATSE answer to charges of company unionism filed by Jeff Kibre, minority leader in Studio Technicians, Local 37, on which a conference is to be held by Dr. Nylander October 21st.

Louis B. Mayer testified before a Sacramento, Cal., grand jury, last week that William H. Neblett, Los Angeles attorney, had attempted to interest him in a "plot to crush the IATSE through last November's state assembly interim investigation committee."

Mr. Mayer said that on advice of Nicholas M. Schenck he refused to countenance Mr. Neblett's proposal. The testimony was given at the reopening of the grand jury's "lobbying" investigation.

The California Issue

As it applies to the film industry, the California proposition would among other things prohibit picketing of theatres and studios unless a strike is actually in progress at the place picketed; it would make illegal within the state any move to boycott motion pictures by strike sympathizers, and would restrain all sympathetic strikes.

Under the law, if passed, situations like those

RATHBONE LECTURES ON SHAKESPEARE

Basil Rathbone spoke on Shakespeare recently before an English class at New York University, and quoted from the Bard by way of illustration. "You will be surprised at what little you need to aid Shakespeare," he said, "if you can really learn your Shakespeare and speak it intelligently, there is practically nothing in the world of the theatre that you cannot do afterward with confidence."

Mr. Rathbone said that he thought Shakespeare "got lost in the scenery" in the motion picture version of "Romeo and Juliet," and that he believed that "Julius Caesar" would make an excellent film play.

which arose last year in the Federated Motion Picture Crafts strike wherein Hollywood and Los Angeles theatres were picketed, labor organizations boycotted major companies' product, and unions other than those whose members were engaged in the strike aided in picketing, would be prevented.

Preparing for its greatest battle by ballot, California labor organizations are assessing members for a huge campaign fund to combat the measure, which, one veteran labor leader said, "would be the death knell to all further labor organization."

The measure was placed on the ballot by petitions circulated by the California Committee for Peace in Employment Relations, the Southern Californians, Inc., which recently successfully placed a less drastic labor regulation ordinance on the Los Angeles City books, and other organizations which have either behind the scenes or active support of chambers of commerce and the Merchants and Manufacturers Association.

Campaigns All Set

Advocates of the measure point out that strikes are not outlawed, that collective bargaining is not interfered with, and that the measure would prevent strikes because of jurisdictional disputes between rival employee groups.

It prohibits all picketing of any place of business where no strike exists and picketing for union recognition or a closed shop, whether or not a strike exists.

Outside Pickets Barred

It would prevent picketing of homes, and eliminate "mercenaries," that is, pickets other than those employees out on strike. No striker would be permitted secondary boycott and picketing.

Mass picketing in demonstrations would be abolished.

Picketing of business houses will be permitted only when the strike in progress was called in a dispute solely over wages, hours or physical conditions of employment.

Organized labor's "unfair lists," one of its greatest weapons, would be prohibited. "Sit down" and "stay in" strikes would be unlawful.

Stopping of trucks on the highways or before entering a place of business, as was the case during last year's film strike, would be illegal.

Under the proposal, persons and corporations injured through violation of the sections of the law would have the right to sue for damages. Penalties for violation of the sections range up to fines of $5,000, imprisonment in a county jail or state penitentiary for a maximum of two years, or both fine and jail term.

While film labor is contributing to the fight against the move, the motion picture studios are not taking part in the campaign for or against the movement, remaining, as far as can be ascertained, out of the picture.

Organizations, such as the Motion Picture Artists Committee, the Motion Picture Democratic Committee, and the Hollywood Anti-Nazi League whose membership includes thousands of film workers, are taking an active part in combatting the measure.

There is the opinion, too, that the measure would prohibit picketing as a means of demonstration of protest—a method which the Anti-Nazi league has used often in the past.

Actors Guild Closes List

Membership rolls of the eastern division of the Screen Actors Guild were closed to extras on Saturday after a last minute rush brought membership in the Junior Guild slightly over the 1,000 mark. The action is similar to that taken at the coast in February, and will not affect actors who obtain bit parts.

Officials in New York declined to state how long the ban would remain in effect, but indicated that no effort to reopen the books would be made until a definite demand was established by increased opportunities for employment.

Chicago Laboratory To Sign

Chicago Film Laboratory, Inc., commercial film producer, has agreed to enter into a contract with the Screen Actors Guild, Florence Marston, Eastern head of the guild, reported Monday after weekend conferences in Chicago. The pact will be forwarded to Chicago immediately for signing, leaving only one other producer of consequence there, Atlas Films, not yet signed with the guild.

Mrs. Marston was the guild's delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention at Houston last week.

Theatre engineers in Chicago have signed a new contract which calls for the same wage scale that prevailed during the summer. This was 10 per cent below the old scale. The new agreement runs until June 1, 1939. Engineers will receive back salaries for the two weeks they were on strike.

Newspaper Guild Resolution

In a resolution released Monday the Paramount News Unit of the Newspaper Guild of New York states that Paramount News did not enter into collective bargaining with the guild in good faith and the suggestion of Albert J. Richard, chief management negotiator, that he submit counter-proposals, and the statements by the management that it wished to deal sincerely with the guild were simply tactics to disarm the guild and employees of Paramount.

The union resolved that the Paramount News Unit of the Newspaper Guild reject these proposals as the basis for further discussions and demand that the management submit immediately a set of counter-proposals which indicate a desire to reach agreement with the guild.

Fleischer Signs with Union

A new one-year contract between the Max Fleischer studio and the United American Artists Union was signed last week after more than two months of negotiations. The contract establishes a complete open shop for the new Fleischer studio at Miami and continues the wage and hour schedule.

Fleischer employees, all of whom are now at the new studio in Florida, will vote October 31st on negotiating representatives. The outcome of the election, however, will have no effect on the open shop agreement reached last week, Fleischer representatives said.

Broadway Gross Rises; 2 Theatres Run 24 Hours

Spurred by unseasonably warm weather, excellent business was reported for the week by Broadway first-run houses.

Hal Roach's first feature release, "There Goes My Heart," was expected to reach $80,000 at the Radio City Music Hall, and will be followed by "The Mad Miss Manton" after a one-week run. At the Roxy, "Suez" appeared to be headed for a $64,000 gross for the week, with its first four days topping everything the Roxy has played under its present policy with the exception of "Alexander's Ragtime Band." "Suez" is being held over.

"The Sisters," in for a three weeks run at the Strand, set a weekend record with a gross of $31,000, extra shows having been added Saturday and Sunday midnight. "If I Were King," which entered its fourth week at the Paramount Wednesday, continued strong, taking $25,000 Friday, Saturday and Sunday. At the Astor, "Marie Antoinette" entered its tenth week as a two-a-day roadshow, with tickets being sold two weeks in advance. After a three weeks run of "Too Hot to Handle," the Capitol started "Stablemates" on Thursday. On the same day "Girls on Probation" went into the Criterion. "Service De Luxe" starts Saturday at the Rivoli.

"Dark Rapture," which starts a third week at the Globe Saturday, and the double bill combination of "Dracula" and "Frankenstein" at the Rialto, were being shown on a 24-hour basis, the first time in years that Broadway has had two all-night film shows. "Dracula" and "Frankenstein" gave the Rialto the biggest opening it had had in three years.

Legion of Decency Classifies 9 Films

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

GLADIATOR, THE: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—Went over big on a weekend. Many claimed it to be Joe's best in the last few years. It pleased and drew in a few strangers. Running time, 72 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

GLADIATOR, THE: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—Usual Brown comedy. Pleases the younger element.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GLADIATOR, THE: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—We agree with our patrons that this is the best Joe E. Brown show in some time. Very satisfactory to normal business. Played October 8.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

HOLIDAY: Cary Grant, Katharine Hepburn, Doris Nolan, Lew Ayres, Edward Everett Horton, Binnie Barnes, Jean Dixon—Two good stars in a light comedy that only did fair business. In our situation Columbia's brand has been too long associated with cheap, shoddy pictures that, when we do get one that has a chance for some business, just don't materialize. It is really astonishing what the public knows about this business, what with the radio chatterbugs and the fan magazines. They know their onions when it comes to pictures and those that produce the percentage of hits and the exhibitor can thank the Jimmy Fiddlers and his ilk for part of it.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind.

HOLIDAY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, Doris Nolan, Edward Everett Horton, Lew Ayres, Binnie Barnes, Jean Dixon—This picture set up a new low house record since December, 1930. You can have Hepburn; I'll take vanilla. Never again! Played September 28-29.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

LOST HORIZON: Ronald Colman, Jane Wyatt, Edward Everett Horton, Margo, Isabel Jewel—A great picture with the cast doing wonderful work, but the picture is just too deep for the average person. Running time, 118 minutes. Played August 13-14.—Fischer and Bichler, Matray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

MAKING THE HEADLINES: Jack Holt, Beverly Roberts—Not much to this one. Somebody must have cut off the last reel. Pass it up, boys. Running time, 68 minutes. Played July 30-31.—Fischer and Bichler, Matray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

OVERLAND EXPRESS: Buck Jones, Marjorie Reynolds—The poorest western we have shown, without a doubt. Nothing to it and nobody liked it, not even the kids. Running time, 55 minutes. Played September 23, 24.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town and rural patronage.

STRANGER FROM ARIZONA, THE: Buck Jones, Dorothy Faye—They come to see Buck Jones, but why I don't know, as his recent pictures have been flops. This was a good western from my patrons' standpoint. It was well received and pleased all. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

THERE'S ALWAYS A WOMAN: Joan Blondell, Melvyn Douglas, Mary Astor, Frances Drake—This was another late picture. It was a very clever comedy, especially well cast, but our business was off. Played October 5-6.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WHEN G-MEN STEP IN: Don Terry, Jacqueline Wells—Very good, to a trifle better than normal business. Played September 11.—S. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodus, N. Y. Family patronage.

WIDE OPEN FACES: Joe E. Brown, Jane Wyman—All I have to do in these parts to start a whisper that Joe Brown is coming and people will go wild with joy, as he is a local favorite. They all come out 100 per cent satisfied with this one and are looking forward to his next appearance. Played on October 5 on a Bargain Night. Running time, 76 minutes.—J. H. Young, Star Theatre, Mendenhall, Miss. Small town patronage.

YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU: James Stuart, Lionel Barrymore, Ann Miller, Jean Arthur—Saw this picture screened and it is a honey for any town, large or small. Running time, 127 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

First National

ADVENTURES OF ROBIN HOOD, THE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Claude Rains, Basil Rathbone, Ian Hunter—We were late playing "Robin Hood" and business was not so good. Our patrons do not go for this type of picture. Personally, I did not like it at all. It will please in some situations, but did not click here. Running time, 102 minutes. Played October 9-10.—Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

ADVENTURES OF ROBIN HOOD, THE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Basil Rathbone, Claude Rains, Ian Hunter—Wish we could get more pictures of this type. Fact that it had a certain amount of English atmosphere and dialogue in it caused some not to like it but they came out both nights to see it. Running time, 102 minutes. Played September 29-30.—J. H. Young, Star Theatre, Mendenhall, Miss. Small town patronage.

ADVENTURES OF ROBIN HOOD: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Basil Rathbone—Played this a little late, but did a nice business on it. This is a costume picture, but the beautiful color and fast action make it suitable for small towns, where it will please. Running time, 102 minutes. Played October 9, 10.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CRIME SCHOOL: Humphrey Bogart, Gale Page, "Dead End Kids"—A very good picture of this type. Bogart fine and the "Dead End Kids" are plenty good. Not so much business, but those who saw it were pleased. Running time, 86 minutes. Played October 4-5.—Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

CRIME SCHOOL: Humphrey Bogart, "Dead End" Kids—Very good action picture; pleased above average business. Has good moral. The night I ran this picture some one stole all the electric lights from my marquee. Running time, 86 minutes. Played October 7, 8.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MY BILL: Kay Francis, Dickie Moore, John Litel, Anita Louise, Bonita Granville—An excellent drama that puts Miss Francis back in the high niche to which she belongs. Of course, as in most pictures with a child in them, the child gets all the comment, but all in all it is Miss Francis' picture. Very good audience reaction, and although we played it on a double feature, it will stand alone in practically all spots. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MY BILL: Kay Francis, John Litel, Anita Louise, Bonita Granville—The most enjoyable Kay Francis picture for a long time. Human and real. A splendid cast. Was very well liked and did good midweek business. Running time, 60 minutes. Played September 14-15.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

SLIGHT CASE OF MURDER, A: Edward G. Robinson, Jane Bryan, Allen Jenkins, Ruth Donnelly—Personally, I think Robinson is one of the best actors on the screen today, but somehow he simply doesn't take with the local fans and I lose money every time I have one of his pictures. This was a comedy throughout and pleased those who were brave enough to come to see it. If Robinson is a favorite anywhere, this one will go over big. Running time, 88 minutes. Played October 3-4.—J. H. Young, Star Theatre, Mendenhall, Miss. Small town patronage.

WOMEN ARE LIKE THAT: Kay Francis, Pat O'Brien, Ralph Forbes, Melville Cooper—Played on a Saturday Night Prevue and was glad there weren't more people there to see it. From where I was hiding when the people came out, I couldn't hear any favorable comments! If Warners want action they will certainly have to beat this. Running time, 88 minutes.—J. H. Young, Star Theatre, Mendenhall, Miss. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ARSENE LUPIN RETURNS: Virginia Bruce, Melvyn Douglas, Warren Williams—A clever detective picture that should hold up well on any double bill. Played it on weekend with Buck Jones to average business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BAD MAN OF BRIMSTONE: Wallace Beery, Virginia Bruce, Dennis O'Keefe, Bruce Cabot—Played this one on a Saturday and it served well to please the shoot-em-up fans as well as those who come out to see feature pictures. Fact is I had the best business on this for Saturday that I've had in many a moon. Don't think any theatre will go wrong in playing it. Running time, 81 minutes.—J. H. Young, Star Theatre, Mendenhall, Miss. Small town patronage.

BOYS TOWN: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney, Henry Hull—Inspiring and entertaining drama.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BOYS TOWN: Spencer Tracy, Mickey Rooney, Henry Hull—Good. Will stand extended run, especially in Catholic spots. Not a woman in the cast. Tracy and Rooney do a good job. Good for any house and makes the box office click. Running time, 95 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

CROWD ROARS, THE: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Morgan, Lionel Stander—A big disappointment. Eighty per cent of Taylor's draw is from the female trade and 90 per cent of the female trade positively do not like fight pictures. As the result, they stayed away. Picture is okay for men, but do the men go for Taylor? I wouldn't consider it a stroke of genius casting Taylor in this picture. Played September 25-26.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kan. General patronage.

CROWD ROARS, THE: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Morgan, Lionel Stander—Not as good as "A Yank at Oxford." Too much boxing. It is a good picture otherwise. Fine acting and good cast, but prefer Bob in a different type of story. He is very handsome and Maureen O'Sullivan cute in this picture. Running time, 92 minutes. Played September 29-30.—Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

CROWD ROARS, THE: Robert Taylor, Maureen O'Sullivan, Frank Morgan, Lionel Stander—Very good. It's hard to get the ladies in to see a boxing picture, but those that came liked it. The men enjoyed this immensely.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FAST COMPANY: Melvyn Douglas, Florence Rice, Claire Dodd, Nat Pendleton—A dandy program offering that for some reason or other did no business. Played September 13.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

JUDGE HARDY'S CHILDREN: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Don't think this ranged in favor with the other Hardy Family releases, but some people liked it. Didn't make any money on it. Running time, 77 minutes.—J. H. Young, Star Theatre, Mendenhall, Miss. Small town patronage.

JUDGE HARDY'S CHILDREN: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—This is a fast coming set of pictures. This is my second and it really went over swell, and judging from the advance in rental on this series they must be going over swell everywhere. But they really are good and just about please everyone. Played October 1.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassetts, Va. Small town patronage.

mew, Charles Coburn, Gale Sondergaard, Herbert Mundin—A picture that we were afraid of that really surprised us. Excellent in all details. Coburn and Mundin are excellent in their parts. The only poor part of the picture is the dialect which had to be overlooked when the locale was in England. Pleased everyone. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LOVE FINDS ANDY HARDY: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Judy Garland, Cecilia Parker, Ann Rutherford, Fay Holden, Lana Turner—The best of the Hardys. Everyone raved over it. Mickey Rooney pleases old and young. I hope the Hardy family pictures continue. They are well liked and have a good draw at the box office. This is grand. Running time, 91 minutes. Played September 6-7.—Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

LOVE FINDS ANDY HARDY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford, Lana Turner—The finest entertainment to come out of Hollywood this year, and that includes your "Alexanders," "Spawn," "Antoinettes," etc. Never before have I had a picture to please so well as this. Put this on your best days and you'll get the best surprise you have ever had in this screwy show business. It's a natural.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood Theatre, Ellinwood, Kan. General patronage.

MARIE ANTOINETTE: Norma Shearer, Tyrone Power, Joseph Schillkraut, John Barrymore, Robert Morley, Anita Louise, Gladys George—Metro certainly goes to town on these prestige pictures. Lavish, splendid acting, and story as it should be, I reckon. Your infrequent, high-class patronage will acclaim it as they should, for this type of picture is right down their alley. But for your rank and file, they will accept it, but they won't exactly rave over it. I'm willing to run a few of them, but not for a steady diet. You won't get fat on them, neither will you starve, so I guess it washes.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

PORT OF SEVEN SEAS: Wallace Beery, Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal—Double featured this. I believe it was rather disappointing to the Beery fans, but must admit that Frank Morgan gave a very fine performance. Running time, 81 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

PORT OF SEVEN SEAS: Wallace Beery, Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal—A fair picture. Many of the cash customers were disappointed as they expected a sea picture. Did average business. Played October 1.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SHOPWORN ANGEL: Margaret Sullivan, James Stewart, Walter Pidgeon, Alan Curtis—Much better than expected. Very good product from Loew's, Inc., of late.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

THOROUGHBREDS DON'T CRY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Ronald Sinclair, Sophie Tucker—No small town exhibitor can complain at this not giving them action. Mickey is tops. Everybody raved about this. I believe it made us a few new customers. The second night built up as if the depression was over.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THREE COMRADES: Robert Taylor, Franchot Tone, Robert Young, Margaret Sullivan—One of the best pictures we have shown. Had to turn some away at the box office the first night. Second night full house. Very sad ending the only thing wrong. Running time, 98 minutes. Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town and rural patronage.

TOO HOT TO HANDLE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Walter Pidgeon, Leo Carillo, Walter Connolly—Not an outstanding production but it's okay and will do lots of business. Gave me the best business since May on any picture, so what else matters? Should do a big business in spite of bad conditions. Step on this one hard. Played October 2-3.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood Theatre, Ellinwood, Kan. General patronage.

YELLOW JACK: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce, Lewis Stone, Henry Hull, Charles Coburn—A very good show and properly advertised will bring in some extra dough. Everyone that saw the picture seemed to like it, and had a lot of compliments. Played September 26-27.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Small town patronage.

FOUR NEW REPORTERS FROM FOUR STATES

The South and the Southwest are the homes of four new contributors to "What the Picture Did for Me", starting with this issue. The showmen are:

JOSEPH W. AMOS, SR., Broadway Theatre, Reidsville, N. C.

J. H. YOUNG, Star Theatre, Mendenhall, Miss.

HUGO PLATH, Mecca Theatre, Jacksboro, Texas.

ED CREW, Empress Theatre, Waurika, Okla.

Read the reports of these exhibitors in the department this week.

YELLOW JACK: Robert Montgomery, Virginia Bruce, Lewis Stone—Fair picture, but not up to expectations. Business off second night. Too much dialogue and not enough action. Running time, 83 minutes. Played September 28-29.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town patronage.

Monogram

CODE OF THE RANGERS: Tim McCoy—Tim McCoy is fast becoming one of the leading western stars for me; each picture I play is getting more and more compliments. And this one is especially good. Running time, 58 minutes. Played September 24.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Small town patronage.

MAN'S COUNTRY: Jack Randall—Randall is a fair western star at the present and is definitely on the up providing that they give him proper stories and the cast. You can play the Randalls and not go wrong on them. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 1.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Small town patronage.

MEXICALI KID: Jack Randall—This picture almost equals the records of Ritter and Rogers! Jack Randall's popularity seems to be increasing and the audience seems to like him better since he has discontinued his singing. Jack, keep up the cowboy work! There is room on the screen for real honest-to-God western stars who do stunts without songs! Played September 30-October 1.—Hugo Plath, Mecca Theatre, Jacksboro, Texas. General patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE LIMBERLOST: Jean Parker, Eric Linden—This Gene Stratton-Porter story clicked like very few pictures have in this small town. It outgrossed by 50 per cent most "A" pictures from major companies and sent patrons away pleased. It is one of those down-to-earth stories that appeals to humanity and leaves something to think about after the picture has faded from the screen. Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 1-2.—J. H. Young, Star Theatre, Mendenhall, Miss. Small town patronage.

STARLIGHT OVER TEXAS: Tex Ritter, Carmen LaRoux—I played the Tex Ritter western to good business. Played September 16-17.—Hugo Plath, Mecca Theatre, Jacksboro, Texas. General patronage.

Paramount

BARRIER, THE: Leo Carrillo, Jean Parker, James Ellison, Otto Kruger—Here is a good little picture that does not cost you a fortune. Just the right kind of a picture for a small town. Business fair. Running time, 90 minutes. Played August 20-21.—Fischer and Biehler, Matray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

GIVE ME A SAILOR: Martha Raye, Bob Hope, Betty Grable, Jack Whiting—The best Martha Raye has made. This picture pleased 100 per cent. Very entertaining and the kind everyone enjoys. Do not be afraid of this. Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 22-23.—Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

PROFESSOR BEWARE: Harold Lloyd, Phyllis Welch, Lionel Stander, Raymond Walburn—About the same old stuff as the previous Lloyds. Did very poor business on this. I'm afraid that Harold Lloyd is all washed up in the movies. Anyway, he is through as far as this theatre is concerned. Played September 23.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

SING, YOU SINNERS: Bing Crosby, Fred MacMurray, Donald O'Connor, Ellen Drew, Elizabeth Patterson—Good little picture. Extended run but did not warrant it. Pleased all. Don't be afraid of it, for it will please and McPhee knows. Running time, 88 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

SING, YOU SINNERS: Bing Crosby, Fred MacMurray, Donald O'Connor, Ellen Drew, Elizabeth Patterson—An excellent picture and best Bing has made in years. One lady remarked that she had already selected this for the best of the movie contest Quiz pictures for she knew she would not see one better. Grand music and singing. Business excellent. Running time, 85 minutes. Played September 11-12.—Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

SPAWN OF THE NORTH: George Raft, Dorothy Lamour, Henry Fonda, Akim Tamiroff, John Barrymore, Lynne Overman, Louise Platt—A fine picture that failed to do any outstanding business. Played a year ago this would have done swell, but even good pictures don't bring them out any more. This one should please anywhere. Played October 2-4.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

SPAWN OF THE NORTH: George Raft, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, John Barrymore, Lynne Overman, Louise Platt—A very fine show that failed to draw up to our expectations. Give it all you've got. It should do business. Its lack of draw here we attributed to some parts of the feature that were pretty brutal. This is one that should interest all men. It's one they can sink their teeth into and hang on. Running time, 110 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

TEXANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Joan Bennett, May Robson, Walter Brennan, Robert Cummings—These big westerns were good for a lot of business a few months ago, but no draw whatsoever now. Very few companies released this type of product except Paramount and now with the public definitely off this type of picture the producers have all announced several outdoor epics along the same line. Smart Hollywood producers! Played October 5-7.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

TROPIC HOLIDAY: Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Tito Guizar—A big disappointment and customers were not pleased. The only thing they seemed to enjoy was the bull fight. A very slow moving picture and draggy songs by Lamour and Tito Guizar. Running time, 75 minutes. Played September 18-19.—Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

TROPIC HOLIDAY: Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland—Right after "Waikiki Wedding," Paramount has two of the top box office stars in Burns and Martha Raye. Then, "The Hurricane" and "Her Jungle Love" put Dorothy Lamour on top, and now look what's happened! All these are right back at the bottom, just where they started, due to the bum judgment in selection of material. "Tropic Holiday" must have been a nightmare in the life of the story writers. It's the worst picture I have run in months. Played September 18-19.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood Theatre, Ellinwood, Kan. General patronage.

TROPIC HOLIDAY: Dorothy Lamour, Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Ray Milland—Good picture. The comedy antics of Bob Burns and Martha Raye received the most approval, while the most of the singing was suffered in silence. Played September 16.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

TRUE CONFESSION: Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray, John Barrymore, Una Merkel, Edgar Kennedy—A nice comedy picture that just gets by. Will do good some places. Business fair. Running time, 84 minutes. Played August 26-27.—Fischer and Biehler, Matray Theatre, Strasburg, N. D. Small town patronage.

Preferred

ROARING SIX GUNS: Kermit Maynard—This is the first Kermit Maynard that I have played in quite some time and it is a very good western. In fact, it will hold its own on any Saturday. Running time, 58 minutes. Played September 21.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Small town patronage.

Republic

ARMY GIRL: Madge Evans, Preston Foster, Neil Hamilton, Ruth Donnelly—One of the best directed and best received pictures put out by Republic this year. Certainly their best feature outside of westerns. Running time, 88 minutes. Played September 8-9.—J. H. Young, Star Theatre, Mendenhall, Miss. Small town patronage.

BIG SHOW, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette—

Played double bill with "White Banners." (See report under Warners' "White Banners.") E. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, Inc., La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

BILLY THE KID RETURNS: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Smiley Burnette—Played this to good business. Played September 23-24.—Hugo Plath, Mecca Theatre, Jacksboro, Texas. General patronage.

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry, Carol Hughes, Smiley Burnette—This picture was played on my bargain 11c Night, after having built Autry up here by playing three of his prior releases. To say that Autry drew 'em in and kept them satisfied is putting it mildly, and Smiley Burnette did the rest! A swell picture, either feature or western, in anybody's theatre. Autry and Burnette rank as "tops" here now. Running time, 60 minutes. Played September 14.—J. H. Young Star Theatre, Mendenhall, Miss. Small town patronage.

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Carol Hughes—Played this one day, August 20, to the top gross of the month, and that includes all the so-called major product. I completely agree with my friend, Simmons of Lamar, Mo., down in the brush country, that any exhibitor that passed up the Republic series of westerns ought to have his head examined. I think this boy, Roy Rogers, will soon be tops in the field, but he's got a long row to hoe to beat Gene Autry in "Gold Mine in the Sky." Played August 20.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kan. General patronage.

OLD BARN DANCE, THE: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Helen Valkis—A good picture, but we just cannot do any business with Gene Autry. This picture grossed $10 first night; some better second night. Our customers just will not go for Gene. Running time, 60 minutes. Played September 29-30.—Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

TRAIL OF VENGEANCE: Johnny Mack Brown, Iris Meredith—One of the best westerns we have played. More favorable comments. Plenty of action. Good story. Running time, 54 minutes. Played September 30, October 1. Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

BLIND ALIBI: Richard Dix, Whitney Bourne—A so-so picture that everyone liked because of the acting of Ace, the wonder dog. Not much to the picture, but the plot was somewhat out of the usual run of plot, so got by very nicely on a double bill. Running time, 60 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

BREAKING THE ICE: Bobby Breen, Charles Ruggles, Dolores Costello, Irene Dare—Good picture and seemed to please. The little ice skater, Irene Dare, stole the picture. She is excellent and our patrons were delighted with her. She can be compared with Sonja Henie. Running time, 80 minutes. Played September 25-26.—Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

BREAKING THE ICE: Bobby Breen, Charles Ruggles, Dolores Costello, Irene Dare—Good singing by Breen. Good skating by clever little Irene Dare.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CAREFREE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Ralph Bellamy—The poorest Astaire and Rogers we have ever played. Crazy story spoils the picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CAREFREE: Fred Astaire, Ginger Rogers, Ralph Bellamy—These stars Astaire and Rogers don't click for me. In this one, not generally liked. Business bad. Extended run, but did not hold up. Use your noodle on this one. Running time, 83 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine.

HAVING WONDERFUL TIME: Ginger Rogers, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Lucille Ball, Peggy Conklin—A rather weak plot, poor continuity, and in all a picture that pleased in part but left everyone rather let down as they really expected something different with such a good cast. We played it on Bank Night and am glad we did. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. E. Eliason, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

I'M FROM THE CITY: Joe Penner, Kay Sutton—My idea of nothing, but judging from the howls of laughter it pleased the patrons. If they like Joe Penner, they will like this one. Running time, 66 minutes. Played October 1-2.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PAINTED DESERT: George O'Brien, Ray Whitley—A wonderful plot in a western that was ruined by too many night scenes that were so dark that one could barely distinguish the actors. RKO has had this fault all season, but still continues. The dynamiting scenes were awe-inspiring. Outside of this feature, the story is just a story. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

VIVACIOUS LADY: Ginger Rogers, James Stewart, James Ellison, Charles Coburn, Beulah Bondi—Played this one late, but one of the very best pictures this year judging from the comments of patrons. James Stewart is a natural for this rural community.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, Inc., La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND: Alice Faye, Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, Ethel Merman, Jack Haley—If someone leaned over my page and saw me about to launch into a criticism of "Alexander's Ragtime Band" in the face of the widespread acclaim it has received and the colossal grosses it has garnered, it is possible they would contend I was biting off more than I could chew. However, I am not biting off more than I can chew and I'm biting off plenty, so stop breathing down my collar. Let me begin by stating that 20th Century-Fox has once again proved the adage "It pays to Advertise." They surrounded the blaring title "Alexander's Ragtime Band" with so much hokum and propaganda that even after people have seen it they are unable to draw any sane conclusions about the film's merit. Tonight I saw the picture and on the way out I checked with the projectionist, to make sure that I hadn't been tricked to make absolutely certain it was the Great Picture of the Century I'd been sitting through.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corporation, Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND: Alice Faye, Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, Ethel Merman, Jack Haley—Absolutely the best this year so far and I believe most everyone will agree. Best business in a long time. Alice Faye at her best and Tyrone Power and Don Ameche excellent. Ethel Merman did all right. Cannot say too much for "Alexander's Ragtime Band." Running time, 106 minutes. Played October 2-3.—Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND: Alice Faye, Tyrone Power, Don Ameche, Ethel Merman, Jack Haley—I could not see much to this picture, but people flocked in to see it.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ALEXANDER'S RAGTIME BAND: Tyrone Power, Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Ethel Merman, Jack Haley—Was disappointed in the business on this one due to a neighbor running it five days a couple of weeks ahead of me. The picture is there and any theatre should do a land-office business on this providing they are out of reach of the circuits and prior runs. Played September 22-23.—Warren L. Weber, Ellinwood Theatre, Ellinwood, Kan. General patronage.

BATTLE OF BROADWAY: Victor McLaglen, Brian Donlevy, Louise Hovick, Raymond Walburn; WALKING DOWN BROADWAY: Claire Trevor, Michael Whalen, Phyllis Brooks, Thomas Beck; PASSPORT HUSBAND: Stuart Erwin, Pauline Moore, Joan Woodbury; I'LL GIVE A MILLION: Warner Baxter, Marjorie Weaver, Joan Hersholt, Peter Lorre—Just some more pictures from Fox which don't mean anything to the public.—M. Ewin, Amus-U Theatre, Inc., La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

IN OLD CHICAGO: Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Tyrone Power, Alice Brady—We played this late, but had fine weather and a little above average in attendance. Played September 28-29.—C. W. Mills, Arcade Theatre, Sodas, N. Y. Family patronage.

JOSETTE: Simone Simon, Robert Young, Don Ameche, Bert Lahr, Joan Davis—One of the most enjoyable pictures we have had for time. Liked by everyone. It is no wonder that Simon's singing was so badly panned by some. The recording was about the worst I have ever heard. There is nothing wrong with her voice. Ameche and Young splendid. Drew fairly well. I am surprised that Fox would record a picture so badly. Running time, 73 minutes. Played October 2-4.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

KIDNAPPED: Warner Baxter, Freddie Bartholomew, Arleen Whelan, C. Aubrey Smith—After reading so many adverse reports on this picture, we were agreeably surprised. We thought it pleasing entertainment and so different it was quite a treat. The production was beautiful, the photography also. The recording was not the best. Baxter and Bartholomew excellent. We thought the new Whelan quite wooden. Running time, 90 minutes. Played October 7-8.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

LIFE BEGINS IN COLLEGE: Ritz Brothers, Joan Davis, Tony Martin, Gloria Stuart, Fred Stone, Nat Pendleton—Excellent feature, but I ran it too late to make expenses. Nat Pendleton and Joan Davis steal the show. Run in opposition to a skating rink, a dance and a high school pep meeting, so went to the cleaners. Played September 28-29.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS BROADWAY: Shirley Temple, Jimmy Durante, George Murphy, Edna Mae Oliver—About as good as any of Shirley's pictures. She is still cute as ever and a good draw at the box office. Entire cast good, and dancing by Shirley and George Murphy grand. Running time, 71 minutes. Played September 8-9.—Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

LITTLE MISS BROADWAY: Shirley Temple, Jimmy Durante, George Murphy, Edna Mae Oliver—Sorry, Shirley, but you can't get them in any more. Since "Curly Top" you have been steadily losing ground until now you can't even get average Sunday business for me. Worth no more than program price as far as my towns are concerned. If Fox would spend 50 per cent of the dough on Withers as they do on Temple, I am sure that the majority of exhibitors would be mighty pleased. Played September 11-12.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kan. General patronage.

MY LUCKY STAR: Sonja Henie, Richard Greene, Joan Davis, Buddy Ebsen, Cesar Romero—I don't think this picture could do anyone harm. In fact, I think the whole cast was instrumental in causing a certain unusual feeling of wellbeing in the audience. Far too often the public pays 35c to increase their inferiority complex. Men, forgetting the bokus-pokus of the camera, the quarts of grease and paint employed and the hours of vocal and physical culture involved, compare their wives and sweethearts with the glorious screen stars. Women hear no such thrilling, poetic, husky whisperings from the husbands (Continued on following page) seated beside them, half asleep. But "My Lucky Star" leaves a totally different reaction. John finds Mary far more attractive than fat little Sonja Henie, even though Mary's ankles cave in on the ice, and Mary is sure John has more character than Richard Greene, and Aunt Iny can act circles around the whole cast. On the whole, I think it's pretty nice of Fox to serve up a less tasty dish than might be found in millions of homes, and anyone who starts to criticize "My Lucky Star" has the same advantage a cat has over a naked little bird fresh from the egg. I hope Buddy Ebsen and Joan Davis suffer no relapse. They must have been nearly overtaken to act as simple as the rest of the picture was.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corporation, Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

MY LUCKY STAR: Sonja Henie, Richard Greene, Joan Davis, Buddy Ebsen, Cesar Romero—Better than average. Charming "Alice in Wonderland" scene.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

PASSPORT HUSBAND: Stuart Erwin, Pauline Moore, Joan Woodbury—Pretty bad. Not worth running even on bargain night. It is a shame to waste Stuart Erwin in a thing like this. He is very well liked, but didn't have a chance in this. Running time, 67 minutes. Played October 5-6.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

THREE BLIND MICE: Loretta Young, Joel McCrea, David Niven, Stuart Erwin, Majorie Weaver—A very good picture of its type, but it did not draw at all. Played September 22-23.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Small town patronage.

WE'RE GOING TO BE RICH: Gracie Fields, Victor McLaglen, Brian Donlevy, Ted Smith—"Walter, Walter, lead me to the altar!" I haven't forgotten that song yet. It's hard to make oneself heard in print as small as this, but I wish to loudly proclaim this film as excellent entertainment. "We're Going to Be Rich" is a highly entertaining piece. As a period play of the South African gold rush days it ranks with the finest period productions in detail of settings, costumes, etc., produced in Hollywood or anywhere else. I suspect Brian Donlevy of having seen Paul Muni, but he is none the less convincing. Gracie Fields is grand. She is someone the audience would like to meet personally and chew the fat with in the kitchen. Victor McLaglen, who under proper direction and given a decent role always behaves creditably, is a likeable blustering ne'er-do-well, and little Ted Smith is nothing short of superb as McLaglen's little Cockney son. The music has a "good old days" tang. "We're Going to Be Rich" is a singularly well rounded, well directed, well acted production. And by the way, there is plenty of action involved, climaxed by a realistic bare fist encounter featuring Victor McLaglen. Had Fox but given it one-tenth the advertising he gave "Ragtime Band" you all could have said "We're Going to Be Rich."—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corporation, Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

WE'RE GOING TO BE RICH: Victor McLaglen, Gracie Fields, Brian Donlevy, Ted Smith—I have run better and have run worse. Miss Fields, thank goodness, did not have the English accent, but that did not go for the rest of the cast and for some reason our people don't go for it. Prejudiced, I reckon, but I can't help that. In an American-made picture Miss Fields would be accepted. I think. She has a good voice and certain points that would take if an American production.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

United Artists

ADVENTURES OF MARCO POLO, THE: Gary Cooper, Sigrid Gurie, Basil Rathbone, Binnie Barnes—Played August 25-26, when business was at a low ebb, and it did fair business, not as well, however, as it should have done, for this was an excellent picture. Gary Cooper pleased all the "Cooper fans" and Sigrid Gurie won their hearts playing opposite him. Don't be afraid of this one. Running time, 104 minutes.—J. H. Young, Star Theatre, Mendenhall, Miss. Small town patronage.

ADVENTURES OF MARCO POLO, THE: Gary Cooper, Sigrid Gurie, Basil Rathbone, Binnie Barnes—A good show in entertainment, but it just didn't draw the people, but what did see it seemed to like it. The old time costumes will keep out a lot, especially in a town as small as mine. Played October 3-4.—Cecil Ward, Stone Theatre, Bassett, Va. Small town patronage.

ADVENTURES OF MARCO POLO, THE: Gary Cooper, Sigrid Gurie, Basil Rathbone, Binnie Barnes—A fair picture that was a complete box office flop. Played September 9.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER, THE: Tommy Kelly, Ann Gillis, May Robson, Jackie Moran, Walter Brennan—The most talked of picture before playing time we've had this summer. Business good.—M. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

ALGIERS: Charles Boyer, Hedy Lamarr, Joseph Calleia, Alan Hale, Gene Lockhart—Disappointing as to draw, but it seemed to please. Boyer is hard to understand and it affects his draw here. Lamarr gave a fine demonstration of how an actress should pose for a still, but gazing into space for 70 minutes rather bores my patrons, who like a little action now and then. Running time, 96 minutes.—A. E. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

Here are some of the pictures I have recently played and my opinion of "what they did for me". I haven't seen many writeups on pictures from Mississippi theatres in your magazine and I think we should have a look-in once in a while.—J. H. YOUNG, Star Theatre, Mendenhall, Miss.

BLOCKADE: Madeleine Carroll, Henry Fonda, Leo Carrillo, John Halliday—We were almost afraid to play this. Again we were surprised. It drew well and pleased. We could find nothing about the picture that should offend any race or creed and neither did our patrons. It is a beautiful picture and good entertainment. Not too gruesome. Fonda and Carroll excellent. Photography and recording the best. Running time, 84 minutes. Played October 9-10.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

BLOCKADE: Madeleine Carroll, Henry Fonda, Leo Carrillo, John Halliday—Excellent. Many patrons applauded after the picture, which doesn't happen often here. Played September 27.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

GAITY GIRLS, THE: Jack Hulbert, Patricia Ellis, Arthur Riscoe, Googie Withers—Fairly good program offering, although the lack of known names makes it a poor drawing card. Played September 20.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

I MET MY LOVE AGAIN: Joan Bennett, Henry Fonda, Dame May Whitty, Alan Marshal—Just a filler on a double bill. It doesn't draw flies. Played September 28.—B. Hollenbeck, Rose Theatre, Sumas, Wash. Small town patronage.

Universal

BLACK ACES: Buck Jones, Kay Linaker—Many are of the opinion Buck Jones is slipping. Personally he still seems to do us gratifying business. Buck Jones broke our house record a year ago and has been a big item in keeping our creditors happy. His pictures on weekend are as good as a shot in the arm. If every star made us as much money as Buck Jones we would be hard to get along with.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BLACK BANDIT: Bob Baker, Marjorie Reynolds—I hope the rest will be better. This was pretty punk and I have a fair idea that it will take a lot of selling to get them in for another Bob Baker. Running time, 56 minutes.—A. F. Eliassen, Rialto Theatre, Paynesville, Minn. Rural and small town patronage.

LETTER OF INTRODUCTION: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," Adolphe Menjou, Andrea Leeds, George Murphy, Eve Arden, Rita Johnson—John (Menjou) Mannering, the great screen lover, is on his fourth marriage at the start of the film. Andrea Leeds (with stage ambitions) presents him her "Letter of Introduction" early in the piece and the audience is let in on a great secret: Miss Leeds is Mannering's daughter by his first wife, deceased. Universal formulates flimsy excuses why we all must keep this momentous secret from the rest of the cast in order that the film might run the full 110 minutes. In the face of their misleading relationship (father-daughter), all the women forsake Menjou, and the man (George Murphy) storms away from Leeds. It seems to me every time I see this little Andrea Leeds she is "fenegling" around for a chance to become great through the aid of mustache Menjou, who is already great. Since, at the end of this film, Menjou lurches out of the theatre where he disgraced himself by being drunk the opening night and commits suicide, perhaps Leeds will not have to start all over again in the next production. Perhaps Menjou with his well modulated kindness has not been the tonic she needed. The spotty audience sat politely through this incredible plot, awaiting the comedy relief left in the capable hands of Edgar Bergen with his "Charlie McCarthy" and disgusting but entertaining "Mortimer." I took Bergen's act for granted as the highlight of the film, and while I very much enjoyed his awareness of his screen non-personality without his dolls, I was mostly impressed by the two wholesomely attractive girls who played the supporting roles of Honey and Cora.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corporation, Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

MAD ABOUT MUSIC: Deanna Durbin, Herbert Marshall, Gail Patrick—Had our town not been in such bad financial condition, I believe this picture would have enjoyed outstanding business. However, we did very nicely and still have nice compliments. It's one idea of perfect entertainment.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RAGE OF PARIS, THE: Danielle Darrieux, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Mischa Auer, Helen Broderick, Louis Hayward—Good story and Doug Fairbanks, Jr., okay. Cannot say much for the foreign star, Danielle Darrieux. Picture would have been better with one of our American stars. A pleasing little picture. Running time, 78 minutes. Played October 6-7.—Alice Simmons, Strand and Lyric Theatres, Jefferson, Texas. General patronage.

RAGE OF PARIS, THE: Danielle Darrieux, Douglas, Jr., Helen Broderick, Mischa Auer, Louis Hayward—A honey of a picture in every respect. Delightful entertainment, beautifully produced and recorded. Danielle is a distinct hit. Everyone enthusiastic about her. She should click in a big way if her next picture is as pleasing as this one. Running time, 75 minutes. Played September 25-27.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

YOU'RE A SWEETHEART: Alice Faye, George Murphy—Despite the fact that we played this one quite late, all the boys seemed to enjoy it. It is by no means pretentious, but rather a plain, fast moving musical with plenty of good songs by Alice Faye (here she's "tops" when it comes to singing) and comedy by Andy Devine, "Oswald" and Frances Hunt. Incidentally, this Hunt girl looks like a comer. Many of the boys were willing to bet "Andy" (Daisy) Devine did not learn to do division at the Sing Sing prison school. And before we forget, let's not pass up Maida and Ray, who put on a real show with laments; the Norville Brothers, who gave a clever whistling act; Casper Reardon and his harp, etc. If you haven't already done so, treat your fans to a pleasing production and play, "You're a Sweetheart." Running time, 95 minutes. Played October 7.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Warner Brothers

BOY MEETS GIRL: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Marie Wilson, Ralph Bellamy—We never had so many walkouts and all round disappointment as on "Boy Meets Girl." If this is a sample of stage shows showing a year on Broadway, must say that city folks are easier to please than my patrons.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BOY MEETS GIRL: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Marie Wilson—Saw this picture screened and checked it out. It is silly, and Cagney is badly miscast. Running time, 86 minutes. E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

BOY MEETS GIRL: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Marie Wilson, Ralph Bellamy, Dick Foran—I dislike to pan a picture, but this is the poorest excuse for a picture I have played in my theatre in several months. Cagney had better stayed with Grand National if they are going to put him in stuff like this. Everybody waited for the one laugh, but it never came. Brother exhibitors, better see this before you even book it for the lower half of a double bill. Played September 4-5.—Warren L. Weber, Deluxe Theatre, St. John, Kan. General patronage.

COWBOY FROM BROOKLYN, THE: Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien, Priscilla Lane, Dick Foran—This seems to be just what they wanted. It has everything for popular appeal. Drew very well and pleased 100 per cent. Powell still popular. Most of Warners' recording has improved somewhat. Running time, 77 minutes. Played September 30-October 1.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

COWBOY FROM BROOKLYN: Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien, Priscilla Lane—Very good musical comedy; pleased above average business. Running time, 77 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Played October 5, 6. Small town patronage.

FOUR'S A CROWD: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Rosalind Russell, Patric Knowles—Another "all-talker" that didn't set up any records, high nor low. Some like, most don't. Another high allocated picture that should have been in the program group. I run nine products and have come to the conclusion that there are only two major companies, despite rumors to the contrary. You guess who! Played October 2-3.—Warren L. Weber, Ritz Theatre, Stafford, Kan. General patronage.

RACKET BUSTERS: George Brent, Gloria Dickson, Humphrey Bogart—Good action picture which played to fair business and pleased the action fans. Running time, 71 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SWING YOUR LADY: Humphrey Bogart, Louise Fazenda, Frank McHugh, Allen Jenkins, Nat Pendleton, Penny Singleton—The kind of picture the folks around the theatre can't get enough of. Played this one twice and if Vitagraph keep a print in good order we could use it once each year.—E. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, Inc., La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

TREACHEY RIDES THE RANGE: Dick Foran, Paul Stone—Another one of the better westerns that have been made by Warner Brothers. This Foran feature was a dandy. Played September 23-24.—George Khattar, Casino Theatre, Whitney Pier, Nova Scotia, Canada. General patronage.

VALLEY OF THE GIANTS: Wayne Morris, Claire Trevor, Charles Bickford, John Lital, Jack LeRue, Alan Hale—A box office natural, although I couldn't see a baby faced kid in a he-man's role. Claire Trevor, Jack LeRue and Bickford acquit themselves nobly, with Alan Hale outshining everyone else's performance to such an extent that he stole the picture. It kept the audience glued to their seats. Played September 21-23.—Charles Rossi, Strand Theatre, Schroon Lake, N. Y. Small town patronage.

WHITE BANNERS: Fay Bainter, Claude Rains, Jackie Cooper, Bonita Granville—A fine picture but poorly patronized. Played double bill with "The Big Show." As the patrons came in they said they came to see Gene Autry. Going out, they said "White Banners" was a fine picture.—E. Ewing, Amus-U Theatre, Inc., La Harpe, Ill. General patronage.

WHITE BANNERS: Fay Bainter, Claude Rains, Bonita Granville, Jackie Cooper—A splendid picture that is a credit to any theatre. Even though the story is a trifle maudlin, it is lifted to the heights by the superb acting of Bainter, Rains and Cooper. Running time, 90 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N.D. Small town and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

ANKLES AWAY: Andy Clyde—Not so good. Poorest Andy Clyde we have shown. Running time, 15½ minutes. Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Rural and small town patronage.

ATHLETIC YOUTH: Special Sport Thrills—An interesting short showing what can be done if youngsters are given careful training in the various sporting activities. Something different. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J.—Prison patronage.

FUN IN THE WATER: New World of Sport Series—Everybody like to see water sport. This made very good entertainment.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

PLAY BALL: Special Sport Thrills—A fair short that was played during the world series, showing the Yankee in spring training, and as a result was very timely. Otherwise would only have been another short. As it was, it was interesting. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, NO. 6: Well received. Always photographing someone's favorite star.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SNOWTIME: Color Rhapsody—Fair; nothing to brag about. Running time, 7½ minutes.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn.

TERMITES OF 1938: 3 Stooges—Silly but pleased all. They seemed to like them. Running time, 7 minutes.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn.

Educational

JEFFERSON MACHAMER COMEDIES: I hope we have had the last of these. Once in a while there has been a smile or two in them, but mostly they are a bore.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

MOUNTAIN ROMANCE, A: Terry-Toons—The only Terry-Toon we have had this year that had any merit at all. It was fairly clever. Running time, six minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. B. Small town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

CANNED FISHING: Our Gang Comedy—Good; one of the best. Be sure and play it. Running time, 11 minutes.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn.

CAPTAIN KIDD'S TREASURE: Historical Mystery—Interesting fair short. Running time, 10 minutes.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn.

HOW TO READ: Robert Benchley—Not as good as some that Benchley has made, but still drew laughs from the audience. Benchley's humor is a trifle too highbrow for our small town audiences. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RELIES ON REPORTS FROM EXHIBITORS

"I like very much to turn to the 'What the Picture Did for Me' and see what the others have to say. The only fault I find is that there are not near enough reports from exhibitors, so I thought I might try to do a little reporting myself."

"I have a very small theatre and with me it's a sideline. Often in choosing my shows I am forced to rely on these reports."—Mrs. A. H. Krumvie, Box 100, Lyric Theatre, Preston, Iowa.

JUNGLE JUVENILES: Pete Smith Specialties—This packs a lot of entertainment in one reel. This proves no exception.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

LITTLE RANGER, THE: Our Gang—A very good Our Gang comedy that did not show that Hal Roach was missed. Good in all respects. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MAN IN THE BARN, THE: Historical Mysteries—A much discussed story of the assassination of Abraham Lincoln. Very interesting.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THREE ON A ROPE: Pete Smith Specialties—Here is one that held our audience very tense. This mountain climbing subject was fine.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WHAT DO YOU THINK: MGM Miniature—Didn't think much of it and neither did the audience. Running time, 10 minutes.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn.

Paramount

HOLD IT: Color Classics—The best that Paramount made in this series this season. Out of the ordinary and very good. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL, NO. 12: Very good as pictorials go. The scenes of Yellowstone National Park were excellent. The last sequence with the dog was enjoyed by the children. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

HAWAIIAN HOLIDAY: Walt Disney Cartoons—My first Walt Disney cartoon and was somewhat disappointed. Not so good as the Harman-Izing series MGM put out. Good music. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

PATHE PARADE: Very interesting short. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kan. Small town patronage.

United Artists

DOG CATCHER: Skippy—Very good cartoon, but not in the class with the Disneys.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

BREATHLESS MOMENTS: Universal Special—This short contains several interesting and breath-taking shots of numerous daredevil feats plus shots of floods, war, riot and the ill-fated airship Hindenburg as it plummeted to earth at Lakehurst. Very entertaining and a short everyone would be interested in seeing. The local boys were particularly pleased with the shots of "Lucky" Teeter and his "Hell Divers," which apparently were taken here at the Trenton Fair Grounds. Running time, 19½ minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Recreation, Prison Theatre, State Prison, Trenton, N. J.

Vitaphone

BOLTED DOOR, THE: Floyd Gibbons' "Your True Adventure"—I see absolutely no excuse, what with thousands of actors out of work, for a short subject from a major company as poorly conceived and acted as "The Bolted Door." What's more, the theme is quite stupid. If this episode is indicative of the unusually true exciting adventures of the American people, I'd rather not think about it. I had a more exciting true adventure trying to hide from the people who filed out after we showed this thing.—C. T. Cooney, Jr., Waldo Theatre Corporation, Waldoboro, Maine. General patronage.

SATURDAY NIGHT SWING CLUB: Melody Masters—Shelved it after listening to it once. Too much of this goes a long ways. Just no good. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SONS OF THE PLAINS: Mauch Twins—As nice a two-reel subject as anyone could wish for. The Mauch twins very good. The only thing wrong with this was the recording. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

STAR IS HATCHED, A: Merrie Melodies—We think these cartoons are tops. They are all clever and this one is exceptionally good. Prefer Merrie Melodies to any cartoon on the market. Our patrons seem to enjoy them, too.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural patronage.

WHOLLY SMOKE: Looney Tunes—An excellent cartoon that was enjoyed by all. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

RAINBOW'S END: Eddie Peabody—An excellent two-reeler. Enjoyed by everyone. The only fault we could find is that there wasn't enough of Eddie Peabody. He was great, but played only one number. The recording was bad. Running time, 20 minutes.—Pearl C. Wisch, Grand Theatre, Mohall, N. D. Small town and rural town patronage.

Serials

Columbia

MYSTERIOUS PILOT, THE: Captain Frank Hawks—Very fine. No regrets with four chapters to go. I believe it has improved our midweek business.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SECRET OF TREASURE ISLAND, THE: Don Terry, Gwen Gaze—By far the best serial ever made, from a box office standpoint.—A. G. Miller, Lyric Theatre, Atkinson, Neb. General patronage.

Northwest Club Names Shearer

Ben F. Shearer, president of B. F. Shearer Theatre Equipment Company, will head the Northwest Film Club for the coming year. He replaces Al Rosenberg. Fred Mercy, Jr., of Yakima, and Leroy V. Johnson of Seattle have been elected vice-presidents. Ed Lamb of RKO has been reelected secretary-treasurer.

Midwest To Open Exchange

Midwest Film Distributors will open a new exchange building in Kansas City about November 15th, it was said by Robert Withers, head of the company, in New York this week. He was in New York for conferences with Republic, for which he is the territorial franchise owner.

Buermele Succeeds Ray Moon

Carl Buermele is the new general manager of Cooperative Theatres of Michigan, following reported changes within the organization. Retirement of Ray Moon, former general manager, was announced by Fred Delodder, president, after a board directors' meeting last week.

Associates Sign Orchestra

Herb Steiner's orchestra has been signed to play at the Motion Picture Associates annual dinner dance at the Hotel Astor, New York, November 26th. The committee is making further preparations and reports that many ads are coming in for the annual journey. A meeting will be held in two weeks.

81 CLASSICS LISTED FOR CHILDREN'S BOOK WEEK

Motion Pictures Also Will Be Represented by Two Posters, November 13th to 19th

Eighty-one classics which have been brought to the screen in the last five years are listed in a compilation by a committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., for the twentieth annual observance of Children's Book Week by the American Library Association, November 13th to 19th.

Motion pictures also will be represented by two posters in the displays being prepared by schools and libraries for the event. The large distributors cooperated in the preparation of the posters.

One bears the caption "Good books cultivate imagination—Great movies bring their characters to life." It shows two children reading a book and seeing its characters come to life, illustrated by stills from eleven motion pictures. The other shows a shelf of books captioned "Good books, good movies, new worlds." The shelf contains 20 books from which pictures have been made.

New York's observance of the week includes the showing of Walt Disney's "Ferdinand, the Bull" at the Music Hall. The posters will be displayed at Wanamaker's, which has arranged meetings for parents at which authors will speak and "Elephant Boy" and "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" will be exhibited.

Following is a list of recent films made from books considered of interest to youthful audiences. All these titles are presented as suitable for Book Week library-film tieups and exhibits. Asterisks indicate prints of the pictures are obtainable for showing at the local theatres during the week of observance.

Australian Returning From Theatre Study

Dal Cross, Australian exhibitor, in New York for the last month, left last week for Hollywood on his return trip to Sydney. He is making a study of American theatre operation and intends stopping over at the West Coast studios for a close-up of production.

While in New York Mr. Cross visited with Albert Deane, Paramount foreign department publicity director, with whom he was associated in Sydney under the late John Kennebeck, Paramount general manager in Australia.

New Universal Financing Ready; Schenck Sees Gain

Universal this week negotiated a credit of $2,500,000, at five per cent per annum, for two years, and has paid off $1,000,000 in maturing debts, from a bank syndicate headed by the Commercial National Bank and the Irving Trust Company.

At the same time, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox, on his arrival in New York this week from Hollywood said that he expected the earnings of the company to exceed last year's record figure of $8,617,114. Mr. Schenck attended the meeting of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America. He is also planning to confer with President Roosevelt in Washington.

The new line of credit for Universal is held to be sufficient to meet the full financial requirements of the company for the time stated. It was negotiated after long and careful investigation by the banks. J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board, and Nate J. Blumberg, president, acted for Universal. The deal has been in negotiation since last May.

Under the operating management of Mr. Blumberg, who assumed office some 10 months ago, the company is now in the black. He was operating head of RKO Theatres when he was invited by Mr. Cowdin and his associates to assume the presidency of Universal. In August the company was approximately $22,000 in the red but in September, the world operations of the company showed a profit.

Universal is looking forward to an annual gross of $20,000,000 at this time, as compared with $18,000,000 in 1937. The average weekly increase over last year is approximately $40,000. William Scully is vice-president in charge of sales and Joseph Seidelman is vice-president in charge of foreign sales. Sales are reported to have improved considerably.

The company's studio at Universal City was recently reorganized under Matthew Fox, vice-president, and Cliff Work, business head of the studio.

Loans recently paid off by Universal include those of Irving Trust and Electrical Research Products, Inc., and $400,000 to Eastman Kodak.

Milton C. Weisman, as receiver of the Fox Theatre Corporation, this week filed a report on the company as of June 30, 1938, in the United States district court in New York, listing book value assets of $4,318,890, and liabilities of $7,615,647.

Mr. Weisman's own estimation of the assets is $8,120,441, including a valuation of the company's claim against William Fox and others, but to which he had given no book value. This claim is under litigation.

Application for authorization to make the final payment on $39,000 of old Roxy Theatre bonds outstanding may be made in federal court in New York later this week. The payment may amount to around $8 on each $100 face amount. The last payment was $6.

Authorization of the dividend by the court will make possible what is regarded as the final step in the Roxy's court proceedings, begun in 1933.

"Gang" Suit Retrial Asked

IN COURTS

Publisher of Yale March Sues on Snow White's Song

Thornton W. Allen, head of the music publishing company bearing his name, has filed suit against Irving Berlin, Inc., Walt Disney Productions, Ltd., RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., and Walt Disney Enterprises on the grounds that the song "Some Day My Prince Will Come" is a "deliberate copy" of the "Old Eli March" written by Wadsworth Doster (Yale '09).

Mr. Allen's firm holds the rights to Mr. Doster's song, which was copyrighted in September, 1936, and July, 1938, and was printed in the "Intercollegiate Song Book" in October, 1936. The song sung by Snow White was published by Irving Berlin, Inc., with words by Larry Morey and music by Frank Churchill, the complaint charges. Copies of both songs were filed with the complaint.

Lord vs. Pathe Suit Started

Trial of a $48,000 breach of contract suit against Pathe News, Inc., brought by Phillips H. Lord, started yesterday in the U. S. District Court. Mr. Lord claims that Pathe refused to carry out its alleged contract supplying him with cameramen, sound technicians, and motion picture equipment for a contemplated trip around the world. A decision against the plaintiff, rendered at a previous trial, had been reversed on appeal in a ruling by the Circuit Court of Appeals, which ordered a new trial.

Behrend Files Answer

Behrend Picture Supply House, Inc., filed answer last Monday to a suit brought in the U. S. District Court by Vitagraph, Inc., which charged copyright infringement of 37 stills. The defendants denied the allegations of the complaint and contended that the plaintiff's copyrights were void for improper publication of notices, and that the copyrights were not legally owned by the plaintiff. The suit seeks an injunction, an accounting of profits and $250 damages for each alleged infringement.

Loew Case To Be Tried Soon

Emil K. Ellis, chief counsel for the nine plaintiffs in the consolidated stockholders suit against Loew executives, will probably bring his case to trial late in November or early in December. Depositions have been taken from 18 Loew executives and directors to date, with others to follow.

ASCAP Appeals Prepared

Herman Finkelstein of Schwartz and Frohlich, counsel for the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, went to Washington last Monday to make preparations for the organization's pending U. S. Supreme Court Appeals on Anti-Ascaph legislation in Florida and Washington.

Pathe News Sued

Suit for $75,000 has been brought against Pathe News, Inc., by Herman Van Cleef in New York Supreme Court. The plaintiff claimed that he had been wrongfully arrested and charged with grand larceny for the alleged stealing of photographic equipment belonging to Pathe.

RCA-Philco Suit Held Up by Appeal

Proceedings for royalty accountings in the suit and cross-suit of the Philadelphia Storage Battery Company, parent organization of the Philco Radio and Television Corporation, against the Radio Corporation of America, will be stayed pending determination of appeal if an appeal is taken by RCA to the State Supreme Court at Dover, Del., within 30 days, Chancellor Josiah O. Wolcott ordered in Chancery Court at Wilmington last week.

The order in which that provision was made, was in conformity with the opinion given by Chancellor Wolcott some time ago in the litigation, in which the chancellor enjoined RCA from terminating a license agreement with PSB on radio patents held by RCA and dismissed RCA's suit for the right to terminate the agreement.

On the royalty base determined, RCA is to account to PSB for sums paid by PSB on apparatus sold after July 20, 1934, and PSB is to account as to royalties due RCA and not paid on apparatus sold after the same date, a master to be appointed to take the accountings.

Chancellor Wolcott said that when the accountings provided for in the decree shall have been taken and stated, "a decree shall be entered in favor of the party entitled thereto, together with interest." These provisions will be held in abeyance, however, pending appeal.

From this he went on to house painting, but wanting to be a cartoonist, subscribed to a course in a Cleveland correspondence school. "Popeye" was created as a minor character in "The Thimble Theatre," which was Mr. Segar's first very successful comic strip, done for King Features Syndicate in New York. # MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor

GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

THAT DAY OFF

This department consistently has stood for a day off a week. We've pounded at it year in and year out. Some progress has been made. A sizeable number of executives have seen the light. But no stampede has resulted. Too many situations are giving a day off, if any, only now and then.

The blame is not entirely upon the boss. Managers themselves poop up the deal. There are theatremen who could obtain a day off regularly if they insisted. Among them are the birds who sleep in the theatre. We mean the lads who expect the house to burn down the moment they step out of the foyer.

Then there is the lad who isn't bothered. A day off is nothing in his young life. He wouldn't know what to do with it. All he wants to know is the theatre. That's not so good, for himself, for the job.

What chance has the man who'd appreciate a day off when the bird who can have it won't take it?

There's too high a turnover in managerial manpower. There isn't enough manpower to supply the demand. The reason?

Men who work seven days a week, willingly or no, wear out fast. They eat on the fly, sleep like firemen. Bowels go bad. Bodies are poisoned. Brains go dead. Out on their feet, can't think straight, they fold up.

Smart showmanship stems from healthy bodies, keen minds. You've got to relax to have both. You've got to have a day off to relax.

COMES FROM THE TOP

There is not more favorable editorial mention here of division and district heads because these folks are content with remaining in the background to cheer the works of the men they lead. There should be more applause for inspiring headmen, and among those who so qualify, certainly for Carter Barron, Loew's Eastern zone director. Carter ranks at the top for his many undertakings, not the least being the number of his men who click so often in nationwide contests.

Seek out any special cause in certain sectors for consistent target-splitting showmanship. The answer usually is in the enthusiasm generated up at the head.

A BOW DIRECTED OVERSEAS

Comes intelligence from England revealing the winner of famed Silver Shield, offered by the Company of Showmen, management fraternity created by the London Kinematograph Weekly. The honors voted Manager H. F. Smith, Carlton Cinema, Norwich, unit of the County Cinema chain, identifies the winner as Champion British Showman, for his campaigning during the past year. Presentation was made recently at a luncheon in the company of top industry executives.

The significance thus attached to the boxoffice efforts of British theatremen indicates there is no less regard overseas for the responsibilities placed upon the man in the field. To S. G. Rayment, Kinematograph Weekly editor, therefore, your Chairman directs appreciation for seeing eye-to-eye with the Round Table the necessity of spotlighting the importance of showmanship as exemplified on this side by the Quigley Awards.

BRING BACK THE ZANIES

It was H. S. ("Doc") Twedt, of the Lido, Manly, Iowa, who, impatient with the foliage of exploitation beards for "Kentucky Moonshine", started two months ahead of his date to grow real chin-whiskers. It brought him columns of newspaper publicity and much extra business. "I've got some screwball ideas but they make things click at the boxoffice and that's the final ticket," writes "Doc".

This department is with Twedt on that. Once upon a time the theatre was the province of zanies who got the dough. We're for swapping some of that phoney dignity for a load of simon-pure screwballery and more power to slightly demented showmen.

A-Mike Vogel

At left is Mayor Maurice J. Tobin imparting fundamentals of civic government to Harry Turner of Milton, Mass., (seated) winner in the recent Mickey Rooney doubles contest and chosen Mayor-for-a-day in connection with the opening of "Boys Town" at Loew's State, Boston. Young Turner was presented to His Honor the Mayor by Vito Mannascalco (standing), present Mayor of "Boys Town". Stunt was put over by publicist, Joe Di Pesa.

Round Table In Pictures

Above, left, is display created by Frank Gelber, Park Theatre, Brooklyn, and his staff for opening of "Robin Hood". Depicted is scene of a banquet in Sherwood Forest with all the main characters in the picture grouped around the table. Title and cast were in cutout letters, with colored cellophane and lights selling the technicolor in the picture. That's Gelber standing at display.

A famous trial taking place at the time of opening of "Smashing the Rackets" at the Rialto, New York City, lent itself notably to lobby display at left. Film was suggested from article which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post and was blown up for a 40 by 60 display with pages from the magazine article.

Called one of the most striking displays conceived in the interest of the Industry drive is that fashioned by Frank V. King for the lobby of the Midland in Newark, Ohio. This lobby setpiece is 18 feet high by 29 long, star beads placed on a silver and gold combination background. Illumination was furnished by indirect lighting in addition to spots for top of display. King reports that this was one exhibit that certainly "created favorable comment."

Two weeks ahead of opening of "The Texans" at the Paramount Theatre, St. Paul, Minn., Don Alexander, publicity director, planted this attractive display in his lobby: Miniature trains, stage coach drawn by team of four horses, covered wagons with ox team, station office, etc., formed part of the display. For the background, artist painted rolling tract of treeless land covered with coarse grass.

New high in pretentiousness, writes Ted Routson, publicity director of the Hippodrome, Baltimore, was two giant hand-painted panels for "You Can't Take It With You". Life-size cutout figures of characters were painted in natural colors and mounted on specially constructed beaver-board fence with blue sky backing. Boards 13 feet high and 25 feet long were placed on both sides of entrance.

Marionette Moviette Show Aids on "Marie Antoinette"

Reported by Les Pollock, Loew's Rochester, Rochester, N. Y., was parade held opening day of "Marie Antoinette" which included the MGM marionette moviette show which covered entire town headed by police escort. Truck with plenty of banners heralding the picture's opening made a great flash as it toured the streets. Stunt was covered by leading dailies and radio stations. Half-hour program of the Marionette Theatre was hooked up over WHEC from front of theatre, mention of which was also made in radio section of papers.

Special lobby display consisted of original costumes used in picture with poster background surrounded by framed stills. Numerous merchants came through with attractive windows, and highlight of the tieup was mannequin in window modeling original costume, surrounded by poster and stills.

For his "Algiers" opening, Pollock promoted smash window display at Wurlitzer's, using two huge blowups, curtain background with 10 framed colored stills and cutout letters spelling out title. Electro shaver windows used blowup of Boyer demonstrating the shaver and prominently plugging the opening. Record transcriptions were planted over WHEC and WSAY and man-on-street broadcasts were held two days ahead.

Contest Aids "Room Service"

The Cleveland Plain Dealer and Warners' Hippodrome, Cleveland, through the efforts of manager Ed Miller and publicist Mann Pearlstein, hooked up for a novel contest during the run of "Room Service." Prizes were offered for the funniest stories centered around odd requests made of waitresses, clerks and business men. Several hundred answers were received, promoted prizes and guest tickets going to winners.

Warners Organize "Nancy Drew" Clubs

As a permanent plug for its Nancy Drew series featuring Bonita Granville, Warner Brothers publicity department has organized Nancy Drew Clubs in conjunction with high schools throughout the country. Purpose of the organization is to bring about a better understanding between parents and their daughters. Membership will be confined to girls between 16 and 18 years of age.

Monogram Starts Promotion With Coney Fur Institute

In a tieup with the National Coney Fur Institute, Lou Lifton, Monogram advertising director has set a nationwide essay contest sponsored by Modern Movies and involving Anne Nagel.

Magazine will carry announcement on the contest in its December issue, winners to be named later. Prizes of a coney fur coat, jacket and muff, donated by the Institute will be awarded through the medium of Modern Movies by Anne Nagel to the three submitting best essays according to board of judges.

RENOIR PERE AIDS RENOIR FILS

The New York Filmarte Theatre is holding an exhibition in its lounge of reproductions of paintings by Pierre Auguste Renoir, the famous French artist, whose son, Jean Renoir, directed the Filmarte's current picture, "Grand Illusion". The artist's three sons, Claude, Pierre and Jean, are engaged in the French film industry.

Butte, Montana, the birthplace of Myron Brinig, author of "The Sisters" was the scene of a gala premiere marking the opening of the Warner Bros. production of the novel co-starring Errol Flynn and Bette Davis on October 22nd. Butte, only three miles from Silverbow, locale of the picture, planned a tremendous celebration for the event the cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce and civic officials. Demand for seats was so strong that premiere was held simultaneously in three Fox West Coast theatres, American, Fox, and Rialto, accompanied by torchlight parades and 'Old Timers' balls celebrated in the costumes similar to those worn by the characters in the film.

The local papers published special edition for the premiere reproducing 1904 front page predicting a Theodore Roosevelt landslide, the time of the story. Entire cast of "The Sisters" was invited to attend the two-day celebration in planes chartered by Butte citizens.

Details for the celebration were handled by Bill Steege, Fox West Coast Division manager, Bill Gordon, Salt Lake City branch manager for Warners, and New Holmes.

Theatremen Inaugurate "Golden Harvest Sale"

Since the merchants of Bath, Maine, had not staged a successful cooperative stunt for the promotion of better business for the past six years, Francis Gooch at the Uptown and Frank A. Vennett of the Opera House, both M & P theatres, prevailed upon the Retail Merchants' Association to permit them to stage a "Golden Harvest Sale" to last three days. Committee was appointed, of which Gooch was made general chairman, and he reports the sale proved successful from both the theatres' and merchants' standpoint.

Doll carriage and bicycle parade was held, as were a marathon race, part of the daytime festivities; band concerts were staged on the streets at night. Coupons were distributed with each 50 cent purchase at the 62 co-operating stores and the drawings for the $200 in cash prizes were held at theatre day after sale. Gooch reports that 44,450 tickets were given out during the three days and 2,100 inches of advertising sold in the special edition, giving the newspaper what is said to be the largest issue in their history. Fillers in the special edition were devoted almost entirely to publicity for the theatres and Gooch says since his house was opened recently, he received institutional advertising which was very beneficial.

Practical Campaign Book Issued for "The Sisters"

A total of 43 exploitation stunts conceived for all types of situations and including a number of tested stunts used on previous pictures similar in nature to "The Sisters" has been issued by Warner Brothers. Street ballys, lobby displays, newspaper tieups, woman's page ideas, store promotions and radio exploitation stunts are included.

Two easily workable contests capitalize on the title and stars by using them in novel picture layouts, selling both the story and stellar cast.

HIGHLIGHTS OF "DRIVE" CAMPAIGNS

The week of Nov. 13 to 19, will be Motion Picture Week in the state of Wisconsin, proclaimed by Governor Philip F. La Follette, through the efforts of Manager Ed Benji, Capitol, Madison, Wis., and reported here by M. H. Harmon, ad head, Saxe Theatres. The proclamation is being used by all theatres in the state for newspaper publicity and lobby displays. Theatres will also tie in with local merchants on special newspaper sections during the "week."

Among the recent exploitations executed by the Washington, D. C., committee, of Ray Bell, Frank La Falce and Hardie Meakin, was a "Go to the Movies Week," featured by a special 20-page section in the local News. Front page copy stressed "new movies and new styles," tied together for the purpose of promoting co-op ads from leading stores. Together with the advertisements, there were feature stories having to do with the Drive, star and action cuts, style stories and other appropriate material.

Parade of four units covering six city blocks and viewed by one of the largest turn-outs in local history, was Manager J. G. Samartano's contribution to the Loew New England theatre drive, in Meriden, Conn. Four bands, clowns, Scout delegations, show girls, floats, auto and motorcycle squads, ushers from Loew theatres, made a colorful flash. Main feature was the ornate float arranged by district chief, Harry Shaw, and Erle Wright, publicist. By arrangement with Chamber of Commerce, all stores along line of march decorated fronts with Quiz banners and at City Hall, the mayor signed official Drive scroll.

Toronto, reported a "tough" city for the erection of advertising banners across local street, granted permission to a deputation of local theatremen, headed by Manager Charles L. Querrie, Palace, to so advertise the Drive. Authorization was secured from Mayor Day for the placing of six such banners in prominent parts of the city.

To give the local Drive an official send-off in St. Petersburg, Fla., Bolivar Hyde, Jr., City Manager, Sparks Theatres, had the acting mayor pose with him against a Quiz poster, accepting the first Movie Quiz book issued in St. Pete. Papers carried the shot in a two-column cut with lengthy caption explaining the campaign.

A fifty percent return on distribution of 40,000 Quiz booklets so far is reported by Rodney Toups, Loew's State, New Orleans. Using a registration plan for contestants from his house, Toups lists, up to Oct. 4, nearly 20,000 bona fide signatures with addresses of patrons who entered the contest.

Quick selling of the Movie Quiz was accomplished at the Loew metropolitan theatres through Loew's Weekly, regular four-page tab-sized program. Ahead of opening date and following, front page was given over to smash announcements from Oscar Doob's office, as herewith illustrated.

Typical of the campaigns put on by the Warner Theatres in Don Jacocks' New Jersey zone, is the report from Manager Jack Maher, Oritani, Hackensack. Theatre decorations covering front and lobby included draping of pennants from marquee to top of upright and incorporated with set-piece in foyer was information booth.

Tiein with leading department store in Sandusky, Ohio, brought Jerry Scholer, at the Ohio, a full page co-op, headed by Drive slogan and tieup box: "follow the movies and you tieup the style." Other tiein copy stressed the Ohio for best pictures and the store for the best styles. Included in the layout was promoted ad on "Spawn of the North," Scholer's coming attraction.

Some 20 merchants in Mansfield, Ohio, joined with Warnermen Frank Harpster, Ohio; Bill Dworski, Madison, and Wayne Williams at the Majestic in a smash double truck to introduce the local drive, theatremen offering guest tickets for winners in contest carried in the layout. Clips of action stills were dropped into the different ads, passes given to readers cutting out all the parts and fitting them together to make two complete stills, and adding name of picture. Banner strip across top was given over to copy and theatre.

On tiein with local county fair, Manager H. J. Daley, Croswell, Adrian, Mich., promoted Greatest Year giant banner tacked against side of grandstand, with other signs plugging the Quiz below banner. Latter was borrowed from local store and painted over by doorman. In addition, Daley arranged for daily announcements over loud speaker at fair grounds for "Marie Antoinette," his coming attraction, plugging this as one of the Quiz pictures. After fair was over, the Round Table secured permission to hang banner across main street in front of theatre where it attracted the anticipated attention.

With a local population of 500, and a similar number in the drawing area, Manager Wm. G. Cooke, Garberville, Garberville, Cal., worked out an inexpensive campaign in the form of an "open letter" distributed as a herald. Letter contained all the necessary information regarding the Quiz with listing of prizes. Quarter page in local weekly along the same lines also proved effective. Letters were forwarded to every name on theatre mailing list in sealed one-cent envelopes. Posting around town and plugging in monthly program were other ideas used by Cooke in his 268-seat theatre to sell his Greater Movie Drive.

Issue of the Columbus, Miss., Commercial Dispatch, announcing the Drive for the Malco theatres under district manager Burgess Waltmon, started the Quiz locally with a raft of publicity on various pages. Boxes were carried on front page, news story inside, editorial following, with the campaign ads tied in by Waltmon to his theatre copy.

Following through on the rest of his campaign, Manager Tom Olsen, Warners Aberdeen, Wash., worked out a letter insert addressed to patrons explaining simplicity of the campaign and booklet information. Olsen supplemented this with a list of coming pictures eligible in the Drive. Topper of the idea was a coupon at the bottom with space for name, address and phone number. Patrons were asked to fill these in and leave at boxoffice so that Tom could phone them as new contest pictures were dated in.

Newest exploitation reported by Bill Exton, for the Kenosha, Gateway and Vogue, in Kenosha, Wis., is a full page in the Evening News, promoted by Exton in behalf of the Drive. In addition to smash ads on the coming attractions at the three houses under Bill's wing, there was further tiein copy on coming Quiz pictures at each theatre topped by a banner spread across the page stressing the contest prizes.

Members Report On "Limberlost"

Highlight of Ferd Nessel's campaign at the Jefferson, Goshen, Ind., on "Limberlost" was tieup with local Camp Limberlost, a camp for teaching girls dramatics, music and dancing. Dramatic skit from the picture and a dance revue was put on at the theatre by the girls. Activity was advertised in newspapers and Nessel reports it going over very successfully, and of course picture plugs were numerous.

With a Miss Goshen contest under way, the theatremen chose opening night of picture for the elimination. Nine girls were chosen for the finals and tied into the event with a parade on stage after the regular show.

Tieup was effected with leading furniture store for a sale labeled "The Limberlost Trail of Values." This slogan was imprinted on banners throughout the store and front windows were devoted to special display with card reading "In Gene Stratton Porter Days it was impossible to buy furniture of such high quality for so little," etc., etc. Merchant also imprinted bags and inserted pluggers in all packages leaving store.

In Wichita, Kansas

O. F. Sullivan, Civic Theatre, started his newspaper publicity a week in advance, emphasizing the fact that the picture had gained the coveted Parents' Magazine Award of Merit.

Heart of his campaign was a unique radio program. Between 400 and 500 prominent attended a special screening and an electrical recording was started of an interview with the manager in his office, then as a matter of public interest, the microphone was taken into the projection room, where the projectionist was interviewed. From there the microphone was placed to the small monitor in the projection room and a three-minute recording made of a dramatic scene from the picture. The mike was then taken into the foyer and recording made of the interviews with leading ministers and officials of the city. This 15-minute electrical transcription was played back on Station KANS the following evening thus getting in an extra plug for the attraction.

Scholar Awards All-Expense Trip for "Wonderful Time"

Four days ahead of opening of "Having Wonderful Time" at Warners' Ohio, Sandusky, Jerry Scholar planted contest in the Register, offering guest tickets to those correctly picking the starting lineup and positions of players for the American and National-all-star ball game. Highlight of campaign was contest with the Star-Journal whereby week's all expense trip for two was awarded to nearby resort to person submitting best 150 word letter on their idea of a perfect vacation. Paper featured the contest on front page and built it up for a week.

Postcards were sent out to special mailing list, 3,000 heralds paid for by vacation spot in connection with contest were stuffed in local paper hitting all summer cottages along lake and numerous window displays were planted through cooperation of merchants.

Lynch Organizes Safety Club

Featured by Jimmy Lynch, Runnymede Theatre, Toronto, Canada, is his safety club for kids. Tien has been effected with the Department of Highways, whereby they supply the theatre with a single reel for his Saturday matinee. Each child must fill in a pledge card and promoted prizes are offered each week for the best safety slogans submitted. Trailers addressed to parents are run calling attention to the safety club and urging them to have their children join.

DISPLAY ADS ON NEXT PAGE

(1) Realizing the job of impressing his opening upon readers in face of the uniformly high standard of the competition's theatre advertising, Howard G. Carroll, former Schine district manager, and now operator of the Strand, Rochester, N. Y., relied upon white-on-black to gain attention for his new situation. Size, 65 lines on three.

(2) Since Ted Emerson had used about every angle for his campaign on the world premiere of "Boys Town" at the Omaha, Omaha, Neb., the Tri-States ad head struck on the happy thought of an open letter to the director for hold-over copy, using cut of Taurog as an attractor to follow-up after the stars who appeared at the opening. Size, 100 lines on two columns.

(4) That "Alexander" was so entertaining that people were remaining to see it twice was the between-the-lines message of this unique copy slant employed by the Esquire, Kansas City. Copy asking patrons to leave after seeing the show to make room for others waiting was reported to help some in easing a peak hour situation. Size, 60 lines on two columns.

(5) Problem of capitalizing upon the quick click of Hedy Lamarr without playing down Boyer in "Algiers" was solved by Hank Harold with this extended two-column layout. Striking shot of Lamarr at top was main attractor with head of Boyer holding body of ad together and taking the eye down to the second feature. Size, 205 lines on two columns.

(7) The recent excitement overseas was used by E. E. Bair, city manager MB Theatres, Defiance, Ohio, to call attention to his newsreel and March of Time coverage especially by inserting a type ad on the day that Chamberlain flew to Germany. Size, 40 lines on three columns.

(8) Another letter-ad creation, this time a comic slant that Al Nowitsky developed to present the stars of "Boy Meets Girl" at the Colonial, Richmond, Va., in roles outside their usual he-man characterizations. Al, himself, in a screwball cartoon tops the copy with the gag drawing below to further sell the idea. Size, 120 lines on three columns.

DIRECTOR OF "BOYS TOWN"

My Dear Norm:

I came back to the office this evening for two purposes—first, to scribble off a brief note to you advising you of the enthusiasm that this entire territory is showing for the picture "BOYS TOWN," at the Omaha Theatre, and second, to try to work out just as enthusiastic an ad for The World-Herald.

Finally, the ad has me stumped. With praise, praise, and more praise for this picture pouring in from every side—with "BOYS TOWN" on every tongue—with capacity crowds still breaking every attendance record on the eleventh day—with the second week as big as the first, and with hundreds seeing the picture again for the second and third time, what can I possibly say that everybody does not already know? What ingenious method can I use to convince every individual that you made one of the finest pictures ever to be shown at the Omaha Theatre.

Should the good old superlatives seem threadbare describing "BOYS TOWN," fancy phrases and ginger-bread seem pitifully inadequate. For once I am at a loss for words.

If only it was as simple as writing this note to you... That's an idea. What better ad could there be, Norm, than just this frank note to you? THIS LETTER will be my ad. I know you won't mind.

Sincerely your friend,

I'm the AD MAN for the Colonial Theatre and I've been making up copy for many a day. In the past it hasn't been so tough, just sit down and play with a lot of adjectives (stupendous, colossal, etc.), and before long you have a nice bit of advertising copy... but along comes "BOY MEETS GIRL," starring JAMES CAGNEY and PAT O'BRIEN and that is why I've gone "NUTS."

Here are two actors noted for their robust He-Man roles acting like a couple of daffodils and they are great! Two of the funniest comics I've ever seen, but how can you tell the public that Cagney has swapped his Tommy-Gun for a lolly-pop?

You folks come on down and see this screwy picture today, I'm going out to the park and cut paper dolls.

Sincerely,
AL NOWITSKY, Manager,

			Minutes	Minutes
Adventures of Robin Hood, The (G) 251.....	Errol Flynn-O. de Havilland-B. Rathbone - C. Rains - I.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

ANSWER TO QUESTION NO. 130

Conducted by

F. H. RICHARDSON

Question No. 130 was: (A) Are carbons made in all lengths required for projection work? (B) What precautions should be taken when a theatre proposes changing the brand of carbons being used? (C) In general terms, describe the process of carbon manufacture.

The following made acceptable replies: S. Evans and C. Rau; G. E. Doe; J. R. Prater; H. Edwards; W. E. Limmroth; M. and J. Devoy; L. H. Kelley; R. Feasel; L. Johnson; P. E. Shell; J. A. Zachritz; G. Watkins and N. S. Reid; K. L. Brandt; A. and B. Richardson; L. Day and W. S. Samuels; B. L. Oden and R. Smith; M. D. McGuire; H. T. Steele; W. B. Hunter; G. T. Jones and A. Leonard; S. L. Maxwell; T. S. Anderson; A. W. Baxter and J. M. Kelner; B. B. Kent; S. T. Adams; H. T. Mandrake.

(A) William Schoeneman, a Mississippi projectionist, says: "Carbons of all lengths required for projection purposes are available. However, there are many varieties, each manufactured to fill a specific need or purpose. It is highly important that proper combinations be used. Manufacturers specifications should be followed in all cases. Specifications for one make of carbon will be found on pages 345 and 246 of the Bluebook."

R. E. Lee says, "Carbons are made in eight different lengths for projection purposes, namely 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 20 and 22 inches."

(B) J. R. Prater answers, "When it is proposed to change the brand or make of carbon used it is good policy to obtain a few negatives and positives and after drying them thoroughly, subject them to actual

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 136

(A) In what various diameters are SRA carbons made? What is the maximum capacity of each diameter?

(B) What is the result of their overloading?

(C) How may the approximate candlepower production of light resulting from various amperages be computed?

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answer to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

test in projection. If they seem satisfactory, if they seem to have advantages over those previously in use, order a carton of 50 or 100 for a full trial before they finally are stocked in quantity.

"This same practice is to be commended when some change is contemplated in type or in amperage rating of carbons. A change that works well in one theatre may not be at all satisfactory in another because of difference in conditions under which they must work."

C. Umphrey says, "Follow the advice offered on page 339 of the Bluebook. It is extremely unwise to make any change in such an item until it is thoroughly proven that the change will be beneficial. Before stocking a supply of strange carbons the manager should be requested to order not in excess of 50 negatives and 50 positives. I would place them for one week in a hot, dry place before starting the test run. By the time the supply was used up I would be satisfied as to the relative excellence of the new brand as compared to the ones I had been using, and would either stock or reject them. I would regard a stock of 50 as necessary because one never is too certain until a new thing has been in use a sufficient time to enable formation of judgment as to uniformity of excellence."

"Not so long ago the boss handed me a few carbons that he said had been very highly recommended, asking that they be tried. And they did give most excellent results in spots. But they were not uniform. They were what I would call 'spotty.' Good light now, then not so good, so I made adverse report and that was that."

(C) T. and W. Turk say, "In the manufacture of carbon to be used for a motion picture projection light source it is necessary that a substance capable of current conduction at relatively low resistance be employed. The substance must be capable of forming a rod of sufficient stiffness to withstand the treatment it will receive in arc lamp operation without breakage or in any degree bending. The rod must have uniform conductance throughout its length and area. It must be free from impurities to the end that the current reach the crater floor in an absolutely even stream and enter the arc stream without interference. [Very well put.—F. H. R.]

"Carbon is the one material that may be obtained or produced anywhere in unlimited quantities and subjected to purifying processes that enable it to meet the above requirements; also that can be raised to the required temperature without melting."

"In the process of manufacture carbon in highly pulverized form is used. This powder is purified by suitable processes, one of which is subjection to magnetic action that draws out all metal bits influenced by that power. It then is thoroughly intermixed with a binder of tar or pitch, forming what is termed a 'dough.' This dough is then forced through a hole in a steel plate the diameter of the carbon it is desired to produce, emerging in the form of a long rod, which is straightened on a suitable steel plate. If a cored carbon is being made, a steel needle is fixed in the exact center of the aforesaid plate, so that when the carbon rod emerges there is a hole in its center."

"The rod of carbon then is baked for a considerable time at high temperature, after which, if it is a solid rod, it is inspected, cut into suitable lengths and packed for shipment. If it is a hollow rod, a 'dough' of character suitable to the variety of carbon being produced is forced into the hole in the center of the rod, after which there is a rebaking to carbonize the core binder. Incidentally, the first baking transforms the dough binder of the shell, or solid carbon, into a form of carbon."

"There of course are other items contributing to perfection of the finished product, but I note you asked only for a description in 'general terms' and I believe what has been said fills the bill. The necessary information enabling me to make this probably very imperfect stab at describing the process was all obtained from the Bluebook of Projection and a book put out by National Carbon Company, entitled 'National Projectors Carbons.' May I thank you most sincerely, Dad, for the vast fund of information you have made available."

Incidentally, the National Carbon Company book referred to is free to projectionists.

My dear Mr. Gillham:-

Now there comes in exploitation on "Arkansas Traveler" by way of copy of a telegram from Little Rock, Arkansas, and here is where I get a chance to thoroughly agree that "ARKANSAS TRAVELER" is mighty good entertainment that Bob Burns is the first man that I have thought may capture the fancy of the public as did Will Rogers.

I look forward to "ARKANSAS TRAVELER" being a real box-office attraction in the great majority of theatres.

So many times I criticise that I find it a real pleasure to praise.

THE POLICY OF "THE FRIENDLY COMPANY"

IT IS neither fitting nor becoming for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer to parade in the public prints the kindly and complimentary words which are being showered upon it in communications from our customers, and editorially in the trade press.

THE PURPOSE of this advertisement is to register deep gratitude to our exhibitor friends for their faith and support.

AS THIS new season proceeds on its way it has been convincingly demonstrated by early renewal of contracts that our customers of the past year were more than satisfied with our merchandise and our methods.

TO THEM and to new M-G-M exhibitors we re-affirm our belief that successful operation is built on the confidence and support of happy customers! That is the essential of a profitable partnership and our appreciation of it is expressed in the fair policy of a friendly company.

YOUR FAITH in M-G-M's product has been answered again this season by a consistent supply of splendid entertainments.

YOUR FAITH in M-G-M's sincere selling methods has been fulfilled this year too, as it was last season, in a reasonable and fair allocation of pictures.

YOUR FAITH in a rosy future for your theatre is amply fortified by M-G-M's Fall and Winter production activities.

MONTHS AGO Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer set its plans for a 1938-39 season that would entail the largest outlay of production money which this company has ever expended.

ONLY M-G-M with its vast reservoir of talents and story materials and its ability to take chances could do this.

WITH BOOM conditions evident in America, the foresight of M-G-M in being prepared with "A" attractions for "A" times is added confirmation to customers of many years that true security rests in an M-G-M contract.

IN A sentimental business we take the liberty of a heartfelt salutation:

"WE ARE grateful to you who have made our success possible."

TELEVISION in HASTE

SO television is around the corner again. We have it on the word of the Radio Manufacturers Association at a meeting last weekend that: "We have decided it is time to bring television into the open and crystallize it as an industry. . . ." Sets for home use will be available, they say, next April, at from $150 to $1,000 each.

This does not mean that anything new, or even important, has happened in television.

The dull fact is that, for reasons chiefly financial, the tender, young and none too capable art is being kicked out into the world to see if it can earn a living.

For years now Television has been dawdling and fretting and promising and hoping in cloistered and costly laboratories, at increasing costs. For the last three years the expenses have been about five million dollars a year and the total investment, if it is investment, from the beginnings is to be estimated at somewhere between twenty and twenty-five millions.

It is, in the opinion of some executives who have to look at the ledger, "about time".

BUSINESS being what it is, and big business being where it is, financially, and politically, something has to be done about Television, or, as the saying goes, "or else".

The political aspects have not been aired. There is immediately the obvious fact that if anything new is to be, as the radio manufacturers say, "crystallized as an industry", it had better get underway now lest by waiting it should emerge and be born under governmental controls indicated by trends that are more convincing than promising.

Probably if Television is ever going to make any profits and enjoy any promotional effulgences it will have to be before it is taken in by the same movement toward government assimilation and socialization of all communications—before it becomes "pie-in-the-sky".

Also specifically, for Television delay, in the face of continuing fact of televising broadcasts in England, and in Germany, could dangerously encourage certain militants to bring pressures for the taking over of the art most immediately with a demand for development under bureaucratic administration.

The fact is that neither in England nor in Germany have any surpassing attainments in Television been recorded or presented. If reports of competent observers are to be accepted, the Television presentations under the auspices of the British Broadcasting Corporation would not be considered entertainment by American standards, and are, on the whole, certainly not superior, in terms of either physical performance or dramatic technique, to the merely experimental performances of America's laboratory studios.

Reports of the extent of the British Television audience are likely vastly exaggerated at such figures as ten to twenty thousand receivers. The B.B.C. issues no figures, but certain checks through manufacturers indicate that the number is probably closer to five thousand than ten.

THE new art of Television, if it proves to be one, will have to be again a purveyor of fame and personalities. The motion picture as the principal creator of entertainment fame is likely to be tapped for Television proportionately deeper than it has been by radio.

If the motion picture is to make any special arrangements and adjustments looking to the protection of the box office against the appeals of Television, this would seem to be about time to start. It is true, of course, that a good many motion picture contracts and other documents of agreement have for some years taken cognizance of the impendency of Television.

Meanwhile, it is obvious that Television's best show hour will, like the radio's, be the hour also most important to the motion picture theatre box office.

Mr. M. H. Aylesworth, you'll be remembering, spoke affectionately of the relation of screen and radio as a wedding of the arts. The outlook now with Television is distinctly polygamous, or darker.

ONE of the gravest problems of Television is entertainment material. It must have material to win an audience, after the first flush of novelty has faded. It must have an audience before it can afford material. It is the ancient priority issue of the hen and the egg. The motion picture went through it tediously for ten years before the theatre of the screen arrived. Radio was several years getting programmed. The sound motion picture made the changeover in about two suffering, costly and complex years.

If Television is to achieve importance, and anything resembling national coverage, it will be at a considerably greater initial cost in dollars than that paid by the screen or radio, due to the limited range of stations, the large cost of transmission facilities over networks and the probable costs of entertainment which can hope to compete with the screen and voice radio.

The principal name to the public in Television is Mr. David Sarnoff, who was materialized out of the ether as a figure in communication industry by the radio. Once again, by the whimsies of the motion picture's financial map, he is a party at interest in the RKO group, pictures and theatres. Once upon a time he brought a corporate meshing between radio and the screen with some designs on home-sound-pictures and the marketing of RCA Photophone's sound system. He still stands at the point of contact, a three-way contact—picture, radio, Television.

IN case the European situation has been obscuring the world view for a while, it is to be remembered that there is still a war in China. It was brought forcibly to attention the other day in a letter from Mr. Norman Westwood, manager for United Artists Corporation in Shanghai, addressing Mr. Samuel Cohen, foreign publicity director in New York.

"Our office is situated right on the border of the troubled

Self-Regulation

While distributors were continuing meetings with exhibitor representatives this week for self-regulation, a distributor spokesman said Wednesday that neither the discussions nor the final program will have any bearing on the pending Government anti-trust suit.

The exact nature of the final program and date of enactment could not be determined this week.

area, and the bombing has shattered all the ground floor windows in our building. From our windows we can see the dropping of bombs and the explosions. Droning of planes means nothing to us and we are quite used to it."

So Mr. Westwood, with considerable restraint, one might fancy, reports: "During these conditions it is somewhat difficult to put over publicity on our productions."

THE official announcements of the annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America state that it will be "against a background of Indians, cowboys, rodeos and oil fields." That presumably is a change of venue from "monopoly," "trade practices," "divorcement," "cancellations" and such—or don't they care? . . . The screen has just had the coincidence of two Ferdinands—Ferdinand de Lesseps and Ferdinand the Bull—both doing well. . . . The New York Herald Tribune had Mr. Will H. Hays over to its annual forum to speak on the general topic of "Keeping the Mind of the Nation Young." Looking at the political and economic aspects of the national scene, maybe it would be better if the national mind might grow up. It will not. . . . The editor's mail indicates that a surprising number of college boys are writing theses on the technology and practices of motion picture distribution. We consider the subject both ill-advised and premature. . . . Speaking of divorcement of theatres from distribution, there is evidence that some opulent gallants already have notions about taking care, if, when and as, of some of the more interesting divorcees. . . .

—TERRY RAMSAY

Convention

Trade practice regulation, the subject which has been engaging the serious attention of duly delegated representatives of distribution and exhibition at conferences in New York, will be the prime topic at the 18th annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America which meets in Oklahoma City on Monday. Eighteen leaders of production, distribution and exhibition, independents and majors, will address the convention on subjects ranging from self-regulation versus government regulation to general trade, public and contractual relations. Committee reports on the conferences in New York and other pressing matters will be heard.

Wages and Hours

The federal Fair Labor Standards Act, known as the wages and hours law, went into effect on Monday with the status of the motion picture industry under its provisions still undefined. The agency set up to administer the law under the leadership of Elmer F. Andrews issued broad definitions and indicated plans for the establishment of committees for each industry. It was not expected that film business would be seriously affected since it was considered that the minimum wage of 40 cents an hour was below the minimum observed in most branches of the industry. Juvenile actors will not be affected by the child labor provisions.

Telephone Inquiry

The Federal Communications Commission on Wednesday prepared to complete its investigation of American Telephone Company, calling upon that organization and its affiliates to file briefs within 30 days on the proposed report prepared by FCC Commissioner Paul A. Walker and sent to Congress April 1st. The report embodies results of 30 months of investigation undertaken by the commission in conformity with a resolution passed by Congress in March, 1935, and goes deeply into the activities of the telephone company in the field of motion pictures and radio.

More than 1,200 pages in length, the five volume document was sent to Congress without comment by the commission, other than an explanation that so much of the contents had "leaked out" that it was felt advisable to make it public in its entirety. The commission has yet to submit its formal report and recommendations.

Outstanding recommendations of the Walker report were: Restriction of Telephone Company activities to the field of communications and prohibition against the devotion of assets and energies to commercial exploitation to non-exploitation fields such as motion pictures, when such activities may be detrimental to the public interests, and a prohibition against discrimination of any kind in providing wires for use in chain broadcasting.

A considerable part of the investigation was devoted to a study of the influence and effect of Electrical Research Products, Inc., telephone company subsidiary, upon the film industry.

Gossipers

Radio commentators who feature Hollywood gossip and, it is charged, often exceed the bounds of good taste in so doing are the object of a renewed attack from within the film industry. The Independent Theatre Owners of New York, in a vitriolic article in its official organ, The Independent, this week called for a cessation of the "insults."

Supremacy

Despite all the restrictions recently placed against American films by foreign governments, our pictures still occupy about 80 per cent of the world's playing time, and the nationalism in foreign productions is a handicap rather than an asset to them, students in the motion picture course of the School of Education, New York University, were told Friday by Nathan D. Golden, chief of the motion picture division of the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

Musicians' Impasse

Nothing but "talk, talk and talk" happened at a round table conference called this week in the office of Pat Casey, labor contact for the Producers Association to discuss plans of the American Federation of Musicians for extensive reemployment of musicians in the film industry. Joseph N. Weber, president of the Federation, who told the press that "nothing happened," met Mr. Casey and producers' representatives. Further talks were set for November 9th.

A report of the meeting is on page 30.

The American Way

Murray Silverstone, United Artists executive, on Thursday told members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at their first meeting of the season, at the Hotel Astor, New York, that "as advertising men writing copy they have a power for good, bigger than the world has ever known."

"It is only America that can give you gentlemen the job and the responsibility you are fulfilling," he said. "It is a part of the American way of doing things. There are no film press agents in Germany, none in Italy, none in Russia."

"We speak, proudly, of the American way of doing things. It is only in a democracy like America that pictures can be made as we are making them."

Buying Music House

Paramount Music Corporation, music subsidiary of Paramount Pictures, which already controls Famous Music Company, is acquiring one more music house, the Joe Morris Music Company, under a deal effective November 1st.

Lou Diamond, head of Paramount's music subsidiary, and president of the Famous Music Company, will have charge of the new setup.

The deal gives Paramount an addition of about 600 songs, including "Memphis Blues," and "On the Beach at Bali Bali."

Newsreels Barred

The barring by Judge John C. Knox of newsreel and still cameras from spy trials in federal court, in New York, follows federal court procedure. Paramount hired an artist to sketch the trial, then photographed the sketches. The authorities permitted floodlights to be set up in the press room, and allowed cameramen to shoot in front of the building. Several times they brought the defendants into the press room for the benefit of the lens lads, and Judge Knox was photographed in his chambers.

Mrs. F. D. R. Invited

Mark Lachmann, 20th Century-Fox film representative, now in Washington, has invited Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, members of the White House family and top-line government officials to attend the first showing of Shirley Temple's new picture, at Loew's Capitol Theatre Friday evening.

There will be no special screening at the White House, as originally planned because of Mrs. Roosevelt's absence from Washington during the week on a lecture tour.

Warner Paris Deal

Warner Brothers has closed a product deal with the Gaumont Theatre Circuit in Paris, which, the company says, represents the biggest distribution deal for its product ever made by the company in France. A. Saltiel, general manager of Warners for France, Belgium and Switzerland, represented the company in closing the deal with the circuit, which comprises 20 theatres, 10 in Paris and 10 first-runs in other key cities. "The Adventures of Robin Hood," first picture to play the circuit under the terms of the deal, opens at the Rex theatre, Paris, on November 24th.

No Modification

Italy will not consent to a modification of the decree creating a government controlled film monopoly, according to word received this week in New York from official quarters in Rome. Full compliance with all provisions of the decree will be insisted upon on and after December 31st.

All overtures toward a compromise made by American film interests have been frowned upon by high government officials. The American companies are expected to file their contracts with E. N. I. C., the official distribution monopoly, or to withdraw from Italy, by December 31st.

American companies operating their own branches in Italy began liquidation of their properties in that country this week, on a scale calculated to complete the move by December 31st. Warners, Loew's, Paramount and 20th Century-Fox operate their own branches, while the other major companies distribute through Italian sales representatives.

Television

Television, according to David Sarnoff, president of the Radio Corporation of America, will be a reality by the time the New York World's Fair opens next spring. Mr. Sarnoff made his prediction in a speech before the Radio Manufacturers Association.

Quotations from Mr. Sarnoff and a survey of recent developments and problems in the new entertainment field will be found on page 28.

Copyright Question

A series of meetings on copyright now being held at Columbia University, in New York, may result in changes in the American copyright law, long a matter of importance to motion picture and other amusement interests.

A description of the purposes of the committee members and a discussion of the three outstanding copyright questions; those of American adherence to the international copyright union, divisibility of copyright, and minimum statutory damages, will be found on page 23.

ASCAP Case

The American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, through its counsel, Schwartz and Frohlich, filed an answer with the United States supreme court Saturday to the motion of the Washington state attorney general for the dismissal of Ascaph's appeal to the high court on the Washington anti-Ascaph law. The supreme court ruled two weeks ago that it had "probable jurisdiction" in the Washington-Ascaph case.

Industry cocktail parties usually are for a single star or single purpose but a United Artists reception was given this week in the Rainbow Room lounge on the 67th floor of the RCA Building, New York, for the four stars pictured at the left, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Patsy Kelly, Roland Young and Ann Sothern for their various achievements in three current films, "The Young in Heart," "There Goes My Heart," and "Trade Winds."

SAYS SELF-REGULATION MEETINGS HAVE NO BEARING ON TRUST SUIT

Program Will Not Be Submitted to Department of Justice by Distributors; Conferences Are Continued

Negotiations now under way in New York between representatives of exhibitors of the country and the eight large distributors, pointing toward self-regulation for the industry, are declared to have absolutely no relation to the distributors' position in the pending United States Government anti-trust suit, nor will the adoption of a program—in all likelihood featuring conciliation—accruing from the negotiations, as expected, have any bearing on whatever action is to be taken in the suit.

This, coming from an official spokesman for the companies, late Wednesday, is contrary to reports that the Department of Justice is either an observer to the formulation of a program, or that the program, when completed, will be submitted to the Department in Washington for approval.

"If the program is submitted to the Department of Justice, it certainly will not be presented by the distributors," declared the majors' spokesman, who added: "In the first place, besides having no direct relation to or potential influence on the status of the Government's suit, the program has no official interest for the Department, and, even if submitted, it is doubtful whether the Department would either approve or disapprove the plan."

Furthermore, it was said, neither the negotiations between distributors and exhibitors nor the final program evolving therefrom will touch in any way on the two basic demands made by the Government in its suit: (1) Divorcement of exhibition from production-distribution, and, (2) Abolition of the "talent pool" which, the United States charges, exists in Hollywood.

"Divorcement" Not in Program

Only the other day, it is learned on authoritative sources, Allied States Association of Exhibitors attempted to start off its preliminary trade practice conferences with the distributors by injecting theatre "divorcement" into the bargaining discussions. They were told flatly that the distributors not only would refuse to discuss the subject during these negotiations, but that "divorcement" could not possibly form a part of the program. Allied has been campaigning, in its fight against so-called major "aggressions" for state laws prohibiting producer-distributors from operating or owning theatres, and already has had such a statute enacted in North Dakota.

Continuing efforts apparently intent on establishing self-regulation as quickly as practicable, separate distributor committees and representatives of the exhibitor groups this week are conducting day-to-day round table discussions in New York to exchange views on proposals for correction of conditions complained of in distribution-exhibitor practice. These meetings are preliminary to a big industry-wide conference, and are primarily intended to determine just how far each will go with concessions.

Other than an announcement from William F. Rodgers, of MGM, for the distributors, that "definite progress has been made," no word was

SMPE MEMBERS CONVENE MONDAY

Three hundred motion picture engineers, technicians, equipment manufacturers and dealers will assemble starting Monday at the Hotel Statler in Detroit for the three-day semi-annual convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, there to analyze, discuss motion pictures and exhibit technical developments emerging from the laboratories since the last meeting, in the spring.

With S. K. Wolf, president, conducting the sessions, the meeting will feature, in addition to the usual papers and demonstrations on technical aspects and developments, the presentation of the Society's Progress Medal and Journal Award.

The awards will be made at the convention banquet Tuesday evening.

forthcoming from the meeting chambers on specific advancements. Reason for the silence, agreed to by all conferees, is to avoid the confusion on the outside that probably would arise from the changing complexion of day-to-day bargaining.

As the situation stands today, the distributors have held several meetings with the MPTOA, resulting in "marked progress," according to Mr. Rodgers. These meetings were interrupted last Friday when the MPTOA committeemen, led by Edward L. Kuykendall, president, left New York to set the stage for the MPTOA's 18th annual convention, opening Monday in Oklahoma City. (See page 27.) On the committee with Mr. Kuykendall are Lewen Pizor, Philadelphia; Ed Levy, New Haven; Oscar Lam, Georgia; H. V. Harvey, California, and C. E. Williams, Omaha.

Another distributor committee continued meetings with Allied States representatives this week, discussing "topics of mutual interest," it being expressed "by all participants" that progress here, too, had been made, according to Mr. Rodgers. Because some of the participants decided to spend the weekend at home, the meetings were interrupted last Friday, but were resumed Tuesday morning, in a room in the Hotel Astor. Abram F. Myers, general counsel, is the principal Allied spokesman, supported by Nathan Yamins, Massachusetts, president; Colonel H. A. Cole, Texas; Sidney Samuelson, New Jersey; Ray Branch, Michigan, and M. A. Rosenberg, Pittsburgh. Acting for the distributors in the Allied negotiations are Sidney R. Kent, Twentieth Century-Fox; William F. Rodgers, MGM; Ned E. Depinet, RKO; Gradwell L. Sears, Warners, and Abe Montague, Columbia. Their preliminary talks are expected to be concluded Friday.

On Wednesday morning, the distributors opened meetings with state exhibitor organizations that are neither affiliated with Allied or MPTOA, and representing some 1,600 theatres of members in the Independent Theatre Owners of New York, Independent Theatre Owners of Southern California, MPTO of Kentucky, Theatre Owners and Managers of the Rocky Mountain States, Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska, MPTO of Virginia, MPTO of Utah, and others.

Before entering the meeting room, Leo F.

Wolcott, of Iowa, said that the independents were in "complete harmony" as to the nature of their proposals, after three days of meetings of their own, and were prepared to meet the distributors with a complete agenda. Their sessions with the majors are being held in the Union League Club with Messrs. Kent, Rodgers, Depinet, Montague and Sears on hand to hear their proposals.

With block booking, blind selling, cancellation, clearance and zoning, preferred playing time, "forcing" of shorts with features, score charges, designated playdates, overbuying, short-form contracts, cut-rate competition, non-theatrical competition, circuit theatre expansion, radio competition, non-delivery of pictures, picture allocations, the "right to buy" product—these constitute the main subjects of discussion in one or another of the three series of distributor-exhibitor discussions.

Whatever the outcome, all sides this week agreed to the "harmonious" nature of the talks.

On completion of these preliminaries, and on determining definitely the full nature of the exhibitors' desires, the distributors will start the writing of a unified program, the contents and enactment of which cannot be predicted at this time.

New Procedure in Trust Case

As a result of discussions between the Department of Justice and the majors who are defendants in the trust suit, last Wednesday, at the second industry meeting with the Department in Washington, a new procedure was adopted which extends for another six weeks the date for filing of answers by the distributors. This departure requires the Department to provide bills of particulars, when requested by defendants. Until a few weeks ago no application for bills of particulars could be made until answers had been filed by the defendants in an anti-trust action.

With the change, the decision by counsel for the companies to the petition for a bill of particulars is likely to extend until January 1 the time for filing of answers by the industry. The present deadline for the answers is November 1st.

Accordingly, Columbia, on Monday, through Louis Frohlich, filed a note of issue in U. S. district court, New York, directed to Lamar Hardy, U. S. district attorney, preparatory to obtaining a bill of particulars from the Department. The company was the first to initiate the new procedure. Filing Wednesday were Paramount, Twentieth Century-Fox, Irving Trust—RKO, Warners, Keith-Albee, Orpheum, Universal, Chase Bank—National Theatres. The others were to file before the end of the week.

More Conferences

It is presumed that the Department's proposals concerning the maintenance of a status quo on affiliated theatre holdings were also discussed by counsel for the five companies at their second meeting with Department officials, last Wednesday.

Representatives of both sides maintained the non-communicative attitude which has consistently marked the negotiations, but conceded that more conferences are in prospect.

Representing the Government were Thurman Arnold, Wendel Berge and Paul Williams. The companies were represented by Colonel William J. Donovan, and William Mallard, RKO; Austin Keough, Paramount; Robert W. Perkins, Warners; J. Robert Rubin, Loew's; Ralph S. Harris and Richard P. Dwight, 20th Century-

Fox, and B. F. Shipman of Mudge, Stern, Williams & Tucker.

Among proposals believed to have been discussed was one under which the companies would be authorized to acquire new theatres only in proportion to the number of houses which might be disposed of. Deals under this proposal, whether for sale or acquisition of theatres, would be entered into only for the purpose of protecting existing investments and would be submitted to the Department for its information in advance.

Writ Against B. & K. Refused

A setback was experienced last week by Chicago independent exhibitors, in their fight against Balaban & Katz and the eight large distributors. Their application for temporary injunction to change clearance in their favor, was refused by the Federal Judge Wilkerson. The owners are suing B. & K., in an anti-trust complaint.

Illinois Allied voted to continue the fight, instructing its attorneys to continue action.

There is speculation that settlement will be reached before trial.

Chicago exchanges report business practically normal.

Defendants have been given until November 19th to answer charges.

Momand Petition Argued

Motion of the defendants to strike the petition from the files was argued Wednesday before Judge A. P. Murrah in federal district court in Oklahoma City in the A. B. Momand anti-trust suit against the large distributors and Griffith Amusement Company. The hearing on the motion was continued to November 5th.

Mr. Momand is asking $4,900,000 damages, charging conspiracy in restraint of trade. Motion to quash by Warner Brothers was overruled, Paramount's similar motion was withdrawn, and Pathe's was reconsidered. Judge Murrah said he was of the opinion that he was bound by the law laid down in Mr. Momand's former anti-trust suit against Paramount Publix, which was dismissed by the federal court of appeals without prejudice.

Extension in "Divorcement" Plea

A 30 day extension, to November 22nd, of the time allowed Paramount for filing an appeal with the U. S. Supreme Court from the lower court decision upholding the constitutionality of the North Dakota affiliated theatre divorce law has been granted by the federal statutory court at Fargo.

Philadelphia Hearing in November

Answers are being prepared by distributors and circuits to the anti-trust suit filed in federal court by Harry Fried, Philadelphia exhibitor. A hearing on the preliminary injunction asked is expected in November.

The action is based on the clearance schedule for Warners' Ardmore as it relates to Mr. Fried's three subsequent-runs in the same competitive territory. Mr. Fried asks an injunction to eliminate the clearance over his own theatres and to restrain the defendants from overbuying product.

"More Stringent" Powers Asked for Attorney General

Suggestions for changes in the anti-trust laws, changes in enforcement of those laws, with more stringent powers given the U. S. attorney general, and specific remarks about the industry in its present trial with the Government, featured the address recently in Chicago, before the Na-

Pointing out that the problems of each industry are too parochial to be dealt with by "blanket" changes in the laws, Mr. Berge said: "Amendments designed to deal with the problem of block booking in the motion picture industry would obviously not point the way towards restoration of competition in the aluminum industry."

Mr. Berge called for decentralization of anti-trust prosecution, with regional offices; and an increase of authority for the attorney general, including the power to subpoena witnesses for evidence without a grand jury.

John J. Abt, special assistant to the U. S. attorney general in prosecution of the eight distributors under the anti-trust laws, resigned Monday from the Department of Justice.

Harry Cohn has signified his intention to appear in the suit, and has requested the Department to make all future contacts with his attorneys, Schwartz and Frohlich.

592 New Theatre Projects Reported

Theatre construction projects, including new and major remodeling, totaled 592 in the first nine months of this year, with a total valuation of $16,568,000. These figures are for the 37 states east of the Rockies.

There is a lag of $5,814,000 between 1938 and 1937 contract values, the F. W. Dodge Corporation reported. In 1937, the awards in the corresponding period had reached $22,382,000. There were 693 projects with 3,433,000 sq. ft. of floor area. The floor area for the first nine months of 1938 totaled 2,128,000 sq. ft.

The September total was the smallest since January. Contracts amounting to $1,266,000 included 47 projects with 149,000 sq. ft. That was approximately half the September, 1937, volume of $2,419,000, when 81 projects with 404,700 sq. ft. were reported by the Dodge news staff. Only January's contracts, amounting to $1,187,000, have dropped under the September valuation.

EXHIBITORS SEEK STUDIO SUPPORT IN NEW ATTACK ON AIR "GOSSIPERS"

New York Independents Protest "Half-Baked, Self-Appointed" Commentators on Film News; Look to the Producers

Once again the motion picture is fighting those radio "gossipers" who report to the listening public on the private lives of stars, those air "commentators" who sometimes are charged with giving vent to personal feelings in private feuds with Hollywood personalities, who frequently criticize pictures for prospective theatre goers even before the studios have finished with them.

Harry Brandt's Independent Theatre Owners in New York, which some months ago got itself widespread attention in the public prints with an attack on huge salaries paid to "waning" stars, this week turned to what it describes as "half-baked, self-appointed" film news "gossip" commentators on the air.

Launching its campaign last Saturday in The Independent, organization publication, in a tone even more vitriolic than in the star salaries episode, the ITOA hopes to gain the active co-operation of Hollywood producers to retaliate against the "insults" and "punishments" which it says have been meted out to pictures and persons in the industry by the radio "commentators."

Denunciation Not Published

In its previous reprimand of Hollywood functionings, the ITOA caused to be inserted in the Hollywood Reporter, local trade daily, a page advertisement calling on the studios and producers to correct the situation which the ITOA claimed existed as a result of "over-paid" talent. Press wire services immediately spread the news and the public was treated to another first-hand glimpse of intra-industry arguments. The ITOA, in this latest instance, intended to follow the same procedure, at least in so far as it concerned publication of the denunciation again in Hollywood Reporter. But something went wrong, and for reasons unannounced the Reporter either refused or neglected to publish the copy chastising the radio "commentators," particularly James (Jimmie) Fidler, at whom it was primarily directed. And during the week the ITOA was trying to determine the reasons for its non-publication.

Both producers and distributors down through the years have complained of the public airing by radio film "gossipers" of the private lives of their stars, and the manner in which the broadcasts give opinions on forthcoming productions even before they are completed. Entrance of the ITOA into the fray brings the first organized exhibitor attack since last January.

Consider Plan of Attack

Meeting, in regular session, next Wednesday at New York's Hotel Astor, the ITOA will take up the subject of a more tangible reproach. In their first barrage, in The Independent, last Saturday, they talked about the possibilities of attacking, on their screens, the Drene Hair Shampoo product which Mr. Fidler, as one of the "gossipers," air-advertises for his sponsors, Procter and Gamble, soap makers.

Quoting from a report in "Consumers' Digest" criticizing the product, the IOTA says, "That squib, thrown on the screens of thousands of theatres throughout the United States, would make Fidler's sponsors soon enough take responsibility for his statements and orders from on high would find Fidler walking the straight and narrow."

COMERFORD ISSUES MOVIE NEWS WEEKLY

Comerford Theatres in the Wilkes-Barre area are meeting the problem of the lack of newspapers caused by the Newspaper Guild strike by issuing a weekly called Movie News. The paper, a four-page periodical, is 15 1/2 inches long and 11 1/2 inches wide. Weekly programs for 15 houses in Wilkes-Barre and vicinity are carried, and the paper is distributed from house to house as well as at the theatre. Cuts and news items enliven the first three pages and the fourth is devoted to programs.

Going further, the ITOA reports the receipt of information that scripts "exposing the manufacture of soaps and cosmetics" already have been submitted to various motion picture companies for production as a series of shorts. They cite the possible dramatization of "Consumer's Research," or "One Hundred Million Guinea Pigs," or "Skin Deep."

"Saturation Point"

"The theatre owners of America have popped," declares the ITOA, referring to their having reached the "saturation point" in taking the "insults" of the air "gossipers."

"It should be remembered," they point out, "that the movies do not dramatize commercial products in an unfair or unethical way for their own ends the way radio commentators indiscriminately toss names around. The screens of America refuse to be maligned by gossip commentators of Fidler's type. If the screens have to resort to the same unfair tactics, then they will use those tactics in their own defense." Eighty-two per cent of America's homes are radio-equipped.

Issue Last January

It was believed that a climax in the fight had been reached early last January when organized exhibitor groups the country over arose in joint protest. Having previously engaged the individual attention of producers and distributors, and the motion picture trade press, the attack became enlivened last winter by blasts at the "gossipers" from the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and Allied States Association of Theatre Owners, both national groups; the Ohio Independent Theatre Owners, Chicago theatre owners, and others. The idea of conducting a criticism of the products of advertisers who employ film-radio "gossipers" was advanced even then.

Following closely in attack was the $250,000 action filed against "Jimmie" Fidler by Constance Bennett, for remarks attributed to him on his Drene Shampoo broadcastings. The suit was dismissed only a few weeks ago on the grounds that a public character cannot be libeled by statements made without malice.

Apparently taking cognizance of the complaints from the industry at the time, the first real "crack-down" on a gossip-of-the-air followed in February, when the studio credentials of Bob Garrett, conducting a "Pick of the Pictures" program on Station KEHA, Los Angeles, were revoked by the Motion Picture Producers Association following a broadcast in Producers Association for remarks he had made on the air.

350 Commentators

Confronted with the existence of 30 radio "commentators" or "gossipers" in its midst, Hollywood turned to the broadcasting companies themselves with their grievances in October, 1937. The producers charged that the "gossip commentators" had for years been plaguing the studios and their stellar personalities, and were ridiculing the industry and those within it with prattlings and tattlings bordering either on the libelous or slanderous, or both, besides airing, distortedly or otherwise, the marital and private affairs of the stars.

As a result, Major Lenox Lohr, president of National Broadcasting Company, informed Don Gilman, NBC Hollywood director, that any future contracting or arrangements for or with film "gossipers," either on a sustaining or advertising-sponsorship basis, must have his personal approval and must pass the test of his personal investigation. Unconfirmed went a report at the time that all three of the national networks would thereafter exercise "stringent censorship."

Fischer Broadcast Attacked

"Gossiper" George Fischer, broadcasting for Jergen's Lotion, in NBC, was then singled out for attack, after he had aired the "scoop" that England's former King Edward, the Duke of Windsor, was en route to the film capital to become "czar" over the entire "international motion picture world."

Just what "inside" action has been taken by the broadcasters themselves to control the film "gossips" has, so far as is known, never been disclosed.

In December, 1937, the Motion Picture Producers Association in Hollywood started to issue credentials to the air-reporters for admittance to studios, thereby establishing a line on them as a possible means of regulating their studio activities, it being presumed that their studio cards would be revoked if and when it were found necessary.

Darryl Zanuck, at the same time, declared that his Twentieth Century-Fox Film was prepared to employ "swift and stern" measures should commentators "further flaunt the tenets of decency." Cecil B. DeMille joined in with the charge that the radio "gossipers" "are preying on defenseless people and poisoning the public mind." The Hearst Los Angeles newspapers, the Examiner and Herald-Express, engaged in an editorial campaign against the radio reporters. The Screen Actors Guild called on the American Federation of Labor for a membership boycott on products advertised by the air "columnists."

GEORGE SCHAEFER TAKES OVER AT RKO; HEARINGS ARE DELAYED TO NOV. 22

Judge Bondy Cites Pressure of Other Duties and Volume of Submitted Briefs in Postponing Session on Confirmation

Moving more swiftly than expected, the Radio-Keith-Orpheum reorganization interests on Monday formally installed George J. Schaefer at the helm of the corporation's producing, distributing and exhibiting companies. Leo Spitz, who had held top position at RKO, has returned to private law practice in Chicago, as he had requested.

Hearing November 22nd

Pressure of duties elsewhere in federal court and the volume of briefs submitted were advanced by Judge William Bondy on Wednesday as reasons for postponing to November 22nd the hearing on confirmation of the reorganization plans.

While the plan proposed by Atlas Company is expected to be adopted, five out of the eight briefs filed before Judge Bondy were in opposition, all from minorities, as submitted by Stirn, H. Cassell and Company, for debenture holders; Abraham Weber, stockholder, and Copia Realty Corp., a contingent creditor.

The new board, under the proposed plan, is expected to have 15 members and to include Attorney Lawrence Green, and, possibly, Nelson Rockefeller and W. G. Van Schmus, for Rockefeller Center; L. P. Yandell and James G. Harbord, for RCA; Peter Rathvon, Floyd Odlum, for Atlas, with possibly a third representative; three representatives of the management, with George Schaefer, newly elected president, certain to be one; one representative of Lehman Brothers, and representatives of organized stockholders and bondholders with committees.

All groups agreed on the choice of Mr. Green as general creditors' representative.

Ahead of Schedule

That Mr. Schaefer would join the corporation had been definitely set the previous week, but on his leaving the vice-presidency and general sales management of United Artists, two weeks ago, he had set his course on a fishing trip off the Carolinas, planning to take over at RKO somewhere around November 1.

Following meetings of the respective boards, the Irving Trust Company, trustee for RKO in "77-B", issued the following announcement, last Friday afternoon:

"Mr. Leo Spitz today tendered his resignation as president of Keith-Albee-Orpheum, B. F. Keith Corporation (RKO's theatre subsidiaries) and RKO Radio Pictures, Inc. The boards of directors of these companies accepted his resignation with great regret and in deference to his desire, which he has expressed for some time, to return to his law practice as early as practicable. Mr. Spitz has, however, agreed to continue to serve in special matters. "Mr. George J. Schaefer was elected to succeed Mr. Spitz as president of these companies."

Represents Irving Trust

Besides the three aforementioned RKO subsidiaries whose presidency Mr. Schaefer now occupies, it is presumed he will be elected to the presidency of the parent Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation upon the emergence of the parent in reorganization from "77-B". Until then his technical title in RKO is representative of the trustee, Irving Trust Company.

LASKY AIR SHOW FOR WRIGLEY'S AND RKO

Jesse L. Lasky's long projected radio-film tieup was approved on Friday by the Radio-Keith-Orpheum board, one of the final acts of Leo Spitz as RKO president. It is expected that the new program will supplant the current Wrigley series, "The Laugh Liner," on the Columbia Broadcasting System Sundays from 6:30 to 7:00 P. M., starting November 13th.

The program is expected to work three ways, as an exploitation tieup for RKO, as a publicity and new talent medium for the company, and as a business builder for Wrigley. The program will feature new players in dramatic works, supported by RKO players. A board of judges will select the most promising team at the conclusion of the 13-week cycle, with the winning players awarded parts in an RKO picture in which RKO stars will appear. Mr. Lasky will produce this picture.

The cost of the program to RKO will be between $10,000 and $15,000 a week.

He is, of course, also a member of the various directorates, acting as board chairman of the Keith theatre subsidiaries. At the moment of reorganization, the RKO board will formally ratify Mr. Schaefer's employment contract.

Both the creditors and bank trustee urged Mr. Spitz to continue with the corporation in an active advisory capacity until the company is on its way after its reorganization, and later to serve as counsel in special matters, to which he agreed. Leaving New York on Monday, he spent the following day in Chicago, and from there traveled westward for a week's stay around the studios.

From Red to Black

Bidding farewell to Mr. Spitz Monday in his offices in RKO headquarters at Rockefeller Center, it was generally conceded both by corporation executives and representatives of the trustee that he was largely responsible for steering the RKO circuit from a dubious financial position, when he took over three years, to operations at a profit as at present. He is accredited, too, with bringing into harmony the M. J. Meehan Wall Street interests in Keith theatres and the management, after months of wrangling over operations between the two factions in the circuit.

Observing his efforts for and in behalf of Paramount Pictures during its reorganization, creditor and other interests in RKO invited Mr. Spitz, in 1935, to aid that company in its reorganization. He had for years been associated with Paramount and affiliated interests, starting with Balaban and Katz, now Paramount-controlled, in 1925, acting as general counsel. His activities in B. and K. brought him directly into legal affairs of Paramount, and when John Hertz entered the Paramount picture, in 1932, Mr. Spitz followed, serving until the following year.

His Chicago law firm, Spitz and Adcock, is one of the biggest in the midwest, serving many motion picture corporate and circuit interests, besides others.

Started with Selznick

George Joseph Schaefer goes to the foremost position in Radio-Keith-Orpheum with a record of accomplishments in the motion picture business. Of most recent date, his designation as director general over the "Motion Pictures' Greatest Year" national campaign significantly indicated the extent to which other industry chieftains view his leadership.

A native New Yorker, Brooklyn born, Mr. Schaefer started early in motion pictures, from automobiles, with the late Lewis J. Selznick, in 1914, serving for two years, when he joined the old World Film Company as assistant sales manager. He started with Paramount in 1920, as booker in the New York exchange, and the following year he jumped to the district management of New England. In 1926, Mr. Schaefer became district manager for "District No. 1," the important Eastern section, and a few years later became general sales manager, taking on the duties of president of Famous Theatres Corporation in 1935, and the following year became vice-president of the reorganized Paramount Pictures Corporation, resigning late that year to head sales activities of United Artists.

McCormick in Hollywood

S. Barret McCormick, director of RKO advertising and publicity, arrived at the studios in Hollywood this week from New York for conferences with Howard Benedict, studio publicity head, on campaigns for new product.

Sam Smith in New York On Republic Deal

Sam Smith, chairman and managing director of British Lion Film Corporation, arrived in New York last week for preliminary talks with H. J. Yates and Morris Goodman, Republic foreign head, on a new distribution deal for the United Kingdom. The present four-year pact does not expire until next July. Mr. Smith also will confer with N. L. Nathanson, head of Famous Players Canadian, who is on the directorate of British Lion's and is Republic's distributor in Canada.

Mr. Goodman said this week that Republic intends to concentrate any budget expansion in its domestic production and will not make any Spanish films for 1938-'39.

He also said that a number of foreign deals are being consummated, among them one with the Eastern Film Agency for the Straits Settlements, and Acme Films, Inc., for the Philippines. These will be renewed for a third year. With the exception of England and Australia, Republic's foreign deals are limited to one year.

One thousand are expected to attend the annual dinner dance of the Paramount Pep Club, Friday night in the Belvedere Room of the Hotel Astor, New York. Dick Engel, Bob Weitman, Arthur Andesner and Theodore Schreiner arranged the entertainment, including George Olsen and his band, Raymond Scott Quintette, Ann Miller, and Maxine Sullivan. Carl Clausen is president of the club.

INDUSTRY JOINS OTHERS IN WORKING ON CHANGES IN U.S. COPYRIGHT LAW

Motion Picture Leaders Present Double Problem of Buyer and Seller as Committee Meets to Discuss Copyright Revision

The organized motion picture industry again is looking toward a long hoped for revision of the United States copyright laws, expecting relief from the frequent attacks against them on charges of plagiarism, and for a clarification of the law as it concerns illegal exhibitions.

Representatives of various fields, including films, interested in revising the copyright laws of this country, met at the Low Memorial Library, Columbia University, New York, last Thursday to resume discussions started last July. The meeting was sponsored by a sub-committee of the American national committee on International Intellectual Cooperation, of which James T. Shotwell is chairman. Dr. Shotwell is Bryce professor of international relations at Columbia, and director of the division of economics of the Carnegie endowment for international peace.

Concerns American Law

The committee was formed to examine the practicability of American participation in the Berne Convention (the international copyright union), but is now more concerned with bringing up to date the present American copyright laws.

Among those present at last week's meeting, besides Dr. Shotwell, were: Dr. Waldo Gifford Leland, historian, who is chairman of the copyright committee; Dr. Edith Ware, secretary; Edwin P. Kilroe, Twentieth Century-Fox counsel and chairman of the copyright committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; Robert W. Perkins, Warner Brothers general counsel; Gabriel L. Hess, MPPDA general counsel; Edward A. Sargoy, assistant to Mr. Hess; Marvin Pierce, chairman of the copyright committee of the Book Publishers Association and president of the McCall Company; John W. Paine, general manager of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers; Herman Finklestein of Schwartz and Frohlich, ASCAP's general counsel; Frederic G. Melchor, chairman of the copyright committee of the Book Publishers Bureau; Luise Silcox, treasurer of the Authors League and executive secretary of the Dramatists Guild; Henry Jaffe, copyright counsel for the League, and Sidney M. Kaye, counsel of the Columbia Broadcasting System, representing the National Association of Broadcasters.

At the next meeting of the committee, in a few days, the ideas submitted by the various interests represented will be the subject of further study in an attempt to arrive at generally acceptable changes in the copyright law.

Buyer and Seller

The film industry is in the anomalous position of being at once a buyer of copyrighted materials such as plays, stories and music, and a seller of copyrighted materials in the form of the motion picture. Thus the producer of film must maintain a double vigil, seeing that he does not infringe the rights of another when he purchases a story or other property, and that his rights in turn are not infringed by outright pirating as well as by theatres holding over, switching or "bicycling" a film in violation of their booking licenses. As Mr. Sargoy, assistant

HAYS SAYS FILMS DEFEND DEMOCRACY

Those who produce motion pictures are among the most vigilant defenders of American democracy and freedom against totalitarian trends, and their pictures guarantee that the "American Way" of life will continue, should be supported by all who believe in it, Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, said Tuesday in addressing the eighth annual New York Herald-Tribune Forum on Current Problems.

"Nowhere, except in a land where freedom is precious above all other things," said Mr. Hays, "could this Art-Industry have developed as it has."

Following Mr. Hays, Katharine Hepburn pleaded for more intelligence in motion picture production.

Mr. Hays, an elder of the Presbyterian Church, is scheduled to speak Sunday on "The Importance of Religion in Our Everyday Life," over the Mutual Network from 2:30 to 2:45 P.M., in connection with the celebration of the 150th anniversary of the founding of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church.

Thurman Arnold, assistant United States attorney general in charge of anti-trust prosecutions, including the action now pending against the motion picture industry, addressed the New York Herald-Tribune Forum Wednesday afternoon on the all-embracing subject of "Government."

"The practical man in government knows that his task is to adjust organizations to the maximum use of our capacity to produce without the suffering incident upon attempt to change our culture," said Mr. Arnold, adding: "He knows, too, that no social problem is ever logically or permanently solved, and that the art of government, like the art of controlling traffic, means a traffic policeman continuously at his post."

to Gabriel Hess, said in an article in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, May 23, 1936, "A single copyright, individually or in company with others, in the course of its film career, will be amazingly transformed and its uses mechanically multiplied thousands of times."

The Copyright Protection Bureau, which was set up by the distributors to enforce the $250 minimum damages decreed by the Copyright Law of 1909 as the penalty for infringement, is reputed to have almost completely stopped such practices as bicycling.

But the three main controversial topics in the copyright field still remain, all having a distinct bearing upon the motion picture industry. They are the questions of whether America should join the international copyright convention; whether there should be "divisibility" of copyright, and whether the minimum statutory damage provision should be retained in the copyright law as it now is.

Attorneys in the industry point out that the one thing desired is clearness and certainty in the terms of the law, so that it may make its investments in source material without the constant threat of lawsuits, and protect those investments by a clearly defined statute on illegal exhibition practices.

Degree of Protection

Thus the question of America's signature to the Berne Convention is reduced to the degree of protection thus afforded. The report of the committee on copyright of the American Bar Association, approved by the House of Delegates of the Association last July, makes clear that there must be some reservations before adherence could be satisfactory. Besides desiring to delay membership until after the Brussels conference, postponed from 1935 until 1940, the Bar Association committee lists five main points of objection to American entry into the Berne Convention as it now stands. The committee, consisting of Everett N. Curtis, chairman; Otto F. Barthel, George F. Dike, James A. Gleason, Maurice J. O'Sullivan, Cyrus W. Rice, Edward A. Sargoy and Harry H. Semmes, is in accord with the views expressed by Edwin P. Kilroe in his statement made before a sub-committee of the committee on foreign relations of the United States Senate, in April, 1937.

At that time Mr. Kilroe said:

"Some of the countries to the Berne Convention are bound by the terms of the convention of 1886, others by the Convention of Paris of 1896, others by the Convention of Berlin in 1908, and others by the Convention of Rome of 1928. It is quite likely that unless there shall be a new revision of the Brussels Convention, there may be a fifth convention, which will give us five sets of conventions. This would only add to the chaos and confusion that already exists."

Points for Investigation

The points which industry spokesmen and the Bar Association Committee agree should be investigated are retroactivity, moral rights of authors, oral copyright, alien rights and the producer-author relationship.

If the United States became a signatory to the Berne Convention, it is pointed out, such action would have the effect of penalizing those who had started to prepare works such as motion pictures, from a source not protected by copyright when work was begun but which might be protected under the terms of the international convention. This is the question of retroactivity.

The Bar Association committee says that under such a treaty "since the customary term abroad is the life of the author and fifty years, a vast body of alien copyrights will thus be lifted out of the public domain in the United States," and adds:

"The removal of a vast body of alien works from the public domain of the United States may work serious hardship upon those who have made expenditures of labor or money, or incurred liabilities in respect of such works in the United States while it was lawful still to do so."

Protection could be provided by domestic enabling legislation or by a reservation made by America in its terms of adherence.

Moral rights of authors are discussed in Mr. Kilroe's survey of the international copyright situation, made after his trip to Europe in behalf of the MPPDA in 1936. "The doctrine of the moral rights of authors had its origin in France. . . . An unsuccessful attempt was made to incorporate the doctrine in a modified form at the Berlin Convention of 1908 and Italy led the fight for it at Rome in 1928, where the doctrine was introduced in the following form: 'Independently of the author's copyright, and even after transfer of the said copyright, the author shall have the right to claim authorship of the work, as well as the right to object to any distortion, mutilation or other modification of the said work which would be prejudicial to his honor or reputation.'" This doctrine, if permitted to stand when America decided to join the international convention, would to a great extent destroy the right of editing or otherwise changing a literary property acquired for film use, according to the Americans' contention.

Oral Copyright in England

Although our Constitution states that copyright is to be granted only for written works (before the law, paintings and musical works are considered writing in copyright matters), the international convention grants oral copyright. England, for example has a limited oral copyright, applying only to certain spoken texts. If America joined, under a full oral copyright, every speech or address would be automatically copyrighted as soon as spoken, and infringement could be claimed if it were used again by another.

The question of alien rights would be answered in a reservation not requiring America to grant to an alien any rights in the United States greater than those which the country of which he is a national grants to American citizens.

The problem of producer-author relationship as to the authorship of any work created by an author employed by a producer may arise at the next Convention. At present in America, in the case of any work created by an employee within the scope of his employment, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, the employer is regarded as the author, and is the owner of the copyright. This is virtually a necessity in the film business, it is contended. As Mr. Kilroe points out, "It might be necessary to chase the authors around the world to get their signatures in proceedings at court."

Divisibility of Copyright

The second of the controversial topics in the copyright field, especially as it applies to the film industry, is that of divisibility of copyright. Under the present law, that of 1909, the owner of a copyright on a play owns the copyright on all aspects of that play, movie rights, television rights, and the like, unless he assigns them to another. The proponents of divisibility, which would make each right separate, claim that it would simplify many a copyright issue. For example, in the early days of silent films, it was a question whether the "dramatic rights" of a work included film rights.

Despite the fact that recently attempted legislation, such as the Duffy Bill, has been directed against the minimum statutory damages decreed by the 1909 law, the opinion of attorneys in the entertainment field is that a known minimum penalty for infringement is still the best way to check infringement. On the other hand, they agree that there should be a limit to the liability of secondary performers. That is, if a radio station broadcasts a work without permission, and an infringement is proved, the person whose work was infringed should not be able to sue for the $250 minimum every station which, as a part of a network or as a subscriber to a feature, also broadcast the work. Similarly with the theatres which might unwittingly show a film against which a copyright infringement may be proved.

These are the topics which command attention, with a recognized desire in many quarters to continue cleaning out the copyright house at home before becoming concerned in a foreign situation where the possibility of increased copyright protection would be accompanied, attorneys said, by the falling revenue which has typified the industry's recent relationship with Europe and Asia.

Dickinson at Exchanges

Arthur S. Dickinson, head of the conservation department of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., left New York Tuesday to inspect film exchanges in Albany, Buffalo and Cleveland on the way to the convention of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers in Detroit.

Film Archives Forms in London

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Formation of International Federation Film Archives, designed to assist in the exchange of prestige films, was announced this week by British Films Institute. Germany and France are collaborating with the institute, as is also the Film Library of the Museum of Modern Art in New York. The first congress of the newly formed Archives will be held in New York in 1939.

Carnegie trustees have offered the British Film Institute £5,000 for establishment of a central film library in Scotland. The aim of the grant is the furtherance of the educational value of the screen, and the trustees expressed the hope that other English regions will follow the example.

Major Pictures, Ltd., a new British company, has been formed here with financing and distribution by an American company, the name of which was not revealed. Walter Futter is producer and Leslie Howard coproducer and star. Anthony Asquith is co-director, and production will start in January, with three pictures, "The Admirable Crichton," "Mississippi Bubble" and a story of the life of General Gordon.

The annual banquet and ball of the London and Home Counties, Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association, will take place at the Savoy Hotel on December 13th.

John Hay Whitney, president of the Museum of Modern Art Film Library, New York, signed the charter of the International Federation of Film Archives last Thursday. This completed the international agreement between the Cinematheque, Paris; the National Film Library, London; the Reichsfilmarchiv, Berlin, and the Film Library.

Mary Pickford has presented one of her earliest films, "The New York Hat," to the archives of the United States for preservation as an illustration of the technique of motion pictures in their beginnings. Under the law the archivist is authorized to restore films given by private donors as well as by government agencies, providing they fall within categories which are deemed worthy of preservation.

Van Schmus Heads Unit In Red Cross Drive

W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Radio City Music Hall, New York, has been named chairman of the motion picture group in the annual Red Cross drive for funds, which will start November 11th and continue through November 24th. Mr. Van Schmus, in calling upon the industry for a full enrollment, said: "This one great universal agency for relief has not in the past had the support which it should have had from people as traditionally liberal and generous as the motion picture crowd."

18 LEADERS OF THREE BRANCHES ON 18th MPTOA CONVENTION PROGRAM

Subjects at Oklahoma City Starting Monday Range from Self-Regulation to "On- the-Fence Pictures"

The 18th annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America opens at 10:30 Monday morning in the Biltmore hotel in Oklahoma City, bringing together several hundred theatre owners and managers, unaffiliated and otherwise, to discuss common problems of operation and the practices governing the conduct of their business among themselves and with the distributors who supply them with product for their screens.

The three-day convention is of more than ordinary import, coming at a time when the industry stands well along in its first serious efforts of the era to effect self-regulation—a topic which will occupy no little attention of the delegates assembled.

As Edward Lee Kuykendall, of Mississippi, president, sounds the gavel for commencing the first session in the banner-bedecked ballroom of the Biltmore, he will call from the floor the names of 18 leaders of production, distribution and exhibition, independents and majors, besides others, who will bring before the convention the problems of exhibition of today—subjects ranging all the way from "Self Regulation vs. Government Regulation," to "Delayed Allocation of Film Prices," "On-the-Fence Pictures," "The First Run Theatre Problem," "General Trade Relations," "Public Relations" and "Contractual Relations," besides a report on the progress of the negotiations now underway in New York between distributors and committees of the MPTOA, Allied States Association and various state organizations, for the establishment of "fair" trade practices and regulation by conciliation.

Committee on Trade Practices

A special committee, O. C. Lam, Georgia, chairman, will report on trade practices, another on conciliation and arbitration, followed by special committee reports on radio and non-theatrical competition, labor relations, legislation and taxation, community affairs and the music tax. Formal action of the convention, as usual, will take the form of resolutions steered by a committee of which Arthur Lockwood, Connecticut, is chairman. All committee reports will be made Wednesday morning.

A special bulletin from MPTOA headquarters in New York Wednesday said, "All exhibitors who go to the MPTOA convention with problems, difficulties and complaints of their own and with constructive ideas and suggestions to present, are urged to present and discuss these matters freely and fully with the proper committee or its chairman. Exhibitors with local problems, or who dislike to take the floor in the open forum sessions on national problems, are assured careful consideration of the matters in which they have a sincere interest."

Terry Ramsaye, editor of MOTION PICTURE HERALD, will address the convention.

Committees

The appointment of committee members and the meeting place of each committee will be announced at the Monday business session. Committees already set up, and their chairmen, follow:

MORRIS LOEWENSTEIN, MPTOA
secretary and president of the The- atre Owners of Oklahoma, convention hosts.

Credentials and Rules: Chairman: Edward G. Levy, New Haven, Conn.

Unfair Trade Practices: O. C. Lam, Rome, Ga.

Conciliation and Arbitration: Lewen Pizor, Philadelphia.

Radio and Non-Theatrical Competition: Frank Cassil, St. Joseph, Mo.

Public Relations and Community Affairs: Mitchell Wolfson, Miami, Fla.

Legislation and Taxation: Roy L. Walker, Lampasas, Texas.

Resolutions: Arthur H. Lockwood, Middletown, Conn.

Music Tax: L. O. Lukan, Seattle, Wash.

Entertainment Values: A. C. Hayman, Buffalo, N. Y.

The reelection of Mr. Kuykendall to the presidency, along with most of the other officers, is virtually a certainty. It will mark his sixth term in the chair, four of the past five years having been almost entirely devoted by him to the establishment of self-regulation and the adoption of the MPTOA's "Ten-Point Program" of trade practices.

SARNOFF SEES HOME TELECASTS IN APRIL WITH LIMITED SERVICE

On the Air at Least Two Hours A Week by the Time World's Fair Opens, Radio Manufac- turers Are Told at Meeting

From experimentation in the laboratory to reception in the home in the almost immediate future, is the promise for television made by David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation of America, which, through its National Broadcasting Corporation, was one of the first to set out to explore the new medium in this period and is expected to occupy a position in television in the future comparable to its position now in radio broadcasting.

Announcement that television finally is about to emerge from the strictly experimental basis and become, in a limited way, a practical reality, was the chief topic of discussion at the annual fall meeting of the Radio Manufacturers Association, last Thursday, at the Roosevelt hotel in New York.

Mr. Sarnoff said that television programs will be on the air for at least two hours a week by the time the New York World's Fair opens next April.

"We are aware," he explained, "that many technical, artistic and financial problems still confront those who would establish an acceptable and regular public service of television programs to the home. The problems must be solved before a national service of network television programs can be made available to the public. Meanwhile, RCA, which has pioneered in the development of television, has made substantial progress, first in its research laboratories, and, second, through its field tests and experimental broadcast programs. We believe that the problems confronting this difficult and complicated art can be solved only by operating experience gained from actually serving the public in their homes. Therefore, RCA proposes to take a third step in the solution of these problems by beginning a limited program service to the public from its New York television transmitter on the Empire State building. This transmitter will serve an area having a radius of approximately 50 miles.

Will Supply Receivers

"As publicly announced some time ago, RCA proposes to demonstrate television to the public at the New York World's Fair which is expected to open on April 30, 1939. The National Broadcasting Company contemplates that by the time the Fair opens it will be on the air with television programs for at least two hours out of each week. Recent reports in the public press are to the effect that the Columbia Broadcasting System contemplates installing its television transmitter in the Chrysler Building in New York City. These reports further indicated that television programs will be transmitted from this station by the time the World's Fair opens.

"The RCA Manufacturing Company, which built and sold the television transmitter to Columbia, has offered and is prepared to sell television transmitters to broadcasters and others who may desire to enter this new field.

"RCA believes that the development of its television system has now reached a stage where it is practicable to supply television receivers to satisfy the demand of the public in those localities where television transmissions are now or may become available. Therefore, it is planning to manufacture a limited number of television receivers which it expects to market by the time the World's Fair opens. We are informed that a number of other radio manufacturers in the United States are also preparing to manufacture and sell television receivers in such areas as may be served with television programs."

E. W. Engstrom, manager of research of RCA Manufacturing Company; I. R. Baker, manager of transmitting equipment sales, and T. A. Smith, manager of transmitting equipment, have left on a trip to the Middle West, to investigate the possibilities of the television field in that area, and to supply information. Transmitters are already on the air or planned for New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburgh, Albany, Chicago and Los Angeles. While telecasts are on ultra-short waves and transmission is dependable only as far as the horizon, Mr. Sarnoff pointed out, the establishment of national network programs is dependent upon the solution of the many other problems still confronting the industry, as well as upon a solution of the almost prohibitive cost problem of such a network at present.

Under Experimental Licenses

Television broadcasting is conducted under experimental licenses granted by the Federal Communications Commission, and under this type of license a television station is not allowed a commercial sponsor for its broadcasts.

Other developments pointing to the possibility of revised FCC regulation are the fact that RCA has made available standardized equipment of the 441 line, 30 frames per second, interlaced type, and that in the near future several stations may apply for licenses to experiment with television transmission for program rather than technical development. If additional permits to experiment are granted, they will be in the band from 44 to 86 megacycles, which includes seven television channels of 6,000 kilocycles each, for both video and oral (sight and sound) transmission. Permission to construct a new television broadcast station has been granted Allen B. Dumont Laboratories, Inc., Upper Montclair, N. J.

The FCC has estimated that the cost of a one kilowatt dual (sight and sound) unit would be in the neighborhood of $60,000, and engineers say that receivers capable of picking up the telecasts would have to sell for about $400.

Proving Ground

The World's Fair may well be a proving ground for public interest in television, with NBC and CBS both sending out programs, and with actual demonstration at the Fair. The General Electric Company has four applications pending for new television stations, and Zenith Radio Corporation recently received permission from the FCC to operate an experimental station.

New Jersey Allied Reelect Dollinger; Other Units Meet

Allied of New Jersey concluded its three-day meeting in Atlantic City last Friday with the re-election of Irving Dollinger of Linden as president, and all other officers.

The annual meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania was held at the William Penn hotel, Pittsburgh, Thursday.

Allied and Philadelphia

It was expected that further organized exhibitor activity would result this week in the entrance of Allied into Philadelphia territory where the United Motion Picture Theatre Owners is the only organization at present. Last week 11 exhibitors representing 37 theatres met in Atlantic City to discuss the move. Allied leaders were expected to meet this week.

South Dakota exhibitors are organizing a state unit, probably joining Allied.

Theatre Owners of North and South Carolina will meet in annual convention November 4th and 5th in Charlotte, N. C. The committee in charge includes Roy Smart, F. H. Beddingfield, George W. Parr, E. L. Hearne, W. T. Culpepper and H. E. Wessinger.

The annual convention of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Washington, originally scheduled to have been held Wednesday in Seattle has been postponed until November 18th. The change was made so that the meeting could be held after the MPTOA convention in Oklahoma City.

Other Officers Re-elected

Besides Mr. Dollinger other officers re-elected by Allied of New Jersey were Jacob Unger, Hullside, secretary; David Snapper, New Brunswick, treasurer; Maurice Miller, Passaic, assistant treasurer; Ralph Wilkins, Pitman, and George Gold, Newark, vice-presidents.

Mr. Gold, Harry Cridall and Sidney Samuelson were re-elected to the directorate.

New York Allied, meeting in conjunction with New Jersey Allied at Atlantic City, postponed its election until a later meeting in New York.

Neither of the Allied organizations took any direct action on the questions discussed at the several business sessions except that concerning chance games. New Jersey declared against the games while New York decided in favor of them.

Speakers at the convention included Colonel H. A. Cole, chairman of Allied States' negotiating committee for trade practice reforms; Abram F. Myers, Allied general counsel and Nathan Yamins, Allied president.

Western Pennsylvania

The discussions of the MPTOA of Western Pennsylvania centered around product, the government's anti-trust suit and legislation. Also discussed were Motion Pictures' Great Year campaign and the "Movie Quiz" contest.

The convention, held at the William Penn Hotel, reelected M. A. Rosenberg, president; William L. Brown, vice-president; Joseph Gellman, treasurer; Fred Herrington, secretary, and Dr. C. E. Herman, chairman.

THE KEYSTONE OF YOUR FUTURE

MUSICIANS' PLEA FOR EMPLOYMENT HITS SNAG; MEETING CIRCUITS AGAIN

Leaders of Large Companies Confer with Federation Exec- utives on Increasing Bands; Talks Resume January 9th

The organized motion picture industry and the American Federation of Musicians have reached an impasse in determining to what extent, if any, the industry can meet the Federation's pleas, if not demands, that the circuits make wholesale placements of musicians either in theatre "pits" or on stage, in order to alleviate an unemployment situation described as serious in the union's ranks. Another attempt will be made.

The musicians have in mind a national movement back to music in film houses, and not along Broadway alone. It is a hope they have been nurturing down through the years, ever since sound, with its accompanying musical backgrounds and music and dance, supplanted both organ and orchestra.

Moving from its unsuccessful efforts of 18 months ago to "force" the reemployment of musicians in film theatres, a campaign that was marked by the reputed expenditure of $250,000 to make the public conscious of "live" music by orchestras in theatres as against "tinned music," the American Federation of Musicians last week succeeded in getting the organized industry at least to join in a private round-table conference. This led to a formal get-together Tuesday, in the offices of Pat Casey, industry labor representative, in the old Mecca Building, off Longacre Square, New York. However, "no progress" was reported.

No Results, Says Weber

Declaring the meeting had been as barren of results as were last week's, that he had submitted no proposals, and that they had "explored the field" as in the previous sessions, Joseph N. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, brusquely hurried away at the conclusion of the conference Tuesday morning with producer's representative Pat Casey and major company executives.

The discussions, however, are scheduled to be resumed January 9th, when, it is hoped, specific formulas will be ready.

Mr. Casey referred all queries to Mr. Weber, whom we agreed upon as the one to issue statements.

"I can tell you only that nothing happened," Mr. Weber said, "nothing but talk, talk and talk."

Mr. Casey said that he intended to remain in New York for "some time." Mr. Weber left for a month's vacation in Hollywood.

Present at the meeting were Major Albert Warner; Harry Buckley of United Artists; Austin Keough, of Paramount; Gene Picker, of Columbia; George Schaefer, RKO; Nicholas Schenck, Loew's.

The conferences were an outgrowth of the determination of the musicians to obtain employment by "persuading" affiliated circuits, whose houses at one time used many musicians, to enlarge their bands and install musicians in houses using sound only.

A measure of success was reported in spots, notably in New York City, where the State, Roxy, and Music Hall, all employing fairly large units, bowed to the demands of Local 802. The demands in this case included payment on a seven-day basis of musicians working six days.

QUEBEC STUDIES END OF CHILD FILM BAN

Seeking suggestions on the advisability of amending the law which prohibits children under 16 years of age from attending film theatres, T. J. Coonan, minister without portfolio, said yesterday that the Government realized that films might become a potent factor in child education. Following a private screening of "Boys Town," to which educational leaders, clergy and members of societies interested had been invited, the Minister called for opinions to be sent to Quebec.

The industry attempted to show through the film that pictures suitable for exhibition to children and of an informative and desirable nature could be produced. The private showing, sponsored by Famous Players Canadian Corporation took place at Regal Films, Ltd., headquarters.

Critics of the musicians' union, fearing "unreasonable" requirements, such as the employment of musicians in every house in the country, on the theory that they all once employed musicians, have been answered by Mr. Weber. The musicians' head repeatedly has declared it is not the small houses they seek work in, only those with seating capacities large enough to warrant their use.

There are some 2,500 of these houses, the musicians estimated, and the reemployment of musicians in those theatres would go far toward ending unemployment among them.

Use of musicians in various amusement industries competitive to the motion picture houses, and in the studios, has taken up some of the slack, it was pointed out, but the large number of those who remain unemployed is evidence that the problem must be solved in another manner, according to the federation.

Educational's Meeting Postponed to Nov. 15

The annual stockholders' meeting of Educational Pictures, scheduled for last Friday, was postponed to November 15th, owing to the absence of a quorum. Company directors will be elected at the November meeting, headed by Earle W. Hammons, president, who is expected back from London November 3rd.

Educational and its subsidiary, Grand National, will consolidate their offices about November 15th in the new Associated Press Building in Rockefeller Center, New York.

Counsel for Grand National appeared before Robert P. Reeder, examiner for the Securities and Exchange Commission in Washington this week to urge approval of a petition to withdraw the company's common stock from listing and registration on the New York Curb Exchange in order that the cost of making the reports required by the Commission might be saved. There was no opposition to the proceeding.

Jurisdictional Fight Threatens For Cameramen

A new jurisdictional dispute threatens between warring factions in Hollywood labor ranks. Photographers Local 659, an affiliate of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, has filed a petition with the National Labor Relations Board for designation as collective bargaining agency for all engaged in photographic work at the studios and in allied technical branches. The dispute dates back to 1933 when the American Society of Cameramen during an IATSE strike obtained a ten-year contract which required all first cameramen on major studio lots to be ASC members and which provided for screen credits.

More than 60 studios, major and independent, as well as camera shops and laboratories where cameramen are employed were named in the petition. It was claimed that the ASC did not have a majority among camera workers. The Motion Picture Technicians' Committee of which Jeff Kibre is chairman also was claimed to be not representative of studio employees in the camera workers' classification. Mr. Kibre recently filed company union charges against the IATSE.

Art Directors' Hearings Opened

William R. Ringer, trial examiner for the regional Labor Board in Los Angeles, last week opened hearings on the petition of the Society of Motion Picture Art Directors to be declared the collective bargaining agency for art directors, unit men and assistants. Counsel for the Society introduced membership lists purporting to show a majority of workers belonged to the Society.

Radio Actors Seek Minimum

Basic salary scales for actors appearing in commercially sponsored network programs have been submitted by the negotiating committee of the American Federation of Radio Artists, Equity organization representing radio artists, to the 4 A's, advertising agency trade association. The minimum rates proposed are $21, $31, and $41 for 15-minute, 30-minute and 60-minute shows. The Federation has been negotiating with the advertising agencies for some months and has completed a pact with the networks for artists working in sustaining programs.

Laboratory Agreement Signed

A one-year agreement was signed this week by the Du Art Film Laboratories, New York, with the Motion Picture Laboratory Union, Local 702, settling a strike which was called three months ago. Increases of ten per cent, a closed shop, and a 40-hour week are provided.

FILM'S POSITION UNDER WAGE LAW NOT SET; THEATRES PROBABLY EXEMPT

Exhibition Considered Local in Character; Child Stars Not Affected; Special Groups Provided For Under Certificates

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

With many perplexing problems still unsolved, the new federal Fair Labor Standards Act—the "wages-and-hour" act—became the law of American industry on Monday at 12:01 A. M.

The effect of the law on the motion picture industry has not yet been evaluated. But it is not expected to affect exhibition, which is purely local in character, under the provisions of Section 13(a)(2) exempting employees in retail or service establishments the greater part of whose selling or servicing is in intrastate commerce.

Both production and distribution will come under the new act, but the wage provisions will be of little difficulty, since existing wage scales generally are above those provided for in the law. The hour provision, however, limiting the working week to 44 hours during the first year of the law's application, may require some changes in practice.

Counsel for major companies at a meeting at the MPPDA office in New York Tuesday consolidated leading queries concerning the application of the law which have confused motion picture employers. The queries were to be submitted to Elmer F. Andrews, administrator, in Washington Friday. Included were questions from the studios.

Few Rulings Made

Few definite rulings have yet been issued by the wage-hour administration, which has before it thousands of inquiries as to the exact status of various types of activity in practically every industry. So far, the administration has confined its activities to the development of broad interpretations of provisions affecting industry generally, planning to take up individual problems after enforcement of the law has been started.

To that end, the law provides that during the first year of its operation, the minimum wage for workers in industries whose activities are in or affect interstate commerce shall be 25 cents an hour; during the following six years, the minimum is to be 30 cents an hour and, effective October 24, 1945, the minimum wage in all such industries shall be 40 cents an hour. As to hours, the legislation provides for a maximum working week of 44 hours during the first year, 42 hours the second year and 40 hours thereafter.

Committees for Industries

Industry committees are to be set up, one for each industry or group of related industries, to consider and recommend the highest minimum wages which can be paid without reducing employment during the period before the 40-cent rate becomes effective. If promulgated during the first year of the law, such rates may be anything in excess of 25 cents an hour, but if promulgated during the second or succeeding years they must be in excess of 30 cents an hour. In no instance, however, may the rate exceed 40 cents an hour, nor may industry

CAMERAMAN MADE MOVIE CRITIC

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Too Hot to Handle" deals with the exploits and adventures and daring of newsreel cameramen, and so newspapers, in Boston, at least, are assigning staff photographers to review the picture for the motion picture department.

Jack Malloy, managing editor of the three Hearst Boston newspapers, had Bill Jones, his star news picture reporter, review the production, not so much to check the authenticity of the story, as to trace the cameraman's ability to describe the subject of his profession.

committees take any action with respect to working hours.

While the maximum working week is fixed in the act, employment in excess of the maximum is not prohibited, provided the employee is compensated for such excess at a rate not less than one and a half times the regular rate at which he is employed.

Where the law affects any employees in an industrial establishment, it affects all whose activities are connected with the work of the establishment which has an interstate character. That is, clerical, maintenance and other forces are covered equally with production forces, it being held that their activities are equally necessary to the production of the merchandise.

Production and Distribution

Production and distribution of motion pictures are seen as brought under the act by its application to employees engaged in producing, manufacturing, transporting or in any manner working on goods moving in interstate commerce; employees engaged in any process or occupation necessary to the production of such goods; and employees engaged in interstate transportation, transmission or communication. Exempted from application of the act are executives, administrators and professionals.

As respects the maximum working week, cognizance is taken in the law of the fact that in many industries a flat 40 or 44 hour week may cause hardship. Flexibility, of course, is provided for in seasonal industries, but in other industries, some latitude can be secured under a provision that permits a working week of as long as 56 hours, but not exceeding 12 hours in any one day, without payment of overtime where employees work under an agreement, made as a result of collective bargaining and certified as bona fide by the National Labor Relations Board, which provides on an annual basis for a maximum of 2,000 hours' work in 52 weeks, or on a semi-annual basis which provides for a maximum of 1,000 hours' work in 26 weeks.

Child labor is prohibited—but not that of children employed in the production of motion pictures under the safeguards of working conditions and education applied in the film industry—but learners, apprentices, messengers and handicapped workers are provided for, at wages lower than those required for regular workers, under certificates to be issued by the administrator.

Where an employer fails to comply with the law, any employee may bring suit to recover unpaid minimum wages or unpaid overtime compensation, and employers violating the wage or law requirements are liable for unpaid sums plus an equal amount as damages, court costs, and reasonable attorneys' fees. The Federal Government also may prosecute criminally for violations of the act, by injunction. In addition to the right of employees to recover twice the amount of unpaid minimum or overtime wages, the law provides for a fine of not more than $10,000 or imprisonment for not more than six months for violation of the law. Imprisonment, however, is to be allowed only for second or subsequent offenders.

A very serious feature of the law, exposing employers who may honestly attempt to comply to suits by employees, is the failure to give the administrators' definitions, interpretations and rulings legal standing. Under the law, only the courts have the power of interpretation.

Definitions already issued cover the classification of executive and administrative employees, outside salesmen and professional employees, the first of which will apply to both production and distribution, while the second is of interest to distributors and the third to producers.

Executives and administrative employees are held by these definitions to be "any employee whose primary duty is the management of the establishment, or a customarily recognized department thereof, in which he is employed, and who customarily and regularly directs the work of other employees therein, and who has the authority to hire and fire other employees or whose suggestions and recommendations as to the hiring and firing and as to the advancement and promotion or any other change of status of other employees will be given particular weight, and who customarily and regularly exercise discretionary powers, and who does no substantial amount of work of the same nature as that performed by non-exempt employees of the employer, and who is compensated for his services at not less than $30 (exclusive of board, lodging, or other facilities) for a workweek."

An outside salesman is defined as "any employee who customarily and regularly performs his work away from his employer's place or places of business, who is customarily and regularly engaged in making sales and who does no substantial amount of work of the same nature as that performed by non-exempt employees of the employer."

Professional Employees

Professional employees are those customarily and regularly engaged in work (1) predominantly intellectual and varied in character as opposed to routine mental, manual, mechanical or physical work, and (2) requiring the consistent exercise of discretion and judgment both as to the manner and time or performance, as opposed to work subject to active direction and supervision, and (3) of such a character that the output produced or the result accomplished cannot be standardized in relation to a given period of time, and (4) based upon educational training in a specially organized body of knowledge as distinguished from a general academic education and from an apprenticeship and from training in the performance of routine mental, manual, mechanical or physical processes in accordance with a previously indicated or standardized formula. This definition will cover all professionals in the production branch of the industry, including actors, it is said.

No industry committee will be set up for any branch of the motion picture industry before next year, and if the universal wage is above 40 cents an hour no committee may be needed.

DRIVE EXTENSION VETOED; NEW GAINS; SCHAEFER HITS LOTTERY RULING

Missouri Exhibitors Go Forward with Campaign Despite Opinion of Assistant Attorney General of State

In view of the industry's previous commitment to a four-month period, the national committee of the "Motion Picture's Greatest Year" campaign decided Tuesday against a proposed extension of the drive beyond the existing deadline of New Year's Eve.

"The campaign 'Quiz' is no longer an industry matter alone, but is one in which the public at large is involved," explained a campaign spokesman. "If an extension was to be effected beyond the original date," he added, "the public might think the industry is greedy."

National drive headquarters at Rockefeller Center, New York, received reports this week from the field "proving profits to even the smallest exhibitor" as a result of the campaign, and that box office improvements already noted are but the forerunner of a general boom.

The Governors of 30 states now stand on record in endorsing the campaign, Philip F. LaFollette, Governor of Wisconsin, this week calling for the observance of "Motion Picture Week" in that state from November 13th to 19th. Mayors of 120 cities have acted similarly.

Schaefer Hits Missouri Ruling

Franklin E. Reagan, assistant to attorney-general Roy McKittrick of Missouri, this week handed down an opinion, at the request of prosecuting Attorney Elbert L. Ford, of Dunklin county, declaring the "Movie Quiz" contest to be a lottery in Missouri and, therefore, illegal.

George J. Schaefer, national chairman of the drive, declared the opinion to be "a great astonishment to us."

"It would have been the height of folly," Mr. Schaefer said, "to have started this contest at all if it were a lottery, or without express assurance that it was in accordance with the postal laws that govern lotteries."

"No legal action has been recorded against the contest. If one is brought, it will then be the proper time to defend the contest in every particular. And because of the nation-wide interest in the contest and the thousands of theatre owners who have invested in it, such legal action will be defended with utmost confidence," said Mr. Schaefer.

Mr. Reagan is the same official who, within the month, handed down an opinion declaring that persons convicted of felonies in other states, thereby forfeiting their rights as citizens and voters, were entitled to be registered as voters in Missouri.

Mr. Reagan said one "quiz" consideration is the admission price the theatre patrons pays to make it possible for him to participate in the contest, and that the chance is in the uncontrolled discretion of the judges to pick the winners and the prize cannot be questioned because it has been advertised from coast to coast.

The ruling was met by Missouri exhibitors with the announcement that they will go forward with the contest, showing the "quiz" pictures and advertising them and also advertising with trailers their decision until such time as a test case has been instituted for violation of the lottery statutes and the opinion of the

Greatest Year Campaign Short Tells Plain Story of Films

by WILLIAM R. WEAVER
Hollywood Editor

"The World Is Ours," 18 minute short subject produced for free distribution to all theatres participating in Motion Pictures' Greatest Year campaign, is a straightforward pictorial substantiation of the truism proclaimed by the slogan, "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment," and may well turn out to be the most permanently profitable factor of the drive.

Previewed for the press without ostentation before a small paying turnout at the Westwood Village theatre on a fog drenched Tuesday night. The film had its completely surprised observers at tense and pleased attention after the first two or three minutes and elicited frequently audible approval from then on. It is easily the most effective telling and selling the plain story of the motion picture has ever had.

Produced by Frank Whitbeck of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer at that studio with an acting cast composed of Samuel S. Hinds, Dorothy Peterson, Charley Grapewin, Anne Shirley and Johnny Walsh, who play a Middletown family that visits Hollywood, the film works in shots of just about every star who's been named on a marquee in the last two years. The screen play and story by Lou Harris and Herman Hoffman, directed by Basil Wrangel, puts much of the essentially informative dialogue into the mouths of the principals and Truman Bradley supplies more as commentator.

Theatre and studio departments and operations are interestingly revealed and the movie dollar is graphically sliced to show that 65 cents of it remains in the town where it is spent while 25 cents goes to Hollywood and the remainder pays for national advertising and publicity. The industry is rated at two billion dollars and ranked fourth behind steel, automobiles and agriculture.

As propaganda for, of and by the screen the film is sound, sane and unquestionably potent. As an attraction to bring customers into the theatre it appears to have much more of what it takes than enough to repay with profit the exhibitor investment in the Greatest Year drive.

The film makes no direct reference to the Movie Quiz Contest.

"The World Is Ours" will have the widest domestic distribution of any picture ever released. More than 1,000 prints will be issued for distribution in 17,000 theatres. A print has been shipped to the White House for viewing by President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The four page press book, tabloid size, prepared by campaign headquarters for the subject is now available at accessory exchanges to all exhibitors seeking to exploit the picture. The book contains exploitation, publicity and advertisement sections.

attorney-general's office has been sustained by a court and jury.

Legal action will be taken against magazines and radio broadcasters giving purportedly correct answers to the "Movie Quiz," with action taking the form of a complaint made to the Postal authorities if any of the answers are found to be wrong. If these public answer-givers do not use the mails, a list of the incorrect answers made by them will be published at the end of the quiz, and other action will be taken, according to Jack Todd, vice-president of Radio and Publications Contest Company, which is handling the mechanics of the Quiz.

Schaefer on Extension Ruling

Following a meeting called Tuesday for the purpose, Mr. Schaefer, as drive chairman, issued the following statement on the decision to keep the drive within the present time limit:

"When the 'Movie Quiz' contest was first devised, careful thought was given to the length of time during which it was to run. The period of four months, from September 1st to December 31st, was advisedly chosen, with the responsibility of maintaining public interest as a major consideration.

"In view of the fact that it has been publicly stated that the contest is to end on December 31st, the executive committee feels that it will not be keeping faith with the public to extend the contest beyond that date.

"The question has been submitted also to the regional chairmen of the industry campaign, with a view to ascertaining the opinion in the field. The majority opinion was against extending the time.

"In deciding against the extension, the committee took particular cognizance of the distribution of more than 30,000,000 booklets. These booklets all contain the specific statement that the contest will come to an end December 31st. To keep faith with these millions of patrons throughout the country, the industry, we feel, must adhere strictly to its original commitment."

A chart based on the additional receipts at the box office because of the industry drive, and indicating that any exhibitor could prove profit to himself in the "Movie Quiz" contest if he attracted as little as 20 additional patrons to see the minimum 25 quiz pictures, was issued by Harold B. Franklin, from drive headquarters.

The chart is designed to be of use to the exhibitor in his final reckoning of the drive's harvest in his particular theatre. It is designed also to establish the fact that the exhibitor can cover the amount of his pledge with a minimum of effort and on a surprisingly low estimate of the returns, according to Mr. Franklin.

Based on an estimate of from 20 to 100 patrons attracted to theatres with 300 to 1,000 seating capacity, and with prices ranging from 15 to 35 cents, the chart, he said, proves that additional receipts will rise from $75 to $875, computed on the assumption that the patrons will see only 25 of the 94 quiz pictures. On the other hand, pledge fees in the same theatres would only run from $30 to $100 tops, indicating that additional receipts would cover pledge fees and the cost of accessories, and leave a clear and substantial profit, continued Mr. Franklin.

A bulletin accompanying the chart, which is being sent out to all exhibitors, points out, in addition, the lasting good to the whole industry as a result of the national campaign, the favorable press, the acquired good will of the community, and the awakened interest on the part of the public in the entertainment values of motion pictures, as indirect benefits to the exhibitor, supplementing and enhancing his box-office returns from the Movie Quiz contest.

Schaefer Cites Gains

Pointing to a substantial increase in box-office receipts all over the country since the inception of the campaign, Mr. Schaefer, on Monday laid claim for the motion picture industry as forerunner in the march towards general business improvement.

"Our campaign is showing results at the box-office, and will show more. Unquestionably an exceptionally high grade of pictures is largely responsible for the improvement, but, doubtless, too, our campaign to call attention to this significantly good product had much to do with bringing people into the theatre.

"As our business improves, so will other businesses, for we are vitally linked with the general economy. Crowded theatres mean crowded stores; crowded stores mean factories working full blast."

Gulick Returns to Old Post

Paul Gulick, coordinator of the industry campaign, will resign that post, effective November 1, to return to his regular duties with Earl Newsom Company, public relations organization, from which he had been borrowed for the campaign.

It was stated at the time that Mr. Gulick was obtained for the campaign that his tenure would end with the fulfillment of his primary task of coordinating the various committee functions, and the establishment of organization at headquarters and in the field.

Headquarters of the drive will be maintained at its present address, with a continuing staff to carry out the second half of its program, under the direction of Harold B. Franklin. Al Selig, who was connected with the drive during the first half of the campaign, in promotional work in the field, returned for publicity and exploitation duties, beginning last Monday.

George W. Trendle, Detroit exhibitor, has agreed to serve as head of the regional committee in Detroit to succeed H. M. Richey, who resigned following his departure from the post of public relations head of Co-operative Theatres of Michigan last week.

More than 100 orchestra leaders will devote

CANADIAN INDUSTRY CONTRIBUTES $53,000

The Canadian National Committee of the Greatest Year drive reports that $53,000 has been contributed from Canadian sources to date. Half of this sum has been received from circuits and individual houses, the remainder from the Canadian film distributors.

Long-threatened action on the part of exhibitors presenting features other than Hollywood productions for a separate competition for prizes has taken form in the organizing of a "British Empire Quiz Contest" which is patterned along the lines of the Movie Quiz of Motion Pictures' Greatest Year.

one of their programs, during the celebration nationally of "Music Week" for Motion Pictures' Greatest Year, to a series of song hits from—or inspired by—past and current films. "Music Week" begins October 31st, with the endorsement of ASCAP, and under the sponsorship of a committee of leading music publishers, dealers, conductors and composers.

One of the features of the "Week" will be a program of "A Cavalcade of Motion Picture Music."

Canada's "Go-To-the-Movies Week," highlight of the Greatest Year Campaign, got under way October 22 with a street parade over a 20-mile route in Toronto with 17 floats, four bands, girls and scores of decorated automobiles in the motorized column which was organized by the national publicity and radio committee, of which Dewey D. Bloom, Toronto, is chairman.

Around the city 30 24-sheets imprinted with "Toronto Welcomes Motion Pictures' Greatest Year—Let's Go!" were erected, while cotton streamers with similar announcements were strung across main thoroughfares.

Washington Patrons Hiss Campaign Announcements

House managers in Washington, D. C., are reporting that in the last few weeks there has been hissing from the customers when an announcement of the "M. P. A. Y. B. E." contest is flashed on the screen. The development is reported from theatres throughout the city and at practically every performance.

Patrons supply varied answers. Some say they are "sick of all that advertising stuff—we get too much of it on the radio." Others express resentment that they are forced to sit through the same announcement week after week.

Mrs. Roosevelt Finds Films Better

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said in Chicago this week that films have shown great improvement during the past year and are continuing to do so. "At the White House we find them excellent entertainment and relaxation," she said. Mrs. Roosevelt expressed the belief that the current film drive is an excellent way of informing people what the screen has to offer.

Balaban Lauds Film Campaign

Barney Balaban, president of Paramount, on his arrival in Hollywood from New York last Friday for studio conferences said that the "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment" campaign is leading the film industry into the biggest year in its history.

"Optimism throughout the nation is already reflected in a definite upswing in business," Mr. Balaban said, "and the current motion picture industry campaign is showing excellent returns in box office receipts. Newspaper advertising has played no small part in the success of this campaign."

Stanton Griffis, who accompanied Mr. Balaban to the coast, told the Wall St. Journal that Paramount's cash position is excellent and further progress is being made in the company's efforts towards more economical operation. Mr. Griffis is chairman of the executive committee.

Paramount officials maintain, the Journal reported, that the film industry in general must institute further cuts in production overhead costs and produce better pictures if it is to operate profitably and offset the drop in returns from sales of films abroad.

In addition, the foreign exchange currency situation is aggravating business abroad, hampered further by more restrictions placed upon foreign film entries by the Italian government and loss of markets in Spain and the Orient, the Journal said.

The Paramount picture "If I Were King" set a new four-week record-breaking figure at the New York Paramount theatre when the film completed its run with a total of $35,000 for the fourth week and a grand total of $205,000 on the entire engagement. Receipts for the first three weeks were $67,000, $57,000 and $46,000. Approximately 428,000 admissions were recorded.

New Zealand Executive Praises Film Campaign

Allyn Grant, of New Zealand, director of British Empire Films, Ltd., executive manager of J. C. Williamson Pictures Corporation, director of New Zealand Theatres, Ltd., personal representative of John Maxwell in New Zealand, and "right hand man" of Jack Mason, veteran Australian film figure, is in Hollywood to confer with Monogram and Republic executives over new product.

"I've watched with great interest the Motion Pictures Greatest Year campaign, and I see healthy signs of its success," said Mr. Grant. "But in New Zealand we don't need any such drive. Approximately 80 to 90 per cent of New Zealand entertainment is motion pictures. We don't have any great competition from other forms of entertainment."

Mr. Grant's six months trip has taken him from New Zealand to England, New York and Hollywood. He sailed Wednesday for New Zealand.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Mills Grind Fast

The mills of Hollywood's production gods are grinding with rapidity, as was promised. Seven studios combined to start 11 pictures last week. Nine companies were responsible for 12 completed films. About half of both the new and old work concerns films of more than ordinary exhibitor and patron importance.

Columbia started three productions. Fay Wray will return to the screen in "Spy Ring," a subject which daily is attaining peculiar topical significance. Her supporting company will include Ralph Bellamy, Warren Hull, Regis Toomey, Walter Kingsford, Lorna Grey and Ann Doran. A newcomer from the stage, James Craig, will make his screen debut in "Life is Cheap," a melodramatic romance. Betty Furness, Key Luke, Dick Curtis, Joseph Downing, Lotus Liu and Dorothy Gullivan will be seen with him. The team of Charles Starrett and Iris Meredith again will function in "Trail of the Tumbleweed." Bob Nolan, Dick Curtis, Eddy Cobb, Art Mix and Ed Le Saint are in the support.

"Idiot's Delight" Starts

MGM and RKO-Radio each started two pictures. Both the MGM starters come within the big picture classification. Clark Gable and Norma Shearer will be the stars of the screen version of Robert E. Sherwood's "Idiot's Delight." Hedy Lamarr, Spencer Tracy, Walter Pidgeon and Fanny Brice will be seen in "A New York Cinderella," which Josef von Sternberg is directing.

Looming important on the RKO-Radio schedule is "Pacific Liner," in which Victor McLaglen, Chester Morris, Wendy Barrie and Robert Livingston will be featured. John Barrymore, Peter Holden, Virginia Weidler, Donald MacBride, Clarence Kolb, Luis Alberni, J. M. Kerrigan and Granville Bates will be seen in "The Great Man Votes."

"Bloom on the Sage" went into work at Republic. The cast includes Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Jean Rouveral, Frank Darien, Esther Muir, Joe Frisco, Edward Raquello, Margaret Armstrong, Henry Holman and Kermit Maynard.

For Monogram distribution Ed Finney started "Little Tenderfoot," in which Tex Ritter will be the star. Bob Baker and Fay Shannon are the principals in Universal's "Ghost Town Riders."

Paramount's new activity and one of the few pictures going on the lot is "Persons in Hiding." Among others it will present Patricia Morris, Lynne Overman, William Henry and Anthony Quinn.

Another "Hardy"

With MGM completing three and Paramount two, the remainder of the list of completed pictures is credited to seven separate studios. As MGM's two starting pictures were considered of more than ordinary importance on the lot, so are the three which finished. An undoubted "natural" is "Out West with the Hardys," of the "Judge Hardy" series in which will be seen Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Ann Rutherford, Fay Holden, Virginia Weidler, Cecilia Parker, Ralph Morgan, Nana Bryant, Sara Haden and Gordon Jones. Luise Rainer and Alan Marshall are the stars of "Dramatic School," with Anthony Wayne, Paulette Goddard, Henry Stephensan, Gale Sondergaard, Virginia Grey, Ann Rutherford, Carol Parker and Marie Blake among the featured support players. "The Shining Hour" will present Joan Crawford, Melvyn Douglas, Fay Bainter, Robert Young, Margaret Sullivan, Frank Albertson, Allyn Joslyn, Harry Barris and Hattie McDaniel.

One of the Paramount's completed features, "Say It in French," is a sophisticated comedy romance. It will have Ray Milland, Olympe Bradna, Irene Hervey, Janet Beecher, Evelyn Keyes, Walter Kingsford, Erik Rhodes, Holmes Herbert, Gertrude Sutton, Forbes Murray and Billy Daniels. "Tom Sawyer, Detective," will feature Donald O'Connor, Billy Cook, Porter Hall, Philip Warren, Janet Walder, Clara Blandick, Elisabeth Risdon, Edward Pawley, Hattie McDaniel, Oscar Smith, William Haade, Si Jenks, Harry Worth and Stanley Price.

"Peck's Bad Boy"

For RKO-Radio release, Sol Lesser finished "Peck's Bad Boy at the Circus." Tommy Kelly and Ann Gillis are the stars, as they were in the last Mark Twain story produced. The support lists Edgar Kennedy, Benita Hume, Spanky MacFarland, Grant Mitchell, Nana Bryant, William Demarest, Wade Boteler, Harry Stubbs, Fay Helm and Mickey Rentschler.

Monogram completed "Gang Bullets." It will present Robert Kent, Anne Nagel, Charles Trowbridge, Morgan Wallace, J. Farrell MacDonald, Arthur Loft and Benny Bartlett.

The featured players in Universal's "West Side Miracle" are Edmund Lowe, Dick Foran, Helen Mack and Paul Hurst.

Finish Second "Topper"

In "Topper Takes a Trip," Hal Roach has as featured cast Constance Bennett, Roland Young, Billie Burke, Alan Mowbray, Verree Teasdale, Franklin Pangborn, Alexander D'Arcy, Paul Hurst, Terry Kilbury, Armand Kaliz, Eddy Conrad, Spencer Charters, Irving Pichel and Georges Renavent.

John Garfield, Gloria Dickson, May Robson, Claude Rains and the "Dead-End-Crime School" kids are the principals in "They Made Me a Criminal," Warner Brothers.

"Santa Fe Stampede," a member of Republic's "Three Mesquiteers" series, will present John Wayne, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune, June Martell, William Farnum, LeRoy Mason and Ferris Taylor.

Active Backgrounds

About three years ago, Tay Garnett, who then had the story idea of "Trade Winds" in mind and was convinced that the stock library background shots in use were both stale and overdone, made a trip around the world. He shot about 150,000 feet of new backgrounds of foreign locales and peoples.

When it came time to make "Trade Winds," for which 79 sets were built, Mr. Garnett took 4,500 feet of those shots to be used as animated backgrounds for 24 of these sets. Walter Wanger, producer, and Mr. Garnett, writer-director, are of the opinion the process was never so uniquely employed.

Writers

Over at Paramount Harold Lamb, novelist and short story writer, C. Gardner Sullivan, Jeannie Macpherson and Jesse Lasky, Jr., are putting the finishing touches on Cecil B. DeMille's "Union Pacific." Playwright Preston Sturges, who wrote the script of "If I Were King," is now doing the screen play of "Lady Eve." Talbot Jennings has been assigned to write the story for "Knights of the Round Table." Jonathan Latimer, mystery story writer, and Martin Mooney, ace newspaper man, are collaborating on the spy story, "Men Without a Country." Novelist Charles G. Booth, who wrote "The General Died at Dawn," is adapting his own book, "Caviar for His Excellency," which will be screened under the title "The World's Applause." Gilbert Gabriel, author and critic, is working with Robert Thoren on "Hotel Imperial." Claude Binyon is completing the script of "Invitation to Happiness," and Virginia Van Upp has finished "Cafe Society." Robert Carson is at work on "The Light That Failed"; Morrie Ryskind on "Man about Town"; Ken Englund on "Midnight," and short story writer Frederick Hazlett Brennan is doing "The Senator's Husband."

David O. Selznick has imported Richard Baker, English novelist, who, according to Hugh Walpole, is attaining special standing in English letters, to write the original story for "Titanic." Sidney Howard still is working on "Gone with the Wind."

At Warners, Warren Duff, Wally Kine and Jerome Odlum are collaborating on the final phases of "Oklahoma Kid." John Houston, son of the actor Walter, Aneas MacKenzie and Aben Finkle are writing "Juarez," which will feature Paul Muni and Bette Davis. MacKenzie and Robert Buckner have been teamed to do "Dodge City" and Crane Wilbur is occupied with "Hell's Kitchen," which will feature the "Dead End" kids.

Walter Wanger Productions has Dudley Nichols working on "Stage Coach," while Gene Towne and Graham Baker are occupied with the preparation of "The Illusionist."

George O'Neil, playwright, has been assigned by RKO-Radio to "The Castles," in which Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers will be seen. Ernest Pagano and Dalton Trumbo are doing "The Flying Irishman," which will feature "Wrong Way" Corrigan. Adele Commandini is doing the script for "Little Orvie," which will team Bob Burns and Peter Holden. John Twist was assigned to "Pacific Liner."

At Twentieth Century-Fox Philip Dunne and Julien Josephson are doing the screen version of Louis Bromfield's book, "The Rains Came." Frank Wead is keeping ahead of the shooting schedule on "Tailspin," and so are Harry Tugent, Curtis Kenyon and Art Arthur on "Thanks for Everything."

The literary content of "Three Smart Girls Grow Up," Universal, is assuming form through the labors of Bruce Manning and Felix Jackson. "Rio," next vehicle for Danielle Darrieux, is in the hands of Stephen Morehouse Avery and Frank Partos. A lot of talent is going into "You Can't Cheat An Honest Man." George Marion, Jr., is doing the screen play. In addition to writing the original, W. C. Fields is collaborating with Edgar Bergen on special comedy sequences. Leonard Spigelgass has completed the original story of Bing Crosby's "Three Is Company."

PARAMOUNT, 20th-FOX, UA HOSTS AT PARTIES

New Movietone Studio Opened; Stars Entertained; "Men with Wings" Launched in New York

The social whirl of New York's motion picture community on Tuesday resembled Hollywood's, hitting a new all-time high with three first-class functions held within four hours in the late afternoon.

Cocktails started at three, Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation being host to 150 motion picture home office and sound equipment executives and the press on the occasion of the opening of Movietone Studios, a new addition to Manhattan's production facilities, at 460 West 54th Street, one block south of the company's main offices. (Photo on page 12.) It will house theatrical, non-theatrical and advertising film production, and some Fox filming.

What with Eastern Service Studios—the old Paramount lot, across the East River, in Astoria, enjoying rentals from a new eastern production "spurt," Fox intends leasing space in its new plant, offering both Western Electric Mirrorphonic and RCA High Fidelity recording systems; four stages occupying 15,000 square feet, adaptable, so they say, to any kind of production (including color); air conditioning; permanent staff of cameramen, sound engineers, scenic artists, carpenters, electricians, painters, grips, etc.; dark rooms, stock room, machine, carpenter and electrical shops; new-model camera units, velocitators and accessories; lighting for any type of production; casting service; five makeup rooms; dressing rooms for all stages; cutting rooms and the essentials for titles from type to cameras; four Western Electric and RCA Photophone projection rooms; staff photographer for stills; cost estimates and accounting service; dark room and printer; studio offices—and a swimming pool with underwater camera compartment.

United Artists Pours

Taking advantage of the presence in town of a large gathering of first-line players who of late have appeared in its productions, United Artists next poured, principally for the press, starting at five P. M., in the swank surroundings of the Club Lounge of Mr. Rockefeller's Rainbow Room on the 67th floor of the RCA Building—stars of the day being Ann Sothern, because of her work in "Trade Winds"; Roland Young, for "The Young in Heart" and "Topper Takes a Trip"; Patsy Kelly, for "There Goes My Heart" and "The Cowboy and the Lady"; Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., "The Young in Heart," and Raymond Massey. (Photo on page 11.)

The big event of the day was the dinner of Paramount Pictures for and in behalf of its aviation story on "Men With Wings" (reviewed on page 40, photo on page 11.)

Two hundred outstanding figures in aviation were guests at the Astor Hotel at the awarding of "Men With Wings" medals to the three airmen who distinguished themselves in the October 18th passenger plane crash near Montgomery, Ala. The three airmen, Capt. David Hisson, Pilot Clyde R. Russell and Flight Steward Frank Gibbs, all of Eastern Airlines, received medals from Joseph V. Connelly, Hearst newspaper executive, who was a passenger aboard the plane.

At 10:30 p. m., the guests adjourned to the Paramount theatre in Times Square, to attend a special premiere of "Men With Wings."

Guests of honor invited to the dinner also included Louise Campbell, star of the picture; William A. Wellman, producer-director; Austin C. Keough, vice-president and secretary of Paramount; Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president of Paramount, and Colonel Charles Wayne Kerwood, president of the Association of Men With Wings.

Preceding the dinner, Robert Hague, Standard Oil vice-president and lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve, entertained at a cocktail party at the Ritz Towers. At this gathering Emil Kropf, German stunt pilot, was presented with a medal by the International League of Aviators in recognition of his aviation achievements. The presentation was made by Miss Campbell and Colonel Kerwood.

Mr. Hague was presented with a diploma by the International League of Aviators bearing the signatures of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and other distinguished aviators.

Dedication of Will Rogers Memorial on November 4th

The dedication of the Will Rogers Memorial at Claremore, Okla., has been set for November 4th following a meeting of the memorial commission with Governor Marland of Oklahoma. Governor Marland has invited John Nance Garner, vice-president of the United States, and Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, as speakers. Invitations are also being sent to all Hollywood studios to send a representative to the dedication.

New March of Time

The first pictures taken inside France's Maginot Line were released Thursday as the single subject to which the March of Time devotes its entire new issue. The film has been entitled "Inside the Maginot Line." The producers call it a "scoop." A trailer has been made to introduce the subject.

Milliken Addresses Teachers

The educational values of motion pictures was the subject of an address Friday by Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors, before the Visual Education section of the North-eastern Ohio Teachers Association convention in Cleveland.

Baseball Trophy Presented

Consolidated Film Industries' baseball team, winner of the motion picture baseball league tournament, received the Quigley Publications' trophy at a dinner Thursday evening at Little Ferry, N. J. The trophy was presented by James P. Cunningham of MOTION PICTURE HERALD and received by Harry Marcus of Consolidated.

Gillham to Studio

Robert Gillham, Paramount director of advertising and publicity, is joining other home office executives at the company's studio for conferences on new product.

Decisions Pend On Patent and Sound Appeals

by FRANCIS L. BURT

in Washington

A decision in the long controversy between the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, Western Electric and Electrical Research Products and General Talking Pictures Corporation, over charges of patent infringement by General in the use, in theatre sound equipment, of amplifiers produced under telephone company patents and restricted by notice to use in radio reception, may be handed down by the Supreme Court when it next meets, on November 7th.

Argument was heard by the court last week for the second time, with the Federal Government intervening as a "friend of the court."

The court also may hand down an opinion in the appeal of Texas Consolidated Theatres versus S. H. Pittman, involving the right of a circuit court of appeals to render a decision after the parties to a damage suit have reached a compromise and filed a stipulation, which decision is not in conformity with the compromise agreement. The case was scheduled to be argued before the court last week but, by agreement between counsel, was submitted for decision on the basis of briefs already filed.

The General Talking Pictures case, while merely a suit between private parties, "involves a question of great public importance," it was held by the Department of Justice in filing its brief.

It was pointed out that the supreme court never has held that a patent owner may restrict the public to using his invention in a particular industrial field but that, on the contrary, in a variety of analogous situations the court has struck down attempts to use the patent privileges to accomplish restraints of trade.

"If existing laws," it was pointed out, "permit the public to be restricted in the use which may be made of patented articles once they are marketed, then the existing statutes are not in this respect in accord with the public interests, and they should be changed. The ultimate question is purely one of public policy, and that is for the decision of Congress. The initial step is that of construction of the existing laws, and that is the issue in this present law suit."

Counsel for the respondents said the Department of Justice had indicated its approval of the licensing agreements.

"Most of the Government's brief in this case is an attack on the telephone company because it is a party to the cross licensing agreement," it was charged by Merrell E. Clark, of counsel for the respondents. "The Government is seeking to use this case to establish a new rule of law by saying that it is illegal for a patentee to license for one use and not for another."

Contending that the act of selling a patented article exhausts the monopoly granted a patent holder by the patent laws, Samuel E. Darby, jr., counsel for General Talking Pictures, argued that a patentee has no right to restrict use after sale, citing previous decisions of the court to that effect.

The patents case originally came before the court last term, and in May a decision was rendered holding that General Talking Pictures Corporation had infringed the patents held by the respondents. Only six of the nine justices participated in that decision and one, Hugo L. Black, dissented. The case came before the court a second time on a petition by General Talking Pictures for a rehearing.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Topper Takes a Trip

(UA - Hal Roach)

Comedy

The release of "Topper" in 1937 was a mid-summer entertainment and commercial sensation. Hal Roach anticipates that "Topper Takes a Trip," a ghostly sequel to the first ghost story, will attain similar results. Except for "Mr. Kerby," Cary Grant, who does not appear in the story, the principal cast, Constance Bennett, Roland Young, Billie Burke and Alan Mowbray, will be seen again. New personalities who will be seen in the followup story include Verree Teasdale, Franklin Pangborn, Alexander D'Arcy, Paul Hurst, Terry Kilburn, the eight-year-old who made a hit in MGM's "Lord Jeff"; Armand Kaliz, Eddy Conrad, Spencer Charters, Irving Pichel and Georges Renavent.

The new "Topper" is based on a Thorne Smith story idea, as was its predecessor. The same team of screen playwrights, Jack Jevne and Eddy Moran, who made the adaptation of the original production, did the same job for this. Norman Z. McLeod again is the director. Apparitions got "Mr. Topper" into plenty of trouble in the first picture. In the attempt to do a good deed that will take her out of the spirit world, "Mrs. Kerby" herein will attempt to get "Topper" out of trouble. Naturally, remembering his former experiences, the hero wants nothing to do with the ghost and her ghostly dog, "Mr. Atlas."

The followup is being made in the same technique that was used so successfully in "Topper."

Release date: To be determined.

Gang Bullets

(Monogram)

Melodrama

A boss racketeer has taken over a small town. Then anonymous letters, connecting the district attorney and the racketeer, begin to appear in the local newspaper. Both are put on trial and convicted. Then, when the racketeer plots to escape, the convicted district attorney hands his assistant a note signed with the same name as those that earlier appeared. It reveals that the prosecutor had joined forces with the criminal merely to obtain evidence. A romantic counterpart concerns the district attorney's aide and his daughter.

Being produced for Monogram distribution by E. B. Derr, the story used is an original by John T. Neville, one of Hollywood's most prolific writers. It is being directed by Lambert Hillyer, whose recent credits include "My Old Kentucky Home" for Crescent and "Extortion" and "Forgotten Women" for Columbia.

Charles Trowbridge and Morgan Wallace will be district attorney and racketeer. Robert Kent, seen in many Universal pictures, and Anne Nagel, last in "The Circus Comes to Town," not only share the story's romantic love interest but are instrumental in resolving its melodrama.

The supporting cast lists J. Farrell MacDonald, John T. Murray, Arthur Loft, John Merton, Donald Kerr, Carleton Young, Isabell Lamalle and Benny Bartlett.

Release date: To be determined.

West Side Miracle

(Universal)

Melodrama and Romance

This picture will tell a vivid melodramatic story and detail the ramifications of a love triangle. In the first phase, it will reenact some of the more vicious sides of prize fighting. Gamblers, crooked fighters and gangsters are the centers of this segment. On the other hand it will relate the love story of a nurse who saved a fighter's life after he has been brutally beaten.

The story was written by Quentin Reynolds, sports editor of Collier's magazine, who has several screen stories to his credit. The screen play was written by Tom Lennon, who like Reynolds is a newspaper man and was a contributor to "The Toast of New York," "The Man Who Found Himself" and "Criminal Lawyer." Direction was assigned to Arthur Lubin, maker of "Prison Break" and "Midnight Intruder" for Universal, and Warner's "The Beloved Brat."

"West Side Miracle" will feature Edmund Lowe in his first domestic screen appearance since Mae West's "Every Day's a Holiday"; Helen Mack, presently in "I Stand Accused," Republic, and Dick Foran, long with Warner Bros. and recently seen in "Four Daughters," "Boy Meets Girl" and "Cowboy from Brooklyn." Important members of the supporting cast are Paul Hurst, Leon Ames, Horace McMahon and David Oliver.

Release date: To be determined.

Thanks for Everything

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Comedy

Producer Harry Joe Brown and director William A. Seiter have enlisted the services of a notable group of film comedians. Included as principals are Adolphe Menjou, last in "A Letter of Introduction," Jack Oakie, now in "Annabel Takes a Tour," Jack Haley, Tony Martin, Binnie Barnes, George Barbier, Paul Hurst and Herman Bing. The only person not playing a comedy role is Arleen Whelan, who made her screen debut in "Kidnapped," which was followed by an appearance in "Gateway."

The theme suggests a topical advertising campaign. A high pressure advertising agency conducts a contest to find a 100 per cent average man. A country yokel wins it, also the $25,000 prize. Hoodwinked out of his winnings, the agency makes him a guinea pig upon whom it conducts all sorts of experiments and surveys, selling the results to companies wishing advance reactions as to the merits and worths of their products. When it comes down to finding out how America would feel about participating in a European war, theme and action take dizzy turns. In the climax the 100 per cent average man gives a true reaction of his fellow countrymen's sentiments and is paid off with more than five times what he originally won.

Coming within that style of pictures that began with "Twentieth Century" and has its latest demonstration in "The Mad Miss Manton," the story disregards anything that might be sane and sensible. Several songs composed by Mack Gordon and Harry Revel will be featured.

Release date: To be determined.

Wreckage

(Columbia-Darmour)

Topical Exposé

Jack Holt's latest picture, "Outside the law," featured him in a brand new characterization. In his forthcoming Larry Darmour production, "Wreckage," he will also be the central figure in a story that seems to abound in novelty.

His cosmetic firm wrecked by a malicious "whispering campaign" inspired by rivals, the owner adapts the same methods to ruin their firm. Meanwhile the feminine owner of the firm which he has ruined, has been working in his office and has gathered evidence which proves him and his whispering campaigns responsible for disaster brought to still another business.

Holt's principal supports will be Dolores Costello, Addison Richards, Joseph Crehan, Donald Briggs, Pert Kelton and Holmes Herbert. Minor roles have been assigned Carol Wayne, Dorothy Granger, Harry Harvey, Harry Hayden, Forrest Taylor, Edward Gargan, Ben Weldon, Lee Phelps and Tommy Bupp.

The story is based on an original screen play prepared by Gordon Rigby and Tom Kilpatrick. Lewis D. Collins, who has directed many of Holt's most recent films, will have charge.

Release date: To be determined.

The Pure in Mind

(RKO Radio)

Melodrama

The title undoubtedly will be changed. Thematically the story concerns a group of wild boys of the road, who, when they are captured, are delivered into the virtual slavery of a southern turpentine camp. Besides picturing the experiences, dramas, tragedies and romances which they meet there, the film also shows how they escape from brutality and are regenerated under the protection of a humane judge in an enlightened corrective institution.

Using a delicate subject, RKO-Radio and producer-director P. J. Wolfson are also flying in the face of precedent by entrusting most of the important parts in the piece to unknown youngsters. Some are from the New York stage, others from radio broadcasting. The juvenile lead has had no previous professional acting experience. The hero is Roger Daniel, a fourteen year old boy. The heroine is Anne Shirley, last seen in "A Man to Remember" and "Mother Carey's Chickens." The boys are James McCallion, Walter Ward, Charles Powers, John Fitzgerald, Frank Malo, who was in "Boys Town," Paul White and Walter Tetley.

Among the players of some measure of screen prominence are Charles Lane, Alan Baxter, Fred Kohler, Sr., Arthur Hohl and Olin Howland.

The story is an original screen play by Albert Bein. Known best as a writer, Wolfson has prepared the screen plays for "Vivacious Lady," "Shall We Dance," "Sea Devils" and "The Bride Walks Out." He produced "The Mad Miss Manton." This is his first attempt at directing.

Release date: To be determined.

Men with Wings

(Paramount)

Aviation Spectacle

Paramount, after exhaustive research, went to enormous labor and considerable expense and spent much time on the production of "Men with Wings," a romantic history of aviation and the personal story of two men and a woman.

As is sometimes the case when a story pursues a dual theme narrated against a single but advancing historical background, the screen version is episodic. When "Men with Wings" traces the story of the conquest of the air from the short but epochal hop of the Wright Brothers in 1903, interpolating briefly in calendar mode the trail blazing feats of famous flights and flyers, the mechanical treatment is both spectacular and picturesque.

There is considerable exciting material of entertainment and exploitation value in these phases.

Besides executives, stars and officials, from aviation companies and from Washington, the audience included pilots who worked on the picture, including Frank Clarke, Garland Lincoln, Tex Rankin, Al Lary, Paul Mantz, Howard Batt and Earl Gordon. All joined in autographing a miniature replica of the Wright Brothers' biplane, the first heavier-than-air craft to carry man aloft. [A "Men with Wings" dinner was held in New York Tuesday. See page 38.]

The fictional counterpart of the factual content is a love story. It is the story, on one side, of a love that was won, appreciated yet deserted, to end tragically when the love of a greater adventure could not be denied. On the other hand, it is a story of a love that always was.

From the time that "Men with Wings" was first considered as a picture, Paramount busied itself with availing itself of any exploitation device that would concentrate public attention on the undertaking. As minds are being made up as to how best to sell it in definite localities, there are many things to be considered. There have been other aviation pictures, generally commercially successful. Then there is the matter of names. "Men with Wings" offers Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland and Louise Campbell as its leading personalities. The supporting cast includes Walter Abel, Kitty Kelly, Virginia

Weidler, Donald O'Connor, Billy Cooke, James Burke and Willard Robertson, who appear briefly, and Andy Devine, Porter Hall and Lynne Overman, who go through practically the whole story with the principals. The director, William Wellman, made one of the first important aviation pictures, "Wings." He also made "Nothing Sacred" and "A Star Is Born."

The picture was photographed in natural color. This treatment has been so deftly applied, as a part of production value, that from the standpoint of sensationalism it may go unnoticed.

Then there is the matter of aviation itself, a subject in which the public is interested, fearfully, approvingly or otherwise. The topicalness of "Men with Wings" may depend upon a new development in flying that has occurred the day the show opens in any theatre.

Previewed in the Village Theatre, Westwood, Cal. There was quite a bit of "lights, camera, action" in the forecourt, which might be anticipated as indicative of a special trailer. The folks up in back, "nigger heaven" in this theatre, where they paid their way in, appeared to be more circumspect in their opinion of the picture than were those in front or downstairs.—GUS MCCARTHY.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. William A. Wellman, producer-director. Screenplay by Robert Carson. Musical direction by Boris Morros. Joseph Youngerman, assistant director. Thomas Scott, film editor. Photographed by W. Howard Greene. Aerial photography by Wilfrid Cline. Color art director, Natalie Kalmus. Special photographic effects by Gordon Jennings. Special photography by Franciot Edouard. Special flying by Paul Mantz and Frank Clarke. P. C. A. certificate No. 4259. Running time, when seen in Westwood, 105 minutes. Special for October. General audience classification.

Sixty Glorious Years

(Imperator-RKO)

Historical Biography

Variation of a dramatic formula, especially with the same personal constituents, is a perilous process. Only a great theme and the inspiration of greatness might save it from disaster. The greatness of Victoria and the epic grandeur of her reign obviously are mighty enough to stand the strain, and the magnificence and nobility of Herbert Wilcox's second Victoria film testify to that.

The picture "Sixty Glorious Years", though it varies the formula of "Victoria the Great", is a production of which Britain and her studios can be proud, a magnificent spectacle, a studied chronicle of its era and a human document which poignantly traces the womanly life of Britain's great Queen.

Technically, Wilcox's film with its superlative staging, its re-creation in color of the pageantry of Court and Commons, the splendor of regal parades and grim squalor of the battlefield, of Gordon's death at Khartoum, the Light Brigade charge at Balaklava and the domestic life at Balmoral, Windsor, Osborne and the other Royal palaces, all photographed on the actual locations, with its intimately personal picturing of the great ones of the Victorian era, is an achievement.

But it is the human quality which enlivens it, the inspiring impression of Victoria's simplicity and greatness, the devotion to Albert, and the family life which lay behind the grey turrets of Windsor and the railings of Buckingham Palace, which should touch the ordinary picture-goer's heart, whether he hail from Bethnal Green, London, or Little Rock, Ark. That it is as purely British as its subject is probably its greatest sales asset on the international market.

"Sixty Glorious Years" is episodic, but so wide a subject that presumably is to be pardoned, and Anna Neagle's restraint and ease, mastery of movement and flawless makeup infuse a personal unity. Miss Neagle's portrayal improves on its predecessor and moves from the impetuous self-willed girl to the tottering lined pathos of old age. The later passages of "Sixty Glorious Years" are the film's most moving moments.

Wellington, Peel, Palmerston, Gordon, Kitchener, Disraeli, Gladstone, Asquith, Edward VII—all pass in pageantry through its story. The Corn Law repeal, the Crimean War, the Egyptian campaign and the Jubilee are among the chapters of Victorian England's history which are glimpsed, with sincerity and fidelity. There are passages which have a whimsical affinity to contemporary events, and the graphic reality and human flavor compensate for the past history content.

Anton Walbrook's Consort is as good as it was in the other film. The somnolent Wellington of Aubrey Smith is one of its most satisfying components. Felix Aylmer's Palmerston is another of the film's many character gems. Against the grey towers of Windsor and its lawns, the purple hills of Scotland, and the flagged courtyard of Buckingham Palace, with the flash of the Windsor Greys and the Royal coach, and the scarlet tunics of the Guards—they all take on a further conviction.

It would seem to be a showman's picture in the best sense of the word and rich in exploitation material.

Angels with Dirty Faces

(Warner)

Study in Criminology

When Warners set out to make a gangster picture they know what they are about, as witness "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" and plenty of films before it. In "Angels with Dirty Faces" they have provided showmen with a surpassing demonstration of their unquestioned ability in the field of cinematic criminology.

Number 1 criminal in this documentation of the truism that crime doesn't pay is James Cagney, the James Cagney of "Public Enemy," functioning with throttle wide open and mainly as a lone wolf. He's never done this kind of thing better, if as well. Opposite him is Pat O'Brien in a role as his gutter buddy in boyhood who enters the priesthood later and essays the redemption of the criminal whose friend he remains. Humphrey Bogart plays a second string criminal who tries to doublecross Mr. Cagney, Mr. Bogart softening his touch considerably for the job, and George Bancroft is another relatively tender gangster who gets the gun. The "Dead End Kids," as they are called, play the same kind of junior gangsters they played in "Dead End" in the same setting and at least as graphically. Ann Sheridan is the girl in the picture, although the romantic aspect is sharply subordinated to the criminal facets of the story. Frankie Burke's portrayal of Cagney as a boy is uncannily realistic.

The screen play by John Wexley and Warren Duff, from an original by Rowland Brown, states an equation very fully and allows the audience to write its own answer. Michael Curtiz employs the expository technique exclusively in his direction of the story and Sam Bischoff, associate producer, provides ample where-withals of narration without allowing settings and such to get in the way of plot or performance.

The picture opens with "Rocky Sullivan" and "Jerry Connolly," tough East Side kids, breaking into a box car. "Rocky" is caught and goes to the reformatory. In the next few years, pictured swiftly via montage, "Rocky" becomes a Page One crook and "Jerry" becomes a priest assigned to their boyhood parish. When "Rocky" finishes his last stretch he returns to the old neighborhood, looks up "Father Connolly" and rents a room in a neighborhood boarding house. He becomes the idol and tutor of a gang of tough kids in the community, teaching them crime and yet, at "Father Connolly's" request, forcing them to attend the parish play center.

Homecoming over, "Rocky" looks up "Frazier," former pal, now prosperous in a night club business hooked up with crooked politicians and one "Keefer," who has the "ins." "Rocky" asks for $100,000 "Frazier" has been keeping for him until he should be released from prison and also for his share of the business. "Frazier" and "Keefer" try to dispose of "Rocky" via a telephone booth gunning, but he escapes, later kidnaping "Frazier," taking money and incriminating papers away from him, then moves in on "Keefer" to demand his cut of the business, which equals control of it. "Keefer" has him arrested for kidnaping but "Rocky" forces him to call off the police. After this the three gangsters work together until "Father Connolly," after serving notice on "Rocky" of his intention, starts a radio and newspaper campaign to rid the community of crime rule.

When "Keefer" and "Frazier" decide to have "Father Connolly" murdered, to stop his campaign, "Rocky" hears of the scheme and, in the fight which follows, kills both of them. Police surround the building and "Rocky," after killing several, defies their order to come out. "Father Connolly" goes in after him. "Rocky" attempts to escape by using the priest as a shield, but is captured when his ammunition runs out.

Convicted of murder and sentenced to death, "Rocky" continues defiant. Ten minutes before his execution "Father Connolly" visits him, tells him the kids who idolize him will become criminals like him if he goes to the chair unbroken, and asks him to pretend to turn coward at the end. "Rocky" refuses and the death march begins. After he has passed through the final door, shadows on the wall and screams of mercy indicate that he has (1) changed his mind and agreed to pretend cowardice or (2) broken down in fact. A final sequence shows the junior gangsters incredulously reading newspaper accounts of "Rocky's" breakdown and "Father Connolly" assuring them that "Rocky" did what the papers say he did. Audiences are left to their own choice of interpretations.

The picture, regardless of interpretation, is strong, swift, pungent melodrama. It is crammed with excellent performances. It is a fine production job.

The Citadel

(M-G-M)

British Novel

With well over a million copies of the book sold in England and the United States and sales continuing at high pitch, "The Citadel" is no pig in a poke for showmen to sell. On the name side it offers American exhibitors only Rosalind Russell and Robert Donat, unforgettable as "The Count of Monte Cristo," for marquee magnets, although the name of King Vidor, director, means money in a good many areas. If the reaction of the Hollywood preview audience is acceptable as indicative of general response, however, the picture would be a strong attraction without even these names to sell it by. Rarely has a picture held this pre-seasoned turnout so firmly at attention nor sent it home so deeply impressed.

"The Citadel" is a strong picture in both senses of the term. It deals bluntly with vital matters and piles up its points, one upon the basis of the other, like a parliamentarian bucking entrenched opposition. It glorifies the medical profession by the reverse process of exposing its faults mercilessly, and it destroys its own hero utterly before restoring him. It has the depth, sincerity and importance of contention which have been attributes of first magnitude motion pictures from "The Birth of a Nation" forward.

A. J. Cronin's novel, foundation of the screen play by Ian Dalrymple, Frank Wead and Elizabeth Hill, pertains to the practice of medicine and tells the story of a doctor. This description would fit any one of a dozen or more pictures released in the past year, some of them very successful. But the Cronin story is not out of the same pigeonhole. It is a mature presentation of problems that confront the honest, earnest practitioner in the pursuit of his profession, the prejudice, bigotry, stupidity of patient, public and organized authority, the inertia of the ignorant and the indifference of the mass.

Mr. Cronin's hero, a "Dr. Manson," emerged from internship to become assistant to an aged and ailing company physician in a Wales coal mining district. Ill paid and unequipped, he fights against dirt, negligence and graft, joining with "Denny," another young doctor, whose disillusionment has driven him to drink, in an attack upon their handicaps which takes shape in the dynamiting of a company sewer known to spread typhoid infection. A quarrel with his superior's avaricious wife results in his resignation, but he is reemployed and assigned to another district on better terms. Along in here he marries "Christine," the company school teacher.

"Manson" and "Christine" rig up a laboratory for the purpose of establishing the cause of tubercular infection prevalent among the miners, but superstitious members of the community wreck their equipment and condition "Manson" so drastically that he leaves and opens an office in London. Here poverty overcomes him and he meets a former classmate, now wealthy through practicing mild quackery on impressionable women of means. The classmate instructs him in the technique of fee-splitting and other profitable evasions of ethical standards. "Manson" discards his idealism and becomes rich. When "Denny" appears on the scene again, enthusiastic about a proposed clinic, "Manson" scoffs at him. "Denny" resumes his drinking, denounces "Manson," and dies on the operating table, following an accident, under the clumsy hand of a supposedly master surgeon with whom "Manson" has been trading patients and favors.

"Manson" rebounds to his former sincerity, but incurs the official wrath of the medical society by assisting in an emergency operation performed by a man who is not an officially qualified physician. Hailed before the society to be read out of its membership, he denounces his associates and walks out of the picture to continue his service to mankind in whatever ways he may devise.

Mr. Donat's performance is powerful and thorough. Half a dozen of the British players give impressive, finely shaded characterizations, and the bit players register strong in every instance.

Many scenes are grippingly realistic. A mine disaster and the dynamiting of the sewer are convincingly staged. A childbirth sequence in which the doctor breathes life into a stillborn baby is perhaps the most intimately gripping episode filmed in recent years, perhaps too intimately and grippingly filmed for any but the most mature audience.

Produced at MGM's studios at Denham, England, by Victor Saville, the picture is rich in technological artistry that registers without detracting from the narrative. Photography is of a high order and the musical accompaniment is among the best of the year.

Tarnished Angel

(RKO)

Melodrama

Exploitation possibilities are several with a story of a "clip joint" hostess who "turns" evangelist as a racket and then renounces her criminal acquaintances, becoming converted by the power of her own words.

Although the main leader says that the persons in the story are fictitious and do not resemble any person living or dead, members of the audience indicated their recognition of references to the world famous Aimee Semple MacPherson, even to the inflection of the chief character's voice.

In a sense, "Tarnished Angel" is an expose of charlatans who prey upon the gullible. It is a story of the regeneration of a "tarnished lady" who, hardened by adversity, volunteers to participate in a crime against her benefactors but at the last minute allows her new and better nature to rule.

The portrayal by Sally Eilers is her best performance in some time. She is supported by Lee Bowman, Ann Miller, Alma Kruger, Paul Guilfoyle, Jonathan Hale, Jack Arnold, Cecil Kellaway, Janet Dempsey, Hamilton MacFadden and Byron Foulger.

Hounded by "Cramer," a police officer, for her activities in a "clip joint," "Connie" flees with "Vi" and "Eddie" to a small town. She becomes an evangelist, using a spurious cripple as the subject of her "healing." She plans to rob the woman philanthropist who befriended her, but when "Dan's" plans to have a fake cripple is healed, and "Connie" decides to change her ways.

Saul Elkins wrote the original story and adapted it, with Jo Pagano doing the screenplay. Leslie Goodwins directed. B. P. Fineman was the producer, under supervision of Lee Marcus, RKO production executive.

Miss Miller sings one song, "It's the Doctor's Orders," with lyrics by Lew Brown and music by Samuel Fain.

Service DeLuxe

Comedy

This is a smoothly coordinated comedy about the kind of modern New Yorkers who place their personal, social and business affairs in the hands of a service bureau and try to stop worrying about them. The original story by Bruce Manning and Vera Caspary is genuinely diverting as divulged in the screen play by Gertrude Purcell and Leonard Spigelgass, and Rowland V. Lee's direction of the piece for associate producer Edmund Granger is responsible for a finely gauged flow of consistently amusing incident. Constance Bennett, Charlie Ruggles, Helen Broderick, Mischa Auer and an impressive recruit from the stage, Vincent Price, turn in excellent and extremely well balanced performances, with Joy Hodges and Halliwell Hobbes carrying on quite as competently in less prominent castings.

Miss Bennett plays "Helen Murphy," owner of a personal service bureau, in her best "Merrily We Live" manner. Mr. Price, as "Robert Wade," upstate inventor who hates self-sufficient women, is about the tallest leading man in pictures as of now, and serves up a new and substantial kind of romantic performance. Mischa Auer has his best opportunity in months as a Russian nobleman employed as chef and given to over-the-shoulder consultations with his spirit control, Charlie Ruggles gets steady laughs out of his job as an eccentric capitalist, and Helen Broderick handles the feminine side of the humor tellingly, with Joy Hodges supplying effective counterpoint.

The story has "Wade" coming to New York to interest capital in a low-priced tractor, and "Miss Murphy," known to clients of Dorothy Madison Service as Miss Madison, commissioned by his irascible uncle to prevent his arrival. She mistakes another boat passenger for "Wade" and falls in love with him without learning his name. When she discovers his identity she utilizes the resources of her service to get him the required backing and is in a fair way to become "Mrs. Wade" when he finds out she's been ordering his life for him and balks. They finally get together anyway.

The picture is as modern as today's leaf on the calendar, glib as a Los Angeles realtor, completely sophisticated in the dictionary sense of the word and clean as a spring breeze.

Outside the Law

(Columbia-Darmour)

Medical Melodrama

For the field it has been planned to serve, "Outside the Law" lists an adequate group of screen names. For that field it also provides a distinct surprise. Jack Holt is cast as a fighter, one who attains his objectives by determination and tenacity of purpose rather than by flashing guns or swinging fists. The story is also of more than usual entertainment and commercial merit. While an outdoor action adventure yarn, it details a conflict of science and intelligence versus ignorance and superstition.

Hunting in the southern backwoods, famous

New York "Dr. Meade" accidentally shoots a boy. The mountain folk always have depended for medical care upon "Dr. Hazard." "Dr. Meade" brings recovery for the boy, but against the opposition of "Dr. Hazard" and the superstitious mountaineers.

Opening a free clinic with nurse "Bonnie" and "Paul," "Hazard's" son, he finds the unreasonable opposition persisting. Prevention of an epidemic wins him a measure of gratitude, but his greatest triumph comes when "Dr. Hazard," unable to cure his daughter, "Mattie," appeals for help. "Dr. Meade" cures her and departs for New York, taking "Paul" along with him to study medicine, while "Bonnie" and another doctor are left in charge of the clinic.

While not a big picture, "Outside the Law," despite its rather blood-and-thunder sounding title, is unusual entertainment for a medium budgeted production. It demonstrates what can be done when there is a desire to get out of the beaten path. While the show has love interest, melodrama, suspense, thrill action and some humor, its principal asset is the novelty of Holt's character transformation and that of the story premise.

Girls on Probation

(Warner-F.N.)

Melodrama

Here is another interpretation of the parole system, a serious note in a predominately melodramatic picture. The heroine is innocently involved in a petty larceny case and later in a bank robbery. Indecision, a false sense of friendship and fear of a martinet father result in a prison sentence. How the girl obtains her parole and finds happiness is interestingly told.

There is another girl, sent to prison for the same bank robbery, but this girl is neither innocent nor desirous of changing her spots. Probation for her ends in death.

The production presents both sides of the parole system, but it is not primarily concerned with that social problem.

The prison scenes are held to a minimum, which is just as well, for so many of the recent offerings have depended excessively on prisons. The cast, collectively good, particularly Sig Ruman as a hard-hearted father, has slight marquee value. Jane Bryan, Sheila Bromley, Ronald Reagan and Anthony Averill are the principal members.

"Connie Heath" is employed in the main office of a dry cleaning establishment. Her friend "Hilda Engstrom" works in one of the branch stores. "Hilda" borrows a dress from the store so that "Connie" may go to a dance. The dress is ruined, and "Connie" is charged with theft. She leaves town when she is acquitted.

The next meeting between "Connie" and "Hilda" is in front of a bank which "Hilda's" accomplice, "Tony," is robbing. "Connie" is sent to prison. Paroled, she returns to her home town and becomes engaged to "Neil." "Hilda" in the meantime is paroled and "Tony" escapes from prison. When "Hilda" attempts to force "Connie" to "raise" some money for "Tony" she notifies "Neil." Both "Hilda" and "Tony" are killed when police arrive.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

IN radio jargon, "Abie" is anyone who is sure fire, "Adenoid" is a tenor with a "tight" voice, and "Arsenic" means a boresome program. A "Pancake Turner" is the sound technician who controls the playing of double-faced records; a "Putty Blower" is a trombone, and "Rover Boy" means an advertising agency junior executive—there's more Rover Boys in and around radio than in all the dime pulp magazines ever written.

Deviating a bit from his normal business of publishing "Little Gold Dictionaries" for waitresses, bartenders and laundrymen, menu-makers and Mexican cooks, J. O. Dahl, up in Stamford, Connecticut, now brings forth a "Radio Dictionary," by Leonard Lewis, of World Broadcasting. Besides the usual array of technical terms, Mr. Lewis discloses some forms of radio terminology that are both amusing and unique.

"White Meat," for example, denotes an actress; a "Whodunit" is a mystery script; "Wood Pile" is a xylophone, and "Woodchopper" is a xylophonist. A "Belcher" is a performer with a "frog" in his throat, a "Canary" is a coloratura soprano, and "Town Crier" is a vocalist who sings too loud. When a speaker has a muffled voice he is "Talking in His Beard."

"Studio Mothers" "are like stage mothers, only worse," and "Stick Weavers" are orchestra leaders. A "Squeak Stick" is a clarinet, a "Slumber Bum" is a night porter, and an "Old Cow Hand" is an old member of the staff delegated to escort guests about the studio.

"Schmalz" is the super-sentimental rendering of a musical number. "Mushy" is the poor musical definition of an orchestral pickup.

A flighty soprano is called "Madame Cadenza" and one who sings as if tired has "Lock-Jaw," while "Lady Macbeth" describes a superannuated tragedienne.

"Hog-Calling Contests" are commercial auditions for announcers, "Hambones" are unconvincing blackface dialecticians, "Fish-Bowls" are clients' observation booths in broadcasting studios. Easy-going advertiser clients are called "Fairy Godfathers." "Clientitis" is sponsor trouble.

A "Groan Box" is an accordion, a "Godbox" an organ, a "Corn-on-the-Cob" a harmonica.

Singers who lack a cultured background are "Corn Fed," singers who lack ease in singing are known to "Fight the Music," and "Gelatine" is a tenor with a voice thin and quavery.

Audiences attending Brooklyn's Bell theatre in these days of bigger-and-better "Movies' Greatest Year" campaigns, feast their eyes on this trailer copy running down the screen:

Benny, of course, took it all in the spirit of the script, until Mary added: "I think I really will shoot you, Jack—and give Paramount a break."

What with all of the more or less good-natured questioning of the expectations of Westinghouse officials that their "Time Capsule" would be dug up from its New York World's Fair grave 5,000 years hence, to give its finders an insight into the present day—including the motion picture, as described by Terry Ramsaye—Westinghouse has gone out and established over 2,000 "key repositories" for copies of a book telling posterity in A. D. 6939 just how and where they'll find the big sealed capsule.

The "repositories" are scattered over the world, in libraries, museums, colleges, universities, monasteries, shrines and the like, and in them three methods for locating the cupaloy torpedo-shaped crypt are described: First, the equivalent of the year A. D. 6939 is given for the Jewish, Chinese, Mohammedan, Shinto and Buddhist calendars. That would bring us all the way up to A. D. 10670 in the Jewish calendar. Further, in this connection are given the dates of the two solar and two lunar eclipses due in 1939; the heliocentric longitudes on January 1 of Mercury, Venus, the Earth, Mars, Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Neptune and Pluto, and the mean position on January 1 of the North Star.

Second, coordinates surveyed by the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey are given so as to be "accurate enough to locate an object one-tenth of a foot at a particular position on the surface of the earth."

And finally, directions are given by geographical means.

If inhabitants on the earth in A. D. 6939 can't follow these instructions, then they will just have to suffer along without any knowledge of our present day books, magazines and newspapers, our systems, sciences and arts and entertainments, including an RKO Pathe newsreel of the day, with all of its patterns of war, disaster, politics and politicians.

WARNER theatremen in and around Chicago conduct "Auction Nights" at their theatres in a style all their own, passing on their stunts each week to division headquarters so that they may be adopted by their brother managers.

S. Fitzgerald and Waldon Ryan, for example, reporting on "Auction Night" at their Grove theatre, told how their auctioneer, from the stage offered $1 to the person having the greatest number of toothpicks in his pocket. Several patrons responded, the winner showing 31.

An offer of $1 was made for a lollypop. When this was announced, an usher overheard a lady in the audience scold her child for having eaten the lollypop that had been purchased when they entered the theatre.

The auctioneer next offered $1 to any lady who would go through the audience and sell ten Sunday papers, following up with a $1 award to any man who had a feather in his hat. The big moment came, however, when $1 was offered to the person with a Chinese coin. A lady produced one and the Auctioneer rejected her claim, on the grounds that the coin had a hole in it—not knowing that all Chinese coins have holes.

The Dean of Westminster in London is supposed to have given his consent to the unsealing of the Westminster Abbey tomb of Edmund Spenser, poet, who was buried in 1599. Some brand new plots may be unearthed for Hollywood as a result, because William Camden, contemporary historian, wrote in his "History of Elizabeth" that Spenser's hearse was "attended by poets, and mournful elegies and poems with the pens that wrote them were thrown into his tomb."

Chief reason for the tomb reopening is the hope of finding an unpublished poem signed by Shakespeare, who is already well known in Hollywood for his "Romeo and Juliet," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, and his "Midsummer Night's Dream," Warner Brothers.

OBITUARIES

May Irwin Dies; Was in 'The Kiss' On Screen in 1896

May Irwin, 76, and famous on the stage since childhood, died Saturday last at the Park Crescent Hotel in New York. She appeared once importantly on the motion picture screen in its natal year of 1896 in a 50-foot subject entitled "The Kiss."

"The Kiss" was produced, at the instance of Raff & Gammon, agents for the Armat Vitascope and Edison pictures, at a little rooftop studio in West 28th street in New York, as a topical excerpt from the stage play "The Widow Jones," in which Miss Irwin was starring opposite John C. Rice. The picture, presented in vaudeville houses using the newborn screen, brought to the films their most vehement early attentions from the press.

Incidentally, Mr. Rice, who administered the kiss in play and picture, was the father of Miss Gladys Rice, who for some years sang on Broadway, conspicuously on the program of the Capitol Theatre in the days of Samuel L. Rothafel.

Miss Irwin was born in Whitby, Ontario, June 27, 1862, daughter of Robert E. and Jane Draper Campbell. Irwin became her stage name when she first appeared at the Adelphi theatre in Buffalo in 1875. She played for years with Tony Pastor, later Augustin Daly and since 1886 as an independent performer. Her last appearance was at the Palace theatre in New York in 1925. She introduced and sang many hit songs, including "After the Ball," "Hear dem Bells," and "I Ain't Gwine to Work No More."

Miss Irwin's first husband, Frederick W. Keller, whom she married in 1878, died in 1886. In 1907 she married her manager, Kurt Eisfeldt. He and her son Harry Irwin were with her when she died. Her home for many years has been an estate in the Thousand Islands near Clayton, New York.

IN COURTS

Suit Is Filed Over Use Of "Snow White" Voices

Two suits seeking a total of $300,000 in damages were filed this week in New York supreme court against Walt Disney Productions, Ltd., and RCA Manufacturing Company by Adriana Caselotti and Harry Stockwell, the singers who supplied the voices for the songs and dialogue of Snow White and the prince in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs."

Both plaintiffs claimed they had contracts with Disney which provided that their songs and dialogue would be confined solely to the picture and would not be reproduced for sale in any other form. The defendants are charged with violation of the contract, with having separated the reproduction of the plaintiffs' voices from the sound track of the picture for the recording of phonograph records. Miss Caselotti asks for $200,000 and Mr. Stockwell for $100,000 damages, contending that several million records were sold.

Adjourn "Lynton" Hearing

Final hearing in the infringement suit brought by Margaret Ayer Barnes and Edward Sheldon against Moredall Realty Corporation, owners of the Capitol, has been adjourned because of other engagements of Special Master Kenneth E. ## Where the Buffalo Roam

(Monogram)

Western with Songs

Where Tex Ritter's brand of singing and heroics are established box office factors, showmen will face no problem in marketing this western. Elsewhere it can be promised that the picture contains striking shots of the vanished buffalo herds in their native habitat, in addition to singing, solo and group, riding, fighting and a dash of unostentatious love making.

The screen play and story are by Robert Emmett. Direction by Al Herman is straightforward and free of furbelows. The film, an Edward Finney production, is built on a common-sense basis to meet the requirements of audiences addicted to orthodox westerns.

Tex Ritter plays "Tex Houston," a noble son of the Lone Star state who hires out as town marshal of Santa Fe in its infancy. He learns that the selectmen who appointed him are in fact the crooks who murdered his mother, and ultimately encompasses their capture. A good deal of fighting and shooting takes place meanwhile. Eight songs are sung, most of them by the star, some by Louise Massey and the Westerners.

Previewed at a Saturday afternoon at the Capitol theatre, Glendale, Cal., to a matinee audience comprised mainly of children, who whooped and yelled in the appointed places.—W. R. W.

Artists and Models Abroad

Musical Comedy

Most saleable ingredient of this second unit in the "Artist and Models" series is Jack Benny, ranking radio comedian who has doubled on the air as most industrious salesman of this picture. Millions who listen to his Jello program have heard all about a sequence wherein he hangs head downward from a balcony talking to Joan Bennett, an episode so thoroughly exploited in his broadcasts that mere affirmation of its presence in the film would seem a sure way to bring those millions in to see it.

As in the first film of the series, Benny is surrounded by a great many players, several of them marquee personalities, yet carries the picture. Joan Bennett is the girl this time, giving the role her customary cool handling, and the Yacht Club Boys are members of the Benny Theatrical Troupe stranded in Paris. They have one long and particularly well staged song number. Charley Grapewin and Mary Boland have comedy assignments that serve to take the load off the star momentarily now and again.

Three of the four songs are by Rainger and Robin and the fourth, mentioned above, is by the Yacht Club Boys and Jock Rock. The last-named song serves picture purposes best, but the Rainger-Robin "What Have You Got That Gets Me" sounds most like hit material, although underplayed in the film.

Howard Lindsay, Russell Crouse and Ken Englund cooked up the screen play, which has to do with a penniless stage troupe fleeing from one Paris hotel to another by window, spending a night in a museum and taking part next day in a fashion show that is undoubtedly the picture's big moment from the feminine point of view. Benny as manager of the troupe goes seriously romantic this time and Miss Bennett, as an heiress who pretends poverty, is the object of his affections. The final clinch is verbal but meant.

The fashion show is in the nature of a personal triumph for Director Mitchell Leisen, who used to design bathtub sequences for Cecil B. DeMille and seems to have decided to show the old master how it really should have been done. He starts off this section of the picture in a sudsfilled (Lux?) tub so big that 15 models can conceal their charms in it at one and the same time. They emerge behind gauze drapes, board a ritzy conveyor belt, corseted, and move along in passive procession to receive successive ministrations of toilet and artists' makeup, culminating in completed costuming by Alix, Paquin, Lanvin, Patou, Le Long, Schaparelli, Maggy Rouf and Worth, each gown authenticated and identified by formal placard. The feminine factor of the preview audience went ecstatic over this.

Produced by Arthur Hornblow, Jr., and photographed artistically by Ted Tetzlaff, the picture is manifestly expensive. The gags are typically Benny and he gets good Benny measure out of most of them.

Excellent Light Entertainment

The grade of light entertainment offered is of a quality worth running time on any screen for any exhibitor and theatre audience. The story, what there is of it, revolves around the song and comedy team of Cross and Dunn who, as a couple of high pressure bankers, find themselves in possession of a wax museum. A nimble footed brother and sister dancing and singing act, Ray and Grace McDonald of Broadway and Supper Club fame, reveal talents that may cause many in the audience to name them a junior Astaire and Rogers team.—Running time, 20 minutes.

Not Guilty Enough

Clyde Comedy

Material concerning the woes of a married man as supplied by a pesty brother-in-law and stuff that is usually associated with the modern Job of the short subject sphere, Edgar Kennedy, is used to picture the customarily docile Andy Clyde as a sort of a family worm that turns on a particularly offensive male relative. The reporting of the sad tale is done in rather a novel style for miniatures. First seen being tried for murderous assault on the person of his wife's brother, Clyde tells his defense in a series of flashback shots. Loud commendation may be expected from any audience.—Running time, two reels.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

CALL OF THE ROCKIES: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Another Starrett western that rings the bell. This series is one of our best bets, even though they are second-run for us.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

CITY STREETS: Edith Fellows, Leo Carrillo—Another short one from Columbia and very pathetic. Carrillo's messing up the English language was about all the comedy there is to this. Edith Fellows is a very good little actress but there is very little entertainment in crippled children and the customers spend their money for entertainment, or am I wrong? Running time, 68 minutes. Played October 11.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

FIGHTING RANGER: Buck Jones—A reissue of a reissue but they do the business and please the crowd. So what? So we play all these we can get.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

GLADIATOR, THE: Joe E. Brown, June Travis—I made a mistake on this and as the past few Joe E. Brown pictures were no good, I just played this one as a double bill on Saturday. Don't make a mistake. Give "The Gladiator" two days with plenty of billing and watch it go. Running time, 72 minutes. Played October 1.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kansas. Small town patronage.

HOLIDAY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant—if you can get them in they will enjoy it. Excellent production. Running time, 94 minutes. Played October 12.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

HOLIDAY: Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant, Lew Ayres, Doris Nolan, Edward Everett Horton, Binnie Barnes, Jean Dixon—Very good. Perhaps not quite the equal of its predecessor but still a fine picture play. Lew Ayres perfect. Business was at a low ebb. Played August 24-25.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PENITENTIARY: Walter Connolly, Jean Parker, John Howard—Played this with another feature of the comedy type, "Ladies in Distress," but it meant just average business.—Harold C. Allison, White Cloud Theatre, White Cloud, Mich. Small town patronage.

STAGECOACH DAYS: Jack Luden, Eleanor Stewart—Played on opening day of local fair and fact that it contains no western names hurt this one. Picture is fair.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

WEST OF CHEYENNE: Charles Starrett, Iris Meredith—Very good, what there was of it, but too short. And they'd better put Donald Grayson back in there. The cash customers complained about his absence. Personally, I didn't miss him but who am I? Our patronage rate Chas. Starrett pictures the best of the westerns but I'm still running Hopalong Cassidy. Running time, 53 minutes. Played October 7-8.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

First National

ADVENTURES OF ROBIN HOOD, THE: Errol Flynn, Olivia de Havilland, Basil Rathbone, Claude Rains, Ian Hunter—A costume picture that did well and pleased, even against strong competition. Color splendid.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

AMAZING DR. CLITTERHOUSE, THE: Edward G. Robinson, Claire Trevor, Humphrey Bogart—I enjoyed this production and believe my patrons did also. Splendid portrayals by the entire cast. You'll like Robinson and Bogart and fascinating Trevor. Running time, 87 minutes. Played October 7-8.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Herminie, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

AMAZING DR. CLITTERHOUSE, THE: Edward G. Robinson, Claire Trevor, Humphrey Bogart—A darn good "B" picture. Don't let them tell you it's extended runs, for that is where it will fall down. Pleased all who saw it but fell down when we tried to extend the run. Running time, 87 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MY BILL: Kay Francis, John Litel, Anita Louise, Bonita Granville, Dickie Moore—The best Kay Francis story in a long while. It's great family entertainment. Played September 9-10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PENROD'S DOUBLE TROUBLE: Billy and Bobby Mauch—Very good program picture. Just the thing for family trade. Recording good. Running time, 62 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

PRAIRIE THUNDER: Dick Foran, Ellen Clancy—Very good western. Foran was becoming my best western bet.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Grand National

HE LOVED AN ACTRESS: Ben Lyon, Lupe Velez—Very poor. Good cast wasted on this one. I make better ones than this in my back yard and the neighbors' kids.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

I MARRIED A SPY: Neil Hamilton, Brigitte Horn—Played day and date with the war scare and the only thing in the picture's favor was its timeliness. Dialogue hard to follow and acting at times was hammy.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

SING, COWBOY, SING: Tex Ritter, Al St. John—Second Ritter that I have played and it was really a good western. Much better than the other one. Grand National was smart to cast Al St. John in some of these westerns. He really does get the laughs. Hope to see him in more comedy roles.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BLOCKHEADS: Laurel and Hardy, Patricia Ellis, Billy Gilbert—Played this comedy riot on Merchant Night and it seemed to give the bargain hunters what they wanted, plenty of laughs. I for one am sorry this team has split up. Running time, 57 minutes. Played September 20-21.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kansas. Small town patronage.

FAST COMPANY: Melvyn Douglas, Florence Rice, Claire Dodd, Nat Pendleton—Swell picture. Action and comedy galore and what a swell pair to put it over. We were a little undecided about the "new" Florence Rice, her new hair dress, etc., but finally had to give in. Guess we'd like her in any change she made because she'll always be tops with us. Played September 28-29.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LORD JEFF: Freddie Bartholomew, Mickey Rooney, Charles Coburn, Gale Sondergaard—Drew extra business and had to, considering the price paid. Very good picture but not up to the standard for these two top-notch juveniles. Played October 7-8.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

LOVE FINDS ANDY HARDY: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden, Ann Rutherford, Lana Turner—Will please anywhere, we're sure. One of Metro's best efforts. Played September 25-26.—L. I. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MAN-PROOF: Myrna Loy, Franchot Tone, Rosalind Russell, Walter Pidgeon—Fair little picture that pleased about half that came to see it. These type pictures are not so good for my spot. Myrna Loy was the drawing card; otherwise it would have flopped. Running time, 71 minutes. Played September 30-October 2.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

MARIE ANTOINETTE: Norma Shearer, Tyrone Power, Robert Morley, John Barrymore, Gladys George, Anita Louise—A wonderful picture of 40 years ago, beautifully done, but business is done when you start cranking. It brought back to me the good old days when I used to run my own machine in my undershirt and sing my own songs and darn it, I'd even set through pictures like this to bring those days back again. Running time, 158 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

MERRILY WE LIVE: Constance Bennett, Brian Aheren, Patsy Kelly, Billie Burke—Good comedy that got a lot of laughs. Pleased all. Running time, 91 minutes.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

PORT OF SEVEN SEAS: Wallace Beery, Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal—Hard to tell just what we thought of this. In the first place, thought this was a Frank Morgan picture in which he was ably supported by Beery and O'Sullivan. But, it was so different from anything we have had in months. Played September 30-October 1.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

PORT OF SEVEN SEAS: Wallace Beery, Frank Morgan, Maureen O'Sullivan, John Beal—Very fine story. Sensitive produced and sincerely acted. Morgan and Beery are deserving of bouquets for their work in this. Played September 16-17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SHOPWORN ANGEL: Margaret Sullivan, James Stewart, Walter Pidgeon, Alan Curtis—Dandy entertainment. James Stewart topping all his previous work and Miss Sullivan very attractive. Played September 18-19.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SWISS MISS: Laurel and Hardy, Walter Woolf King, Della Lind—Fairly amusing but not their best. Moderate draw. Played August 26-27.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SWISS MISS: Laurel and Hardy, Della Lind, Walter W. King—Although this is not the best picture these comedians have made, it proved very gratifying and satisfactory on our fourth anniversary. Running time, 73 minutes.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

THREE COMRADES: Robert Taylor, Margaret Sullivan, Franchot Tone, Robert Young—Why all these smart film executives should allow a grand actress like Margaret Sullivan to run around loose all this time is not sense. She's swell in this picture. May MGM keep her and use her in many pictures. Taylor, Tone and Young are also mighty fine in this tragedy, which went over big in spite of its sad ending. Played September 25-26.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

THREE LOVES HAS NANCY: Robert Montgomery, Janet Gaynor, Robert Young—Nice picture. Pleased well. Slightly above average at box office. Running time, 69 minutes. Played October 3-4.—Boyd Adkinson, Lyric Theatre, Idabel, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

TOO HOT TO HANDLE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Walter Pidgeon, Leo Carrillo, Walter Connolly—A well received picture with a newsreel cameraman background with a fine supporting cast. Good photography, excellent sound, a few thrills, pathos, comedy by Leo Carrillo that is the work of an artist. Drew well for three nights. Played October 9-11.—Ed. Crew, Empress Theatre, Waurika, Okla. General patronage.

TOO HOT TO HANDLE: Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Walter Pidgeon, Leo Carrillo, Walter Connolly—Well, boys here comes the candy. Will please all with break records on all spots. Step on it. It's hot but not too hot for us. We handle the salesman, don't we? But, in all, a great picture. Everything new, up to date audience appeal by the hayload, and you know McPhee knows. Running time, 105 minutes.—W. E. McPhee, Strand Theatre, Old Town, Maine. General patronage.

TOY WIFE, THE: Luise Rainer, Melvyn Douglas, Robert Young, Barbara O'Neil, H. B. Warner—A fine picture that did less than average business. Played

Head Freezes up; Rips Fibre Gear During Eve. Show

EAST ROCKAWAY, L. I., N. Y.—"During an evening show a few weeks ago, the sound suddenly went off in one of the machines of the Criterion Theatre here," declared J. T. Bonney, president of the Asney Amusement Corporation.

"Upon contacting the booth, our projectionist advised us to immediately call the Altec emergency desk, which we did. Inspector Howard arrived at the theatre in short order.

"He found that the intermittent movement on the disabled machine had frozen up in such a way that it had ripped up the fibre gear on the flywheel, and had broken loose the connections on the vertical shafts.

"Soon after the Altec Inspector arrived, we were again able to operate properly on both machines."

Altec maintains a complete stock of over 5,000 parts needed for replacement in sound equipment of all types and makes. Strategically located stock points throughout the country remain open during all show-operating hours to make immediate shipment of parts.

August 28-29.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TREASURE ISLAND (Reissue): Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper—Satisfactory reissue at the box office. Played August 30.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WOMAN AGAINST WOMAN: Virginia Bruce, Herbert Marshall, Mary Astor—Not a bad picture, pleasing no doubt to the ladies, that is, these ladies who came. Poorest business during midweek in many weeks. Personally like it very much, but that didn't put the cash in the box office. Played October 5-6.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

WOMEN MEN MARRY: George Murphy, Josephine Hutchinson, Claire Dodd—This picture should stand up on any double bill. Running time, 65 minutes.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

RAW TIMBER: Tom Keene—Forest ranger story that fills in nicely in place of usual Saturday western.—C. E. Fismer, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Monogram

ROSE OF THE RIO GRANDE: Movita, John Carroll—A dressed up six-reel western. Carroll looks like he will be a very good bet for future pictures. I made a big mistake by playing this on Sunday. Boosted it with good shorts, but it still drew worst Sunday business of 1938. Still is a good little picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

STARLIGHT OVER TEXAS: Tex Ritter, Carmen LaRoux—Well Tex, you packed 'em in better than Monogram's higher priced pictures such as "Romance of the Limberlost" and "Barefoot Boy." Here's a western with music and dancing that pleased all. Above average at the box office. Running time, 56 minutes.—Harold C. Allison, White Cloud Theatre, White Cloud, Mich. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BAR 20 JUSTICE: William Boyd, George Hayes, Russell Hayden—One of the "Hopalong." Well made westerns that please.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

BOOLOO: Colin Tapley, Suratna Asmaka—Was afraid of this jungle picture but it proved interesting. Was well made and pleased our patrons. Story dealt with efforts of the young man to prove his father correct as to the existence of a white tiger.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

BOOLOO: Colin Tapley, Suratna Asmaka—The jungle again! But it's pretty good and folks liked it. Played September 16-17.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CASSIDY OF BAR 20: William Boyd, Frank Darien—Just another western that pleased about half that saw it. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 7-9.—O. W. Chapek, Annex Theatre, Anamoose, N. D. Rural and small town patronage.

COCOANUT GROVE: Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard, Ben Blue, Rufe Davis, Yacht Club Boys—A swell picture in any spot and I don't mean maybe. Clever story and the music was the best I have ever heard on the screen or elsewhere. Fine recording, especially the bass. Why not give us more pictures such as this and fewer like "College Swing." Ben Blue is all right if it doesn't last too long. And the Yacht Club Boys are fine singers. The only thing that bothered us was the prints. They were so old we had to practically feed them through the machines by hand in order to keep them together, and some scenes were so badly scratched they blurred on the screen. Running time, 88 minutes. Played October 9-11.—Bretzke & Gainer, Lyric Theatre, Kenmare, N. D. General patronage.

COCOANUT GROVE: Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard, Ben Blue, Rufe Davis—Very catchy tunes and well presented. Liked the Hillard girl very much and MacMurray is always good. Played October 2-3.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

COCOANUT GROVE: Fred MacMurray, Harriet Hilliard, Ben Blue, Rufe Davis, Yacht Club Boys—Quite good. Weak draw, however, for us. Played August 21-22.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GIVE ME A SAILOR: Martha Raye, Bob Hope, Betty Grable, Jack Whiting—A light comedy that pleased.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

IN OLD MEXICO: William Boyd, George Hayes—The best Hopalong Cassidy to date! Beautifully photographed and nicely directed. It gets away from the stereotyped western story and presents a plot with some originality. Rather slow in spots for an action western but at all times the interest is held up to a bangup finish. Business is always good on the Hopalong. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 13-15.—William J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

IN OLD MEXICO: William Boyd, George Hayes—Just an average Hopalong. Could have been better and might have been worse. Hopalong and old Windy are very popular, but like any other stars they've got to give them good stories or they'll slip. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 14-15.—M. L. Du Bose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

KING OF ALCATRAZ: Lloyd Nolan, Gail Patrick, J. Carroll Naish, Robert Preston—A very fine little program picture that runs only 55 minutes. Only thing that I can find wrong is the title. Stars in this turn in fine performances. Robert Preston seems to be a "find." Thought he played his part well.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PRISON FARM: Lloyd Nolan, Shirley Ross—Nice little program picture. Seems that Paramount had some real good program pictures in this year's lineup.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

PRISON FARM: Lloyd Nolan, Shirley Ross—Very good action programmer. Played September 6.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PROFESSOR, BEWARE: Harold Lloyd, Phyllis Welch, Lionel Stander, Raymond Walburn—We got in a late Saturday show on this after being closed since Tuesday, September 20, due to no electric power because of gale and flood. Few knew we were open and business was negligible, but we all agreed this very disappointing Lloyd picture. Gosh, Harold, can't you find a better story than this one? A washout in more ways than one was our experience with this one. Played September 24.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PROFESSOR, BEWARE: Harold Lloyd, Phyllis Welch, Lionel Stander, Raymond Walburn—This one will do for bargain nights or double bills. Harold has been off the screen so long that he has been forgotten. There is a lot of good laughs in the last half of the picture. If you have a pretty good crowd, don't pass it up. Running time, 94 minutes. Played October 11-12.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kansas. Small town patronage.

SING, YOU SINNERS: Bing Crosby, Fred MacMurray, Donald O'Connor, Ellin Drew, Elizabeth Patterson—Here's a "honey" for a small town. It's entertainment plus, and patrons seemed to know all about it because they came in crowds. Paramount is certainly putting out the pictures these days. And their recording on both features and shorts is the best in the business. Running time, 89 minutes. Played October 6-8.—William J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

SPAWN OF THE NORTH: George Raft, Henry Fonda, Dorothy Lamour, John Barrymore, Lynne Overman, Louise Platt—You won't have any regrets when you play "Spawn of the North," as the customers didn't mind telling you how much they liked the show. Running time, 112 minutes. Played September 25-26.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kansas. Small town patronage.

TEXANS, THE: Randolph Scott, Joan Bennett, May Robson, Walter Brennan, Robert Cummings—Not the tremendous epic that Paramount would have you think it is. Did not compare to "Wells Fargo," "The Plainsman" or "The Texas Rangers." Thought it very draggy, and after the snow storm, the dust storm and the rain storm, it finally came to the end. Scott is unconvincing as an actor and Miss Bennett is terribly miscast in this show, as she refused in all the hardships even to muss her hair. May Robin is the whole show. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TROPIC HOLIDAY: Martha Raye, Bob Burns, Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland—Quite unsatisfactory from entertainment viewpoint as well as business. Not worth wasting so much celluloid on. Played September 4-5.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TROPIC HOLIDAY: Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Bob Burns, Ray Milland—We enjoyed this but it did not seem to have the drag common to these stars. Possibly the Mexican locale, etc.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

YOU AND ME: Sylvia Sidney, George Raft, Harry Carey, Barton MacLane—A good drama. Cast good and it pleased generally. No extra drawing power, however. Played September 7-8.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

YOU AND ME: Sylvia Sidney, George Raft, Harry Carey, Barton MacLane—Pretty good program picture. Recording good. Running time, 90 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Republic

BORN TO BE WILD: Ralph Byrd, Doris Weston, Ward Bond—Very good action picture. Drew most of the full house on a double bill.—C. E. Eismar, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

CALL OF THE YUKON: Richard Arlen, Beverly Roberts, Lyle Talbot—Most of the pictures of the North do a big business and Republic's "Call of the Yukon" is no exception. A great film for the youngsters on account of the animals. Went over fine at the box office and was told by many that it was enjoyed. Played October 8-9.—Harold C. Allison, White Cloud Theatre, White Cloud, Mich. Small town patronage.

GOLD MINE IN THE SKY: Gene Autry, Carol Hughes, Smiley Burnette—The gold mine in the sky actually came down to the Plaza Tilbury, and how the pennies came in, and you exhibitors say a prayer of thanks for Gene Autry. Running time, 60 minutes.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD STADIUM MYSTERY: Neil Hamilton, Evelyn Venable—Good enough for best half of double bill.—C. E. Fismar, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

LADIES IN DISTRESS: Alison Skipworth, Polly Moran, Bob Livingston—Played this with "Penitentiary," but it meant just average business.—Harold C. Allison, White Cloud Theatre, White Cloud, Mich. Small town patronage.

MANHATTAN MERRY-GO-ROUND: Phil Regan, Ann Dvorak, Leo Carrillo, Gene Autry, Cab Calloway and His Orchestra, Joe DiMaggio, Max Terhune—Seems like five or six different players in this one. Each drew a few extra and added together they filled the house both nights. Autry, Calloway, Terhune, DiMaggio, Carrillo, all commented upon. Considering the many and varied ingredients, this turned out to be a tasty bit of hash.—C. E. Fismar, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

OUTLAWS OF SONORA: Three Mesquiteers (Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Jean Joyce—One of the best we have ever played. The double part taken by Livingston is different than any plot we have had in this class show and adds greatly to the production. Excellent. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OUTSIDE OF PARADISE: Phil Regan, Penny Singleton—Just so-so. With a couple of good tunes, this would have been 100 per cent better.—C. E. Fismar, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

RKO Radio

ANNAPOLIS SALUTE: James Ellison, Marsha Hunt, Harry Carey—An old one we picked up and used to satisfactory audience reaction. Played September 2-3.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BORDER G-MEN: George O'Brien, Ray Whitley—An excellent picture. Business good. All comments good. When you find a picture with the screen play by Oliver Drake you find one that is interesting and holds the customers on the edge of their seats. Our people like George O'Brien.—George Stovall, Ute Theatre, Sayre, Okla. Small town patronage.

BREAKING THE ICE: Bobby Breen, Irene Dare, Charlie Ruggles—Fairly entertaining picture with a Mennonite background. While the belief and customs of these industrious people may appear queer to us, their philosophy of earning with their own hands and brain the necessities of life is not a bad principle, particularly in these times of federal paternalism and $30.00 every Thursday. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 9-10.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Hermine, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

BREAKING THE ICE: Bobby Green, Charles Ruggles, Dolores Costello, Irene Dare—Thoroughly enjoyable, with the boy star doing his best singing and acting, and the six-year-old girl skater was the hit of the show.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

CONDEMNED WOMEN: Sally Eilers, Anne Shirley, Louis Haywood—Interesting picture. Cast good. Average Tuesday business. Played August 23.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HAVING WONDERFUL TIME: Ginger Rogers, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Peggy Conklin, Lucille Ball, Lew Bowman—Good picture but no record business getter. Played September 11-12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS: Ruby Keeler, Anne Shirley, James Ellison—Very poor business on this one. Would consider this just a nice program picture. Those who saw it made very little fuss about it. Running time, 82 minutes.—Rudolph Covi, Covi Theatre, Hermine, Pa. Small town and rural patronage.

MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS: Anne Shirley, James Ellison, Ruby Keeler, Fay Bainter, Ralph Morgan—Splendid family picture that pleased all.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

MR. DOODLE KICKS OFF: Joe Penner, June Travis, Richard Lane—Penner, story and everything else in this picture is nuts. If you like them screwy this will fill the bill. A good prevue crowd seemed to like it "as was." Played October 8.—Ed. Crew, Empress Theatre, Waurika, Okla. General patronage.

RADIO CITY REVELS: Bob Burns, Jack Oakie, Kenny Baker, Ann Miller, Milton Berle—This was a swell picture and some fine acting by all concerned. Good story and fine music, good recording and nice prints. Keep the good work up, RKO. I have several of your new releases booked and from reports I believe you are going to hit and hit right this year. Running time, 90 minutes. Played September 11-13.—Bretzke & Gainer, Lyric Theatre, Kenmare, N. D. General patronage.

SNOW WHITE AND THE SEVEN DWARFS: Walt Disney feature cartoon. Somebody on the distributing end of RKO must have been to night school, and heard how "Art never pays," and "Art for Art's sake," and all that. And somebody else on the staff who could read must have been browsing over all the pretty things the free-ticket boys have been saying about "Snow White." And between them, they came to the conclusion that the best way to uphold this picture's artistic integrity was to see that at any rate it didn't pay the exhibitor. One of these lesser breed who thought "Snow White" was going to be a high spot both for his small-town patrons and himself, has just been pretty badly fooled. Out of a gross of $75 he managed to get home with a net of 68 cents and his pants. In addition, he found himself coming into the post office with a terrific C. O. D. Watch it, boys. It may be Art, and three-dimensional at that. If it clarifies things any, this exhibitor can vouch for the fact that it didn't pay. And no fairy story, either.—Vincent Carty, Bison Auditorium, Bison, S. D. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FOUR MEN AND A PRAYER: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, George Sanders, David Niven, William Henry—Loretta Young is always good and this Richard Greene is coming up fast. The picture was about the same as the story, which was sort of jumpy from place to place, but even at that it went over good and did nice business. The prints we get from Fox are always in fine shape and the recording is usually good, too, although we have run two pictures where we had trouble with recording. Fox gives us splendid cooperation in booking and the best of service from their Minneapolis exchange. Running time, 85 minutes. Played October 2-4.—Bretzke and Gainer, Lyric Theatre, Kenmare, N. D. General patronage.

BORROWING TROUBLE: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—This is a very good picture in the fast becoming popular Jones Family series.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

FOUR MEN AND A PRAYER: Loretta Young, Richard Greene, George Sanders, David Niven—A very fine munitions story that did not do the business we anticipated. Running time, 85 minutes.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

GATEWAY: Don Ameche, Arleen Whelan, Lyle Talbot, Gregory Ratoff, Binnie Barnes—Just because it was produced by Darryl Zanuck and starred Don Ameche we thought it would be good. We've got lots of faith in those two boys and sure enough they didn't let us down. Not a super colossal picture, but it was different and fairly entertaining. Why all the squawking? With a couple of good shorts it will go over all right. Running time, 70 minutes. Played October 16-17.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

GATEWAY: Don Ameche, Arleen Whelan, Lyle Talbot, Gregory Ratoff, Binnie Barnes—Ellis Island locale. Due to clever work of stars and director, this average story pleased. You'll hear more of Miss Whelan.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

HOLD THAT COED: George Murphy, Joan Davis, John Barrymore, Marjorie Weaver, Jack Haley—Credit should be given to George Marshall, director, for making the funniest, screwiest, yet logical, football picture to date. As a takeoff on the antics of the late Huey Long, it's there. Here is one sport picture you can tie in with the local football team or school without a kickback. Played October 1-3.—Ed. Crew, Empress Theatre, Waurika, Okla. General patronage.

I'LL GIVE A MILLION: Warner Baxter, Marjorie Weaver, Jean Hersholt, Peter Lorre—Can't say much for this, but it was something different. Looks like a waste of talent, but glad they're keeping the boys busy doing something. It keeps them off the WPA. If it cost you much, better try to get by without it. Running time, 75 minutes. Played October 2-3.—Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

I'LL GIVE A MILLION: Warner Baxter, Marjorie Weaver, Jean Hersholt, Peter Lorre—Good. Played August 31-September 1.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

KENTUCKY MOONSHINE: Ritz Brothers, Tony Martin, Marjorie Weaver, Slim Summerville—Very good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LIFE BEGINS AT 40 (reissue): Will Rogers, Rochelle Hudson, Richard Cromwell, Jane Darwell—If you want to know something, "Life Begins at 40" broke all records on Merchant Trade Show and I have been running Merchant Trade Shows for 10 years straight. Will Rogers will still get 'em in. Played August 16-17.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. Small town patronage.

LITTLE MISS BROADWAY: Shirley Temple, Jimmy Durante, George Murphy, Edna Mae Oliver—Best Shirley Temple picture in a long time. Pleased all, but pretty bad at box office with carnival opposition. Running time, 71 minutes. Played October 10-11.—Boyd Adkison, Lyric Theatre, Idabel, Okla. Small town and rural patronage.

SAFETY IN NUMBERS: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Shirley Deane—This series still holds interest and pleases.—P. G. Estee, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

SPEED TO BURN: Michael Whalen, Lynn Bari, Henry Armetta—If you can get them to come and see it, there's a lot of swell entertainment in this little picture. No star value, but it's the kind of a show most people like and will tell you so on their way out. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 12-13.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

SPEED TO BURN: Michael Whalen, Lynn Bari, Henry Armetta—A short programmer which might be used for No. 2 on dual program. To very poor business. Played October 4-5.—Ed. Crew, Empress Theatre, Waurika, Okla. General patronage.

SPEED TO BURN: Lynn Bari, Michael Whalen, Henry Armetta—An ideal feature for the lighter spot on a dual program. While not headlined, Henry Armetta steals the picture and carries the comedy end with well spaced laughs throughout. Running time, 60 minutes. Played October 13-15.—William J. Powell, Lonet Theatre, Wellington, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

United Artists

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER: Tommy Kelly, May Robson, Ann Gillis, Walter Brennan, Jackie Moran—A swell show for everybody, especially for the kids. Excellent to tie in with the schools. Give it all you've got. Picture will back you up. Running time, 91 minutes. Played October 6-7.—Boyd Adkinson, Lyric Theatre, Idabel, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

ADVENTURES OF TOM SAWYER: Tommy Kelly, May Robson, Jackie Moran, Walter Brennan—Immediately after the men heard we were going to show this picture the most popular comment was: "I can see where a picture like this 'Tom Sawyer' might go over in one of the juvenile institutions, but for us, well, I just can't see how it will go there." After our Saturday show the tune changed to: "Whatta picture." "Certainly was a beautiful color picture." "Had some swell comedy, too." "For kids, they sure can act." While it is true "Tom Sawyer" and "Huck Finn" were not the characters we know them to be in Mark Twain's book (Tommy and Jackie here were a bit too polished), they did, nevertheless, do a swell bit of acting. After all, it isn't justifiable to expect them to be able to do as well as Gable, Muni, et al. Certainly think UA knew their business when they selected that grand actress, May Robson, as "Aunt Polly." She is always superb. If you haven't shown this feature to your patrons (both young and old, they'll all like it), do so at the earliest opportunity, "cause UA and Selznick have gone and done it again." Running time, 91 minutes. Played October 15.—J. A. Reynolds, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

BLOCKADE: Henry Fonda, Madeleine Carroll, Leo Carrillo, John Halliday—Not too hot, in our opinion. We didn't know who was mad at who nor why! And somehow we cared little how it came out. Henry Fonda was fine and his last scene gives one a thought to carry home regardless of the rest of it. Played September 9-10.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BLOCKADE: Madeleine Carroll, Henry Fonda, Leo Carrillo, John Halliday—The worst Sunday-Monday we've had in months. The picture was very good of its kind, but we discovered that people don't like this kind. Hope we never experience what those poor Spaniards are going through. Henry Fonda's speech at the end was a masterpiece. Running time, 80 minutes. Played October 9-10.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

GOLDWYN FOLLIES, THE: Adolphe Menjou, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," Ritz Brothers, Andrea Leeds, Zorina, Phil Baker, Kenny Baker—One of the most beautiful pictures of the year. The directing good. Kenny Baker's singing outstanding. The natural coloring beautiful, the story pretty good. "Charlie McCarthy" and E. Bergen very good, the Ritz Brothers funny. In my estimation, one of the best pictures of the year. The only fault I could see about the picture, it was a little too long. I just wish that all the specials were as good as this one. Recording good. Running time, 109 minutes.—P. G. Held, New Strand Theatre, Griswold, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

GOODBYE, BROADWAY: Alice Brady, Charles Winninger, Tom Brown, Tommy Riggs—Quite unattractive. Too dull to be amusing. We didn't even have the actor's show in the finale. Played September 20.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TWO IN A CROWD: Joel McCrea, Joan Bennett—Played on double bill. The other feature drew the crowd, but this pleased as well if not better.—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Victory

ORPHANS OF THE PECOS: Tom Tyler—Western that makes up for bad acting and settings with fast moving action. Paid its way and pleased the crowd.—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

Warner Brothers

BOY MEETS GIRL: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Marie Wilson, Ralph Bellamy—I sure thought I had something when I booked "Boy Meets Girl," but this fine bunch of stars was certainly wasted on this picture. I was at the door when the customers came out and they sure told me plenty that didn't seem like they liked it. Running time, 86 minutes. Played September 11-12.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. Small town patronage.

COWBOY FROM BROOKLYN: Dick Powell, Pat O'Brien, Priscilla Lane, Dick Foran—Dick Powell came back very well in this picture with the aid of Pat O'Brien and Priscilla Lane. Well liked by all. Good enough for your best nights. Running time, 77 minutes. Played September 15-16.—C. R. Gregg, Liberty Theatre, Caney, Kan. Small town patronage.

INVISIBLE MENACE: Boris Karloff, Marie Wilson—This went over fine with my crowd on Bargain Night. Maybe you'll like it better by playing it on same night.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

JEZEBEL: Bette Davis, Henry Fonda, George Brent, Margaret Lindsay—Good picture of its kind. Business not so hot.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MEN ARE SUCH FOOLS: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Hugh Herbert—Fair comedy. Played September 13.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

OVER THE WALL: Dick Foran, June Travis, John Littel, Dick Purcell—Some of the advertising read that Warden Lawes was the only man who dared tell, etc. Nothing outstanding or startling that we could see. Did not draw.—P. G. Estes, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

RACKET BUSTERS: Humphrey Bogart, Gloria Dickson, George Brent, Walter Abel—When Lloyd Bacon makes a picture, he really makes a good one. This picture is outstanding in all respects. Even though we have been ganstered to death this season, "Racket Busters" grips you and holds interest throughout the entire show. Humphrey Bogart, George Brent and Gloria Dickson are outstanding in their acting. Just a good show. Running time, 71 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHITE BANNERS: Claude Rains, Fay Bainter, Jackie Cooper, Bonita Granville—The book helped this. Marvelous acting. Fay Bainter wonderful. Not much box office, but W. B. doesn't hold us up on pictures and we always show a little margin of profit on their product. Running time, 90 minutes. Played September 28-29.—M. L. DuBose, Majestic Theatre, Cotulla, Texas. Small town and country patronage.

WHITE BANNERS: Fay Bainter, Claude Rains, Jackie Cooper, Bonita Granville—An outstanding picture that did well against competition in this 1,225 town.—P. G. Estes, Estee Theatre, Parker, S. D. Small town patronage.

WHITE BANNERS: Fay Bainter, Claude Rains, Jackie Cooper, Bonita Granville, Kay Johnson—Excellent story, well played by a competent cast. It was good to see Kay Johnson again. She's as swell as ever. Why can't she be cast more often? Played September 14-15.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

COMMUNITY SING, NO. 2: Donald Grayson—They won't sing with them, but seem to enjoy them. Our crowd is cowboy nuts and they know Grayson even if he did go Irish in this one.—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio.

DRUG STORE FOLLIES: Broadway Follies—Do not miff this one. One of the best musical single reels we have run. It is a short vaudeville show and the acts are exceptional. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HEALTHY, WEALTHY AND DUMB: Three Stooges—Funny and hilarious.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HORSE ON THE MERRY-GO-ROUND, THE: Color Rhapsodies—Not much to this except color. Could not grasp the story at all. Not so hot. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LITTLE BUCKAROO: Krazy Kat Cartoons—Good cartoon. Black and white and full of gags.—C. E. Fisser, Lyric Theatre, Hamilton, Ohio. Family patronage.

PLAY BALL: Sport Thrill—A squirt at the one and only World's Champs, the Yankees, at their spring training camp prior to the opening of the 1938 baseball season. A good short for baseball fans. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, NO. 10: Better than most we have run. Very interesting. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SPORT STAMINA: Special Sport Thrills—A very good short reel that is broken up so that it is not so draggy. Kofod is very good in his comments. Very interesting. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

TERMITES OF 1938: Three Stooges—Very good audience reaction. Although, personally, we feel them terrible, the audience goes for them in a big way, so we play them and they are eaten up by all. Excellent for audience appeal. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Educational

BIG TOP, THE: Terry-Toons—Fair.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Korda Expanding; David Selznick May Stay at UA

Emanuel Silverstone henceforth will represent the Alexander Korda interests of England on the directorate of United Artists, Mr. Korda designating his American business representative in his place because of new plans he has in mind for expanding his Korda-London Films producing activities, necessitating that he remain in London to a greater extent, away from the corporate functionings of the distributing company here. Mr. Silverstone is a brother of Maurice Silverstone, operating head of U.A. and immediately assumes directorship for Mr. Korda, who is one-fifth owner of the company.

Other United Artists corporate activities of the week included word from David Oliver Selznick that he would "most likely" extend his existing arrangement for distribution of his product. Mr. Selznick arrived in New York on Monday morning, and left the next morning for a three weeks' vacation in Bermuda with his wife.

Murray Silverstone's announcement of last week that no one was to be brought in to direct its domestic sales to replace George J. Schaefer, now with RKO, still holds. The sales duties will be shared by Harry Gold and Jack Schlaifer, eastern and western sales managers.

Mr. Korda is planning important changes at Denham. He will form at least two additional companies, one of which will be headed by Irving Asher. Mr. Korda not only will supervise over all, but will personally conduct the management of only one unit.

His production activities will be made more elastic. Denham will extend its production facilities to many firms now seeking to use that studio. Films for release by companies other than United Artists will be made there in greater numbers.

Selznick Fulfills Contract

Emanuel Silverstone previously was manager of the United Artists office in Cristobal. He is 29 years old. He is a graduate of City College of New York, holds a law degree and Phi Beta Kappa key.

Mr. Selznick conceded that he would talk to other companies, among them RKO Radio, but indicated that he not only favored a renewal with United Artists but regarded it as more likely to occur than a deal with any other company.

The producer has fulfilled his product commitments to United Artists under his current pact. He said that January 5th has been set as the definite starting date for "Gone with the Wind" and that "come what may, the best available actress for the Scarlett O'Hara role on that date will be the one to play the part." The budget on the picture has been set at $2,500,000, Mr. Selznick said, and he estimated that it will be completed in four months. Present plans are to roadshow it starting next fall.

"Intermezzo" Next Film

"Intermezzo" will be his next production. It will go into work in December and will be the first release on his new distribution contract.

Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., also arrived in New York Monday and said that in the next 18 months he would make two pictures for RKO and one for Selznick-International. He said he had conferred with Mr. Selznick on his way from California but no role had been set as

Envoy to Peru Urges Industry to Help Bring Americas Together

by H. ALBAN-MESTANZA

Editor of "Teatro al Dia"

The motion picture provides a powerful vehicle for bringing North and South America together, in the opinion of Laurence A. Steinhardt, United States Ambassador to Peru, who is on his way back to Lima after a short stay in the United States.

The American envoy doubted that full advantage had been taken of the opportunity, and hoped that producers in the United States and Latin America "will bend every effort towards bringing the two continents closer together by using the powerful instrument available to them", for further extension of the trade agreements program pending in Latin America should prove a benefit to the motion picture industry by increasing the demand for motion pictures.

The ambassador said that American motion pictures are extremely popular in Latin America, particularly those of certain stars. However, he feels that special attention should be paid to proper "dubbing" or superimposing of Spanish dialogue and titles to overcome the barrier of language.

"While on this subject," he adds, "I may say that the number of travel pictures exhibited in Latin America dealing with the scenic beauties and industrial side of the United States is disappointingly small. One can go to almost any theatre in this country and see beautiful pictures of the Andes Mountains and the scenic treasures of Peru such as are to be found at Cuzco and in other regions of the country, the Amazon basin and jungles of Brazil, the cattle- and wheat-raising district of Argentina and the nitrate and copper mines of Chile, but one rarely, if ever, sees a picture in South America of the beauties yet for him in any future Selznick release. Mr. Fairbanks will sail for a three-week vacation in England in two weeks' time.

Joe Goltz has been appointed manager of United Artists' office in Japan, succeeding A. A. Lowe, who is returning to New York for a vacation before receiving a new assignment. Mr. Goltz, who will make his headquarters in Tokyo, was associated with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the last 10 years in South America and the Orient.

Changes in the company's field personnel include the elevation of Dave Prince, former Atlanta branch manager, to southern division manager, succeeding Bob Mochrie. Jeff Davis succeeds Mr. Prince in Atlanta. He was formerly salesman in Philadelphia.

Other changes were the promotion of Clarence Eisman, Pittsburgh branch manager, to New York in the same post and the transfer of Ben Robins from Detroit to St. Louis as branch manager. The New York post has been vacant since the resignation of Charles Rosenzweig, some time ago.

LAURENCE A. STEINHARDT

of Yellowstone Park or Yosemite or the Grand Canyon."

As for Latin American motion picture production, particularly of Peruvian films, the ambassador called it a comparatively recent development but one which had made very appreciable gains the past year or two. In fact, taking into consideration the small amount of capital invested, Mr. Steinhardt said, the progress which the Latin American industry has made is extraordinary from an artistic point of view.

"As everyone knows," he added, "the Latin Americans are great dramatic artists, and in consequence there is no dearth of talent."

Twelve Films Are Classified By National Decency Legion

The National Legion of Decency reviewed and classified 12 films this week. Of the 12 seven were approved for general patronage and five were listed as unobjectionable for adults. Their classification follows:

Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Brother Rat," "Girls on Probation," "Girls' School," "The Lady Vanishes," "Suez."

Guaranteed Pictures, handling the American distribution of "Irish and Proud of It," has booked the film into the Belmont theatre for an indefinite run starting Saturday.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

*An international association of showmen meeting weekly
in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress*

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor

GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

What Parade? What "New" Methods?

An unemployed member came in to visit and to see about a job. He should not be seeking a job. The job should be seeking him. His experience and ability could still a bit of that cry for manpower. But it seems the ones who yell "manpower" loudest offer peanuts for salaries. The member cannot eat peanuts. He still has stomach trouble from his last job.

It's an old story and no more pleasant in the retelling. But the member tells a similar one to match it. About a long-time Round Tabler, a Quigley Plaque winner of some years back. This one was let out of his last assignment because "he had allowed the parade to pass him by and could not grasp the new methods of showmanship." The quotes are what the bossman said, according to our informant. The bossman, we hasten to add, is a swell guy, young in years, a hard worker, on the go from early to late. He also has stomach trouble.

* * *

Well, since it is fitting that this department keep closely in touch with progress in today's showbusiness, may your venerable Chairman rear back long enough to purr:

"What parade has passed the member by? Just what are these new methods of showmanship he failed to grasp?"

From where we happen to be sitting—and a good seat, too—the "parade" our young optimist refers to sounds more like a merry-go-round and it's not the old-timers exactly who have become the dizziest, therefore. As concerns these "new" methods, it may be that many of the difficulties in the way of today's showbusiness are due to the wholesale discarding of "old" methods and the seasoned theatremen who made them work.

* * *

Once upon a time, and this is no fairy tale, the manager was supposed to take hold of his operation and decide what to do about it. It was expected his ideas would be given full play, his abilities and intelligence respected. He was not asked to spend long stretches at pointless meetings that started and ended nowhere. He was allowed reasonable hours for his meals and could look forward to a normal home life. His position was his as long as he did the job he was well-paid to do. The only parades that passed him by were those colorful pageants of exploitation he created without having to ask the bossman for permission to do so. These were the "old" methods and theatres profited.

And what of the "new" methods? Are they the kind that force seasoned, valuable theatremen to walk the streets in search of work for which their years have so well fitted them? Or perhaps, the kind that break down morale, weaken initiative and refashion the once powerful and knowing theatremen into a veritable stooge?

There are no "new" methods of showmanship. It would be something new, however, if bossmen reclaimed the tried-and-true methods of yesterday and guarded the talents of the rapidly disappearing old-timers of whom the younger generation of executives seem so shortsightedly neglectful.

SHORTS PAY THEIR WAY

Despite much of the fuss to the contrary, shorts are not everywhere the unwanted child of the industry. It is to be noted that distributors take the merchandising of these subjects as seriously as their selling. For instance, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and Twentieth Century-Fox.

Howard Dietz' monthly publication in behalf of MGM's short subjects, edited ably by Round Tabler Herb Morgan, is not taken lightly by exhibitors intent on making shorts pay their way, and more. And theatremen regard with no less approval the 30-page shorts exploitation manual gotten out by the McCarthy forces at Twentieth Century-Fox.

Double features, giveaways or what have you, there never was a time when patrons failed to appreciate entertaining short subjects. How widespread the appreciation, depends, of course, on how strongly theatremen follow through on the support given them by the home office admen.

Theatremen in a midwest city are preparing for an early canned-goods matinee. Which means Thanksgiving is just a few weeks away, Election and Armistice Days even nearer.

A-Mike Vogel

The Paramount lobby in New York City, weeks in advance of opening of "Men With Wings", presented this unusual cavalcade of aviation. Accurate scale models of world-famous flying ships from the first flight of the Wright Brothers to the sea-spanning clipper giants of today are included.

Round Table In Pictures

Promoted by Tom Muchmore, Fox Apollo Theatre, Los Angeles, Cal., for his Saturday matinee kid show was personal appearance of Jerry Tucker, star of his Dick Tracy serial, and Jo Jo, the clown from local circus. That's Tom standing at left in photo. Jo Jo also covered nearby section, plugging the stage show and opening of serial.

The high quality of artistic display and "stop-appeal" created generally by theatremen in behalf of the Movie Quiz are illustrated by the comprehensive information booth and explanatory posters used by Manager Jack Lexey, Broadway Theatre, Philadelphia, to sell the drive in his sector. The smile that should go with the distribution of the booklets is shown here by Lexey himself, posing jauntily in the booth.

Street ballyhoo for "Always Goodbye" was arranged by C. M. Wight, Mercy's Yakima, Yakima, Wash., through aid of the State Patrol. Wrecked car was placed atop bannered trailer and towed slowly through the city. The first gentleman at the left, leaning on the float, is Manager Wight, himself.

Noted for his ingenious use of display material secured from local merchants and adapted for theatre use, Jack Simons presents for the members a recent lobby for "Marie Antoinette" at Loew's Poli, Hartford. The beautifully colored plaster figures promoted from one of the city's better stores fitted in perfectly with Simon's ideas.

A slice of the Belgian Congo was transferred to the lobby of the Globe Theatre, New York City, as advance for "Dark Rapture". Exhibits included elephant skull with tusks and war weapons gathered by Armand Denis and Leila Roosevelt in their joint expedition in which they filmed the picture.

Four local lads were dressed in slacks and overall and sent out on the streets barefoot as part of Louie Charninsky's street-ballyhoo for "Barefoot Boy" opening at the Capitol, Dallas, Tex. Note also how Louie plugs the Movie Quiz on his front.

Above may be seen the Junior Naval Militia, called out by Manager Tommy Read of the Paramount Theatre, Atlanta, Ga., to aid him in exploiting his date on "Give Me a Sailor". Atop marque, theatremen hung numerous vari-colored pennants.

Arranged by Jack Schlimovitch, Warners' manager in Finland, was street stunt of carriage with girl dressed as Betty Davis in "Jezebel" driven through the streets of Helsingfors to plug the date. Sign on rear of carriage read: "We meet tonight at the Adlon".

AN EDITORIAL

The story is told of a rooster who upon seeing a duck's egg for the first time invited his hens to come and look at it, saying: "This is not meant as any criticism of what you ladies are turning out. I only thought you would be interested in seeing what other folks are doing."

"Have You Ever Seen a Movie" Query Planted by Hyde

Inspired by the recent showing arranged by Paramount for residents of Blowing Rock, N. C., who had never seen a motion picture, City Manager Bolivar Hyde, Sparks Theatres, in St. Petersburg, Fla., interested the local Times in a similar idea, which he reports as a most effective general good will builder.

Paper arranged a contest to find the oldest resident of the county who had never seen a picture, the winner receiving a cash prize and guest tickets to the theatre. Other awards were given. Entrants were requested to answer two questions on entry blank published with the page one story, "Have you ever seen a motion picture show?" and "Have you ever seen a talking motion picture?" Contest ran for a full week, paper carrying stories and coupons daily.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Hynes Promotes Co-op Ad On Theatre Anniversary

Full page co-op ad was promoted by Jack Hynes in connection with the celebration of the 16th anniversary of Shea's Theatre, Bradford, Pa. Each merchant's ad contained congratulatory message, center top of page being devoted to editorial from the manager in addition to plug for "Marie Antoinette" playing currently.

Serialization was planted in local daily, heralds being distributed to all public libraries and through cooperation of school authorities, announcements were tacked on all bulletin boards, in addition to set of illustrations with playdates. Bumper strips were used on taxi fleet and cars, numerous window displays promoted and bookmarks distributed.

Contests Highlight "Can't Take It with You"

In connection with "You Can't Take It With You," Frank La Falce for the date at the Earle Theatre, Washington, staged three contests. One was a tieup with the Washington Times which ran six one-column cuts of stars of former Capra pictures. Contestants were asked to identify these players, name the Capra hit in which they appeared and write a 25-word letter on why they wanted to see the director's latest hit.

Over WJSV, the Earle staged a contest for women listeners. The station's home economist described to her listeners the "Love Dreams" which Essie, the Sycamore daughter, makes and sells throughout the picture. Guest tickets were offered for the best recipes for "Love Dreams" submitted.

Over WRC a contest was staged to announce the hold-over week of the picture, listeners awarded tickets for greatest number of words they could get out of the title.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Harmonica Contest Sells "Breaking the Ice"

With six Portland, Maine merchants sponsoring the event, youngsters competed over a series of four weeks in a Bobby Breen harmonica contest tied in with the Empire Theatre's run of "Breaking the Ice" which stars Bobby.

Winners broadcast directly from the stage over Station WGAN. Three grand prizes consisted of a silver living cup, super chromatic harmonica and a Bobby Breen guitar. Weekly prizes were harmonicas and pen and pencil sets. Contest was judged by audience applause.

Etchells Promotes 'Yank at Oxford' Boat Race Events

Since the city of Exeter, England, places rigid restrictions against ballyhoo, and very little cooperation is given the theatres by the local newspapers, it occurred to R. H. Etchells, publicity director of Albany Ward Theatres to promote a series of "Yank at Oxford" boat races in advance for the benefit of the picture playing at the local Gaiety Palace, unit of the circuit. In meeting with the chairmen of both local rowing clubs, Mr. Etchells suggested the event and was able to obtain their consent by offering prizes for best crews, providing the race was arranged Saturday before the date. It was also arranged that prior to the main event two crews of oarsmen wearing caps and gowns should row up and down the river.

The MGM London publicity department cooperated by forwarding lithographed postcards, which were used as programs for the boat races and as such sold for the benefit of one of the local hospitals. Nurses and members of the clubs sold programs for the entire week ahead. In addition, poster advertising was allowed in many spots hitherto unavailable. Theatre banner tying in copy on the races was also planted near a prominent bridge, where it would be seen by all passersby.

Medals given to the winners of the special race and runners-up were first displayed in a leading shop window and then presented at the theatre on opening night of the picture. Members of the rowing clubs participated in the presentation. The unique campaign was reported sufficiently effective to bring about capacity business on opening night and stimulated attendance all through the rest of the engagement.

Assisting Mr. Etchells on the campaign were Manager L. W. Jessemann of the Gaiety Palace and his assistant, E. M. Williams.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Suez" Pressbook Shows Wide Coverage

Five solid pages of exploitation suggestions, including national tie-ins, feature 20th Century's pressbook on "Suez" turned out by the McCarthy ad department. Full page picture layout and six chapter serialization are included among publicity aids.

Ads of various classifications and sizes all feature the effective block-letter title, and according to theatremen who have already played the date, front cover of pressbook used as lobby poster has proved a sizeable attractor.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Ableson Warns Patrons

In an envelope marked "Warning, to be opened only by YOU," Art Abelson, Lake Theatre, Devils Lake, N. D., circularized his mailing list with "Dracula"- "Frankenstein" heralds, plugging his dual bill. Warning copy inside cautioned the scary against witnessing the show and also offered a $5 reward to the first woman who volunteered to enter the theatre at midnight and see the picture alone.

QUIGLEY THIRD QUARTER AWARDS WINNERS NAMED

Newcomers Share Honors with Repeaters in All Divisions of Competitions; Taylor Voted Additional Citation

by A-MIKE VOGEL

It may have been the big-gun campaigns on behalf of Motion Pictures Greatest Year. Or perhaps those in the international Paramount-On-Parade contest, recently concluded. But whatever the reason, in quality and quantity, entries in the Quigley Awards marked a new high as the Judging Committee grappled with entries from all parts of the world in choosing winners for the Third Quarter.

The final decisions found the 54 Awards voted in the five classifications fairly divided between newcomers to the winning lists and those who had won honors before. Four of the Silver Plaques go to theatremen landing top honors for the first time. Citations of Merit are almost equally divided.

By majority vote, the Silver Plaques are voted to S. P. Dean, Chick Tompkins, Rex Williams, John Burhorn and Charles B. Taylor. The latter adds glory to his new honors by taking down the Additional Citation of Merit for the best entry among Plaque winners regardless of classification. And Burhorn is the first to win two Plaques in this year's Competitions.

"Boys Town" Wins Citation

Finishing next highest in the voting and winning well-deserved Citations of Merit come Ray Bell, Eddie Forester and Ted Emerson, Sid Holland, Seymour Morris and Don Johnson. Bell and Holland are previous Plaque winners and in all, there seemed little to choose between the Citations and the Plaques. It was that close. A Citation of Merit for a single campaign is unprecedented in the 1938 Quigley Awards, but the overwhelming job done by Forester and Emerson on the world premiere of "Boys Town" in Omaha was sufficient to impress upon the Judging Committee that this high recognition was in keeping.

In all, 44 Firsts and Honorables were awarded to the 49 theatremen cooperating. It is of interest to note that of the 16 Firsts, nine are first winners as can be said of 21 of the 28 Third Quarter Honorables. Winners, theatres and situations of all classifications will be found on this page and the following. Serving as the Judging Committee were W. G. Van Schmus, managing director, Radio City Music Hall; Oscar A. Doob, advertising and publicity director, Loew's Theatres, Lou S. Lifton, advertising director, Monogram Pictures.

Since campaigns were held up in the field through no fault of the contestants who the judges decided should not be penalized therefor, entries in the Paramount-On-Parade contest were accepted for the Third Quarter of the Awards.

Ace Contests Top Taylor Campaigns

Buffalo newspaper classified page ad men stay right on top of the ball, it seems, in promoting want ads, and have been taught by

CHARLES TAYLOR

Charley Taylor, Class "A" Silver Plaque winner, Shea's Theatres ad head, to utilize picture tieups in this direction. As a result, Taylor reports a number of unusual want ads contest slants on various of his dates, for instance, one built around a series of phone numbers and street addresses taken from individual ads. Readers are requested to find the ads with these numbers, clip and arrange them neatly for the prizes. A second variation is a list of copy lines from single ads, with costumes finding the lines in the ads, clipping the ads and forming them in poster form. Another features a series of scrambled names of streets to be unscrambled and matched with the street names in the ads. The scramble idea was also used for names of autos, to be matched as above. In all copy, the theatre and picture are plugged heavily, in return for the usual guest tickets.

In addition, on "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," Taylor landed two unusual full page layouts in the Times roto section and followed through with many of the pressbook tieups, such as cigarette displays in all tobacco stores, Modern Merchandise style tieups, cards on all newsstands on fan magazine story, posting on all busses, taxis and street cars. Here, too, a classified contest was spotted, readers asked to write short letters on the value of bowling as exercise, clip the bowling alley ad nearest their homes and mail both to paper.

Costumed Girls Sample in Lobby

For "Doctor Rhythm," the winner secured coverage with every Crosby tiein, including displays on Victor records in all music stores and windows, grocer windows on Kraft plus costumed girls sampling in the theatre lobby and on the street, girls and samples carrying plugs for the picture. Here, too, a last-line contest was planted in leading Polish paper, a kid coloring tiein for kids, style co-op ads and windows in strategic situations.

On "Big Broadcast," Lamour was used widely, especially on radio tieins with strong support from her sponsors, Chase and Sanborn. Taylor put on a radio contest here, by offering 30 prizes to women sending in best descriptions of either afternoon, street or evening ensembles.

HIGHLIGHTS OF WINNING CAMPAIGNS

Featured yearly in Tacoma, Wash., and the neighboring valley, is the Daffodil Festival, a colorful parade climaxing the event, covering 15 miles, and viewed by over 250,000 spectators, with daffodils as the decoration motif. This was seized upon by S. P. Dean, Rialto, Tacoma, Class "B" Silver Plaque winner, to publicize "Bluebeard," which he did with a float called "Good Ship Matrimony," found meritorious enough to win first prizes in the commercial division. From studio, Dean obtained a Colbert gown worn in the picture for his head usherette, who wore it on the float. The gown enabled him to crack the local front page with additional stuff on the regular drama page and also to dominate the regular morning women's program on local Columbia station. This was done by having the girl interviewed on how it felt to be wearing Colbert's clothes, and of course the picture and theatre were plugged accordingly.

Page one breaks were further obtained by reason of the winning float, photos running in the Sunday papers as well as the dailies. To tie in further with the celebration, float covered main streets around the theatre with ten lines of banners and flags, many carrying picture copy. Bannered sound truck was on the streets ahead, and followed the parade.

Local Ball Team Aids

Starting on "Jungle Love" and continuing for the season was a tiein made by Dean with local ball team, member of the Western International League, wherein all pictures would be published free of charge at every home game. Through co-op tieins, each change of program was advertised at park with 40-foot banner under score board and additional plugs by vendors who stuffed bags with picture copy and carried back banners, etc. Tiein also for night games brought the theatre right into the ball park, helpful especially in the face of the competition by night baseball.

On "College Swing," Dean hooked up the pressbook Bendix tiein with leading department store and one of the dailies. Idea was a last-line limerick contest, paper breaking the tiein week ahead of date and carrying daily plugs. Store followed through by co-op plugs and store displays including important main street window. When winners were announced paper ran cut of judges with entries and carried story with four column head.

Taylor Concentrates On Style Tieins

"Having Wonderful Time" coming early in July, allowed Taylor many opportunities for style tieins, including full page co-op ads, full page layouts on society pages tying title to clothes and also full page feature story on Roger's hobby, sketching, illustrated with star at easel. Top display hookup here was a series of four front windows in leading department store, each window featuring summer style, and all tying in with scenes and posters on the picture.

Ties Factories to Free Scholarship

Announced as being one of the most effective goodwill tieins ever worked by Chick Tompkins, Voge, East Chicgo, Ind., and in which they were interested.

Tompkins secured the sanction of all the personnel managers of every plant in East Chicago for the distribution of heralds which were also handed out house to house. Only cost of the contest, which was promoted purely as a civic gesture, was trailer run at theatre. A great deal of local interest was shown by the number of letters received, judging done by men high in educational circles, and award made from stage.

Stages Soap Box Derby

For his kids, Chick arranged a soap box derby staged in heats, with two divisions, one from 9 to 12 and the other from 13 to 15. Several hundred entry blanks were distributed, advance lobby display featured racer which was awarded to winner and the Mayor was on hand to start the boys on their way day of the race. Hizzonner also presented trophy to winner.

Another kid gag was a puppy giveaway at his Saturday matinee for four consecutive weeks in connection with a lucky number contest. Trailers were run announcing the giveaways, heralds were distributed and the stunt was costless to the theatre, Chick having promoted the dogs from pet shop in exchange for credit. Pups were displayed in lobby weeks ahead. Papers carried stories and ran something on the winners.

"Test Pilot" brought about a model airplane contest for youngsters. Entries were placed on display in lobby and judging was done by licensed airplane pilots from airport at Harvey, Ill., on stage at Saturday kid club. Week ahead these same pilots were introduced from stage, where they delivered brief talks on the flight sequences in the picture. Men also answered questions in lobby during the week preceding opening. Stunt was gratis to theatre in exchange for the publicity the flying school received.

In connection with the March of Time reel "Man at the Wheel," Mayor Rooney issued a proclamation declaring a safety week urging all citizens to attend the picture at the Voge.

Hollywood Opening Attracts Whiting

Highlight of Rex Williams' Class "D" winning campaign at the Hoosier Theatre, Whiting, Ind., included his "Romance of the Limberlost" campaign, which also netted him the all-expense week's trip to New York in connection with the recent July contest sponsored by MOTION PICTURE HERALD, and detailed in issue of Sept. 17.

REX WILLIAMS

Mock Hollywood premiere was held for the picture with the usual flood lights, broadcast, cameramen, etc. Local boys and girls dressed as various stars were brought to the theatre in individual cars and then introduced over the mike in lobby. Aerial bombs touched off at intervals signaled the star of the affair. Stunt was handled in all seriousness with the Mayor on hand to head list of celebrities.

Williams further promoted a newspaper contest with prizes of four free trips to the author's birthplace, which is nearby. Entrants were obliged to write letter of no more than 100 words why they would like to visit Limberlost. Booklets describing the place and entry blanks were distributed to patrons.

Special street bally that created excitement was use of three lads dressed as hillbillies who paraded streets with back banners exploiting the Ritz Brothers in "Kentucky Moonshine." Through tieup with transportation company, 200 busses carried cards through the entire Calumet region selling the attraction, theatre and playdates. On "Crime School" ushers were dressed in convicts' uniforms and paraded streets with another lad in guard's outfit. Boys also carried sledge-hammers with which they would stop as crowds gathered and start to break rocks.

City Aids Safety Drive

On "Man at the Wheel," Williams planned a safety week campaign, for which he secured a full page of cooperative ads. Each merchant's ad tied in to the safe driving angle, banner across top plugging picture, playdates and cast. Local authorities also assisted.

Sponsored by the city of Whiting Chamber of Commerce and the Hoosier Theatre was a bathing beauty contest which ran for the month of July. Special parade was held, contestants riding on bannered floats. Promoted prizes were awarded to winners, photos of elimination winners were displayed in lobby and cooperating newspaper ran stories and art work as the contest progressed. Successful contestant competed at the annual Water Carnival in Michigan City, which brought further publicity.

Winner Appointed Contest Chairman

When the city of Chicago recently organized a committee to handle details of a beauty contest in which two girls were to be chosen to represent the city, one at the World's Fair in New York and the other at San Francisco, winner of the "E" classification, John Burhorn, Gayety Theatre, was called upon to act as chairman of that committee. Arrangements were made by the theatremen for the preliminary selection to be chosen at his house. Entry blanks were run in daily paper 20 days ahead and promotions were made from leading merchants for gifts to the winners. Burhorn handled all publicity appearing in the papers and thus managed to get in plenty of plugs for the theatre.

Another goodwill stunt engineered by this showman was a tieup with the chamber of commerce on a safety campaign in connection with showing of his "Why Not Live" date. Papers came through with editorials, parade of bannered taxis and towed wrecked cars was staged in addition to various merchants cooperating with windows plugging the campaign, and a cooperative ad page selling the picture and engagement.

Effects Ace Merchant Tieins

Featured by Burhorn was a Dollar Day put on with aid of local merchants. The beauty contest entrants headed a parade around the city, newspapers giving theatre mention in their stories on the girls. For his kiddies' patronage, a special "back to school" matinee was held, theatre buying and furnishing school supplies for the event, each child under 12 attending receiving a gift. Also resumed by Burhorn was his connection with his "Early Bird" club.

On "City Streets" contest was planted in the Daily Calumet showing of a typical city street with entrants supposed to enumerate all the errors depicted in the scene, such as license plate upside down on car, etc., Guest tickets were awarded to those sending in correct lists. Also held was a free show for underprivileged children from nearby institution.

Reported as a first time for local theatre tiein was cooperation secured from leading department store which featured front window displays on Burhorn's "Tom Sawyer" date. Store also plugged picture in their ads. Effective also was use of water bally, bannered tugboat covering nearby waters. Whitewashing contest held on side wall of theatre opening day was advertised in paper and tickets were awarded to kids who were the quickest in painting title, playdates and cast on wall.

Replying to Section A, G. E. Doe says, "The theory now accepted by electrical engineers is that current passes or 'flows' from negative to positive. After passing through the relative high resistance of the arc stream the current impacts (shall we say) the positive carbon tip with such terrific energy, power or what have we, that the material (carbon) composing the positive electrode is, by the energy (or perhaps friction would fit better), raised to the temperature at which carbon is volatilized—transformed into gas, or we might perhaps say it is burned.

The current flow is more dense at the center of the arc stream, decreasing gradually toward its outer edge. Naturally under this condition the carbon volatilization, consumption, rate of burning or what have you is most rapid at the center of the arc stream impact, hence a saucer-like depression is formed in the positive carbon tip or end, and this is, by common consent, designated the 'crater.' It appears, in relatively re-

BLUEBOOK SCHOOL QUESTION NO. 137

(A) Having computed the candle-power light production resulting from any given amperage, upon what would you base estimate of the proportion that is useful?

(B) At what points and, in each instance, for what reason is light wasted or absorbed between the face of the collector condenser lens, or reflecting mirror, and the front lens of the projection lens?

(Note: Remember, this is a Bluebook school and the answers to all save possibly some special questions can be found in that book.)

stricted area, on both carbons if the current be a.c."

Which seems to me to be an almost if not wholly perfect description or definition of the electric arc crater.

(B) Careful examination of all the great mass of answers shows that of W. R. Prater, a projectionist of the city of Palouse, Wash., to stand out in advance of any other. My compliments, Brother Prater. He says:

"In general all craters of d.c. arcs are similar in shape, being approximately circular [Save for the old style d.c. projection arc.—F.H.R.] and more or less increasingly depressed from rim to center.

"The crater of the old style vertical trim d.c. arc is quite shallow and oval-shaped. It could not be made to face the collector lens squarely, though this condition might be approximated by advancing the negative until the crater was forced to burn as far as possible on the front side of the positive carbon tip. This necessary action tended to form an oval-shaped crater, the longest diameter vertical.

"The crater of the low-intensity d.c. arc using the horizontal trim, or at least with the positive carbon located horizontally, is also shallow and slightly oval. Its proper position is slightly above center of the negative carbon tip, because of the fact that the tendency of heat acting in free air is to rise, hence the action of the intensely hot arc stream is not quite horizontal. However, by proper adjustment this action may be very largely overcome, and the crater made to face the collector element center very close to squarely.

"The crater of the high-intensity d.c. arc has its center more deeply depressed, with the side walls thereof sloped much more steeply than is the case with other types of arc. It is in fact more in the form of a tiny cup than of a saucer. This makes it possible, by proper adjustment, to cause the arc stream to confine a considerable amount of the highly luminous gas within the crater, with the result that more brilliant light is emitted. Moreover, the rotation for the positive carbon serves to maintain perfect roundness of the crater and perfect evenness of depth of the crater rim at all points.

"Like the high-intensity arc having a rotating carbon, the H. I. arc with non-rotating carbon is deep, but has its upper lip burned away somewhat more deeply than its lower edge. It is carried somewhat above the center of the negative tip for reasons explained under the low-intensity description. As in the case of the horizontal-trim low-intensity, the crater can, by this procedure, be made to face the collector very close to squarely, and the recession of the upper lip be very largely overcome.

"In a.c. arcs, since each carbon is alternately positive and negative the same type of very small, saucer-shaped crater is burned on each carbon. With the old style a.c. vertical trim the craters were approximately round, the depression of their floor but slight. They frequently were rather irregular in form. The craters being so small, with a large body of relatively cool carbon in close proximity, only a very small thickness of the crater floor reached volatilization temperature. For this, the necessary very short length of the arc and other reasons, the light made available for use by the collector per ampere of current flow was relatively small as compared with the d.c. arc.

"The craters of the newer style a.c. arc are not only larger than were those of the old style, but the faces of both carbons burn to an almost spherical point, there being little or no depression, as in other types of arc. It therefore is possible for the collector element to pick up a much greater percentage of the light produced by this style than from the older one."
